The four were selected from 12 candidates two each from Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

Each of the four nominated will receive an annual stipend of L400 each for study at Oxford University in England for the next two years.

Student Body Participates in Annual Hanging of Greens

The student body participated in a unique custom following attendance at prayers Monday night, freshman commission provided Christmas greens which the students took with them from the auditorium and hung in the Rotunda. Carols and seasonal songs added to the spirit of the occasion.

"Acknowledge Your Study" Dr. Wynne Admonishes

"Don't be afraid to say that you study," is the advice Dr. Wynne gave the members of Alpha Phi Sigma at their regular meeting Monday, Dec. 9. He continued by saying that students like to boast of passing without studying, but there is no honor in this achievement. Everyone studies in some fashion. Study and be proud of it.

Junior Class Gives Annual Production

Songs and Dances Compose Musical Program

A few songs, a few dances, and the Junior class scored another victory. Their production "Lucky Thirteen", has won school-wide acclaim for its jolly spirit and its entertaining features. Some of the talent was new to S. T. C. show-goers, while the rest was presented again in new and thoroughly delightful roles.

"Lucky Thirteen", was the last of the musical comedy productions which will be staged by this Class of '37—that is, it will be the last if the class follows the example of the last two senior classes by giving a dance. Judging from here's and there's still echoing around our halls, many of our gentlewomen hope that the Juniors will see fit to do so. Anyhow, on last Friday night this class succeeded in making a favorable impression on it's audience. Many of the older students were thrilled again at hearing the husky voice of Virginia Leonard in new ballads. It is little wonder that she sang so sweetly when one stops to consider to whom she was singing—none other than our own Mary Bowles, president of the Junior Class. Were there time and space we would stop to give each member of the sparkling class her just dues as a fine singer, dancer, or

Their Christmas

Some of your luckless brothers in the Far East are dying at the moment you read this. More of them will perish tomorrow. The reason? It is simple: they have no food. That however, does not hit you very hard. You have never seen them, they speak a different language from yours, and they are five thousand miles away. You have never had to go without food. It is hard for you to realize how that would be.

You are an American. You live in a prosperous country. You have plenty of food, plenty of clothing, all the necessities and many of the luxuries. Perhaps you do not even have to worry about the source of these things, for your monthly allowance from home may be depended upon.

Did you ever pause to think just what you have to do with the misfortunes of others? That little bit of immortality which is the real "you"—did you ever wonder why it was put in your body instead of a yellow man on the other side of the world? It was luck—that's all; no special virtue of your own not anything that you can boast of. Call it fate, chance, God, or what you will—some great power over which you had no control put you where you are.

All men are brothers. You can't get away from it. That is no theory no platitude for the minister to proclaim from his pulpit. It is a scientific fact that all men sprang from a common ancestor. Varying conditions of climate and environment may have changed the color of the skin, but they have never changed and never will change the real man underneath the skin. And one of the laws that dominate every man is: he must eat or die.

How about it? Are you grateful enough to the Power who made you what you are to give up this Christmas a negligible luxury that some of His other children who are distressed may be saved? Will you deny even a distant brother the right to live merely because you, and not he, had all the luck?

Literary Magazine

The announcement of the Honorary English Society that it intends to publish a literary magazine was greeted with great enthusiasm by the student body. We felt that such a worthy ambition on the part of that group deserved further investigation, and found to our infinite satisfaction that the Beorc Eh Thorn does not plan to make the magazine an official publication of the society. On the contrary, their purpose is to publish a magazine of the student body and for the student body. The society will furnish the work while the students contribute the contents. Every department and organization in school has been asked to cooperate by contributing such articles, stories and other material as will be of interest to the college at large.

It is the concensus of opinion that this plan will supply a need which has long been felt among the students. When we consider the unusual talent and ability in writing which so rarely has had opportunity to expres sitself in our college we want to give a cheer for Beorc Eh Thorn and pledge ourselves to back it to the best of our ability.

Safety on the Highway

That the death toll from automobile accidents has been alarmingly high this fall has, perhaps, not impressed college students very much, since they have few occasions to ride on the highways.

Now, however, is a fit time for girls who are going home, where they will ride in automobiles, to take a lesson from recent deaths by accidents and see that they ride only in cars carefully driven.

Just Sunday, three people in Virginia were killed, and thus far during this month, death has claimed thirty-one through accidents. It is not likely that, in the rush and pleasure-seeking of the coming holidays, all people will keep their heads level and their speedometers at low speed. No doubt December will see many others go by accidents. Taking into consideration those drivers who do not care, the sensible ones should be twice as cautious, so as to be prepared to avoid the fool.

A little care and as much caution will make our Christmas much safer and a great deal happier.

The following excerpt is reprinted from The Ring-Tum Phi for its broad value and its applicability to the situaiton at S. T. C.

GENTLEMEN? WE WONDER

Once upon a time a great general came to a school. He had many claims to fame, but the greatest was that he was one of history's real gentlemen.

Not so long ago there started a craze among American heiresses for obtaining a title. They went to Europe, grabbed a count, and presto, they were royalty!

Today we have an amusing parallel to that situation. A boy graduates from high school. He is somewhat fascinated by that title "gentleman". What does he do? He comes to Washington and Lee, and presto, he is a gentleman! It matters not what you were. Of course the University asks "the falks back home", but they are willing liars. What do we find? Al Capone, Falstaff, or Joe Doe have come under the "automatic" rule. They have "automatically" become gentlemen.

Just who is fooled by this amazing transformation? As far as we can discover only several hundred self-admiring students. Moderation? They have never heard the word, and besides, what's that got to do with being a gentleman? Consideration and other such phrases take equally unimportant places in their vocabulary. Neighboring girls' schools can be shocked by their conduct and the most vigorous of uneducated drinkers can be put to shame by their antics, yet they will swear to the four winds that Esquire clothes and a bored manner make them every bit a gentleman.

If General Lee could return to stroll along the colonnade of Washington College and observe some of our "gentlemen" in action, what would he think of them? We wonder.

Rotunda Reverberations

Mighty glum, folks, mighty glum. Exams are trying things but you may as well cheer up 'cause you'll live. Even though times are so tight I've had a chance to do some rounding and glean some right pertinent facts.

I think you'll agree with me that when S. T. C. girls get to the point where they can steal milk from porches and still smack their lips over the cocoa, something should be done.

Does Christmas mean a new name for Kathleen McCann? I'm curious. Sometime ago "Bougie" Parker got her name-to-be assured and to make it emphatic he said it with a solitaire.

There's a "Buck" in Farmville and "Buck" in Durham who keeps the wires hot between here and there. It's nice that they have something in common eh?

Poor Ginny Hall. Her "manager" is out of town and she's left to shuffle for herself.

Winnie Goodman is easily pleased.. All she asked Santa Claus for was a dime's "Wert" o' candy. While we're on that subject I hear tell the sophomores are asking for a large portion of originality what with their production in the offing. Kitty Fitz has an unquenchable appetite for cran-'Berry". Unless I miss my guess, her tactics will bear plenty fruit. And Tank of course, calls for "Soup". Nancy Sellman is sure to rake in some mittens er somepin, with a "Weaver" attending to her order. Football captains are pretty scarce but Sallie's got everything in her favor, I believe. I wonder what Martha Glenn will do with a one man audience. It's certain that the student body doesn't crowd her. Baker, some small things come in large packages. You'd better look out next time.

Santa Claus, please bring "Chic" a new pair of tap shoes. She's death on 'em and she's got two more quarters to go yet.

My teacher used to write "S. P." by mispelled words. Poor Mary Lee, that's all I ever see on her papers.

Fifty-Five Million Trees Planted In United States

News is afloat that the United States Forest Service has planted 55,000,000 trees this year in the midwestern shelter-belt and has the best of intentions to further this plan by planting as many millions again in 1936.

Admiral Frank Upham Replaces Admiral Clark

Upham, the chosen Chairman of the fact that Admiral Frank B Upham, the chose Chairman of Navy's General Board, is to replace Rear Admiral Frank H. Clark on his retirement, January 1, 1936.

France Has Involuntary Dictator

How much of the world is informed of the fact that Pierre Laval has been called "Involuntary Dictator of France," since he has been considered a "Middle Roader" in French politics twenty years without making an enemy, and he still owes nothing to anybody but himself.

His one hobby is to run France's foreign affairs, and in doing this he has made "face-to-face diplomacy" his goal. He has been trying to get France out of financial and economic slough by instituting by decree measure. Since his power is at an end because of the return of Senators and Deputies to their seats in Paris, he decided to curb public demonstrations and use of fire arms because of growing activities of Fascist elements.

The autumnal reassembling of the French Parliament will show whether this man, whose oriental eyes resemble black buttons, having inky straight hair and an alert and mobile face, with a personality which grows on you, will stay in power, where he should be.

At Other Colleges

It is all gentle spoofing, no doubt, but most entertaining—this story the columnist in the student paper at the Universiy of Illinois is telling.

A state senator, returning from the capital to his home town was met at the station by an angry constituent who berated him for not cutting down funds allotted to the state university.

"Don't you know," crackled the citizen, "don't you know that at that school men and women students have to matriculate together. Yessir! Furthermore, they have to use the same campus!"

Just discovered at the University of Washington that a college man there has just one chance in 400 of marrying a girl with some home economics training.

Fairly interesting. Now if they will show the girls what chance they have of marrying a college man who can get a job and support them, we might have something.

And speaking of marriage! American brides and bridegrooms are getting younger. Men are marrying at an average of 24.8 and women at 21.7. We don't know what this proves. Yes, and statistics show that Vassar graduates have three-quarters of a baby each.

A reporter at Ohio State, making an investigation concerning the relative politeness of co-eds and me on the campus, stood inside a frequently used door and opened it for everyone passing through.

These are the results: Only two out of every 15 co-eds said "Thank you" while only one out of 15 men failed to do so.

A Drexel math professor offers the following logic: A poor lesson is better than nothing. Nothing is better than a good lesson. Therefore a poor lesson is better than a good lesson. Moral: Why study?

University of Kentucky students were recently lectured on "How to Tell a College Man from the Birds and Fishes."

On June 23, 1874, Congress ordered the printing of The Official Records of the War of the Rebellion." The other day the volume was completed by the Government Printing Office—more than sixty-one years after Congress issued its order. And then our instructors blame us when a term paper is a few days late.

Some of our novelists don't seem to care a hang what they do with their characters' eyes. For instance:

"Her eyes roamed carelessly around the room."

"With her eyes she riveted him to the spot."

"He tore his eyes from her face and they fell on the letter at her feet."

"Their eyes met for a long, breathless moment, and swam together."

"Marjorie would often take her eyes from the deck and cast them far out to sea."

"He wrenched his eyes away from her. It was a painful moment for both of them."

At Millsaps College 'A" students pay considerably less tuition than those who get lower grades.

John and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., sons of the President and Harvard students, have taken a pledge for safe driving. Both have been involved in numerous accidents.

Georgia's Emory University has gone Popeye, spinach is the fastest-selling vegetable in the student cafeteria.

Baker University hopes to build a stadium with the help of a penny chain letter.

"The Man without a Country" is the plight of tSuart Manley, University of California sophomore. He was born in Japan of American parents, he is a citizen of neither country.

The Yuletide

Peace on earth: Good-will to men.

The origin of some of our Yuletide customs is of great interest.

As early as two thousand years before Christ, Yuletide was celebrated by the Aryans. They worshipped the sun, and as darkness increased with the shortening of days, they feared the sun would die. Therefore, when the sun's course changed, they held a celebration in its honor.

An ancient myth gives an account of Balder, the northern sungod, who was slain by Loki, the jealous god of fire. Only one thing in nature could injure Balder. That was mistletoe. Loki searched until he found it growing on an oak tree. He threw a twig of it at Balder who fell lifeless. The other gods were angry, but were forbade to commit any violence against Loki because it was at the time of "peace-stead"—the season when all was supposed to be peace on earth good will to men. However, the gods sent gifts to appease Balder in the underwold and he sent gifts in return. This, perhaps, is the origin of our exchanging of gifts.

Certainly Yuletide was a very merry season among the ancient people who feasted, drank and danced in honor of the return of the sun, the god of light and new life.

With the tidings that a Son had been born to give light and new life to the entire world, old customs were kept in his honor. The early Christian Fathers changed the celebration from the birthday of the "sun" to that of the birthday of the Son. Dates of celebration have varied from the first to sixth of January, but the twenty-fifth of December, the birthday of the sun, has ever been the most popular date.

The holly, laurel, mistletoe, and other greens were used by the Druids as shelter for the fairies at this season. Later they were used as symbols of resurrection and of immortal hope and in that way we still use them when we decorate.

CHRISTMAS IN OTHER LANDS

Christmas in England usually brings to midn the huge Yule log, emblematic of warm and light.

Germany introduced the custom of a decorated Christmas tree.

Scandinavians tie sheaves of grain to the trees that the birds may also have a feast.

Russians go about singing their ancient "Kolyada" songs, and the French children build a Creche of the Holy Manger—their tribute in commemoration of the birth of Christ.

At sunset on Christmas Eve the booming of a cannon from the castle of St. Angelo announces the beginning of the Holy Season in Italy.

Spain observes Christmas most rigidly in the church, but also leads a season of wild revelry.

America celebrates in its own way, taking customs from all lands as well as establishing new ones. It is a season of peace and good will when "the voice of the Christ-Child" speaks.

THE VOICE OF THE CHRIST-CHILD

The earth has grown cold with its burden of care,
But at Christmas it always is young,
The heart of the jewel burns lustrous and fair,
And its soul full of magic breaks forth on the air,
When the song of the Angels is sung.

It is coming, old earth, it is coming tonight!
On snowflakes which cover the sod,
The feet of the Christ-child fall gently and white,
And the voice of the Christ-child tells out with delight
That mankind are the children of God.

On the sad and the lonely, the wretched and poor,
The voice of the Christ-child shall fall;
And to every blind wanderer opens

SOCIETY

Many S. T. C. Girls Attend Dance at Longwood Saturday

Misses Betty Hardy and Dolly Dunnington were entertained at a dance at Longwood by their parents on Saturday night. The guests were received by Dr. and Mrs. Hardy, Betty Hardy and her escort, Gus Mayes, Mr. and Mrs. Dunnington, Dolly Dunnington and her escort, Johnny Ferry, and Dr. Jarman.

Music for dancing was furnished by "Pinky" Harper and his orchestra. Decoration of the Christmas season were carried out in the refreshments.

College girls attending were:

Mary Bowles, Margaret Britton, Jane Burke, Amy Butterworth, Emma Easley, Kathryn Fitzgerald, Alpha Lee Garnett, Elizabeth Hray, Mary Harvey, Sarah Hayes, Isaac Plummer, Kitty Robertson, Florence Sanford, Lelia Sanford, Will Scott, Ellen Simmerman, Virginia Tilman, Nan Throckmorton, Mary H. Vaughan, Fletcher Walker, Caroline Willis, Jane Saunders.

Miss Moran Entertains

Miss Moran entertained the members of the Freshman class at a Christmas party in the lounge of the Student Building on Thursday night from 10 to 11:00. The Christmas theme was carried out in decorations, entertainment and refreshments. The class was divided into groups of twenty-five and each group dressed a Santa Claus. Frances Steed was judged the best Santa Claus. Games were played the open fire while the class enjoyed popping corn. Miss Moran was assisted in serving and entertainment by Misses Goldie Williams and Catherine Milby.

A. C. E. Party

The Association of Childhood Education held its Christmas party in the sitting room of Cunningham Hall Saturday night, December 14. A Christmas tree, brightly lighted and gaily ornamented stood in the corner, lending an air of festive cheer to the room. The girls sat around an open fire and played games, directed by Santa's elf in the person of Chic Dortch. At the stroke of ten Santa Claus (Martha Gwaltney) came in and distributed gifts—Christmas toys. The girls decided to present the toys to the childre nin the Nursery School.

Miss Mix entertained the group with a delightful Christmas story.

Later the A. C. E. girls enjoyed ice cream, in cups with Christmas candles burning on the top of each.

Among the supervisors attending the party were Miss Mix, Miss Penny, Miss Norris and Miss Haynes.

Miss Winnie V. Hiner who suffered a slight accident, has returned to the business office, Mrs. Gordon Moss who formerly worked here, has been substituting for Miss Hiner.

Miss Ethel La Boyteaux of Richmond spent the week-end with Miss Mary White Cox.

Miss Bedford Entertains

Gamma Psi the art fraternity, was entertained by Miss Virginia Bedford, Thursday night, Dec. 12. The informal party was held at the apartment of the adviser. Marjorie Booton led an interesting conversation on the lights and darks of Epheres and their shadows. Christmas gifts were exchanged and sandwiches, coffee and cake were served.

Mrs. A. Y. Stokes entertained the college girls Sunday school class of the Presbyterian church at tea on Thursday afternoon December 11 from 4:00 to 530 o'clock at her home on Appomattox street.

Mrs. Stokes was assisted in serving by Mrs. Gardner and Mrs. T. A. McCorkle. Those present were Misses Carolyn Hoon, Catherine Ryburn, Julia Rowe, Isabelle Sprinkle, Josephine Wills, Sara Button, Ann Wills, Helen Cunningham, Dibble Craile, Anne Graham, Elizabeth McIntosh and Mr. T. A. McCorkle.

Many Social Functions Open S. T. C. Holiday Season

Monogram Club Party

The Monogram Club held its annual Christmas party in the Little Sitting room Saturday night at ten o'clock. Miss Olive T. Iler, adviser of the club, and members were present.

Christmas Dinner

Christmas greens lighted by red and green candles formed an appropriate and attractive background for a delicious Christmas dinner which was served in the dining room Saturday night. The students showed their appreciation of the dinner by dressing formally and making the occasion one of the outstanding events of the holiday entertainments.

Dr. Jarman and Mr. and Mrs. Graham were guests in the dining hall for the Christmas dinner.

Alpha Kappa Gamma Party

Members of Alpha Kappa Gamma enjoyed a real Christmas feast in the honor society room at ten o'clock last night. The tables were decorated with holly and place cards appropriate to the Christmas season. A brightly lighted Christmas tree bedecked with packages shown from the corner through the candlelight.

Mis Mix told a delightful Christmas story in her inimitable way after which Tac Waters played Santa Claus and distributed the gifts. The party wound up with singing carols.

Mu Omega Tea

On Saturday, Dec. 14, Mrs. Fitzpatrick entertained the Mu Omega sorority at tea at her home on Buffalo Street.

Those present other than active members of the group were: Miss Mix, Miss Draper, and Miss Fretwell.

Gamma Theta Party

Miss Stubbs was hostess to the Gamma Thetas at her home on High Street on Sunday evening. Outstanding features of the occasion were the Christmas tree and the Christmas eats.

Mary Diehl Entertains Pi Kappa Sigmas

Mary Diehl gave a Christmas party in honor of Pi Kappa Sigma sorority Sunday afternoon at her home in Farmville. Sunday evening the sorority had their usual Christmas tree in the chapter room at which time gifts were exchanged among the girls.

The Rotunda staff, the student body and the administration wish to extend sympathy to Billy Morgan in her recent sorrow.

Alpha Sigma Tau Has Christmas Party

Alpha Sigma Tau was visited by one of Santa Calus' helpers, Lucile Davis, Saturday night. She presented gifts to all members and to the adviser, Miss Bedford. Good cheer and merriment reigned while everyone enjoyed the party.

Sigma Sigma Sigma Tea

The Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority was entertained at tea in the chapter room Sunday afternoon by Miss Pauline Camper, faculty adviser. Other guests included Dr. Jarman, Mrs. Shelton, Mrs. Jamison, Miss Mix, and Mrs. Laing.

Miss Mary and Jane Royall left last Tuesday morning for a visit to two other State Teachers Colleges. They returned Friday night.

Miss McKee will return from California after Christmas and resume her position at S. T. C. Her sister is improving rapidly.

N.S.F.A. Convention Editors Discusse Common Problems

New York—American college editors want no control by faculty members, no mater how far it may from actual censorship.

That was the opinion vigorously expressed at a conference of more than 50 editors held recently in New York under the auspices of the National Student Federation of America.

"Faculty adivsers," said one editor, "usually wind up being autocrats instead of advisers" and the subsequent discussion brought out a smouldering resentment against existing forms of faculty control and a wide demand for more freedom of the undergraduate press in many directions.

Other sore points were the matter of remuneration of editorial and business staffs and varying methods of choosing workers for top staff positions.

Feature Writer Carries Out Orders; Merry Christmas

(Reprint Hampden-Sydney Tiger)

"Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house, the editor was yelling like a stark crazy mouse. The last paper before Christmas was on its way to press and the big shot wanted a feature to wish the little boys and their playmates (the faculty) a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

The poor feature writer cringed and cowered in the corner and tried to hide; but he was thinking of ways to get out of writing and during that process the editor smelled the wood burning and tracked him down. So he began the task of wishing everybody a Merry Christmas with: "I sit in my chair—I think and I stare—trying to say Merry Christmas when I know Santa Claus is not coming to see me."

Possibly a few letters to Santa could be combined into something that looked like a feature. So by and by some forth: "Dear Mr. Claus: I am a little boy at Hampden-Sydney. I am 20 years old. Please bring me for Christmas a great big check, a couple of new suits, some sort of an old car and a book telling me how to make a lot of time at S. T. C. Merry Christmas to you, . . ."

About that time the editor came along—looked over his shoulder, and said "Lousy", so he had to start all over.

And now where to start? That editor guy is a hard Christmas nut to crack. Well, Christmas don't come but once a year and next year somebody else may get the feature.

At last light dawns. All the boys will be going home in two more days to paint the old towns red—so why not tell them about the new low prices on red paint—(or about Christmas spirits, if this was not Hampden-Sydney). And then the big shot says again that is not material for a feature article.

More worry, more concentration. What an assignment! Then after hours of being in a storm the writer bursts into frenzy of speed and writes at top output for a whole thirty seconds. With a cry of joy he springs up and hands the editor the feature. As the boss faints the others in the office see a sheet of yellow paper float to the floor and the feature reads: MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Christmas and Traditions

In times past holidays at S. T. C. were almost unknown. Few were given and these were comparatively short. The Christmas holiday lasted only a few days and most of the girls remained at school. With the means of transportation in those days, it was impossible for most of the girls to go home even if give a longer holiday. For this reason, usually just one day would be given for Christmas. Once during Dr. Cunningham's administration no holiday was given since Christmas Day came on Sunday.

Only one or two days were give, but those were days and nights of great fun for the girls. Lovely dinners were served them in the dining room consisting of four or five courses. A party was given for them every night. These were more or less in the form of open house lasting from 7:00 until 11:00. Boys invited by the girls or town people, came from the surrounding territory — Burkeville, Chase City, Charlotte C. H. etc. The usual feature of entertainment was square dancing that to us today is almost unknown. Mrs. Thaxton (Aunt Polly) played the piano. Of course there was much rejoicing when Dr. Jarman allowed the girls to have round dancing.

You can imagine what fun these parties were for the girls—as the occasions were rare when boys were allowed within the sacred walls of S. T. C. for so many hours. Even on Sunday nights the girls had not only to take their dates to church, but they had to bid them adieu immediately upon returning to the college. Imagine the excitement when on a particularly bitter night, Dr. Cunningham invited the boys into the Rotunda to get warm.

On Christmas Eve the girls all hung their stockings around the walls of the Junior parlor to be filled by Santa Claus. This must have been before the days of silk hose or the days when the student body was as large as ours now is.

elves, messengers of Santa Claus, appeared upon the scene and reassured the perturbed children.

All of sudden clattering feet and jingling bells announced the arrival of Santa Claus. The children were overjoyed and incidentally, so were the members of the audience. From the huge pack on his back Santa Claus brought forth all manner of presents and goodies for the student body. Charlotte Rice portrayed the part of Santa Claus.

BOOK REVIEW

Precious Jeopardy — A Christmas Story

In "Precious Jeopardy" Lloyd Douglas has revealed in a unique way, the sweetness of the Christmas time, especially among those who are not blessed with an abundance, worldly wealth. More than that, he has shown that the true wealth is to be reaped from the simple life of those who love deeply. He has chosen everyady characters living under ususual circumstances, but they are people who live.

The scene is a home in which hard times is comparatively a newcomer. On this Christmas Eve the problem on hand is the scarcity of "pretties" for the two children. Shirley, all alone, decorates the Christmas tree and places the meagre gifts in the most advantageous places while Phil, weary and depressed, sits behind his paper. The atmosphere is drenched with a quiet yet strident misery wrought from misunderstanding and maladjustment. Abruptly Phil leaves the room and leaves Shirley alone. The disaster that befalls him on the way to his bed, finally proves to be the salvation of the family. Her sympathy for him after his accident bridges the chasm that has separated them; the rest of the story deals with their rediscovery of their love and happiness.

Fortune smiles on them and through a coincidence makes arrangements for his family to live in the country with a wealthy old gentleman, Mr. Percival, who is alone in the world and jumps at the chance to spend his last days on his beloved farm.

The next Christmas is a happy one. Phil is called back to his office and the family takes up its old life again.

Mr. Douglas has in these sixty small pages struck a chord of sweetness and love that makes the reader want to hum some lovely tune; he has mingled pathos and comedy in such a way as to make one feel that there is an inexhaustible fortune in the world of simple living and love.

The very simplicity of "Precious Jeopardy"" make it a choice bit of literature.

Pres. Neblett Criticises Secretary of War Dern

Washington, D. C. (NFSA) — Secretary of War Dern, in his annual report for the fiscal year ending last June, criticised the fight against military training in schools and colleges. "The propaganda against military training in colleges", he said, "is based on the fallacy that such training instills a spirit of militarism in the youth of America. In my opinion, any candid, unbiased observer will reach the conclusion that this is sheer assumption which has no foundation in fact. It is no rash assertion to say that Reserve Officers Training Corps graduates are not more jingoistic or truculent in international affairs than those who have not had military training."

Commenting on this section of the report, NSFA President Thomas F. Neblett replied, "Secretary Dern's assumption that our criticism of military training courses in schools and colleges is based entirely on the assumption that ROTC graduates are 'jingoistic or truculent' is without foundation. Careful study of the question by experts, including Army men, has resulted in our opinion that such courses are not justified as part of the curriculum in non-military schools and colleges either by their physical training or 'educational' benefits.

"However, our criticism is directed primarily at the element of compulsion prevalent in so many colleges. Later in his report Secretary Dern eulogizes the 'democracy' of the Defense Act. It is our opinion that compulsory military courses are evidence of the lack of democracy of the Act. Students seeking a liberal education should not be compelled to spend time and energy on a subject which does not directly contribute to this liberal education. That is why we continue to 'propagandize' for the Nye-Kvale amendment to the Defense Act which would make military training optional instead of compulsory."

Tut-Tut Department Doubts College Press Head

New York (NSFA)—The new TUT-TUT Department of NSFA has announced its incredulity concerning headlines in the college press. Many of them have been characterized simply as "amazing" by the Secretary of the Department, others evoke lone paragraphs of discontent. Recent tidbits which have caught the Department's eye are:

"Graduate of Woman's College Writes Book" from the daily at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. (No remedy has as yet been found for the situation described.) and "2 College Students Take Part in Play" from the Montana Exponent. (Wait until the AAU hears about that.) At the University of Idaho "Dance Decorations are Unrevealed". But the Department's favorite, seen several times lately, is "Bright Prospect for 1936 Basketball Team", "One Act Plays Will Be Given" has been selected as second choice.

Tennis Tournament

Three matches have been played off recently in the fall tennis tournament. Evelyn Massey defeated Army Butterworth 6-2, 6-8, 6-1. Betty Butterworth scored a victory over McConnaughy with a score of 6-0, 6-3. Kathleen Ranson won over Dugger 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.

If the weather permits, final matches will be played before the holidays.

Monogram Hikes

Twelve pleaslre seekers enjoyed another of the series of Monogram Club hikes Saturday, Dec. 14. The hikers took the long route to Longwood. By a log fire in the cabin the girls were served Longwood buns.

Don't forget that six five-mile hikes will count fifty points toward your monogram.

C. H. S. Basketball

On Tuesday, December 10, basketball practices for the College High School were begun. Twenty enthusiastic girls reported for the first work-out. Grace Cobb, manager, is arranging a schedule of games to be played after the holidays.

Dr. Palmer, Noted Authority on Art, To Speak Tonight In Lyceum Number

Will Portray Human Side of Art

At eight o'clock, Wednesday evening, January 8, Dr. Carlton Palmer, a well known lecturer, will deliver an address entitled "The Joy of Pictures" in the College Auditorium, where a large audience is expected to attend.

Dr. Carlton Palmer, who was born in a small home on the Allegheny river in western New York state, is admired greatly throughout the south as well as the north for his ability to portray the human side of art, illustrating his unique program by thirty beautiful paintings. He attributes all of his appreciation of art as well as his success to his mother, who treasured pictures, painted for her by her father and several uncles, well-known painters of Flanders.

His life was influenced greatly by those delightful pictures and his twenty years of education in New York schools never opened the world of beauty to him as did his mother's talks of beauty in painting.

Professor Edward Morphet maintains that not until Dr. Pal-

Well-Known Japanese Addresses Annual Convention

Bonnie Lane representing S. T. C., was among the three thousand delegates attending the International Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. Convention held in Indianapolis from December 28 through January 3. Delegates from the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, China, India, Africa, the Phillippines and many other nations attended.

The program included speeches, impressive devotions, seminars, surprise features and entertainment. Toyohiko Kagawa, Japan's greatest sociologist, philosopher, humanitarian and author was the most popular platform speaker on the program. His description of the twenty thousand human derelicts of Shinkawa slums shocked his listeners to a realization of the great project of the Japanese Y.

H.-S. C. Receives Gift For Recitation Hall

Due to the noble efforts of President J. D. Eggleston of Hampden-Sydney College, Mr. Samuel P. Morton, Jr., of Baltimore, has announced that he will donate a $75,000 recreation hall to our neighbors on the Hill.

Mr. Morton is a descendant of Captain John Morton, a founder of Hampden-Sydney, and is head of the Morton Coffee Company. He has always shown a keen interest in Hampden-Sydney and has stated that he admires the high standing of the college in Who's Who and the ideals maintained by the institution. According to college authorities this is the largest donation in the history of the school.

The student body was jubilant over the gift and left a day early for the Christmas Holidays as a result of it. The new building will be called Morton Hall and will be ready for occupation for the term 1936-37.

Dr. Simkins Talks To Historical Assn.

Dr. Francis Simkins of the history department attended. The American Historical Association meeting held at Chattanooga, Tennessee on December 27 through December 31. Four hundred delegates from all sections of United States and several European attended the convention.

In reply to a paper on "Southern Leaders" by Professor Robison of the University of Tennessee Dr. Simkins made a short talk. During hte round table on "Demagogues, Past and Present", Dr. Simpkins made an address on "Southern Demagogues." In his remarks he showed how southern demagogues are possessed of the same human traits as all demagogues. However, the conditions of the South have changed them somewhat, giving them at least three distinctions. These are: a tendency to curse the negro, the Yankee, and a religious prejudice agaainst Catholics. There is a tendency to set the country against the town, or to appeal to the masses against classes. He stated that Virginia is too well governed to have political demegogues. Instead, he says, "We have nice old ladies rather than demegogues to run the state."

Wise Attends Annual Wesleyan Methodist Conference

Dorothy Wise represented Farmville at the Methodist Young People's Conference held in Memphis, Tennessee from December 27-31. Over seven thousand people attended the meeting, three thousand of which were between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five.

"Facing Life With Jesus Christ" was the theme of the conference, and many internationally known speakers were present. Among them were: E. M. Pateat Jr., once missionary in Kaifeng and on the faculty at Shanghai University. He is now pastor of the Pullen Memorial Baptist Church at Raleigh, N. C. Another well known person attending was Kagawa, Japanese Christian and world citizen. Another distinguished person was Bishop John Moore.

Student Body Holds First Meeting of the New Year

The student /body opened its January meeting Monday night with the singing of the Alma Mater. Varsity cheer leaders, Mary Elizabeth Slater and Will Scott, led the student body in class songs and yells. Bonnie Lane, secretary, reminded the girls of their chapel conduct and their observance of study hour She stated that no lost and founds will be read in the dining hall in the future and that all other notices must be signed when turned in at the head table.

Elizabeth Huse, president of the House Council, announced that all radios must be off by 11:00 o'clock.

Miss Mary welcomed the girls back and asked that each one do her part to make 1936 even better than 1935.

The announcement was made that seniors, juniors and teaching sophomores must retire at 11:00 o'clock and freshmen at 10:30. Dates must be recorded after dinner in order to be approved. Girls were urged to come down for dates on time and give Aunt Lucy their cards when they come in.

Schurz Foundation Has Book Exhibit In S. T. C. Library

Collection of Modern German Works On Display

A book exhibit featuring German fine printing and bookbinding will be on display in the reference room of the college library beginning Wednesday, January 8 and lasting two weeks. The collection contains about two hundred books dealing with such varied subjects as art and literature, music, history, science and travel. Of especial interest are the children's books, encyclopediae, reproductions of famous paintings and some modern novels by typical and outstanding German writers. Works of a controversial nature are entirely excluded.

The exhibit, which is circulating among the outstanding American colleges and universities, is being sponsored by the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation, an organization founded about five years ago by a group of generous and broadminded Americans to enrich the life and thought of the American people by acquainting them with the cultural contributions of the Germans, Austrians and German Swiss. The Foundation bears the name of Carl Schurz who is considered the greatest American of German birth. He distinguished himself in civil service and Indian reform and held such important positions as minister to Spain, U. S. Senator, and Secretary of the Interior. The book exhibit is one of a number of activities now being undertaken by the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation.

Notice

The first edition of "FOOLSCAP," Southern Comic, is here. After many disappointments as to date of appearance and a long struggle against adverse factors the official humorous publication of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association celebrates its birthday at S. T. C. tonight. Rotunda staff members will be on each hall in order to supply the demand for copies of the magazine the number of which is limited. You are advised to get your copy at once. The publication will sell for (15c) per copy.

Original contributions by the students of colleges and universities of Virginia and other states, comic cartoons, jingles and skits go to make the "FOOLSCAP" one of the most unique college comics available today.

Farmville Alumna Introduces Literary Contests For U.D.C.

Maria Bristow, of the Class of 1912, now Mrs. Thomas J. Starke of Richmond, has just issued the historical yearbook of the Virginia Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, of which she is historian. The book contains among other things, the announcement of the literary contests and the prizes offered this year by her division for essays, stories and poems about the South and the War between the States. It is hoped that many of the students now at Farmville may enter the contests.

Mrs. Starke was a Farmville girl who came up through the Training School and was very active in school life as a student in the Normal School. She contributed often to the school magazine and was editor during her last year. She was also president of her class and second honor graduate.

In her salutatory at commencement in June 1912, Maria Bristow pointed out for the first time the likeness of the spirit of the students in her Alma Mater to that of Joan of Arc listening to her voices. And when her class presented their class gift, it was the statue of Joan of Arc which sits in the Rotunda and symbolizes that spirit which still pervades the institution.

Since graduation Maria has been one of the most active and devoted daughters of the Farmville State Teachers College both as a teacher in the Barton Heights schools and later as Mrs. Thomas

Students Conduct Movie Experiment

Recently a brief experiment was carried out in State Teachers College in order to get some conception as to the attitudes of college girls toward the types of moving pictures which are being shown today.

A questionaire was given out to about 100 girls among the upper classes asking for the following information: classification of recent moving pictures according to the standards of excellent, good, mediocre, poor, and terrible. In tabulating the rseults the movies which had been selected by the girls for classification were reclassified under the headings of good plot, musical, sex, and sensational. The following results were obtained:

Of the pictures called excellent 63 per cent were of good plot, 18 per cent were musical, 19 per cent were light. Of the pictures called good 50 per cent were of good plot, 25 per cent were light, 15 per cent were musical, while only 10 per cent were sex pictures. Of those selected as poor, 33 per cent were light 34 per cent were sex and 33 per cent were musical. The pictures classified as terrible were 50 per cent sex, 33 per cent light, 10 per cent sensational and 7 per cent musical. A natural deduction from these results is that the modern young girl wants good moving

Hampden-Sydney Will Debate Here On January 13th

Hampden-Sydney representatives will take part in a debate with members of the S. T. C. Debate Club on Thursday evening at 7:30 in the small auditorium.

John Eure and Embry Scott, members of the Hampden-Sydney team, will defend the affirmative side of the question, Resolved: That Congress should be permitted to over-ride by a two-thirds majority vote, decisions of the Supreme Court declaring acts of Congress unconstitutional. Virginia Hooke and Juanita Callis of S. T. C. will uphold the negative side of the question.

Oratorical try-outs under the auspices of the Debate Club will be held in the small auditorium Monday evening, January 13, at 7:30. Any student who wishes to try out may do so. There will be impartial judges present. Everyone is invited to attend.

Dance in Gymnasium To Follow Program

Duke University Musical Clubs consisting of the Glee Club, Concert Orchestra, Quartette, and Al Preyer's Orchestra will appear in the college auditorium Friday evening, January 10 at eight o'clock under the auspices of the College Choir. The solo violinist is Robert E. Fearing and J. Foster Barnes is Director of the Musical Clubs.

The concert will consist of classical selections by the Glee Club composed of thirty-five vocies. The second part of the program will be devoted to numbers by Al Preyer's Orchestra. It is in this choice of classical and dance music that the Duke University clubs have made remarkable progress.

The concert will begin promptly at eight o'clock and the admission charge will be fifty cents. Tickets may be reserved at White's Drug Store.

After the concert from ten until twelve, Al Preyer will play for a dance in the gym. Tickets to the concert will enable persons to attend the dance also. Girls can invite boys, but they can only ask people from Farmville or Hampden-Sydney.

Waters Leads First Student Day Chapel

Tac Waters led the first Student's Day chapel program for the New Year this morning. The program was a timely one, featuring the beginning of a New Year.

After the usual devotional service, Tac introduced Miss Florence H. Stubbs who spoke to the students on "Student Government from a Faculty Member's View". Miss Stubbs emphasized the need of some form or organization in every community and developed her thoughts along the line of sportmanship, loyalty, and development of attitudes. Florence Sanford spoke briefly on "A Student's Part in Student Government." Florence dealt more with specific aims that we might strive for in upholding our system of student government, stating the responsibility of each girl in maintaining the standards of the school.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 8, 1936

The New Year

S. T. C. is embarking on another year of her service to her state and to the world. At this time it is quite fitting that we, the student body, should stop and take account of the way is which we are molding the history of our Alma Mater, for after all, we are S. T. C. present and future. No one of us could have heard the chapel service this morning without stopping to think, without realizing that we bear a responsibility.

We are prone to accept our inheritance as a matter of course, to take up and strengthen attitudes that have become traditions simply because they have existed for so long. Specifically, our attitude toward our student government has, unhappily, grown in the wrong direction. It supposedly represents the desire and wishes of the student body. We elect sixteen girls who are to execute the rules and regulations we have set up and pledged ourselves to. Yet we contradict all this in our attitude toward the work of this organization. Everyday we shift the responsibility that is ours to the shoulders of sixteen girls, as often we go against the standards we have set up, and when the test comes we shower the blame on the student council. Can S. T. C. maintain the high standards she holds if only sixteen girls are earnestly supporting her ideals? No, it is unreasonable to think such a thing.

Therefore, let us head our list of New Year's resolutions with this—to accept the responsibility which our citizenship in S. T. C. carries with it, to remember that we each have as essential a part in this community no matter how great or how small, to extend a spirit of good sportsmanship into every phase of college activity. This is not a resolution made to be broken but one to be kept strictly. If we all do this we shall leave S. T. C. a better place for our having been here.

A World of Fun

At the beginning of a new year, and a new quarter's work is a good time to begin cultivating a new habit—a taste for reading. Not only does reading afford a pleasant way to spend leisure hours, but it is a profitable pastime in that it can be parallel with any college work.

There is always the world of fiction—including novels, short stories, drama, and poetry, for those English courses that everyone here at school must take. They are both interesting and educational. No where does one find his own language used as well as in good literature. This acquaints us with customs, words and language usages of the past which can aptly apply to our everyday conversations and writings in making ourselves more interesting, well-rounded, and in the end, more attractive individuals. A well-rounded person has an advantage in meeting new people. He can usually find some trend of conversation to help improve any social situation or difficulty.

The type of literature including biography and history makes any history course more interesting and makes a complicated historical study even more easily understood. One of the most important things to read is current events—both in newspapers and periodicals. It is often said that "reading the newspapers is an education in itself." Whether this is entirely true may be debated, but it is a fact that the happenings of today make the history of tomorrow. If we would be good citizens—alert, sensible, good-reasoning, and good-thinking law-makers and law givers we must have an authentic knowledge of the political, economic, and social situations with which we must cope. The most direct way to know what is going on around us is through reading a few minutes every day—at least long enough to follow the trend of national and international governmental affairs.

Miss Bori's Farewell Season

A tone of sorrow reigns in the opera world of New York, or should we say the whole world, since Miss Lucrezia Bori, leading Metropolitan soprano, has announced her decisive intention of retirement. Love and loyalty to old "Met" was the cause of her decision to remain on the stage until she was forty-five years instead of the age forty which she had in mind for her retirement.

Miss Bori is especially commended and remembered for her campaigns and speeches for funds to make the old Opera House survive through the "hard times" hit only a few years ago.

Miss Bori, her last name formerly being Borgi, was born in Valencia, Spain. She maintains that her success was made possible by her father who made it possible for her to study at Rome. Thus at the age of twenty she scored a triumph at her debut as "Micaela" in "Carmen". She even played opposite the great Caruso, while taking the leading role in Puccini's version of "Manon Lescaut" in Paris, after which she came to America in 1912, making her debut at the Metropolitan as Manon again. Triumph, of course, was a result.

After recovering from a year's loss of her voice in 1915, her brilliant career has continued. A few words spoken by her which have rung in many people's ears are, "Always I like best the one I have sung last." Since she typifies this entire generation of artists, it is hard to see how the Metropolitan can ever replace her.

Times certainly have changed. The other day a woman married a count for his money.—Kansas City Star.

The G. O. P. problem: To find something that looks prettier to a farmer than an AAA check.—Wichita Eagle.

The only thing as discouraging as the outlook for worl dpeace is the outlook for a breathing-spell for politics during the coming year—Savannah Enquirer.

It seems probable that the lie-detector will prove unpopular even in the best circles.—Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch.

Rotunda Reverberations

Question: Who is the most hated man in the world?

Answer: The composer of "Music Goes Round and Round."

Question: What girls get invited to most proms?

Answer: The ones who can't go for some reason or other.

Question: Who are the most miserable girls in school?

Answer: The ones who were saps enough to come back to school on such a horrible day.

Question: What animal is yellow, green, pink, and white, has seventeen pairs of legs, walks on its knees, and wears overshoes when it rains?

Answer: We thought up the question, you suggest an answer.

Obviously, everyone had a swell Christmas, even though some three hundred girls required a couple more days to make theirs complete. By the way, who got the best-looking Christmas present?

It seems impossible for Ginny Hall to put her hand in her pocket. Maybe a sling would help until she gets used to the unaccustomed weight on the third finger. Page Nottingham's been doing some pretty clumsy fumbling, too.

We're glad to see so many good-looking girls this term. Make-up boxes seem to have been hit No. 1 of the Christmas pretties.

The freshmen have started practicing on their production. Come on, sophomores, get busy. Don't let us down after such a swell show last year.

Have you heard Lelia Sanford's new nickname—"Gorgeous"? We understand it was conferred upon her by one of our "uniformed" swains.

The N. C. girls tell us that Duke has a fine Glee Club. Wonder if the Choir members are the only ones who have an option on this invading talent. If so Mr. Strick will probably collect quite a few five-dollar bills this week.

Scientists to Study Lethal "Death Rays"

Berkeley, Cal.—University of California scientists here have completed the set-up for man's first experiments with a really lethal "death ray," 14 times as powerful as the X-ray, and so dangerous that approach from any direction to within 50 feet is unsafe.

The ray is a powerful beam of neutrons ,the ultimate particles of atoms discovered four years ago by English scientists.

The first sizeable beam of these neutrons is produced in the heart of the field of an 80-ton magnet by a method discovered by Prof. E. O. Lawrence of the University of California.

Involved, though at present unpredictable, are possibilities for the fields of medicine, chemistry and general industry. The neutrons, streaming in all directions from the big magnet, are not stopped by any known type of shield, not even by lead. They pass through the yard-thick coils of the big magnet as if it were so much paper, and nothing will perceptibly slow them down except water.

To experiment in safety the California physicists have set up a remote control panel 50 feet distant from the magnet, with a tank of water forming a three-foot thick barrier.

As easily controlled as an electric light, the beam is produced by a 12,000 volt current, "stepped up" to 4,500,000-volt bolt of neutrons.

Great Britain and France are far from being at ease over the Italo-Ethiopian outlook. France wants to know how much she can count on England to help her if she moves part of her defense troops from the German to the Italian frontier. Great Britain has not committed herself on the subject.

McAllister—Young

Miss Kathyrn Lee Young, daughter of Mrs. Edward Rush Young of Nathalie became the bride of Mr. Russell Greenway McAllister of Richmond in a lovely ceremony at the home of the bride's uncle, Dr. J. Barkley Lacy in Nathalie at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of December 27. The ceremony was performed by the Reverend J. Gray McAllister, father of the groom.

The bride was given in marriage by her cousin, Dr. Malcolm B. Lacy of South Boston. She wore a gown of madonna blue velvet with a matching hat. She carried a corsage of gardenias and valley lilies.

Miss Jane Royall, of Tazewell, the maid-of-honor, and Miss Alice Wimbish, bridesmaid were gowned alike in period frocks of American Beauty moire. The attendants carried pink roses and orchid sweet peas.

After a short trip, Mr. and Mrs. McAllister will make their home in Richmond.

Seely—Hubbard

The marriage of Miss Margaret Armistead Hubbard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Hubbard, of Farmville, to Mr. Walter J. Seely, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Seely, took place at the home of the groom in New York on December 21. The Reverend John Wells Rohill, pastor of the Church-in-the-Gardens, Forest Hills, officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a cut velvet dress and hat in matching shades of American Beauty pink. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of gardenias and lily of the valley.

After a trip to Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Seely will make their home in New York.

Stovall—Morrow

The marriage of Miss Caroline Morrow to Mr. James P. Stovall was solemnized in the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. G. W. Pollard, at Virgilina, on December 26. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate families.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William Parks Morrow and for the past few years has been a member of the Oak Hill High School faculty in Granville County.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alar Stovall and is a graduate of North Carolina State College. He is a member of the Phi Kappa Phi fraternity. He is now principal of the Claremont High School.

Marbury—Gurley

Miss Virginia Marlin Gurley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rochelle Gurley, and Mr. Lee Davidson Marbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Hatton Marbury of Birmingham, Alabama, were married the morning of December 21 at the home of the bride's parents in Suffolk.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of the family and a few close friends.

Immediately following the ceremony, the couple left on an extended southern tour. On their return they will make their home in Durham, N. C.

The bride is a graduate of Farmville and for the past two years has been a member of the Suffolk public school faculty.

Strokecker—Fore

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Virginia Fore, daughter of Mrs. Walter S. Fore of Baltimore, to George Mark Strohecker, which was solemnized Saturday, December 21, in Baltimore.

Meredith—Glenn

Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. George Ray Glenn of Prospect of the marriage of their daughter, Ann Elizabeth, to Harry B. Meredith of Elizabethton, Tenn. The wedding took place in Bristol, Va. on November 28. Mr. and Mrs. Meredith will reside in Elizabethton.

Hancock—Caldwell

The marriage of Miss Lillian Glenn Caldwell, daughter of Mrs. David Edwin Caldwell, Sr., and Mr. Walter Martin Hancock of Appomattox took place December 28 at Hillcrest, the country home of the bride's mother.

After a southern trip Mr. and Mrs. Hancock will make their home at Appomattox.

Burns

It is from Scotland that we get our custom of wishing "Happy New Year to our friends and loved ones. He who first makes that wish on the New Year will be lucky and prosperous throughout that year. Today we clasp hands to make our wish more cordial and personal.

We all like to sit up on New Year's Eve and join in the merry making that will "ring out the old, ring in the new." This custom of ringing bells and making noise originated in England. Before twelve, muffled bells were rung to symbolize that the old year was weak and feeble. At twelve the wrappings were removed and the bells rang out clear, symbolizing the strength and power of the New Year .

Eichler says, "We sit up and wait for the bells because of an inherent curiosity that has been bred in us for many generations. We don't want to miss anything. And we have a secret little superstition feeling that something, anything, might happen on New Year's Eve".

But what about New Year's resolutions. This also is an old custom. It undoubtedly has its origin in the notion that the coming year represented an entirely new period of life to the individual, with which he might do as he pleased. What was already passed he put out of his mind for it was something over which he had no control. The coming year, however, was a year of promise.

"In ancient England it was the custom to clean out the chimneys on New Year's Day so that luck could descend and, of course, remain all year. With us it is customary to speak of "cleaning the slate" and making good resolutions so that the slate will remain clean throughout the year.

"The making of New Year's resolutions became quickly a common practice. We can understand why a custom such as this would appeal to the popular fancy and remain throughout the generation. To a mass mind, no period of the year could be more timely for a change in one's mode of living than that period which presents the beginning of the year. A new year—a new life."

Eichler

A NEW YEAR

Over the threshod a gallant newcomer
Stepped with tread that is royal to see;
White as the winter-time, rosy as summer,
Hope in his eyes, and with laugh ringing free.

Lo! in his hands here are gifts overflowing,
Promises, prophecies, come in his train;
O'er him the dawn in its beauty is glowing,
Banishing shadows of sorrow and pain.

Oh, welcome, New Year! With your stainless white pages,
Though we may blot them ere long with our tears;
So it has been through the long passing ages,
Worn with the footprints of close crowding years.

Welcome, sweet year! May the full-handled hours
Find us like servants, trusty and true,
Using with earnest devotion our powers
To be worthy our Master and worthy of you.

Southern Collegiates Prefer Femininity Plus Vitality

"Vogue" has done the almost impossible, they've discovered the clothes that college men like their girls to wear. If you go out with a Yale man, this is what you wear: "black, low-cut back, tight at the hips, low-cut neck." But Virginia men like their girls coy, fluffy and smothered in tulle. Their ideal dress is "white, pink or blue, with fluffy collar." And that goes for all men's colleges south of the Mason-Dixon Line, they prefer something "soft" and "feminine", and with "not too much neck showing." Anywhere else you're safest in a "plain dark fabric," "often high in front, but very low in the back," and "showing the figure or even form fitting."

This is the final rating on "Vogue's" question "number in order of their importance the qualities you like in a girl": (1) vitality, (2) sex appeal, (3) neatness, (4) distinction, (5) style, (6) beauty, 7 sweetness.

As for women's daytime clothes, the unanimous male preference is sport clothes. They like sweaters and skirts, sport clothes "with a dash", tweeds, ankle socks, and sport shoes; suits but not severe ones.

Their pet aversion seems to be bright red nail polish. "Comments ranged all the way from my 'pet gripe' to longshoreman profanity."

About 75 per cent of the men do not like low heeled sandals. The yesses were rather apologetic about it and added in parentheses: "Yes, (I'm short)."

The general criticism that boys have to make is that of overdressing. They want simplicity with all the extras eliminated.

And here are a few of the comments made by our new fashion dictators: "Girls buy many cheap dull dresses instead of one or two really tremendous ones." (Williams.)

"I like variety. What's the sense of going with a girl who never surprises?" (U. of California.)

"Girls should look feminine, hence plenty of feminine stuff; high heels, perfume, etc. Dress isn't meant to be a criterion of a lady's intellect. (Yale.)

Fordham prefers to think of a gal "as something remotely lovely and intriguing—not as a rational animal."

Dr. Palmer Noted Authority on Art

mer had been at the University of Alabama for a short time did he fully realize his ability to interest people in the field of art; but his intense love of pictures led others to desire the same enjoyment of beautiful painting in their own home.

Juliana Haskell, Advisor to Women Graduate Students at Columbia University, wrote of the profit he gave her students, noting his voice and diction which were admirable, and also his tempo which was very brisk and dynamic.

Karl Ritter, Principal of Tenafly High School, New Jersey, in a short letter told Dr. Palmer that never had he known any speaker who so well presented the notion that to appreciate properly one must attempt to create something of one's own. Also many other educators have admired his excellent plan to familiarize people with pictures, and think his pictures beautiful and well selected.

Probably Dr. Palmer's success is due to his inmost thoughts concerning life which is "meant for living by participating in enjoyments of life and therefore increasing possibilities of enjoyment by extending a sphere of interest. Dr. Palmer also maintains that "whatever we wish to introduce into life of a community must first be enjoyed in our schools," and his project at this time is to help students and parents to experience his own emotions in pictures. A leisure-time enjoyment is his goal.

The Y. W. C. A. wishes to thank each organization and individual who contributed to the White Christmas service. This money will be used in providing soup for needy children in county schools.

Will Our Rules Appear This Strange Fifty Years Hence?

Just as our college has grown in numbers from 110 students to 825, so has it grown and magnified its halo of customs and traditions. There was a time at S. T. C. when prayer meetings were held on each hall every night. Out of this grew prayers and vespers that we now have in the auditorium after supper.

When the library was in a building separated from the rest of the school, Miss Mary would take the girls who wanted to study there at 7:30. Before leaving, however she locked the remaining girls in what is now the auditorium. At 9:00 or 9:30, Miss Mary escorted the students back to the main building.

Instead of having a maid to bring your linen to you, in the good old days a gong was rung and the girls went to Miss Mary's room and got their own linen. What luxurious lives we live today.

Every fall and every spring the school turned out en masse to a picnic at Willis' Mountain in Buckingham county. The girls rode over in wagon loads of hay and the chaperones rode in carriages. Once there the girls started up the mountain in search of arbutus or chestnuts according to the season. At noon, lunch was eaten at the foot of the mountain, and then the journey home was made. Such a trip took up a full day.

Another event which always attracted numbers of students was a railroad excursion to Richmond for $1.00 a round trip. The girls saved their pennies for weeks to be able to go. This trip usually took place sometime in April. Lunch and servants were taken. During the lunch hour, the doors to connecting cars were locked to keep the rest of the passengers from enjoying the lunch prepared for the students.

Once in Richmond, everyone went to Murphy's. All of the girls had to sign up with Miss Mary. There being very few telephones then, this information was necessary in case the girls were late and had to be sent for. On the return trip, Hampden-Sydney boys were allowed to enter the S. T. C. cars—doubtless to the thrill and ecstacy of both boys and girls.

pictures to be exhibited in the theatres she attends.

We find that of the pictures most often classified as excellent, forty girls selected "Smilin' Through"; thirty girls selected "Naughty Marietta", light opera with music by Victor Herbert; and twenty-five girls selected "Crusades" an educational picture. Of those pictures most often classified as "poor" and "terrible", twenty-five girls selected "Going to Town", a Mae West production. All the girls naming "Reckless" a life of Libby Holman, the torch singer, classified it as terrible.

If the attitudes of the Farmville S. T. C. girls are typical we may be safe in saying that young people with open minds definitely welcome the reforms which are being carried on in the motion picture world at present. We are proud that a survey of the opinions of the girls here presents such a thoughtful and intelligent result.

The Archbishop of York gave forceful talks on the Christian obligation in political, economic, and social life of the world. His words "There can be no common formula for happiness unless one believes there is one Father over all", became the nucleus of thought during the convention. Three things necessary to achieve this end according to him are: the international mind, the international heart, and the international will.

The seminars included social service, political nitrigue, world peace problems, educational programs, and other topics of current interest.

At Other Colleges

Credits toward graduation for participation in extra-curricular activities are given at Alfred University. Due credit is given for work work on publications and in dramatic organizations.

Found in a blue book at the University of Maryland — "Dear Professor: If you sell any of these answers to the humor magazine, remember I want my cut."

And now the University of Michigan claims that it is the source of the popular song, "Man on the Flying Trapeze," basing the claim on a story in the student paper of October 13, 1883.

At last the women students have something in their favor. Minnesota statisticians and figure-hunters have found that women spend only 76 cents more per month than men do in barber shops! And they spend only a fraction of the amount that men spend on tobacco!

The Northern Student tells us tha "in one town there are both a state teachers college and an insane asylum, and the only way that people can distinguish between them is that the asylum doesn't release its members until they are cured."

Speaking of Dean's lists (not that we want to, but there comes a time in every students' life—) they have a nice idea up at Lehigh. They call them "valentines". It seems entirely probable, though, that students who receive them would say, "Amen" heartily to Shakespeare's famous line "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

We admire the spirit of the student in a big school, who not awfully tired of never finding a chair in the library. Eventually he walked up to the clerk in the "reserve" room and uttered this serious plaint: "Excuse me, miss, but could I reserve a couple of seats for next Friday night?"

You can tell this one to your best girl: According to the Montana Exponent bio-chemist Hector Mortimer claims that the human skull is getting denser as we grow and that the condition is ten times more common in women as men!

The old saying that "where there's smoke there's fire" has been revised by the Concordia Blade-Empire. Their version is that where there's smoke there must be a women's bridge game.

After extensive research Dr Edith Boyd, of the University of Minnesota reports that the human race has grown a full two inches in average height during the last century.

A writer for the Purdue Exponent confesses his girl is very similar to a type-writer. If you touch the wrong spots, you get terrible words.

The prayer of a freshman, as overheard by the Floridian: "Please, Lord, I'm not asking anything for myself. I only pray that the person next to me knows something on the exam."

World News

War-jittery Europe and politics jittery United States hold the foreground of world interest today. The last week has seen a number of tense moments in both situations as more and more countries are involved in European military affairs and as congress proceeds into a session that will largely determine the platforms for the coming elections of the two leading political organizations in the U. S.

Contradictory reports coming from varying sources tell of the bombardment of a Swedish Red Cross camp in Ethiopia. The Italians have two reasons for the action: first, they claim that two of their pilots were decapitated after being captured by Ethiopians; second, that Ethiopian army officials have a habit of seeking refuge under the Swedish flag at the hospital camp. The Ethiopians fiercely deny the truth of either statement. The Swedish government wants to know more about such action on the part of the Italians who have merely sent expressions of regret to Sweden in regard to the incident.

Attention is diverted briefly from the struggles in Africa to the rumors of a military pact between Germany and Japan. Communistic activities in Russia, presumably, is the cause for their cooperation. The United Press was informed that the understanding was to contain eighteen articles the most important of which provides mutual military assistance in case either nation is attacked by Russia.

In the midst of all this military and diplomatic strife in Europe, Roosevelt delivered his message on Jan. 4. One of the main features of his recommendation was the plea for neutrality of the U. S. This he would have insured by the placing of an embargo on the shipping of arms and ammunitions to warring nations.

The speech also contained defenses of the program of his administration and proposals for the budget readjustment. Congress is now hard at work on bills evoked by the President's message.

Republicans, led by Herbert Hoover and Colonel Knox, are busy branding this message as a "political" speech in which the President accuses everyone who objects to the New Deal as being terribly wicked.

P. C. W., W. & J. Use Same Plan as H.-S. C., S. T. C.

Pittsburg, Pa.—When you see a bald-headed man in the front row at an amateur dramatic production, it is almost a sure sign that his daughter is in the cast. But this will not necessarily be true at Pennsylvania College for Women late in February, for the P. C. W. thespians plan to "borrow" a number of Washington and Jefferson actors to take the male roles in a play.

The P. C. W. actors recently produced "Death Takes a Holiday" using an all-woman cast. Last week the W. and J. men produced "Journey's End," calling for an all-male cast. In February the actors of the two colleges will unite to form the cast of a play to be produced at P. C. W.

The Virginia division offers a $10 prize for an article on the subject, "The Individual Struggle of Reconstruction," a history of some family or person in the local community who bravely worked out its socio-economic problem after the War Between the States. A book will be compiled from such stories some time in the future.

Miss Sally Archer Anderson offers a prize of $15 for an essay on the subject, "Joseph E. Johnsson, the Soldier." A prize of $5 is offered by Mrs. Howard Nuckols for an essay on "Lee at Lexington."

The Hill Loving Cup is offered by the Petersburg chapter in memory of General A. P. Hill and in honor of the A. P. Hill Camp of Confederate Veterans for the best report on historical work.

Offered in High Schools

Two prizes are offered by the Virginia Division in the high schools of Virginia; $12.50 to a high school girl for an essay on "Mary Custis Lee"; and $12.50 to a boy for an essay on "Mosby and His Rangers." A prize of $10 is also offered for a poem by a college student on Sidney Lanier.

Prizes for obtaining contributions to the Southern Magazine are offered to the chapter and the individual getting the most subscriptions.

Rules governing all essays may be obtained from the historian or any chapter in the Virginia division. Special care must be taken to use the term, "War Between the States" and not "Civil War", states the yearbook.

The committee on history and literature of the Virginia division is composed of the following: Mrs. Thomas J. Starke, chairman, Richmond; Mrs. Severn Nottingham, Orange; Mrs. B. Ferguson Cary, Front Royal; Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee Palmer, Emporia; Miss Sally Bruce Dickenson, Hampden-Sydney; Miss Catherine Lynch, Richmond; Mrs. William M. Forrest of University of Virginia is president of the Virginia division.

THE MUSIC GOES 'ROUND

The music goes 'round! Yes, it goes 'round—always going 'round, 'round everywhere. It goes 'round the halls, up one and down another. It goes 'round the streets, echoing and re-echoing—'round. It goes 'round in our head — 'round and 'round over and over again in your head. It never ceases. It just goes on and on. How you hate it? It gets in your blood. You don't want to sing it, but you find yourself doing it. It is catching, and the more you sing it the more you hate it, but still you go on singing it over and over. You hate the words; you hate the music; but most of all you'd like to get your on the man who wrote it.

Duke Musicians Give Performance Here Friday Night

Symphony, Glee Club Orchestra, Give Concert

S. T. C. Choir presented seventy-three men representing Duke University Musical Clubs in a concert Friday at eight o'clock, January ninth, 1936, under the direction of J. Foster Barnes.

The program opened with selections played by the Concert Orchestra, followed by two Glee Club selections, violin solos by Robert Fearing, and songs by Glee Club concluding the first part with solos by John Cole, tenor.

After a short intermission the program continued with a dance at which Al Preyer and his orchestra played from ten until one. Each Duke boy was the guest of a member of the College Choir and girls of the Student Government.

The Glee Club has invited S. T. C. Choir to Duke University sometime in February. Also the S. T. C. Choir has proposed a contract inviting Duke back next year.

This is the sixteenth year for the Duke Musical Clubs with Earnest Winston as student director.

The members of Clubs consist of selected boys from all over the United States in school at Duke.

The fifteen piece Concert Orchestra is under the direction of Robert Fearing, and the ten piece Dance Orchestra is under direction of Al Preyer.

The concert and dance was a great success stated Professor Alfred H. Strick. The Choir will go to Duke around the last part of February.

Authority Exhibits Private Collection

Palmer Delights S. T. C. with Paintings Wednesday

To an enthralled and enthusiastic audience, Dr. Carlton Palmer, well known art authority, showed his private collection of master pieces of art last Wednesday evening as one of the lyceum features.

Dr. Palmer's lecture which accompanied the showing was most appreciatively received.

After an introduction by Dr. Jarman, Dr. Palmer presented his assistant, one of his own students from the University of Alabama. Wit and real practicalness marked the speaker's comments during the evening. His history as a collector was traced from his early childhood when his mother, whose beautiful portrait, he exhibited, endowed him with an early love of the real and the beautiful in art.

Probably the most fascinating of the group were the snow scenes which seemed to be Dr. Palmer's favorites. There were landscapes from New England to Russia reflecting the scope of the connoisseur's colection.

How to hang pictures in the home, how to denote lines and their roles in a picture, the glory of color, personal anecdotes and notes on appreciation of great masters and their work were some of the subjects discussed by Dr. Palmer.

After the lecture was concluded the audience took advantage of the invitation to study the pictures at close range. Those who attended the lecture were delighted with the charming personality of the speaker and the rare opportunity which was afforded them in the viewing of his collection.

Comedian to Award Literary Scholarship To Selected Student

Eddie Cantor will award a four year scholarship and complete maintenance at any American college or university to the person who writes, in the opinion of a distinguished board of judges, the best letter on the subject: "How Can America Stay Out of War?" Cantor has set aside a fund of $5000 for this purpose.

The plan was made public by the stage, screen, and radio comedian Sunday, January 5, at the conclusion of his regular Sunday evening broadcast over stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The subject of the competition was suggested by Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, with whom Cantor had discussed his proposal.

The judging body comprises four noted American educators—each the president of a prominent educational institution. They are Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago; Frederick Bertrand Robinson, College of the City of New York; Ray Lyman Wilbur, of Leland Stanford University; and Henry Noble McCracken of Vassar College. All heartily endorsed this project in the interests of peace and education. Their decision will be final.

The Eddie Cantor scholarship competition has no commercial affiliation whatsoever. It is entirely a personal matter with him. There are no restrictions or conditions—every man, woman, and child is eligible to participate. However in the event that the winning letter is from an individual unable to avail himself or herself of a college course, then he or she must designate another to be the recipient of the award. The choice of school and the time of attendance

Ghosts Of Graduating Class Haunt S.T.C. in Sing Saturday

Breath-taking mystery and dare-devitry pervaded the atmosphere at Sing Saturday when the seniors presented their annual performance. The cast dramatized a weird meeting of the ghosts of the class of 1936 in the year of 2036. "Bug" Byrd, mystic interpreter of the ghosts' antics, rose from her tomb in the vault where they all resided, at the stroke of twelve and called forth the spirits o fher classmates from the solitude of their tombs. Some of the spirits sang, some danced, and some just mumbled. Others leaped around in mid air it seemed, while some just sat by and moaned.

"Toot" Walton still quoted her learned knowledge; Louise Walmsley, strong as ever, Kathleen Ranson, Martha Nottingham, and Margaret Hurt nimbled up their joints in the favorite sports of long ago. Hazel Smith continued to worry over the welfore of such brainless mortals as her classmates used to be. A hundred years made no difference in Lucy Potter's appearance. She displayed her usual graciousness and charm. "Tuc", beloved class president, came forth to add her blessings to the galety of the spirits.

Even ghosts reminisce, you know, and from their exhibition the seniors of '36 must've had some good times at S. T. C. You wouldn't belive it but they still tapped in no mean way, there were crooners of talent among them, trapeze artists of rare ability, artist dancers, and pianists. Those ghosts certainly made the most of their few moments of reverie, but I guess we all would in a case like that.

Senior Sing is the first of the class series sponsored each year by the Sing Committee of the Y. W. C. A. A prize will be awarded to the class staging the best performance. Factors to be considered in judging the contest are originality, talent, and general appeal of entertainment.

Debaters Discuss Constitution Issue

Interesting Argument Heard in Little Auditorium

In a non decision debate held in the small auditorium on Saturday night, representatives of Hampden-Sydney and State Teachers' College discussed the question of allowing Congress to override Supreme Court decisions by a two-thirds majority vote.

John Eure and Embry Scott, upholding the affirmative side of the question, not only emphasized need of legislation coming from the people more directly, but went further and pointed out the evils in the present system under our constitution—that of the Supreme Court declaring laws of Congress unconstitutional.

The upholders of the negative, Virginia Hooke and Juanita Callis, took the conservative stand of the question. They showed the wisdom of retaining such a conservative body as the Supreme Court but failed to show that in this body should be vested final power on legislative matters.

While each team made some witty and appropriate remarks in rebuttal, Dr. Walmsley in criticizing the debate, pointed out that the debaters were thinking along different lines of argument. Therefore, their points of argument did not clash logically.

Y. W. Plans Church Campaign for Future

Quarterly reports by the committe chairman formed the chief center of interest for the open meeting of the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet on last Wednesday afternoon. In the way of future planning the church Cooperative Committee announced that it would sponsor a "go-to-church" campaign very shortly.

Plans were made for the members of the World Fellowship Committee and the cabinet to hear Kagawa, the eminent humanitarian, who is in Richmond this week for a series of talks.

Bonnie Lane reported the activities of the International Student Convention which she attended in Indianapolis during the Christmas holidays. Outstanding speakers at the conventions were Dr. T. Z. Koo, the Archbishop of York, and Kagawa.

Refreshments were served by the social committee to the large group of visitors and members who attended the meeting.

Sophomores to Stage "Syncopating Sailing"

On January 21, the Class of '38 will stage its annual musical comedy "Syncopating, Sailing". This year it will be under the direction of Carter Belle Munt and Elizabeth Harris. The theme which gives promise of some really good scenes, songs, and dances, will be a world cruise.

Casting has been practically completed and practices begun, but announcement of the personnel has not yet been made public.

The two directors will be assisted by Mary Joyner Cox, Nancy Pobst, and Virginia Agee in connection with the songs and dances. Elizabeth Morris will be in charge of ticket sales.

A later issue will carry more complete details of this production.

Twenty Girls Form Final Varsity Basketball Squad

The following girls were chosen for the final varsity basketball squad: M. E. Badger, Edna Bolick, Agnes Bondurant, Betty Butterworth, Virginia Carroll, Inez Chappelle, Sue Eastham, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Frances Hudgins, Jean McConnaughey, Evelyn Mann, N. Marston, Kitty Nelson, Ruth Phelps, Lelia Sanford, Virginia Smith, Kathleen Ranson, Katherine Roberts, Linda Walker, Marguerite York.

Varsity practice comes on Mondays and Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4 o'clock, and Wednesdays at 5.

Class of 38 Presents Miss Jane Royall

Red and White Class Uses Clock Theme in Chapel Skit

Chapel period Tuesday morning was the occasion of the presenttaion of Miss Jane Royall as sophomore classman.

The entire Sophomore Class marched in to the tune of their color song, The Red and White Song.

The seniors then joined their sister class in singing the Red and White song.

Following devotion led by Mr. A. C. Tucker, the curtain opened showing a large clock flanked by the following blondes on the left: Mary Joyner Cox, Margaret Fraley, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Mary Harrison Vaughan, Elsie Greene and Katherine Galusha; the following brunettes on the right: Susan Lane, Nan Seward, Mary Wilson Clark, Ann Leigh Baily, Buck Pleasants and Elizabeth Morris. Class officers also were on the stage.

The door of the clock was opened revealing Miss Royall whom the president of the class, Madeline McGlothlin, presented to the student body and faculty. The blondes and brunettes then did a tap drill to clock ticking time. Last year's classman songs were sung to Miss Royall; this year's carrying out the clock idea, was an original composition of words and music by Nancy Sanford Pobst, vice-president of the class. The program closed with the singing of the class song.

A. C. E. Hears Story Reviews by Members

The Association of Childhood Education met last Thursday evening in the Student Building Lounge at 7:00 o'clock. The program of the literary publication of the association was presented by Louise Gathright.

A review of a book of imaginary stories, "Under the Green Umbrella", was given by Mary Denny. This was followed by "The Straw Ox" given by Emma Bingham. Frances Yester reviewed the book, "Told Under the Silver Umbrella"; Virginia Bean reviewed "Blue Umbrella"; Mary Bowles told the story of "Jim Scott and the Red Wagon". Emily Channell spoke on "The Child and the Poet" and Kitty Chappell spoke on "Children's Responsiveness to Poetry."

A committee was appointed to work up a new constitution. Rose Somers is to act as chairman of the committee assisted by Crenshaw Jones and Emma Bingham.

Prominent Artists To Give Program On Monday Night

Yvonne Des Rosiers to Make Third Appearance

At eight o'clock Monday evening, January 20, three renowned musicians, Miss Yvonne Des Rosiers, gifted soprano, Mr. Carl Webster, distinguished cellist, and Mr. Carl Lamson, pianist, will give an informal program of songs and popular classics in the College Auditorium.

Miss Des Rosiers whose voice of rare beauty, warmth and color, has been heard here twice before was enthusiastically received. She is considered one of the most charming personalities on the American concert platform today. Her dramatic ability makes her costume recitals a genuine delight as she presents songs of France, England, Spain, Japan and Holland as well as old-fashioned songs, Flower Songs, and Bergerettes in authentic costumes. She has gained success throughout New England, Canada and Pennsylvania as well as Virginia. The "Worchester Massachusetts Telegram", a well-konwn newspaper, carried a criticism recently saying: "The 'piece de resistance' of the evening was that of Yvonne Des Rosiers whose beautiful lyric voice and charming manner excited murmums of approval from the audience." Her program will include "Ava Maria"—Schubert, and many other well known selections.

Carl Webster, the brilliant cellist, will include Bach's "Serenade", among his selections to be played on the program.

Carl Lamson, distinguished pianist, besides accompanying Mr. Webster will play a group of solos which will include "Prelude in E Minor" by Mendelssohn. He also will relate a few of his experiences of twenty years touring with Fritz Kreisler, Melba, and Farrar.

The record of the return of these three sterling artists will probably be an enviable one.

Election Trends

With the effects of the Supreme Court decision concerning AAA still unmeasurable, practically everyone concerned has his own opinion as to what the November, 1936, election holds in store for us.

It has been forecast that an unusually large percentage of the hitherto party-bound voters is going to "shed its shackles and really exercise a choice in the national election". One of the chief reasons for this opinion is that the line between parties has become so transparent as to be practically invisible. The Republican party finds itself in the embarrassing position of being without a platform or a leader, and with its radical element supporting Roosevelt. In an effort to secure the aid of the conservative Democrats who are shocked and horrified at Roosevelt's activities, the Republicans have adopted the cast off Democratic policy of States' rights.

The Democratic party itself has become so radically different from its former conservative self, that one of its original leaders—Jefferson, himself—would doubtlessly repudiate it if he were here to judge.

In spite of all this, we must consider that no matter how loudly and how violently some Democrats speak out against the New Deal administration, their votes will tell a different story. The more outragedly conservative they are, the more likely they are to continue to follow in the footsteps of their great-grandfathers and poll for the party regardless of its leader.

The United Press Association, which is considered almost strictly impartial, gives Roosevelt the advantage, citing sections of the country as follows: The West for Roosevelt, an even chance for him from New York to the Mississippi River; no New England state for him. Pierson and Allen, broadcast stars, conducted a straw vote, which resulted as follows: 70 per cent of those voting, for Roosevelt; 30 per cent of those voting, against him. The women were three to one for him, while the men were two to one. A very interesting thing to note about this straw ballot is the fact that 38 per cent of those casting votes for Roosevelt were against his policies.

Roosevelt, above all, is courageous. His actions are decisive, and are characterized by emphatic upholding of his own views. The man has proved greater than his work, and in that lies his promise for the future.

Supreme Court Decision

The decision that the Supreme Court of the United States gave on Monday, January 6, was the death-blow to the AAA. Not only does the six-three decision end the program for farm aid, but also it throws a doubt over whether other major legislations will survive.

The judges, after reviewing the cause and the history of the case, gave arguments pro and con. Each judge listened with that impartial attitude so common to all, and they expressed no opinion until the verdict was given. They affirmed what the circuit court had given as its decision: namely, the act is unconstitutional. This verdict is based on the fact that Congress has no power to levy a process tax unless it is for the benefit of the entire country. The Constitution does say that there can be no national legislation that will benefit only one or two parts of the country. Still it is clear that some form of crop control must be devised to prevent the loss of all that has been gained through the AAA.

Although there is some movement on foot for an amendment to the Constitution, it is doubtful that President Roosevelt will suggest to Congress any bill bearing on the subject, especially since the election is so near. Such a move would encounter opposition in the various parts of the country. He has to take into consideration the polls of the American Institute of Public Opinion and the Literary Digest, each showing the unpopularity of this act.

Without a doubt the Administration will have to alter its course somewhat. The Supreme Court has shown that it will not allow any encroachment of the Federal Government on the rights reserved for the States.

World News

Flash! Hauptmann's appeal for clemency has been denied by the New Jersey State Court of Pardons. His only hope now lies either with the Governor or the courts, and both hopes are desperate ones.

President Roosevelt's message, delivered on the night of January 3, 1936, was the second speech in history for which Congress ever gathered at night to hear from a president. The first time was April 2, 1917 when Woodrow Wilson asked for a declaration of war against Germany. But on this last occasion the president pleaded that the Americans take no part in a "Situation which has in it many of the elements that lead to the tragedy of general war."

Flash! The United States Supreme Court has just declared the AAA unconstitutional. This is the second great pillar of the recovery program that has just crashed on the heads of the administration.

With nearly 1,700,000 Americans represented this week in the eighth report of the Literary Digest's poll of New Deal strength to-day. The heavy balloting shows a further increase in the majority opposed to administration policies. Not only are the Administration "acts and policies" far behind in votes as the poll approaches full flood, but they continue to suffer a loss in percentage.

Fashions

Fashions—aren't they fascinating, and don't they change? It's interesting to watch the styles of past ages come into vogue, and to also see the native costumes of the "old country" being donned by the smartest of smart women.

Shall we take a peek into the fashions and see just what is "in"; what is "coming in"; what is "going out"; and what is already "out"?

"In"—we find dead (or alive) white for evening—black—cerise—a bright violet hue. Dinner suits (not tuxedoes) for the ladies. Evening jackets are being worn even at quite big parties. More and more tulle. White touches.

Shorter skirts are coming in. Suits made of manly sack suitings. A great wave of Scotch things. The old prize-fighter shoulders of Shiaparelli. A glorious new Madonna blue. Shiney white satin, tailored severely. Much embriodery and beading. Satin pantalettes (let them laugh) showing under slit evening skirts. Plaid jackets with plain skirts (to confuse those who have just gotten plad skirts with plain jackets). Chinese colored felts—jade, coral, amber—to cheer up old fur coats. Prints stolen from the gypsies, and hats designed after the fashion of the Guadeloupian native head-dress.

"Going out"—! Flame red in evening promises a sickening throb in the pit of the stomach. Felt hats with the quills are to be somewhat calmed down. Victorian nets over the hair (they never quite clicked).

Pity the poor fashions that are already out in the cold. For instance, all the military frogs and brandenburgs—and all the bonnets that were designed after the fashion of aerial illusions.

In and out—all year long. It is almost like an elevator boy's chant, "Going in, going out." Within a month fashions will be changed again beyond recognition. People dote on it, though, don't they?

The first thing to learn about driving an automobile is how to stop. The same applies to making a speech.

There is no secret to making friends. Friends, like all good things, can be had by anyone who really wants them. To have a friend, be one yourself.

Grades have been sent out and I don't doubt that we all have our own opinion about them. But read what a student of Los Angeles has to say:

On Getting a "C" in English

Poor fool, who racks her brain in fruitles toil
The wretched whims of teacher's tests to foil,
Who memorizes lines of poets dead
That plan confusion in her muddled head,
Who crams with ghastly purpose all the night
To dash forearmed into the grisly fight,
And then to wander through the devious ways
Of rhymster's lyrics and of poets' lays—
The more she knows she knows, she knows the less.

A new subject for an essay has been exploited at Auburn and here is the amusing result.

Pants are made for men and not for women. Women are made for men and not for pants. When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man that makes a pair of pants. Pants are like molasses—they are thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold weather. There has been much discussion as to whether pants is (are) singular or plural. Seems to us that when men wear pants it is plural, and when they don't it is singular. If you want to make pants last, begin with the coat.

The first college cheer is credited to Princeton students, who got the idea from an unknown private of the Seventh Regiment of New York, as the outfit mobilized for war in 1860.

Literary Column

There are many phrases which we use constantly in conversation without knowing what they mean or how they originated. Some of these phrases have come from "slang", although at one time they carried an important and dignified meaning. There are old and interesting traditions behind most of these figures of speech.

"Blue Blood"—There are old families in Spain that trace their pedigrees beyond the time of the Moorish conquest, claiming that at that time the blood of the common people was of a muddy hue, while those who belonged to the pedigreed families had blood of a pure blue. Now it is customary to refer to people with notable pedigrees as "blue-blooded".

"Adam's Apple"—A piece of the forbidden apple lodged in Adam's throat, and all men have a lump in the throat as a reminder of Adam's sin.

"Knocking on Wood"—This expression originated, apparently, in the custom of touching wood upon every occasion of happiness or good fortune in gratitude to Christ who died upon a wooden cross.

"Blue Monday"—In early days those whose affairs of business occupied them on Sunday were considered entitled to a holiday on Monday and this day they used to laze around. Because the churches throughout Europe were decorated with blue on the first Monday before Lent—which was a lazy day for everyone—this day of rest for Sunday workers became known as "Blue Monday."

"Lynching"—This terms originated in the American Revolution at which time Charles Lynch illegally put to death some Tories. Thereafter, whenever anyone was hanged or put to death without the action of the law it was called "lynching".

"Bury the Hatchet"—This phrase obviously comes from the actual ceremony of burying the hatchet, practiced by the Indians to indicate their willingness to be friendly.

"Tickled to Death"—originated from a form of torture practiced by the Chinese in which the soles of the prisoners' feet were tickled until he died of nervous prostration.

"Your are a brick"—Plutarch first used this expression in relating the story of Agesilaus, King of Sparta, who was showing a foreign envoy his principal towns. The envoy remarked:

"But Sire, I see no walls reared for defense."

"Indeed, Sir Ambassador", replied Agesilaus, "thou canst not have looked carefully. Come with me tomorrow and I will show you the walls of Sparta".

Accordingly the King led his guest out the next morning and proudly pointed to his army drawn up in full array, saying: "There thou beholdest the walls of Sparta—ten thousand men, and every man a brick."

"A Feather in One's Cap"—Among the Sioux Indians of North America it was the ambition of every young brave to earn the "feather" of honor, awarded for distinction, bravery in war etc. The value and position of an Indian was determined by the number of feathers in his "cap".

"Kick the Bucket!"—The Egyptian word for kick is Khekl, meaning to recoil, to return, to send back. Therefore, to Khekl the bucket in the Egyptian hieroglyphics indicates or symbolizes the return of an empty bucket, in other words, a body without life.

"Pouring Oil on Troubled Waters"—Pliny speaks of the result of pouring oil on troubled waters, indicating that as oil will smooth a stormy sea so will soft words smooth a ruffled, angry personality.

In his Fables, Aesop has given us many phrases that are as popular in usage today as when they were written or spoken first. Some of these are:

"Familiarity breeds contempt."
"Look before you leap."
"Figures are not always facts."
"Men are blind to their own faults."
"Grasp at the shadow and lose the substance".
"They who lay traps for others are often caught by their own bait."
"Pride shall have a fall."
"Necessity is the mother of invention."

is optional. The letter is not to be over 500 words.

As soon as the best letter is determined by the judges, Cantor will deposit in the winner's local bank the sum of $5000, which can be used only for the specific purpose of a college career. From this amount, an adequate allowance will be provided for the student to pay his entire tuition and living expenses during the four year term. The later will receive the accrued interest on the money.

The competition will close Saturday, February 22nd. The judges' award will be announced by Cantor on Sunday, April 5th. All letters are to be addressed to Eddie Cantor, General Postoffice, Box 99, New York City.

After a short devotional led by Mary Bowles, president of the junior class, this morning in chapel, Juliette Barrett gave a short program of piano solos. Among the selected compositions were, "To a Water Lilly" and "To a Wild Rose". Both of these selections are well-known compositions of McDowell.

BOOK REVIEW

Lucy Gayheart

In Lucy Gayheart, Willa Cather gives us one of the most vital characters of the book world. Apparently it is the story of a normal, popular young girl, typical of the small towns of America. Lucy lives with her father, an eccentric German watchmaker and musician. Her older sister, Pauline, a stolid and unimaginative young woman, half-jealous, and half-maternal, is extremely alive in their shabby house amid a fruitless orchard. In Harry Gordon, handsome and prosperous, we find Lucy's girlhood sweetheart

Early inthe story Lucy is distinguished from others of her type by an unusual bouyancy of spirit, an indefinable understanding she seems to share with something unknown. She is studying music in Chicago, to the disgust of her sister, and spends many hours at the piano.

It is in Chicago that we see the development of Lucy's character and the unfolding of her personality as she works with Clement Sebastian, world famous singer. She is deeply content in her love for him which was apparent to her at the first concert of his which she attended. Sebastian is a rather large, middle-aged man who has been married many years. We soon see that Lucy's love is of the spirit. There is a deep sympathy and understanding between them which is wholly satisfying to her unique temperament. The idyll is cut short by Sebastian's return to Europe for a few months. Lucy, awaiting his return in Chicago, learns of his death by drowning.

The pain and finality of the separation leaves Lucy as one whose spirit has died. She becomes, in her fashion, as lovely and as tragic as Juliet, and the lasting impression she makes upon those who knew her well or casually, although they themselves do not realize it until long afterwards, is conveyed with the skill of the artist Miss Cather is.

This is not a story of blighted love or damaging passion, nor is it a village chronicle. Haverford and its quiet continuous life are presented in glimpses merely as the background against which Lucy Gayheart's enchanting figure stands out. She is remembered by all who knew her through reading the book, as "a slight figure always in motion dancing or skating, or walking swiftly with intense direction, like a bird flying home."

The London Times Literary Supplement says of the book: "It is a subtle story of motives and accidents, infinitisimal in themselves, but carrying lasting consequences. There is no emphasis on love or death or the terrifying premonition of disaster and coldness, but one recognizes the experience of a life-time, a sure knowledge of young passion and old grief in this simply related tale. Lucy Gayheart, beautifully expressed by her name, stands poised like youth itself on a hill, flying yet fixed in the mind."

Foolscable

The cover of your publication is attractive STOP at cover.
—Puritan

But lest such abbreviated comment be misconstrued as representing the honest analytical attitude of this reviewer, let me elucidate.

The editors of Foolscap take great pains to inform us that material of a humorous nature is hard to get, which statement appears to me to take the form of an apologetic rather than an informative announcement. But having passed into the body of the magazine, the reader soon forgets the protective shadow which the editors seem to have provided as a place of hiding, and would bring them forth into the limelight of praise.

Looking backward upon those days of the SHINE and the SKIPPER, I am forced to admire a publication of this sort which successfully avoids bald dirt and at least remains on the borderline of decency. The worst (or best) word I can use in its description is risque. Certainly the editors adhere to the policy that a good joke is one in which humor exceeds the filth. Should they continue to follow such a policy, it is a safe prediction that their child of the press will not meet the same misfortune as did its predecessors.

All hail to George Ira Allen. He has captured that elusive element of James Joyce and wrapped it around a theme that holds too much truism and pathos to appear as a comic. It is a shame that this gem of literature does not have a better setting.

"This Mad Whirl"' displays a professional style of columning which emphasizes the amateurishness found in other spots of the publication. It could, perhaps, be a bit more Waldpolian. After all, Georgetown escapade is now history and everyone already knew that Richmond was an over-grown one-horse town.

Mac Trawick is still up to that high standard of writing which he consistently displayed on this campus in past years. His clear and well-ordered style is an oasis in a desert of innuendoes. Mac's column should be particularly appreciated on this campus—we who have been without a radio column for so long.

"New York Letter" is strangely similar to the style employed by the New Yorker. Would it not be better to present a commentation on Virginia's hangouts and dives rather than those of the far-away big city?

For honorable mention let me suggest "Life Begins at Chapter XXXX," "Hanover", "Rush and Go Mad", and "Hydrogen Sulphide and Tutti-Frutti."

There are a few (too few) good cartoons, thanks especially to Carolin Finjan. It might be said that the financial condition of the magazine did not permit many originals, but with a little support from advertizers, there should be an improvement here.

Too many by-lines are given to other publications. Perhaps this is a fault of contributors and not editors. 'Tis a blot on our own originality.

For complete condemnation I suggest "A Tale for the Evil-Minded." The first time I heard that story there were traveling salesmen in it, and those tales date back to the founding of the Fuller Brush Co.

But FOOLSCAP, in spite of your faults (which may be easily corrected), you have exceeded our expectations and we are with you. Here's to your long life, and I'll be looking at you.—Reprint from Richmond Collegian.

College Students To Give Radio Programs

Station WOR has announced a new and interesting experiment in the line of radio programs, to be called, "Campus on the Air." It will be a series of programs prepared, directed, and presented entirely by college and university students and recent graduates.

In the programs to be presented, many interesting features will be included. Periods of light and classical music and song, sport chats to be given by well-konwn campus luminaries, and a serious talk, or the use of dialogue, dramatic, interview, or forum methods of discussing national affairs. Serious sketches as well as witty and sparkling dramatic presentations with scenes laid in college settings will also featured.

A friend is the first one to step in after the whole world has stepped out.

Give me the man who holds on when others let go; who pushes ahead when others turn back; who stiffens up when others retreat; who knows no such word as can't or "give up" and I will show you a man who will win in the end.

CLASS BASKETBALL

Again the class colors will be in evidence during our interclass basketball games. The plan this year is to conduct a tornament, in which every team plays every other team. This affords more competition, as well as more practice for the individual players and teams. The class games are to be played the last week in January, at which time ten practices must be had. Show the keen class spirit then as it was displayed the day of color rush. Shall it be red and white this time or green and white?

Ping Pong

Speaking of good sportsmanship, the athletic council, as well as hundreds of other girls, would like to see the new ping pong balls treated with proper respect, and used for the good of the whole student body of a select few, as has happened in the past. The balls are put there to be used; make the most of the game!

Varsity Basketball

Our first varsity basketball of the season will be January 31, with Lynchburg College. Give the girls a big send-off and make them think you are right behind them.

Lelia Sanford is coaching a life-saving class in swimming every Friday afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock. A Red Cross examiner will come here to give the examinations. The following girls have signed up for this instruction:

Mary Robeson, Sidney Yonce, Mary J. Cox, Frances Irving, Virginia Ritchie, Marion Umberger, Zell Hopkins, Margaret Britton, Jenney Carroll, Anne Scales, Scottie McAllister, Frances Bryan, Lucile Ware, Mary Virginia Walker, Elizabeth Roberts and Bonnie Lane.

That there will be an open swimming meet between classes February 26 was announced by Mrs. Fitzpatrick, instructor of swimming. Start now by getting in practices for the gala affair.

College Editors Would Reelect Roosevelt Poll

Editors of college newspapers, magazines and yearbooks favor the reelection of President Roosevelt, according to the results of a poll recently conducted by Pulse of the Nation. The complete returns, announced November 1, gave Roosevelt 408 votes, Borah 52, Frank Knox 26, Herbert Hoover 23, Norman Thomas 23, Governor Alfred Landon 22 and other candidates from 1 to 8.

Doris Moore Chosen To Go To St. Louis

Doris Moore will represent the Beta Epsilon chapter of Kappa Delta Pi at St. Louis, Missouri, February 24-26.

The convocation will meet at the Coronado Hotel, all session convening in the Crystal Ballroom. The anniversary banquet will be served in the main ballroom of the Statler hotel on Tuesday evening.

Speakers and discussion leaders of the convocation have not been announced.

Doris Moore, president of Beta Epsilon chapter, was unanimously elected as delegate to the convention at a meeting of the chapter Thursday, January 9.

Immediate Sleeping Prompts Memory Later

Ithaca, N. Y.—"If a person memorizes certain material perfectly and goes to sleep immediately afterward, he will recall more of it and also relearn the whole task more economically after a lapse of 24 hours, than if he waits even a few hours before he goes to sleep," said Dr. H. M. Johnson, professor of psychology at the American University in Washington, D. C., in a lecture at Cornell recently.

Experiments showed that students could more easily recall and relearn material they had learned by rote and partially forgotten, if they first slept for eight hours and then worked for 16 hours, than if they distributed rest and activity in any other way during a 24-hour period.

Two hypotheses have been advanced in explanation, Dr. Johnson said. The "hardening" hypothesis suggests that one's brain is inactive during sleep, and being free from disturbance, offers recent impressions a chance to "harden". The "reverberation theory holds that the brain is active in sleep, in the sense that the recent excitations tend to revive themselves, or "reverberate" so that one actually rehearses the recently learned tasks and gets the benefit of additional practice.

Scientists to Study Lethal "Death Rays"

Berkeley, Cal.—University of California scientists here have completed the set-up for man's first experiments with a really lethal "death ray," 14 times as powerful as the X-ray, and so dangerous that approach from any direction to within 50 feet is unsafe.

The ray is a powerful beam of neutrons, the ultimate particles of atoms discovered four years ago by English scientists.

The first sizeable beam of these neutrons is produced in the heart of the field of an 80-ton magnet by a method discovered by Prof. E. O. Lawrence of the University of California.

Involved, though at present unpredictable, are possibilities for the fields of medicine, chemistry and general industry. The neutrons, streaming in all directions from the big magnet, are not stopped by any known type of shield, not even by lead. They pass through the yard-thick coils of the big magnet as if it were so much paper, and nothing will perceptibly slow them down except water.

To experiment in safety the California physicists have set up a remote control panel 50 feet distant from the magnet, with a tank of water forming a three-foot thick barrier.

As easily controlled as an electric light, the beam is produced by a 12,000 volt current, "stepped up" to 4,500,000-volt bolt of neutrons.

Afterthoughts —of the Dance—

Gosh, but my feet hurt. That utter fool that Anne brought absolutely ruined them. Boys who can't dance should stay from our dances. Oh! I hope I can make it to my room. It was a swell dance. Joe got a grand rush. Of course I like for him to have a swell time, but he got on too well. I'll never speak to Betty Jones again. I saw her deliberately trying to make time with him, and she knows how I feel about Joe. The boys from Duke were swell. That captain person sure got a rush. I did my best in that direction, but to no avail, I fear. The room at last. Whew! Let me get out of the clothes and get over to Kathleen's room. I know some poor males will be torn to pieces over there. I ought to get some sleep if I ever expect to get rid of this pesky cold, but I'm afraid I'll miss something if I do. I wish that roommate of mine would keep her clothes on her own bed. Gee! My stockings are ruined, and they're my last Christmas pair. I wonder if that boy from Pittsburgh is really going to write to me. I guess he was just shooting me a line and like a rube I fell for it. I wish Joe could sing like that tenor. When he sang "It's the Talk of the Town" to me I even forgot Joe. I guess I'm just fickle. Oh, there is Mabel! I'd better hurry before they begin. I just can't wait to tell Elsie what I think of the way her date acted tonight. I'm so glad Joe's a gentleman. Ho hum! But it was a swell dance.

Renowned Artists Present Musicale In Fourth Lyceum

Features Soprano, Pianist and Cellist

The fourth program of the artists series was presented Monday night in the form of a concert by Yvonne DesRosiers, soprano; Carl Webster, cellist; and Carl Lamson, pianist.

Miss DesRosiers was well received by the audience not only because of her previous appearance at S. T. C., but because of the personality revealed in her voice.

The performance of Mr. Webster, the cellist, was superb. The sureness and deftness of his touch in his compositions made each a thing of beauty and perfection. Mr. Webster also made chatty comments about each of his selections.

Mr. Lamson, the pianist, related to the audience some of his experience as accompanist to Fritz Kreisler, the renowned German violinist. Mr. Lamson's performance Monday night was brilliant; in addition, as he played, the story of the compositions held the imagination of the audience.

Among the best received numbers were "Spanish Dance" by Popper; "A Pastoral" by Veracin; "Air de Lia (L'Enfant Prodigue)" dy Debussy; "Caprice," "La Cathedrale Engloutie" by Debussy; "Cantique D'Armour" by Liszt; "Wiegenlied" by Strauss; "Ave Marie" by Schubert.

Symphony Feature Bampton, Soprano

Orchestra Arranges Low Student Rates

Rose Bampton, world famous mezzo soprano, will be featured as the guest artist of the Richmond Symphony Orchestra in the Mosque auditorium on Monday evening, January 27.

Miss Bampton has risen to supreme heights in a brief space of years. Making her debut at the Metropolitan Opera three years ago, this artist is one of its youngest stars.

Miss Bampton's "Songs You Love" series over the national networks, endeared her to people everywhere. She was recently acclaimed the greatest singer ever heard in the famous Hollywood Bowl.

The Richmond Symphony Orchestra has made a special offer to Farmville students in order that they might hear Miss Bampton. Tickets may be obtained for fifty cents per person. In case enough students are interested the administration will make some arrangement for transportation. It is suggested that anyone interested go to the Registrar's Office immediately.

Sodalitas Latina Conducts Program on Roman Culture

Sodalitas Latina held its regular meting Thursday, January 16 at 5:00 o'clock in the Language Room Elizabeth Morris presided over the meeting in the absence of Elizabeth Shiplett, president.

"History Repeats Itself", the geenral theme of the meeting, was discussed by Katherine Milby. The members of the club discussed further subjects dealing with Roman culture and the recurrence of historical events in more modern days.

The singing of Horace's "Integer Vitae" concluded the program.

Japanese Welfare Worker Gives Lecture In Richmond

Toyohiko Kagawa is a small man with straight black hair, horn-rimmed spectacles and charming smile. As he stood before his various audiences in Richmond, speaking broken but perfect English, his sincerity, simplicity, intellect and godliness overflowed from his person and held his listeners' undivided attention.

Kagawa was born July 10, 1888, in a town in the province of Awa. His father was vice-president of the province; his mother was his father's concubine. At the age of four he was left an orphan, and was raised by his step-mother, who did not like him and never spoke to him. Being a highly sensitive child his loneliness was acute, and his childhood very unhappy. Fortunately, when he was about eleven years old he met two missionaries from whom he received the kindness and love he yearned for, and through whom he learned of Christ and His teachings.

From early manhood Kagawa devoted his life to helping the poor. For years he lived in the slums of the Shinkawa, preaching in the street, caring for every type of humanity however diseased or corrupt, being constantly molested and mistreated. He contracted tracoma in the slums and has never fully recovered from the disease. The publication of his writings brought him nation-wide recognition and when in 1923 he went to Tokyo to give relief to those suffering from havoc wrought by an earthquake, he was appointed by government officials to organize commissions to continue the relief. Through his efforts attention was brought to the horrible conditions in the slums throughout Japan, and great improvements have been made there in recent years.

Kagawa continues today to do the work of many men. He directs the work of numerous cooperatives in Japan, which serve to better social conditoins by cooperation among the people. Everywhere he is sought for advice and assistance, and always he seeks to instill in men recognition of the urgent and world wide need for Christian fellowship, and for the practice of Christian teachings.

Educators to Discuss Future of Teachers With Honor Society

Mr. McIlwaine of Farmville, Superintendent of Public Schools in Prince Edward County and Cumberland County, will speak to the Beta Epsilon chapter of Kappa Delta Pi Thursday evening, January 23, at 7:30 o'clock in the Honor Society Room.

The subject of Mr. McIlwaine's talk is to be "The Educational Outlook from the Standpoint of Superintendents". He will include the methods and the prospects of securing a teaching position in Virginia.

Following Mr. McIlwaine's address Miss Carter will speak on "The Educational Outlook from the Standpoint of a Supervisor."

Agnes Bondurant will conclude the program presenting the student's viewpoint on the immediate future of education.

Large Percentage of Graduates Busy

An encouraging report comes from the Registrar's office in regard to the girls receiving degrees and diplomas from Farmville in 1935.

Seventy-nine girls graduated with degrees last year. Of this number seventy-one have secured positions teaching. According to these figures, eighty-nine percent of the degree class were placed.

Of the ninety-three girls receiving diplomas last June, eighty-two have been placed or returned to school to continue work on their degree. Upward of eighty-eight per cent of the diploma class are taken care of.

P. W. Fattig Aids Coca Cola Makers

Museum Curator Eats Grasshoppers and Toads

An account of Perry Wilbur Fattig, professor of Biology, who preceded Dr. Jeffers here at Farmville S. T. C. comes to us from the Readers Digest:

"A priceless asset to Coca-Cola's claims department is Perry Wilbur Fattig, Curator of the Museum of Emory University (Atlanta, Ga.) When a customer says he was harmed by something he found swishing around in the bottom of a Coca-Cola bottle, Curator Fattig stands ready to eat what the customer did. Most cases concern drowned bugs and Curator Fattig has convinced many a jury that creatures drowned in carbonated beverages are harmless. For Coca-Cola and other soft-drink makers he has eaten over 10,000 such creatures, including grasshoppers, crickets, snails, toads, caterpillars, earthworms, salamanders, beetles, praying mantes, stink bugs, kissing bugs, bumblebees and poisonous Central American centipedes. Once he added a flair by eating a black widow spider alive, and recently when the company was sued by an infuriated Coca-Cola guzzler who claimed to have found

House Council Starts Enforcement Drive of Study Regulations

Due to numerous complaints from students, administration, and townspeople the House Council is launching a concentrated drive to enforce study hour rules and light permissions.

In cooperation with the House Council and House Presidents, Miss Mary is holding a series of meetings which will eventually reach every student. The purpose of the meetings is to explain this action of the council and to impress upon students the necessity for abiding by the house rules.

To enforce rules the council has set up the following rules and stated the penalty for repeated violation radios must be off by eleven o'clock or they will be taken out; lights must be out at 11:00 o'clock in the senior building and at ten-thirty in the main building unless special permission is granted. Violation of this rule will be rewarded with one week's study hall.

Clubs To Celebrate F. D.'s Anniversary With Cabaret Ball

Floor Entertainment By Artist Dance Group

The College Gymnasium will be the scene of the President's Ball sponsored by the Junior Woman's Club, the Senior Woman's Club, and the Lions' Club on Thursday, January 30. The dance will begin at nine o'clock and end at 1:00 o'clock. Hal Thurston and his orchestra have been signed to play for the ball.

The President's Ball is an activity sponsored by the national organization for prevention and care of Infantile Paralysis. Seventy percent of the proceeds from the dance remains in the local organizations while the remaining thirty per cent will go to the national organization.

The gymnasium is to be converted into a cabaret with tables around the balcony and dancing on the big floor. Members of the college Artist Dance Group, under the direction of Mrs. Fitzpatrick, will give a floor show. The gymnasium will be decorated in the national colors.

The dance will be "boy break" and school girls will be allowed to attend. Dance tickets will sell for $1.10 per couple; spectators, .25; tables, 1.00 per couple. Spectators who reserve tables will not be expected to pay the .25 for looking on. Sandwiches and coca-colas will be served.

Members of the committee are: Mrs. Jack Martin, chairman; Mrs. Porter Holladay, Mrs. Armstrong Smith, Mrs. W. K. Carter, Mrs. Barrye Wall, Mrs. S. M. Holton, Miss Alice Hardaway, Mr. S. W. Watkins and Mr. Frank Verser.

Foolscap Announces Leap Year Number For February Tenth

Volume I, Number 2 of the FOOLSCAP will be on the campus for distribution on February 10. The second edition of the comic will be the "Leap Year Number". The deadline for copy for this issue is closed; however, it is the desire of The Rotunda Staff that Farmville be represented in the future issues of the publication. Therefore, it is urged that any students talented in cartooning, writing, etc., contribute any of their work to the staff.

Copy for the March Hare Number must be turned in to the staff by February 8. Material need not necessarily stick to the above subject, but can be on almost anything.

In order that the staff may have some idea as to how many copies the students will want in February, people desiring a copy then are asked to sign their name on the sheet on the bulletin board for that purpose. Promptness is urged as it will be impossible to increase the order after a week or so.

Gwendolyn Bell Plays Piano Solo In Chapel Service

At the usual students' day chapel service this morning Madeline McGlothlin conducted devotionals. This was followed by a piano solo of "March of the Dwarfs" by Gwendolyn Bell of the freshman class.

A program of very special interest will be presented in the chapel Friday morning. Administration, faculty and members of the students body are urged to be present.

Musical Romance Scheduled Jan. 31

Sophomores Present "Syncopated Sailing"

"Syncopated Sailing", musical review, will be staged by the sophomore class on January 31, in the college auditorium at 8:00 o'clock. Intensive practice has been started and the production is well on the way.

The theme is that of a world cruise, presenting the story in six scenes on board the ship and in various foreign countries including France, Spain, Egypt, and Japan.

Woven in the delightful romance are a number of song and dance solos and accompanying choruses. Virginia Agee and Virginia Layne are starred in the leading roles of a novelist and a spunky young lady. Comic impersonations will be done by the Hubbard twins as Pete and Repete; Grace Allen Pittard as a spoiled youngster; and Will Scott as Joe College.

Tickets may be obtained from members of the class after January 22, for the sum of twenty-five cents.

Carter Belle Munt, Elizabeth Harris and Margaret Farrar are directing the production.

Girls Realize Value of Discussion Group

Members of Miss Peck's two classes in government have realized the need for further discussion of problems arising in the regular class period and have voluntarily initiated a series of informal discussion groups to meet this need. The students found that in order to understand the problems it was necessary to investigate the history behind the problems and to get a picture of the government se-up attempting to handle the siuation.

Hence, an informal discussion hour is held each week the time and day of the meeting depending upon the readiness of students to participate.

Last Monday fifty girls met to discuss the Supreme Court decision on the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Approximately one-third of the girls took an active part.

At 7:00 o'clock this evening the students will meet again in the Y. W. C. A. lounge to study the Neutrality Provision as made by the first session of the seventy-fourth Congress, and the Neutrality Bill pending before the present session. More extensive reading bearing upon our previous wars necessitates the meeting being later this week.

Students taking American History under Miss Peck have been invited to attend and participate in the meeting tonight.

NYA Work Helps Hundred Fourteen

The National Youth Administration is employing at this time one hundred and fourteen girls in the college. Students are employed in a number of fields; 33 in the dining hall; 37 in clerical work; 9 as laboratory assistants; 8 as library clerks; 7 readers; 6 as stenographers; 5 as supervisors on the Training School Playground; 3 as study hall supervisors; 3 in the music department; 2 in health work; and 1 as life guard.

Pi Gamma Mu Will Introduce Noted Professor

Dr. Samuel Chiles Mitchell professor of history at the University of Richmond, and perhaps the best loved teacher in the state, will speak here Friday night, January 24, at 8:00 p. m. in the small auditorium. He is being brought here by the National Social Science Honorary Society, Pi Gamma Mu.

Dr. Mitchell attended academic school at the University of Virginia and received his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago and his LL.D. from Brown University. He has been an instructor at Mississippi College, Georgetown University, Brown University, and the University of Richmond. In these schools he has taught not only history, but also Greek and Latin.

Dr. Mitchell was president of the University of South Carolina from 1908 until 1913 when he became president of the University of Dunham where he remained until 1920. In that year he returned to the University of Richmond, and there he has remained as professor of History.

Dr. Mitchell is not only well-known throughout Virginia, but through the entire South he is

Rotunda Promotes Editorial Contest

Four Classes to Edit the February Issues

In accordance with the custom, the four classes, beginning with the seniors and working down to the freshmen, will publish the February issues of The Rotunda. The specifications for these editions have been somewhat changed this year in order to save unnecessary work and to make the class issues more representative of journalistic style.

The standards set up are as follows: (1) Each class shall have two, and only two, Rotunda staff members on the class staff. These girls shall be appointed by the editor of the paper. (2) The issues shall be judged on general news value, journalistic style, and make-up. The class staffs shall strive to publish a representative issue of The Rotunda. (3) No color work will be permitted. (4) The issues will be judged by Mr. Barrye Wall of The Farmville Herald. (5) The usual award of $2.50 will go to the class winning the contest.

Those appointed for the class staffs are as follows: seniors, Agnes Bondurant and Elizabeth Walton; juniors, Elsie Cabell and Claire Eastman; sophomores, Elizabeth Morris and Ruth Phelps; freshmen, Virginia Bean and Ann Wills. (Because there is but one freshman on the Rotunda staff it was necessary to appoint an upperclassman to assist with this issue. Virginia is a member of the sister class.)

Gamma Psi Initiates New Members Monday, Jan. 20

Gamma Psi, local honorary fraternity in art, initiated the following new members on Monday, January 20, at 7:00 o'clock: Virginia Agee, Mrs. Burch, Nan Seward, Patty Bounds, Elizabeth Butlerfi, Sarah Button, Mary Ellen Mims, Charlotte Minten, Louise Painter, Kitty Roberts, Margaret Scott, Virginia W. Smith, and Francis Thomas.

A New Education

Expectancy is the universal mood of the hour. Whether we turn to science, politics, philosophy, education—anywhere—the fact is the same. The world is looking forward to the next thing. The universe seems to be in the midst of great changes—epoch making—though no one can say exactly why. It isn't possible to see around the corner, but we can say what we hope to see and may reasonably expect to see.

This is particularly true in education. There is a widespread and profound belief that something is radically wrong with our educational system. We have plenty of so-called education, but its worth is to be judged not by the money spent, but the number of pupils enrolled, by imposing curricula, or by grades received, but solely by the product turned out. H. G. Wells has said that it is "education or catastrophe." But does education today with all its invested capital and output of graduates produce young men and women physically, mentally and spiritually well-rounded and fitted to take their place intelligently and enthusiastically in the social life of their community? Judged by this test our system of education, notwithstanding brilliant exceptions, is a definite failure.

We must see an education that takes itself seriously as the chief concern of the community—an education whose aim is the formation of self-regulative citizens of the world and the universe. If for one generation we could turn the corner into a rationalized, socialized and spiritualized education civilization would be reborn.

In "Around the Corner" by W. W. Willard, he tells us that in this new education three things of outstanding importance will be realized: "(1) We shall have an education which recognizes the unique character of each individual pulpil and with unerring wisdom addresses itself to his peculiar needs. (2) We shall have an education of the whole child and not merely of segments. The vast majority of school children today, all of them potentially creators in some line, are sacrificed to a mechanical, intellectualized education that robs them of their birthright of creative joy. The education around the corner will produce teachers and devise methods capable of unlocking the secret chambers of personality now locked by our meagre psychologies and mercenary policies. (3) The coming education will also produce socialized children in a sense never dreamed of before. The cause for civilization's chief difficulties lies in the individualized systems of education which prevail throughout the world. Egotistic attitudes race prejudices and false patriotism are encouraged even when not directly cultivated. The center of education will come to be the world of non-self rather than the world of self which it is today. The best product of the school around the corner will be socialized boys and girls, young men and women, prepared to make their personal contribution toward a new world civilization."

Mr. Willard's suggestions hold a significant message in reac hof us as the coming teachers. We are in the position of greatest importance to the new education. We can begin to bring about the realization of a new civiilzation of socialized citizens of one fealty—the welfare of others.

The Passing of a Great Gentleman

No more loved king has died in recent years, perhaps, in all the years of British history, than his majesty, George V. Not the fascinating personality of his father, Edward VII, not the conscious burden of goodness of his grandmother, Victoria, not the tinsel and show of royalty, none of these marked the character of the man who has left a nation in tears and a world saddened with regret. It was something far more sublime, the simple honest faith of one who bore without abuse the grand old name of gentleman. He was a king because he felt deeply the responsibility thrust upon him by the death of an elder brother, he was a gentleman because he tried to do the right thing and to make the world a better place for his having been born into his own appointed place.

A British king has a dual role fo consummate difficulty. In his name all action takes place; his own will must never dominate. They sadly mistake who attach no importance to the diplomatic skill, the tactful leadership of a permanent minister who sees above parties and who guides by suggestion. Long ago Walter Bagehot said: "Nothing is left to the successor of the warlike Norman except the power to warn, to counsel, and to advise—and no great king needs more." Measured by every standard of history and of right, George V was a great king in that he was what the country loved, the love most needed in his day. And to his successor he leaves the memory of a great gentleman who also served.

—Dr. Walmsley

The Nye Investigation

The name of Woodrow Wilson, a Southern idol, perhaps second only to Robert E. Lee, is now being exposed to accusations by Senator Nye's Munitions Investigating Committee.

This group of Senators is telling the public that Woodrow Wilson deliberately denied that he knew of the secret treaties between foreign countries when he went to the famous peace conference.

To students of history this is not news. They have already studied the eminent president's career and formed their opinions. It is, however, a shock and desecration to the naieve masses. It is more than a shock—an unnecessary shock which will add nothing to the prestige of the investigating committee and at the same time have little convincing influence against the time honored name of Wilson.

The Nye investigators have, no doubt, handled this information candidly and with no intent to injure. However, in the revealing, we see the continuation of a trend to find fault with the lives of great men after they are dead.

In this case, the South will not likely follow the modern trend but stand loyally by her last son to receive the nation's highest honor.

Intercollegiate News

Here's a new suggestion — but now that it's Leap Year perhaps there's no need for it. Co-eds on the campus of Syracuse Univerdity take no chances. When they haven't a date they wear the school colors in ribbons in their hair. The ribbons signify that they haven't a date and aren't too particular about whom they get one with—just so they get one.

A college education is a thing that never hurt anybody who is willing to learn something afterwards . . . . A reformer is a guy who rides through a sewer in a glass bottom boat . . . A kleptomaniac is one who helps himself because he can't help himself . . . Economy—doing without what you need to save money for something you can do without . . . Old Maid—an evaporated peach.

What would you do in a case like this. The plight of members of the college marching band, accustomed to forming the names of opposing schools on the football field, who learned that their next opponent was to be the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Four University o Pennsylvania students have been put on probation because of a poem deemed "sacrilegious" which appeared in the campus literary magazine.

Purdue's charter stipulates that there be on the board of regents "one farmer, one woman and one person of good moral character."

From the psychological clinic of the University of Hawaii comes the statement that 25 out of every 100 students will cheat if the chance of escaping detection is good.

The woman who said that half of the world did not know how the other half lived must have made the statement before the womens clubs were organized. And we might add before "bull sessions" were so prevalent in girls colleges.

Co-eds are a part of that great field known as extra curricular activities.

Georgia Tech statisticians have compiled a handy list of 2500 expressions of profanity. No need, any longer, to remain speechless with rage.

World News

The world is grieved with the death of King George of England, who died in his home peacefully 11:55 P. M. Monday. The Prince of Wales is now King of the World's largest empire. He will probably take the title of King Edward VIII.

Soldiers bonus bill, calling for payment of full 1945 maturity value in $50 bonus, was passed by the Senate yesterday at a nearly five to one majority rolled up for the Democratic-Republican 2,000,000,000 enough to pass it over a veto.

Democratic national committee to hold party's national convention in Philadelphia beginning June 23, two weeks after the Republican convention in Cleveland, Ohio.

Bruno Hauptmann took the news calmly when they told him that he must die in the electric chair, March 8, 1935.

Court of appeals of New York State rules that confidential information obtained by a newspaper reporter is not privileged and cannot be withheld when demanded by a court.

Score of coal miners and their wives were rescued from a snowbound ranch near Alpine, Wyoming where they had been marooned since January 5.

New red and blue air-mail special delivery stamps will go on sale February tenth and will cost sixteen cents, announced Postmaster general Farley.

Floyd Bennett Field in Brooklyn, New York will became principal base of United States Coast Guard aviation section for part of Atlantic coast.

It has just been discovered at the University of Washington that a college man there has just one chance in 400 of marrying a girl with a home economics training.

Life of A Joke

Birth—A freshman thinks it up and chuckles with glee waking up two fraternity men on the back row.

Age 5 minutes—Freshmen tells it to senior, who answers: "Yeah, it's funny but I've heard it before."

Age 1 Day—Senior turns it into the campus humor rag as his own.

Age 2 days—Editor thinks it's terrible.

Age 10 days—Editor has to fill magazine, prints joke.

Age 1 month—Thirteen college comics reprint joke.

Age 3 years—Annapolis Log reprints joke as original.

Age 3 years 1 month—College Humor reprints joke, crediting it to Log.

Age 10 years—76 radio comedians discover joke simultaneously, tell it accompanied by howls of mirth from boys in orchestra (65 a howl).

Age 20 years—Joke is printed in Literary Digest.

Age 100 years—Professors start telling joke in class.

Fairly interesting. But if they will show the girls what chance they have of marrying a college man who can get a job and support them, we might have something.

Shirley Temple's parents have already planned to send her to the University of California in Los Angeles. I guess you should call that the result of Premature Rushing.

Literary Column

"There's a Certain Slant of Light"

There's a certain slant of light,
On winter afternoons,
That oppresses, like the weight
Of cathedral tunes.
Heavenly hurt it gives us;
We can find no scar,
But internal difference
Where the meanings are.
None may teach it anything,
'Tis the seal, despair,
An imperial affliction
Sent us of the air.
When it comes the landscape listens,
Shadows hold their breath;
When it goes, 'tis like the distance
On the look of death.

Emily Dickinson

Memory

My mind lets go a thousand things,
Like dates of wars and deaths of kings,
And yet recalls the very hour-
'Twas noon by yonder village tower,
And on the last blue moon in May-
The wind came briskly up this way,
Crisping the brook beside the road;
Then pausing here, set down its load
Of pine-scents, and shook listlessly
Two petals from that wild-rose tree.

T. B. Aldrich

God's World

O World, I cannot hold thee close enough!
Thy winds, thy wide grey skies!
Thy mists that roll and rise!
Thy woods, this autumn day, that ache and sag
And all but cry with color! That gaunt crag
To crush! To lift the lean of that black bluff!
World, World, I cannot get thee close enough!
Long have I known a glory in it all,
But never knew I this;
Here such a passion is
As stretches me apart. Lord I fear
Thou'st made the world too beautiful this year.
My soul is all but out of me, let fall
No burning leaf; prithee, let no bird call.

Edna St. Vincent Millay

Opportunity

This I beheld, or dreamed it in a dream:-
There spread a cloud of dust along a plain;
And underneath the cloud, or in it, raged
A furious battle, and men yelled, and swords
Shocked upon swords and shields.
A prince's banner
Wavered, then staggered backward, hemmed by foes.
A craven hung along the battle's edge,
And thought, "Had I a sword of keener steel-
That blue blade that the king's son bears, but this
Blunt thing!" he snapt, and flung it from his hand,
And lowering crept away and left the field.
Then came the king's son, wounded, sore bestead,
And weaponless, and saw the broken sword,
Hilt-buried in the dry and trodden sand,
And ran and snatched it, and with battle-shout
Lifted afresh he hewed his enemy down,
And saved a great cause that heroic day.

A Parting Guest

What delightful hosts are they-
Life and Love!
Lingeringly I turn away,
This late hour, yet glad enough
They have not withheld from me
Their high hospitality.
So, with face lit with delight
And all gratitude, I stay
Yet to press their hands and say,
"Thanks.-So fine a time! Goodnight."

Rotunda Reverberations

By the way, who is Edith? Ask Bob Kincaid. It seems that while listening to the radio the other day someone heard it announced that "Nobodys Darling" would be played by request of Bob Kincaid from Hampden-Sydney for Edith of S. T. C. Sounds critical to me.

Poor Virginia! It really was "Dinner for One" Sunday night wasn't it? You can't tell us he loves you.

Should have mentioned it sooner. If you have too much work to do that you can't survive without a little aid, Sue Waldo will be very glad to do all of your odd jobs. We hear she has plenty of time now. Cheer up Sue, the worst is yet to come.

Freshmen aren't educated quite enough yet. One of our beloved professors was quite insulted the other day. This is the story—Mr. French left the Lab with some 30 or more freshmen. One poor child seemed to be in a complete storm, unable to perform her experiment. Mr. MacCorkle happened to peep in the door. The "worried one" quickly lifted her eyes and said, "Hi, Mr. do you know anything about Chemistry?"

We wonder if some of the girls have forgotten that the holidays are over and that we are no longer "Footloose and fancy free"—We'd advise you to notice the girls on campus and take heed.

Mr. Shannon says he feels another depression. Business has been terrible the past week-end—I wonder why.

Don't look so sad girls, Hampden-Sydney Exams will be over the twenty-eighth.

We have had a few applications for Amateur hour but the Juniors gave it a "gong" Saturday at Sing.

Who's the Don Juan that has been giving so many girls a break? To the rest, better learn a poem, you may be next.

The best complaint for H.-S. not studying for the exams was "Every time I opened a book a S. T. C. girl was sitting in the center of the page."

The 'rec was so crowded Saturday Night that Marjorie Woolfolk had to have her date on the steps. Now wasn't that a Noble thing to do?

Sophomores and Freshmen will have to have genius to make up their "Sing" to keep up with the Juniors and Seniors.

Famous Educators Promoted Founding Of Normal School

Our Alma Mater is one of the oldest teacher-training institutions in the South and was the first teacher-training institution in Virginia.

Among the men closely associated with this beginning of teacher-training were two beloved Virginian's, Dr. J. L. M. Curry and Dr. W. H. Ruffner. To them is conceded the credit for the normal school idea in Virginia. They threw themselves wholeheartedly into the work and were the guiding spirits of the new undertaking.

The bill for the establishment of our college was drafted by Dr. Curry who was the first president of the Board of Trustees.

"As a statesman and leader in educational matters, Dr. Curry stood preeminent in the South". He had more to do with the establishment and organization of the public schools throughout Virginia than perhaps anyone else due to the various positions he held. He was agent for the Peabody Fund for a period of twenty-two years and agent for the Slater Fund for twelve years. "He was a wonderfully versatile man, soldier, preacher, member of Congress, State Legislator, administrator of funds, professor, college president, author, representative at a Foreign Court and with it all a knightly gentleman and a lovable man".

At the time of the establishment of the Normal School Dr. James Nelson was Pastor of the Baptist Church of Farmville and was very interested in the undertaking. He was also a charter member of the Board of Trustees and to him we largely owe the location of the Normal School here in Farmville. He served on this board until 1914 when it went under the Virginia Normal School Board for the four teacher-training institutions in the state.

In the College Reading Room may be seen the portraits of three other members of the Board of Trustees, General William B. Taliaferro, Judge Francis Nathaniel Watkins, and Colonel J. P. Fitzgerald. The latter mentioned were citizens of Farmville.

Dr. Nelson's portrait was presented to the College in 1927 by Mr. William Nelson, a son of Nelson, and his wife. His portrait hangs in the President's Office of the College along with others. The painting is the work of Duncan Smith of New York City, who married a daughter of the donors.

Dr. Curry's portrait also hangs in the President's office and his kindly face still looks down upon what even to this day may be called the works of his hand—and our home.

Beauty Resolutions

It's a new year—a new chance to look lovelier than you have ever looked before. I hope you will resolve to care for your skin so that it becmes softer, finer and smoother with each succeeding day. Here are some resolutions that will help you to keep beauty during the next twelve months.

1. Always remove all make-up before you go to bed.

2. Give yourself a complete beauty treatment each day, that is,—wash, follow with pateurized face cream and finish with a skin tonic.

3. Set aside a little time each week for attention to your hands, hair, and feet.

4. Have he courage to be different. Do not follow make-up fads, but decide on your most becoming make-up and stick to that.

5. Keep your skin clear. If you are having any difficulty, write to me and I will be glad to help you individually.

Simple as these beauty resolutions are, I think you will find that they cover every phase of beauty care. Indeed, they are not as simple as they look! But at this time of the year we feel equal to making—and keeping—the most difficult resolutions. However, if you find, when you try to carry them out, that you are just too tired or too busy or too forgetful, then do this: Choose that resolution which you feel you need most. Follow it even if you neglect every other one. At the end of two weeks I am sure you will begin to see such an improvement in your skin that you will adopt all the other resolutions as well!

I know that this year will see as great an advancement in scientific care of there has been in the past years. Get your share of beauty. There is more than enough to go around.

If you have a personal beauty problem, write Helena Rubinstein, co. Womans Interest Syndicate, 522 Fifth Avenue, New York City, and she will advise.

If you smile at a boy, he thinks you are flirting with him.

And if you don't he labels you a flat tire.

If you let him kiss you, he wishes you were more reserved.

But if you don't, he seeks consolation somewhere else.

If you flatter him, he thinks you are silly and he is probably not so wrong.

But if you don't, he is sure you don't understand and appreciate him.

If you are a good girl, he'll wonder why you're not more human.

If you are otherwise, he is disgusted.

If you smoke, he doesn't want you to.

And if you don't he thinks you are a poor sport.

If you drink, he thinks you are "hard" and if you don't he'll get a girl who does.

If you go out with other boys, he thinks you're fickle.

If you don't, he thinks no one wants you.

I think boys are all just "no good" and I think I'll forget them

Robert Porterfield Runs Barter Theatre

(Exchange)

Robert Porterfield, Broadway and radio actor, says he would have written a different letter to Santa Claus if New York audiences paid him what his summer Virginia audiences do. In that case, he wouldn't have been hoping for Christmas gifts of a juicy Virginia ham and a jar of brandied peaches. For summer theatregoers in Virginia would pay him just such articles.

Porterfield, playing most Sundays now in "Roses and Drums", radio's Civil War drama, organized the now famous Barter Theatre at Abingdon, Virginia. He takes a company of New York actors down there each summer, houses them in a vacant dormitory of the old Stonewall Jackson College and goes out on the road with them each night. They play in towns and villages within a radius of forty miles.

Members of the audience pay their admission at the ticket window in chickens, watermellons, peaches, hens, beans potatoes, or what-have-they.

Porterfield, who was playing in "Let Freedom Ring" during its very recent engagement on Broadway, has a long list of successes behind him, including "The Petrified Forest". He got on the stage because he couldn't read his own handwriting. When he finished high school at Abingdon, his father sent him to summer school at Hampden-Sydney College to take a course in penmanship. His father's threat was serious.

"If you can't write me a letter before the summer is over that you can read to me after you get back home, I won't send you to college." Porterfield barely made the grade in penmanship, but he came off with the honors in a play given by the summer students.

From that time on he knew he wanted to be an actor. His father liked the idea even less than he did son Robert's handwriting. One member of their family, a Pat Huffard, had thrown away a degree from the University of Vir-

Bullfinch's Birdseed Program Presents Junior Amateurs

A spirit of laughter and merriment reigned throughout the entire audience Saturday night when the juniors presented their annual performance. The cast gave an amateur program over the S. T. C. network of Station S-I-N-G, sponsored by the "Bullfinch's Bird Seed" Company having as its announcer Major Tweet, alias Mary Lib Slater.

After a most interesting announcement by Major Tweet concerning the use of "Bullfinch's Bird Seed" which bears "not a cough in a car load" for each canary, the talented band, composed of Minnie Smith, Polly Wall, Margaret Pittard, Midge Davis, Martha Glen Davis, Dot Robinson, Kitty Roberts, Eleanor Dunham, Zell Hopkins, Virginia Baker, directed by Bernice Jones, rendered a delightful song entitled "Two Little Bits of Bullfinch's Bird Seed".

Major Tweet introduced amateurs from all southern and northern points. Miss Ima Tapper, alias Marguerite York, from Kalamazoo and Mrs. Otto B. Hung, Claire Eastman, from Drakes Branch, respectively presented a tap dance and a supposed whistling selection, followed by a solo, "Indian Love Call"; Mrs. Otto B. Hung, however, got the gong despite the hysterics and her one year's study in Bird's Nest. Mr. U. Tellum, Elsie Cabell, redeemed the latter's mistake by singing "Nobody's Sweetheart Now", even though he was married.

The radio audience also heard Miss Shelly Martini, Elizabeth Smith, a girl of the streets, get the gong after a piano selection, "Side Walks of New York"; however Piccolo Pete, Alice Grainger, the country lad who walked to New York, fortunately missed the gong.

Miss I'm Off Key, Sue Baynard, from Machinpongo received the gong after a violin solo; however George Washington Lee Jackson, alias Virginia Bean, whose whole attention was centered on his sweetheart, Lula Bell, made a big hit with his tap dance.

After an imitation of Betty Boop by Miss Ura B. Fat, Chic Dortch, from "it really made no difference where" and whose ambition was neither a career or marriage but to imitate, Miss Percival Van Hadrocks, Virginia Leonard, from Fifth Avenue, New York, whose ambition was "to sing just for the sake of singing", sang "Don't Blame Me."

Among the amateurs was a child prodigy, Arabella Rockbottom, Mary Bowles, who, even though her father was a bootlegger, played "A Little Frog in the Pond" on the bottles, receiving the gong, however, despite the aid of her mother, Lucille Moseley.

The climax of the occasion came when the winners of the contest, Miss Percival Van Hadrocks and Mr. U. Tellum enthralled the audience with "Frivolous Sal".

Junior Sing concluded the second of the class series to be given this year.

Gov. Presents Sound Budget

RICHMOND, Jan. 11—(VPA)—The Governor's Budget message, has evoked commendatory comment from all directions. If it doesn't go the whole distance in providing for all of the requests for appropriations, it has the virtue, say the commentators, of keeping Virginia on the safe side of salvency—and this is the important thing.

The message reiterates the principle endeared to so effectively during the late lean years—that expenditures must be kept within revenues. But so bright are the prospects for increased revenues that it is confidently expected by those in a position to judge that many of the propositions made contingent upon availability of funds (including restoration of the other 5 per cent of state salaries) will be in the nature of a certainty and that the 1936-1938 biennium will end with Virginia's fiscal situation sounder than ever.

It appeared possible to some that an extra sesion of legislature may be made necessary between now and 1938 to provide for old age assistance, pointedly ignored by the Governor. This matter should have study, the Governor thinks, before any action on it is taken. But the old age assistance feature of the Federal social security law becomes effective in 1937, and if Virginia is to avail itself of the Federal grants it will have to enact laws acceptable to the Federal Social Security Board. If these laws are not enacted this session, the need for an extra session to deal with the matter becomes a possibility.

The Governor put legislature on the spot in suggesting that any legislation requiring expenditures other than covered by the budget should provide also for means for raising the money. That, think many, will stop a scheme requiring large appropriations.

The Washington Federals, a professional football team, is composed of former college players now holding New Deal positions in the national capitol.

Speaking of our national autumn pastime, we cannot refrain from telling about the new gastronomic rule now in force at one of the Big Ten schools. There the trustees passed a resolution forbidding city clubs and organizations from throwing their customary large number of banquets for the team after the football season. The boys were being kept from their studying, the trustees decided.

Some enterprising young men of journalism made a checkup after football was over. They found that out of the regular gridiron squad released from that sport, eight had gone out for basketball immediately, four for hockey and six or eight others had organized their own cage team to travel about the state.

Folks—those lads are in college to play!

The interclass basketball games will be played off before January 31 when the varsity games will begin. This year there will be a round robin tournament in which each team will play every other team in the contest. The team winning the majority of games will be proclaimed winner. The class squads have not been picked yet.

The Interclass swimming meet between the beginners, intermediates and advanced groups will be held February 26. The final meet to decide the winner will be held February 28. Everybody come out and support your class.

Negro Astonishes World of Science

(Associated Collegiate Press)

Tuskegee, Ala. (ACP) From wood shavings he has made synthetic marble. From peanut shells he has made insulating walls for houses. From the muck of swamps and the leaves of the forest floor he has made valuable fertilizers. From the common peanut he has made 285 useful products, including milk, cheese, instant coffee, pickles, oils, dyes, lard, shaving lotions, shampoo, printer's ink, and even axle grease!

Scientific marvels from nothing, or almost nothing. Such has been the incredible achievement of Dr. George Washington Carver, distinguished Negro scientist, who for 53 years has been director of agricultural research at Tuskegee Institute, noted Negro school here.

From the lowly sweet potato he has made 118 products, among them flour, starch, library paste, vinegar, shoe polish, ginger, ink, rubber compound, chocolate compound, molasses and caramels.

From the clays of the earth he has made non-fading paints and pigments. rFom worn-out sandy soil he has produced paying crops.

Born in a rude slave cabin in Missouri about 70 years ago (Dr. Carver does not know the exact date) he began his education with a Webster blue-book speller. Today his honors include a Bachelor of Science, Master of Science, honorary Doctor of Science, winner of the Spingarn medal for Negro achievement, member of the Royal Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce of Great Britain.

The aging Negro's versatility is remarkably demonstrated in fields other than science. Dr. Carter is an accomplished artist, and is especially skilled in painting flowers. His works have been exhibited at world fairs, and some are to be hung in the Luxemburg gallery in Paris after his death. He makes all his own paints, using Alabama clays. He makes his paper from peanut shells, and the frames of his picures are made from corn husks.

Dr. Carver is a skilled musician and once toured the country as a concert pianist. To top these accomplishments, he is an expert cook, and recipes originated by him are used today in leading hotels throughout the country.

By his work in agriculture and chemistry, Dr. Carver has been able to serve his own people and lighten their burdens. Experts say that he has done more to rehabilitate agriculture in the South than any other man living.

"When you do the common things of life in an uncommon way," Dr. Carver once said to his students, "you will command the attention of the world." In that sentence lies the secret of his own achievement.

ginia, had adopted the outlandish name of Lavano, and had gone trouping about the country with a circus. Lavano was a tight-rope walker. Mr. Porterfield didn't want any more such foolishness as that in the family. Robert could take his choice. He could be called of God to the ministry; he could hang out a shingle as a lawyer; or he could become a doctor; but no stage-business.

But Robert kept on acting in college dramatics, even playing women's roles occasionally in the all-man college acting group. He came to New York after graduation, studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, and was picked for a play starring Clark Gable. He's been at the stage business since.

Twenty-six Greek manuscripts of the New Testament are owned by the University of Chicago. It is the second largest collection in the country.

New York (ACP) Barnard College alumnae average $1,962 yearly earnings, according to a late survey. The average run from $1,115 for the class of 1933 to $4,125 for '93 to '98.

Presbyterian College has just passed an amendment to the Student Body constitution providing for a Publications Control Board. The board is composed of the Editor of each publication, a faculty committee and three Seniors elected from the student body. The Board will pass on all candidates for elective offices of he student publications. It will submit these selected candidates for election by the student body. No fraternity may have more than one man on the board unless they are editors.

Did you know this? I didn't. It's from American U, "Catholic University, Washington College, American University, and Hampden-Sydney have formed an indefinite track conference."

Historian Reviews EuropeanSituation For Student Body

Dr. Mitchell Relates Views Acquired in Travels

Declaring the speaker to be "present professor of history at the University of Richmond, an inspiring teacher, a great citizen who belongs not only to the University, to the state, and to the nation, but to the world," Dr. Jarman introduced Dr. Samuel C. Mitchell who spoke on Friday evening to an audience which overfilled the small auditorium.

Dr. Mitchell who was brought to the college by Pi Gamma Mu and who has recently returned from a year's travel and study in Europe spoke on "Present Conditions in Europe."

"You face a dissolving world today in Europe; that is my first and last impression," began the noted professor. He proceeded to explain his statement with references to the crumbling dynasties, the fallen leaders, and the decaying parliaments which mark Europe today. The economy system of laissez-faire is likewise a thing of the past. "They have discarded liberty cast of the Rhineland, south of the Alps. 'What's a ballot without bread?' is their cry," Dr. Mitchell told his startled audience.

"Europe is staggering under two terrible blows— World War, Depression, and the churches are the hardest hit. St. Sophia is an abandoned building, St. Nicholas is an anti-religious museum as are

Freshmen Present Scenes from Album

Days of Auld Lang Syne Shown in Sing

Saturday night in Sing the Freshmen turned back the clock and showed us S. T. C. in grandmother's time. The grandmother, Kitty Roberts, turned the pages of her old album for her granddaughter, Frances Dickenson. Out of it first came a fairy, Gwen Bell, who toe danced. Then she turned the pages of the album and the pictures came back to life. The tennis stars of that time, Mary Emily Dunton and Charlotte Minton, showed us how skillfully they used to play the game. Then we saw a school dance—a graceful minuet: The girls were: Elizabeth Rawlings, Jane Saunders, Mabel Burton, Sarah Hayes, Doris Adkins, Dot Tillet, Virginia Kemp, and Mary A. Sanderson.

Back in grandmother's day when the students went to church they walked in double file with a chaperon leading them. It seems that there was a contest to see which one could wear the biggest hat, and which one could annoy the chaperon most without being caught. The girls in this picture were: Helen Gage (chaperon), Em Easley, Frances Irving, Elvira Ligon, Martha Floyd, and Anne Kelly.

Next the cheerleaders, Frances Bryan and Frances Steed, attired in their white middies and black skirts sang "Take Me Out To The Ball Game". As an encore they gave "Put on your old Gray Bonnet." Then we saw the calisthenics class with their vigorous stretching and pulling the dumb bells. These were Vera Ebel, Selma West, Nan Throckmorton, Katherine Cox and Julia Rainey.

After this, the bathing beauty, Dot Ropr showed us her idea of how a bathing suit should look.

Freshmen Present Moran in Chapel

Flower Garden General Theme of Presentation

Miss Grace Moran was presented for the first time as Freshman Classman to the student body in chapel this morning.

The theme of the presentation was a garden scene with Miss Moran representing the lady of the garden. The program opened with the fresman class song, Green and White, followed by original songs. Betty Fagg, Kitty Roberts, Gwendolyn Bell, Margaret Britton wrote the words and Virginia Richie composed the music.

Miss Moran entered through a trellis of roses. Fourteen rose buds were grouped about the stage depicting the first year of college life.

Freshman, Sophomore Win Debate Honors

Marjorie Thompson, a freshman, won first place, and Juanita Callis, a sophomore, second place in the oratorical try-outs sponsored by the Debate Club last Thursday night. Marjorie spoke on "The Essentials of Citizenship" and Juanita on "Time".

Other students taking part were Martha Hamlet who took for her topic, "The Nation's Question Mark," Janie Lee Young, "Why Lindbergh Left America", and Anna Snow Ramsey, "The A. A. A. and America."

Reverend W. V. Gardner, Mr. John Tucker Doyne and Dr. Walmsley acted as judges.

Anna Snow Ramsey, as a result of her speech, was issued a bid to membership in the debate club.

The dance will begin promptly at 9:00 o'clock and end at 1:00 o'clock. School girls will be allowed to attend.

As a part of a movement to develop better hymn singing in chapel Mr. Strick presented the Choral Club in chapel on Monday. The Club gave two selections for the student body. This plan of presenting different organizations in chapel on Monday will continue during the term. The choir, the senior quartet and the junior quartet will appear on these programs.

Honor Society Has Education Program

McIlwaine Speaks On Qualifications For Teachers

The first of a series of programs of the topic "The Securing of a Teaching Position" was presented to the members of Kappa Delta Pi in a most interesting fashion on Thursday evening, January 23. Through the offices of Lloyd Kelly Mr. T. J. McIlwaine, supt. of Prince Edward County Schools was present at the meeting and gave an instructive talk on the subject from a superintendent's point of view.

Mr. McIlwaine gave the girls a number of suggestions to be kept in mind when applying for a teaching position. He said that a superintendent preferred a personal letter in the applicant's handwriting asking for an application blank. Such things as spelling, the choice of words, grammar, etc, should, of course, be watched very closely. The application should be filled out fully and a picture attached if possible. He spoke of the advisability of being prepared to teach more than one subject. Another thing which will aid applicants is the ability to coach plays, athletics, and sing or play an instrument.

As for personal qualifications, Mr. McIlwaine gave the advantages of poise, dignity and self-assurance when not carried to the point of over-confidence. It is always well to secure a personal interview with the superintendent to whom you are applying if possible.

In answer to questions concerning the desirability of degrees for primary and elementary teachers, he stated that unquestionably the

Byrd, Sanford, Chosen Class Day Dignitaries

"Bug" Byrd and Lelia Sanford were elected class historian and class giftorian respectively, at the senior class meeting last night. It is the duty of the historian to write and present a complete history of the class at the class day exercises at graduation. The giftorian's duty is to assemble and present gifts to each member of the class at the same program.

Also a committee was appointed to select ten outsanding girls from the senior class.

Sophomore "Cruise" To Weigh Anchor

Just name it and they've got it—singing, dancing, romancing in many languages, in many styles. What's your preference—rah, rah, collegiate? Pronto, out comes Joe College Will Scott, with her "Baby, You've Got Everything." Even Cleopatra the Twentieth Gertrude Levy sits up and blinks when Will shines. Maybe the taste runs to the lone-eagle type. Hold your breath, he's right there — Richard Truesdale, Virginia Agee, the novelist who thinks women belong in stories until one, Virginia Lane, comes along and he finds he wants her in his arms.

A great big per cent of those yowls and howls of laughter heard round the auditorium have been fostered by Aunt Primrose, Mary Harrison Vaughan, as she goes into action with a line of jabber that would make the proverbial female talker blush at her own incompetence. She comes dangerously near to making Captain Paul Jones, Mary Lynn Thomas, a nervous wreck as she recites the happy times the sweet S. T. C. girls and their attentive admirers, the H.-S. C. boys, used to have in dear old Farmville, Virginia.

There are a few dances which will be seen on this cruise that will cause a riot or so, no doubt. Just as a tantalizer, we mention that hip-swinging, arm-twisting sensational Eyptian entertainer, Anne Johnson and her band of dancers demonstrating "Egyptian Ella". One has to see for oneself just what happens when a wicked tango follows a cruel Apache or a rhythm chorus follows a sweet "Madame Butterfly" set.

The hogh powered cast discloses much in vocal talent. Its repertoire includes "Broken Record" by Betty Butler; "I'm Building Up for an Awful Let-down" by Elizabeth Harris; "Dinner for One, Please James" by Buck Pleasants and others.

All this and more the sophomore class will present on the stage Friday, January 31. The cast under the direction of Carter Belle Munt, Elizabeth Harris, and Miss Jane Royall present their annual production, "Syncopated Sailing."

Dr. Wynne Writes Article For Book

Discusses Principles and Precepts of Education

The National Federation of Commercial Teachers are publishing a year-book on the general plan for the use of teachers and administrators of commercial education in their work. Dr. Peter B. Wynne, renowned educator of this school, was asked to write the first article in this valuable book.

The articles are based on the fundamental principles and general precepts of sound philosophy and procedure of general education. Dr. Wynne's article, entitled the Units of Education, launched the new trend of modern education and the new curriculum.

Other noted educators have been asked to contribute. Dr. J. Stanley Grey of the University of Pittsburg will write on the Problems of Living. Dr. E. S. Barr of the University of Wisconsin will write on the Principles and Procedure of Education.

This year book will be profitable to all education students as it clearly defines work in their field.

Apprentices To Be Voted on Tonight

On January 21 all Dramatic Club apprentices took an examination on the various phases of dramatics. These tests were given by the heads of the various departments of the club.

To become a member of the Dramatic Club a student must not only serve as an apprentice for one quarter, but they must show outstanding ability in some phase of dramatics; and must be faithful in the performance of their duties, regular in attendance, and prompt in payment of dues.

Before becoming a member, an apprentice will be required to derss in costume and pasesnt a skit before the members of the Dramatic Club. New members will be voted on at the meeting this evening.

Mr. Strick to Give Series of Talks Throughout State

Mr. Strick has been invited to give a series of talks in Appomattox, Amherst, Keysville, Drakes Branch, and Richmond during the winter and spring quarter. Mr. Strick has already addressed an audience at Vera. The Woman's Club at Keysville presented him this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The senior quartet accompanied him and was featured on the program.

One Senior and Five Juniors Bid to Fraternity

In performing the first tap service ever held at S. T. C. last Friday morning in chapel, Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honor fraternity in leadership, tapped one senior and five juniors. Recognized by the group were: Beverley Wilkinson, Virginia Leonard, Virginia Bean, Virginia Baker, Elizabeth Shiplett, Dorothy Wise.

Tac Waters, president of Alpha Kappa Gamma, made a brief talk in which she surveyed the history of the organization, expressed the ideals, and stated the qualifications for membership. Active members of the circle, Dr. Jarman, and faculty members were seated on the stage and at the conclusion of Tac's speech scouts went out into the auditorium and tapped the new girls. The tap service was recently adopted by the national organization as its official means of recognizing new girls.

Beverley Wilkinson, a senior, has shown outstanding ability and interest in her work in the Y. W. C. A. She has served on the following committees: service committee, chairman; chairman of student's day. "Billy" is also a member of the Association of Childhood Education, the Dramatic Club and is treasurer of the Cotillion Club.

Virginia Leonard, too, has done outstanding work on the Y. W. C. A. She was chairman of the Freshman Commission, served on the the Publicity Committee and World Fellowship Committee. Last year she served as hall president on the House Council and this year is secretary of the Council. Virginia is the junior representative on the Student Council. For two years she has been typist on the Virginian staff. She is a member of the Artist Dance Group.

Virginia Bean has made a memorable scholastic record in college and last year was honor graduate of her class. She is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, Kappa Delta Pi, vice-president of Beore Eh Thorn, and is also a member of the Association of Childhood Education. Virginia has been active in her

Supervisors Hold Conference Here

Blacksburg Officials Speak on Great Program

A district conference of rehabilitation supervisors of the southside district of Virginia was held in the little auditorium on January 27 and 28th.

Included on the program were H. H. Gordon, State Director, T. B. Hutcheson of the agronomy department of V. P. I., H. L. Moore, poultry husbandman of V. P. I., and Miss Mary B. Settle, associate director of rehabilitation supervisors.

The meeting was the third of a series of four held throughout the states. The meeting for southeast Virginia was held at Marion on January 20 and 21st, for the valley and northern Virginia at Harrisonburg on the 23 and 24th. The final meeting will be held at Newport News on February 3 and 4th.

Talks were given on home garden and truck crops adapted to the southside district, food, farm plans, home plans, and cropping program for rehabilitation clients, as well as talks on office management and legal forms.

Opportunity

"A craven hung along the battle's edge
And thought, "Had I a sword of keener steel—
That blue blade that the king's son bears—but this
Blunt thing!" he snapt and flung it from his hand."

Edward Rowland Sill has told us the rest of the story in his poem "Opportunity" It is the story of so many people in the world today. If it were not so, we would not have so many disappointments in our friends and neighbors, so many failures in our economic, social, and personal environment. Broken homes, bankrupt business firms, disillusioned youth, thousands of people on relief roles, and other thousands of healthy people idling along in small, miserable paths of life—all these can be accounted for to an amazing degree by "wasted opportunity."

There are factors beyond our control which sometimes keep us from attaining material goals for which we have striven, but they cannot be blamed or explained as failures, these failures we have mentioned above, moral failures. They can be explained only in terms of a lack of courage and the will to win, and by narrowness of soul devoid of the vision glorious. We excuse our poor records saying if we'd had the other girls' chance we would have done so and so; we shrug away our meaner position saying we haven't the clothes, or the money, or the personality of the girl who leads, who is successful in school.

These are the excuses of cowards, and besides crippling our own abilities they stagnate character to the point where we sit back and criticize every positive move some one else has the power to make. If such odds are given us, they should be but a challenge, but so often they really are only imaginary ones, conjectured out of nothing.

Our Social Problem

Periodically in our history the alternative of unity and security — division and downfall arises. Two notable examples of this in the past are, obviously, the action of the thirteen original colonies against England and the Civil War. In the latter case we have Lincoln's famous words: "A house divided against itself cannot stand!" Today we have a conflict between economic autocracy and political democracy which extends into every community of the country.

It is established that few hundred men control half the wealth of the nation, while there is a large class of people who are little better off than slaves. There is a decided connection between the control of wealth and the legislation of the country. Those who are economically powerful have entered into government in such a way that it appears that corruption is to be the custom of the American government. Lincoln Steffens, in his "Enemies of the Republic" wrote, "The highway of corruption is the road to success."

Herein lies the conflict. If the system of government which the capitalists have developed was a decent and efficient one the objections to it would not be voiced so loudly and long. Instead it throws ten millions of laborers out of employment; it does not care for its destitue and needy citizens; it cannot even take care of crimes of violence, let alone the administration of social justice.

There is a dualism in every sphere of our government. The interests of the common people and the preservation of property rights seemingly conflict at every turn, to the detriment of the former. The simple resolution would be the centralization of our whole system around the single objective of promoting common wealth. It is not beyond the power of the American people to bring this to pass. When the decision is made as to what is best it will be possible f or the people to develop any system which they choose.

Think for Yourself

(Reprint The Blue Ranger)

Do we think for ourselves, or do we believe without a question everything we read or hear? We should not do this but we should analyze what we read and hear and form opinions of our own. We should realize that our points of view have just as much reason to be correct as those of someone else. All of us are well enough developed to have some ideas of our own. We have the power to do some constructive thinking and we should use it. If we depend on someone else to do our thinking for us, those facilities of ours that enable us to decide for ourselves will become as an unused hinge, rusty. Someday then, when we have to decide questions for ourselves, and there is no one else to mould opinions for us, it may be a difficult task to decide the hard problems of life by ourselves.

Sometimes people use their emotions to move us to believe as they, but we should not let someone else's emotional views affect us, until we have thought the question through for ourselves. Instead of taking the opinions of others and their emotional ideals, as absolute facts, we should form the habit of deciding questions and expressing our own points of view. We must decide for ourselves the smaller questions of life, so that when we face the larger ones, we shall not have lost that great power of being able to decide for ourselves.

There must have been something fishy about those loans J. P. Morgan made to the Allies. It seems they were paid back.—The Springfield Union.

Such people! No sooner do we begin to emerge from a depresion that we start worrying about the depression that will follow the next boom.—St. Joseph News-Press.

London has been struggling with the worst fog in ten years. It was terrible on the streets but worse in the Foreign Office. —Norfolk Virginian Pilot.

And the question is whether there is a political jam on relief rolls.—Dallas News.

Al Smith, former friend and supporter of the president definitely broke with him Saturday night, when he made his expected attack on the new deal. Without mentioning the president's name, and speaking only (he said) as a Democrat, Mr. Smith made it very evident that he had not forgiven Mr. Roosevelt for failing to back him as Mayor, last election.

15,000 people filed by hourly, while countless others waited in the cold rain to pay their final tribute to their Monarch, Rich and poor alike they waited their urn. The funeral was attended by countless notables, kings prime ministers, titled people of all sorts, was sad and yet comfort is found in the fact that some one as fine as Edward reigns. Long live the King!

The fact that Mussolini's fighting men have been "biding their time" for political or other reasons, was made increasingly clear as Italy's ruthless General Rodolfo Guaziani started a violent drive again Ras Desta Demtie, son-in-law to Emperor Haile Selassie Hundreds of Ethiopians have been mowed down by the excellent machine guns of the Italians. The rains, unfamiliar territory, and unique fighting methods of the Ethiopian's have in turn wrought a great deal of havoc with the Italians. But now Mussolini has had enough parleying, and with the rainy season nearly over has given definite, concise orders and set to to obtain Ethiopia immediately.

Alumnae News

Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Redhead of Tampa, Florida, have announced the birth of daughter, Virginia Anne, on Friday, January 3, at Tampa, Florida. Mr. Redhead is widely known throughout this section as former pastor of the Farmville Presbyterian Church and Mrs. Redhead was a former resident of Farmville. While at Farmville, Mrs. Redhead held the position now occupied by Miss Jane Royall as assistant to Miss Mary White Cox.

At a recent meeting of the Farmville Alumnae Chapter of Staunton, Va., the following new officers were elected: President, Mrs. L. F. Shelburne; Vice-president, Miss Sara Hyde Thomas; Secretary, Treasurer, Mrs. Francis W. Lineweaver.

Miss Josephine Johnson, a distinguished Norfolk poet, was among the poets who read at the forum of the Poetry Society of Virginia on Friday evening, January 17, 1936 at the Richmond Academy of Arts.

Mrs. Marjorie Goodwyn Davis, head of the art department of Thomas Jefferson School announced that the work of special art students of that school will be exhibited throughout the month of January at the Richmond Academy of Arts.

Miss Ruth Jamison, extension home improvement specialist met with the county home demonstration club leaders of Prince Edward County last Thursday, January 23 at the office of Miss Myra Reese, home demonstration agent. Miss Jamison gave two demonstrations of home handicraft.

McHenry—McComb

A wedding of interest in Waynesboro and vicinity took place December 21, 1935 in Richmond at the home of the officiating minister, Dr. Henry W. McLaughlin, when Miss Helen White McHenry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Johnston McHenry, of Natural Bridge, became the bride of Mr. Burton Nesbitt McComb, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. McComb, of Chestnut Ave., Waynesboro.

Mrs. McComb is a teacher in the Wenonah grammar school in Waynesboro. Mr. McComb, a graduate of Morris Harvey College, West Virginia, is a du Pont employee.

Mr. and Mrs. McComb will make their home in Waynesboro.

Steptoe—Lewis

Miss Anne Elizabeth Steptoe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hampden Early Steptoe of Lynchburg, Virginia and Mr. Thomas Henry Lewis of Baltimore were married Saturday afternoon, January 11, at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Have you heard the one about the young girl in a Latin class who translated the story of Achilles into English? Concerning that famous episode in the life of the great warrior, her translation said:

"His mother, holding him by the heel, dipped him into the river Styxs, until he was fairly intolerable."

It took a statement from the president's office to assure the students at Alma College, Michigan that the official bulletin erred in stating the last day of vacation as January 2. It should have been January 6.

A college man recently established the record of eating 48 eggs in 48 minutes, and still some people wonder if a college education is worth while.

A columnist in "The College Eye" conducted a research in Iowa State Teachers College, to discover what students there considered the three most wonderful words in the world. No one answered the old "I love you". Here are some of the answers:

"Eat, Drink and Sleep."
"Have some candy."
"Dinner is served."
"Enclosed find check."
"Want to dance?"

And various combinations of the Greek alphabet, grouped in threes and varying directly with the affiliation of the lads and lassies interviewed.

No doubt similar episodes to this have often happened in colleges. But it's still good. We are thinking of the psychology professor who stomped into his first hour class, threw down his notes and began to lecture. Rapidly, concisely, using his best witticisms, he talked for 15 minutes. Then he stopped,

"Any questions?" he asked. There were none.

So he began to ask some questions of this student and that. None of them could answer. "Good Lord!" he burst out finally. "Have I spent this whole semester for nothing? Don't you know a blessed thing about this course?"

And a brave boy raised his hand and said, "No sir, this is a class in eighteenth century prose."

Miss Margaret Clark, formerly of Lynchburg, a senior at Hollins College, was the bride's only attendant. She carried a bouquet of snapdragons and gerbera in colors of bronze and yellow.

Literary Column

From "Candlelight" by Helen Welshimer

CANDLELIGHT

All things that are loveliest
Come with candlelight;
Children chant their rhyming prayers
Kneeling with the night.
Lovers who have dreams to share
Always seem to know
Happiness is twice as sweet
In the candle glow.
Candles brighten birthday cakes-
Pink ones going around
Frosty mounds, with tiny lights,
Till an age is found.
Tapers placed on window sills
Any night will bring
Minstrels selling merry songs
On a colored string
Candles march on altars, too,
When it's Easter Day,
And the stone that sealed a tomb
Has been rolled away-
I have felt their alchemy
In a frightened land;
I walked safely when I held
Warm light in my hand.

SHEEP

Often at night
When I can't sleep
I lie in bed
And count white sheep.
I see them go over
A bright green stile.
I follow closely
Until afterwhile
They turn into people.
As soon as they do,
I lose all the calm
And the peace that I knew.
You see, I have learned
From my rural observing,
Watching sheep climb
Is much less unnerving
Than trying to make
All the people I know
Follow the paths
That I want them to go!

POISE

Today there is so much of blatant noise-
God, grant me peace, and give me inward poise
Help me to keep a haven deep inside,
Untouched by tears, unseared by worthless pride.
Make it as calm as small towns are at dusk,
Make it as sweet as dreams kept long in musk.
Teach me to know that even as the hills
Stand tall, serene, although the bright air fills
With chaos or brief fanfare, so may I
Be unmoved, too, and quiet—if I try!
Let my roots sink too deep for outer touch,
Then nothing, God, can hurt me, overmuch.

A PETITION

I thank Thee now, dear God, for little things,
That birds still fly with brave, far-reaching wings;
That stars come back, tides turn, and roses grow,
That sunlight falls, and rain-wet breezes blow.
Perhaps our dreams aren't worth the price we pay,
So foolishly we seek to plot the way
Our lives should go—Help us to understand
That Thou who puts brown seeds in waiting land-
Who touched loaves on day in Galilee,
And fed a throng—and when a wayward sea
Once lay between Promised Land and war
Rolled waters back—Oh, surely, God, before
We start to doubt the tangled web today,
Make us remember, give us faith to pray!
There will be peace sometime, there will be dawn,
Just for the night help us to carry on.

Varsity to Meet First Rival Squad

March 6—Harrisonburg, here

Last year the squad won over Sweet Briar and Blackstone and lost to Harrisonburg and William and Mary.

Under so able a coach as Miss Iler, and so experienced a captain as Kathleen, the squad hopes for great achievement. There is no reason for defeat. S. T. C. will hold its own as it always has. Let's everyone come out and give the squad a big send-off.

Sorority Pledges Entertain Various Groups During Week

Monday night the Pi Kappa Sigma pledges entertained the pledges of the other sororities with a formal party.

The chapter room was decorated in a unique fashion depicting a "night club" scene. Ann Hardy was the master of ceremonies and Ruth Sears acted as bartender. Gwen Bell was the cigarette lady carrying a tray of tiny candy cigarettes.

The floor show included the following: A tap dance by Gwen Bell; imitation of Katheryn Hepburn by Dorothy Tillett; a joke by Florence Jeffrey.

After the floor show everybody danced and refreshments were served.

Gamma Theta Pledge Party

The Gamma Theta pledges entertained the other sororities with a "Shipwreck" party on Tuesday night in their chapter room, which was decorated in their colors, blue and white.

A. S. T.

Alpha Sigma Tau's chapter room was the scene of a formal tea on Sunday afternoon, January 26 at five o'clock given by Margaret Pittard and Jane Main. A glow of candle light spread over the room which was attractively decorated with snapdragons. The hostesses assisted by Merwyn Gathwright served a salad plate, coffee, nuts and mints. Guests included Miss Virginia Bedford, member and adviser, new girls, and active members.

Gamma Psi Fraternity Entertains New Girls

Gamma Psi, the Art fraternity, entertained thirteen new girls in the Y. W. Lounge, Tuesday night, January 28 at 7:30 o'clock. Delightful refreshments were served by Lucy Potter and Martha Gwaltney. The organization gave their president, Marjorie Booton, a birthday gift. Attractive games were directed by Sarah Button and Pattie Bounds. Those present included the active members and Miss Virginia Bedford, adviser.

Mrs. Ann Sydnor Newman of Farmville entertained her daughter-in-law Katherine Harvey Newman with an informal tea at her home on Beech Street on Wednesday afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 o'clock. Miss Mary White Cox presided at the tea table.

The girls from S. T. C. on the guest list are: Dorothy Robertson, Mary Denny, Mary Jane Pendleton, Ellen Mason, Nan Throckmorton, Jane Burke, Elizabeth Hardy, Claire Eastham, Bonnie Lane, Anne Johnson, Nancy Pobst, Elsie Green, Julia Ann Waldo, Margaret Clark, Margaret Hurt, Helen Fern Perdue, Mary Harrison Vaughn, Elizabeth Harris, Alice Nelson, Caroline Willis, Florence Jeffrey, Polly Wall, Carolyn Upshur, Tac Waters, Elizabeth Hughes, Jane Royall, Billy Wilkinson, Sue Mallory, Louise Walmsley, Emily Brumfield, Katherine Irby, Frances Hudgins.

Mary Francis Parsons from William and Mary College will be the guest this week of Bonnie Lane and Elizabeth Selber.

Rotunda Reverberations

Cheer up, Sophomores! The dress rehearsal is yet to come! When it rains it pours; we're backing the "sing" too.

What's the matter, Lelia, don't you have enough time to go down town? When it comes to asking permission to go down to Shannon's to find a dress pattern it's time to give up.

Frances Britton, why the forlorn look Tuesday afternoon? Did he disappoint you?

Chic, why the sudden interest in the "Kaiser"? "Honey Chile", you'd better watch that Yankee.

Aggie, we hear that your weekend was most successful. Do you still want a "Garnet" for your birthday?

Dr. W. H. Ruffner

To Dr. William Henry Ruffner, its first president, our college owes much for he was the pioneer who started it on its successful career. Fortunate, indeed, was our school to have at its head in the very beginning a man of broad culture and wide experience.

He was reared in a home of culture. His father, a distinguished Presbyterian minister, was for many years President of Washington and Lee University from which Dr. Ruffner was graduated in 1845 with a masters degree. Like his father, he also entered the ministry, but gave it up later on account of poor health. He was at one time chaplain at the University of Virginia.

Dr. Ruffner was thoroughly equipped for the position he held as our president. He was the first to occupy the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction, a position which he held for twelve years from 1870-1882.

For this reason he was thoroughly acquainted with the public school and its needs. Up to this time there had been no public school work; so Dr. Ruffner set to work and devised the whole system. To do this he had to educate the masses to an intelligent conception of what the public school would mean for them. Besides he had to provide for two races which greatly increased the difficulty. Moreover, the war between the states had depleted men's fortunes and had left them too poor to be taxed and too proud to patronize the schools. Bravely, Dr. Ruffner labored against these obstcales.

For that which he loved, he wrote, traveled, visited schools, organized teacher's institutes, until in 1882 a change in the political system forced him to retire. It was at this interval in his life that he was called in 1884 to be the Head of the State Female Normal School that opened that fall with one hundred and seven students enrolled with a faculty of seven.

As geologist, writer, or preacher, he might have made a name, but truly, this was the work for which he was definitely suited.

He died in 1908, beloved and honored by all as "a pioneer in the cause of popular education." Today two splendid monuments stand as a memorial to him, the public school system of Virginia and the State Normal School now the Farmville State Teachers College. Thus the name of our first President, Dr. William Henry Ruffner, lives on.

DO THE STARS READ YOU ARIGHT?

Here's a recipe for a first-class argument in which all members of your family can join: Find at the left the period in which your birthday falls; then read across for your horoscope. But don't get too hot under the collar, for Miss Kingsley points out that a greatly condensed chart such as this can deal only in generalities and that none of her material is intended as absolute. The American Magazine presents this chart as a matter of interest and entertainment, without endorsing it in any way.—(Condensed from The American Magazine, February, 1936. Thomas Sugrue in, "From Park Avenue to the Stars", tells of Myra Kingsley's study of the planets.)

Sport Slants

A number of girls went on the five mile Monogram Club hike Saturday. They walked to Longwood and all enjoyed a weiner roast given by the A. A.

One of the big features of the Founders Day program March 6 is the basketball game between Farmville and Harrisonburg. This game promises to be very exciting as Harrisonburg is one of our big rivals.

The interclass basketball games have been postponed until week of February 24.

There will be tennis practice in the gym during the winter quarter for members of the varsity squad.

The schedule for practices for the swimming meet are posted on the A. A. bulletin board. Come out and support your class. There are beginners, intermediates, and advanced events so everybody can take part.

Historian Reviews European Situation

scores of temples all over the continent, and especially in Russia.

Those who heard the lecture were particularly impressed with the account of Russia. In the second half of the speech students were advised that there is also an emerging world full of promise and characterized by the advent of the common people, the passion for equality (not liberty), and a new planned economy. Soviet Russia typically exemplifies the emerging world. "In Russia there is not a rich man, nor a man out of work. That is an important sentence for American audiences. Enlightenment is the main word."

The speaker held the close attention of everyone present as he related how brutalized peasants are becoming sensitive human beings, how actually a new race is being made today in Russia.

In conclusion Dr. Mitchell pointed out that Europe is divided into three zones today. First, the West consisting of England, Switzerland, France, and Scandinavia where strong democracies prevail. Second, the East or Soviet zone, and Third the middle or the Fascist zone composed of Italy, Austria, and Germany. "This is the zone Americans must watch. It is diseased," warned Dr. Mitchell. "Europe looks to America as to heaven, for a prophet to enable her to recover from her two great blows," he concluded.

Miss Margaret Farrar, president of Pi Gamma Mu, thanked him for his address.

Speaking of absent-minded professors. The absent-minded professor we would like best to meet is the fellow who would lecture to his steak and cut his classes.

It's Snowing!

"It's snowing!" someone announces, and is greeted with excited squeals and a hurried rush of feet in the general direction of windows and doors. Gently and steadily it comes, covering the campus and beautifying its stately charm. Soon laughing voices of gay snow-ballers echo up to the faces pressed against cold window panes.

Cars pull the hill in front of school with noise and difficulty. Their tires slip and shoot up a stream of dirty snow behind them. The horseman on the monument still poses with calm dignity on his horse although a storm of white flakes sail belligerently around his head.

Several bare-headed girls run out of doors and scoop up pans of snow to make cream. Gaily the ones who have been snow-balling use them for targets. A lively battle ensues until the pursued finally gain shelter.

Indoors voices can be heard plainly up and down the chilly halls. Preparations are being made for a merry night on the hill. Delighted shouts back and forth make the halls ring—May scurryings in drawers and closets for scarfs and gloves! Impatient tugs at stubborn galoshes! Shining eyes and brighter cheeks! Hurried feet on the steps, a shove and a bang of the door and the snow at last! There these gay young teachers-to-be forget their careers and enter a white glistening world with care-free hearts and healthy happiness.

Virginia Baker has demonstrated a valuable spirit since she entered S. T. C. This year she has done good work as associate editor of The Virginian; she is treasurer of the junior class of which she is an active member; she works on the Sing Committee of the Y. W. C. A.; and she is a member of Bere Eh Thorn.

Dorothy Wise has made a name for herself as official pianist of the school. For two years she has served as chairman of music for May Day; she is on the Music Committee of the Y. W.; for two years she has served on the Student Day Program Committee; she is a member of the Choral Club and the Choir; treasurer of the Y. W. C. A., and has served on the House Council.

Elizabeth Shiplette has done good work in the Y. W. C. A. Her freshman year she acted as secretary of the Freshman Commission; worked on the Service Committee her second year and this year she is Freshman Counselor. On the A. A. she worked as assistant tennis manager; at one time she was affiliated with the Choral Club; she is president of the Latin Club; last year she was assistant advertising manager on the Virginian staff and this year she is advertising manager.

Freshmen Present Scenes from Album

And what album would be complete without Aunt Lucy (Virginia Coe) and Chris (Dot Lewis) who limbered up his bones and tapped?

It seems that the school was never complete without a hall president. Pattie Bounds came around with a candle in her hand asking for quiet.

The school is not older than romance. The young man (Jane Branch) and the girl (Elsie Dodd) typified this stage of college life and so the album closed.

John Erskine Unable To Fill Engagement With Honor Society

That John Erskine will be unable to lecture here on February 12, is the announcement of Beorc Eh Thorn English Honor Society. Mr. Erskine's manager has written that on account of an automobile accident the author will be unable to fill any platform engagements for a year.

Mr. Erskine who during his career has been president of Juillard School of Music, teacher at Columbia, writer and critic, will not make the tour of cities and colleges scheduled for this winter, his manager notified the English Honor Society the latter part of January. Mr. Erskine was injured by an automobile in Chicago last October and since then has been closely confined.

The schools and colleges scheduled for a visit from Mr. Erskine, all share the disappointment occasioned by his accident.

Y. W. Committee Entertains Town Girls at Informal Tea

The Town Girls' Committee of the Y. W. C. A., will entertain the town girls at an informal tea in the Recreation Hall, Friday, January 7, from 4:00 to 6:00 P. M. Miss Nichols, adviser to the committee will be present, and Dr. Jarman has been invited.

A program of music and dancing has been planned by the entertainment committee.

All town girls are invited to attend and join in an afternoon of fun.

Jarman to Attend CollegeConvention

Dr. Jarman will be among the outstanding educators of the state to attend the annual meeting of The Association of Virginia Colleges. This year the association will convene in Richmond on February the seventh and eighth, with headquarters at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel. Dr. Thudare H. Jack, President of Randolph-Macon Womans College, will serve as president of the association.

The topics for discussion are urgent ones: "Virginia Colleges and Curriculum Revision," and "Curriculum Readjustments in Colleges".

Among the speakers are to be Dr. Jack, President of Randolph-Macon College, Lynchburg; Dean W. J. Gifford, State Teachers College, Harrisonburg; Dean Leslie Banchard, Hollins College, Hollins; Dr. F. W. Boatwright, President, University of Richmond, Richmond; and President M. L. Combs, State Teachers College, Fredericksburg.

Artist Dance Group Plans Original Recital

Special students of Mrs. Fitzpatrick's class in "The Modern Dance" are making plans for a dance recital to be held in the large auditorium, February 20, at 8 p. m.

The dances to be given are original compositions of members of the class. All the girls have done some composing, but those who have been most outstanding, according to Mrs. Fitzpatrick, in the composition work thus far are: Mary Alice Glass, Doris Moore, Crenshaw Jones, and Dorothy McNamee.

New Magazines Put In S. T. C. Library

It is interesting to note that the number of periodicals in our library has increased about thirty-six in number, including both national and foreign magazines such as Readers Digest, House Beautiful, and London News. This ranks our magazine collection among the best in the state.

Magazines give the best up-to-the-minute research material, and it is hoped the new material will further research among the various departments.

The project of the library for the year has been to bind past issues in order to preserve them permanently. Library users are asked not to deface or mar the periodicals in any way since it is impossible to bind incomplete collections.

The following is a complete list of the new magazines:

Syncopated Sailing Proves Successful

Audience is Thrilled by Adventures Abroad

"Syncopated Sailing," an original musicale, was presented Friday night in the large auditorium by the sophomore class. The story of the play, which was divided into six scenes, was enacted by a group of tourists visiting in various coutnries. Natives of each country entertained the visitors with song hits and representative dances.

As the first scene opened, sailors, Marjorie Robertson and Sara Parker, were busily scrubbing the deck of the S. S. Syncopator preparing for the expected passengers. The personnel assembled and expressed their loyalty to their captain Mary Lynn Thomas by singing "O How I Like to Take Orders from You."

Captain James Paul Jones greeted the tourists as they boarded the ocean liner. Mr. and Mrs. Cain Able Josephine Quinn and Helen Fern Perdue, who had been saving their money the thirty years of their married life for this trip, boarded the ship with child-like anticipation. Miss Lotta Gush, who was always finding beauty which she wished to portray on her canvas, was played by Patty Jeffries. Icky Vanderbilt, Jr., Grace Pittard, who was quite dtermined to become a pirate was a problem to

Junior Class Wins Prize in Contest

Sophomores Awarded Honorable Mention By Judges

Saturday night the sing contest was brought to a hilarious end when the Sophomores portrayed some more of their talent.

The curtain opened on a straw-strewn, lantern-lit barn floor. The country lads and lassies were there in their best attire—for it was a barn dance—a big affair. When first seen, the gay crowd was stepping high to the tune of "Casey Jones." Old fashioned string music accompanied by harmonica, created rhythm in the bodies, which came out in various actions and tones.

Tired of dancing—no wonder, what dancing—they lifted their melodic voices high in the singing of old ballads. "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain" filled the auditorium. When they hit the phrase "She'll Be Wearing Red Pajamas""—well, she did — and more than that she stepped off a dance that was nothing short of amusing.

Suddenly feeling deep forgiveness for all their past meanness, they sang something about "all my sins are taken away."

Two little "misses" sang, with impressive gestures, to some young swains, imaginary or real, the touching song of "Down in the Valley." Thereby proved that roses are sad and violets are blue—and even that petticoats are pink.

Notes of pathos and fidelity were struck when they soberly sang "They Cut Down the Old Pine Tree."

After being urged by the crowd,

Freshman "Telegrams" Will Arrive Here February 13th

Clear all wires to Farmville, Virginia! Freshman class dispatching "Telegrams" to State Teachers College for the whole student body! The mystery of the "Telegrams" will remain sealed until February 13.

February 13 bids fair to be a red letter day on the S. T. C. calendar. Not only is this the day that precedes Valentines and candy, but it is also the date of the freshman production, "Telegrams."

Though the news cannot yet be divulged, it has been learned that the freshmen will present an original musical in which we shall see Eleanor Powell, tap-dancing her way into our hearts, Ethel Waters, as the "tops" in blues singers, and the Eton boys, those kings of rhythm.

The vivacious heroine of an enchanting story, which, in one of our modern transport planes, takes you to Spain, to a Persian harem, and to a Parisian modist shop, where we see the latest conditions, is Margaret Britton. The handsome, dashing, young hero is played by Ann Hardy.

Outstanding members of the supporting cast are: Vera Ebel, Emma Easley, Betty Fagg, Edith Taylor, Gwen Bell, and Marjorie Thompson.

The entire production is under the direction of Nan Throckmorton, assisted by Miss Moran.

A hint to the wise: save your pennies for "Telegrams" because the freshman class will send them to you collect.

Eight New Members Join Pi Gamma Mu

The Virginia Gamma Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, national honor fraternity in social science, initiated eight new members last night. The folloiwng girls were honored with membership: Virginia Acworth, Ruth Crumley, Chic Dortch, Claire Eastman, Margaret Ferguson, Katherine Hurt, Lloyd Kelly, and Dorothy Price.

Membership is offered to girls of junior or senior standing who have shown outstanding ability in the fields of the social sciences. The organization provides for further investigation in these subjects, a broadened interest, and the opportunity to develop and combine knowledge and skills in a creative fashion in the spheres open to students of social sciences.

The new members will begin their work by assisting in one of the society's most popular projects, the annual Mardi Gras fete to be staged this year on February 25.

Girl Scouts to Have Benefit Performance

The Farmville Girl Scout Troop will hold a benefit matinee and evening performance of "Les Miserables" starring Frederic March in an adaptation of the famous French novel by Victor Hugo. The showings will be at the Eaco Theater on Thursday, February 13, at the usual hours and admission prices. The S. T. C. students are cordially invited to attend and their cooperation will be appreciated by the Scouts.

Tickets will be on sale the day before in the Rotunda, or they can be secured from any of the Girl Scouts and their leader, Miss Lavalle Taylor, in Watkins and Brock law offices. Candy will be sold in the lobby of the theatre.

Miss Stubbs Leads Forum At Open Y. W. C. A. Meeting

In continuing the World Peace project adopted by the Y. M. C. A's and the Y. W. C. A.'s of the colleges in the state at the Blue Ridge convention last June Miss Stubbs spoke on "Every Day Occurrence of Our Military Spirit" at the open Y. W. C. A. Cabinet meeting held this afternoon at five o'clock in the Y. W. C. A. Reception Room.

Devotions were led by Hazel Smith, and after the roll call and the reading of the minutes, Miss Stubbs presented her lecture which is one in a series on the peace movement.

Refreshments were served by the Social Committee to the large group of interested students and advisers who attended.

Everyone is invited to open Cabinet meetings which are held the first Wednesday of each month.

Freshman Leaders Conduct Students' Program in Chapel

This morning in students day chapel the devotional exercises were conducted by Sarah Hayes, the president of the freshman class.

Margaret Hannah Crichter, a member of freshman class, who assisted with the piano playing for the sophomore production, played a piano solo consisting of a medley composed of "Libestraum", "The Rosary", and "To the Evening Star" from "Tannhauser".

Basketeers to Play In Blackstone Friday

With the final score of 40-15, the Farmville S. T. C. girls were victorious over the Lynchburg College basketball team in their first game of the season, January 31 at 4 o'clock in Lynchburg.

Good teamwork was made by Farmville, who kept the lead until the final whistle was blown.

During the greatest part of the game, the ball stayed in the Farmville territory, thereby keeping the forwards in action throughout the entire game. Virginia Carroll scored twenty-one points for Farmville; Frances Hudgins, fifteen, and Inez Chappell, four.

For Lynchburg, the major part of the score was made by Gearing, the captain.

All the guards and centers played well, despite the numerous changes and substitutions.

Line-up was as follows:

Farmville		Lynchburg
Hudgins	R.F.	Bagley
Chappell	L.F.	Gearing
Ranson (c)	J.C.	Braswell
Eastham	S. C.	Giles
Sanford	R.G.	Wells
Roberts	L.G.	Swanson

Farmville substitutes: Carroll, Phelps, Butetrworth, McConnaughey, Bondurant, Bolick, Walker, Smith.

Referee: Miss Harrison.
Umpire: Miss Dabney.
Scorers: Abbott, Burton.
Timers: Lorgan, Badger.

The team will leave Friday night, February 7, to play he second game of the season at Blackstone College. The possibilities for victory again this year are good.

By winning the first game of the season, the team is inspired to greater achievement, and is looking forward to the future games.

Farmville Celebrates President's Birthday

More than 300 persons celebrated President Roosevelt's 54th birthday anniversary at the ball given in the S. T. C. gymnasium Thursday night from 9:30 until 1:30, for the benefit of those who suffer from infantile paralysis.

The guests were received by Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Mrs. R. J. Martin, Mrs. P. T. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Coyner, Mrs. Laing, and Miss Alice Hardaway.

The gymnasium was attractively decorated with patriotic colors and flags. In the center the colors came together forming a basket for hundreds of red, white and blue ballons, which caused quite a scramble when they were released among the dancers. There were "pop-pops' to be heard for quite a while as playful dancers stuck pins into inflated balloons. The balcony was arranged in the style of a cabaret with tables reserved for spectators. Attractive "hostesses" sold refreshments during the dance and at intermission.

Hal Thurston and his orchestra furnished the music. As an added attraction with this dashing orchestra leader and his boys was Tub Oliver again causing the hearts of many S. T. C. girls to beat more quickly.

During the ball a floor show, under the supervision of Mrs. P. P. Burnette, was presented. Betty Fagg and Gwen Bell were, as usual, "hits."

Whose Dog Are You?

Alexander Pope, noted English poet, was asked to write an inscription for the collar of the Prince of Wales' dog. His pen produced these words:

"I am His Highness dog at Que,
Pray tell me, Sir, whose dog are you?"

A simple jingle this, but a searching question—"Whose dog are you?" Have you ever pondered the thought? To whom do you, as a college student, belong? Whose dog are you?

As we considered the answer to this query it seemed to present itself in the form of a trilogy. First, we will all be willing to agree that we are nobody's dog.—save our own! We are free to roam the streets, chase cats, gnaw bones, bark at cars as we will. We belong, first of all to ourselves.

But we cannot stop there. When our bark becomes raucous and disturbing, when our seeking of self-gratification becomes obnoxious to those about us, we realize soon enough that we are everybody's dog! We cannot live without affecting others. Our lives are too complex, too interwoven to live them entirely apart. Everything we do affects someone else, and so it is that we are everbody's dog. Not only is this true of us singly as individuals, but it is true of us plurally as a nation. The unrest of one nation affects the tranquilties of another; the depression of one nation threatens the prosperity of another; the warring of one nation shakes the peace of all nations. So to live harmoniously we must live not only for ourselves but for others. We must be everbody's dog.

So far we have arrived at the paradoxical fact: We are nobody's dog, we are everybody's dog. Here our analogy to dogs ends, for now we find that we are human beings in a moral universe, created by a Superior Being. This Being is known by several names—the Supreme Intelligence, the Great I am, the Creator, God, but whatever name we choose, the fact remains that we belong to Him and so must order our lives in accordance with His laws. To whom do we belong? We belong to no one, we belong to everyone, we belong to God.

A Gentleman King

It touched the hearts of many Americans to hear of King George's death, but America, with the rest of the world, looks upon Edward VIII as a worthy successor.

No more a genius than his father is the uncrowned king of England, but like his father he is an intelligent gentleman. Edward's experiences have been broad, adventurous, and yet commonplace in the eyes of many. His life has been broadened by travel, participation in sports, and conscientious study at one of the least imposing colleges of Oxford, Magdalene.

The most adventurous years of his life were perhaps those spent in the war. Prince Edward asked no special favors in the war; he went where he felt he could serve best, even though it were under the heaviest firing. He visited, incognito, the camps of the American soldiers who learned to love him and he, in turn, to love their democratic customs.

A commoner would perhaps say that the king's life has been commonplace in that few exceptions have been made for his royalty. As a student at college, he refused all special privileges and later demanded the same treatment in the war.

In recent years, the former Prince of Wales has taken great interest in improving the slums of London, and from his childhood he has loved the sea and wished to be a sailor. These two interests of the new king's life may hold some indication of his future policies.

Politics Will Be Politics

Politics are getting "hot". One glance at the morning newspaper will convince Mr. Average Citizen that the political kettle has begun to simmer, and that the boiling point isn't far away. To the innocent bystander who witnesses the three ring circus staged every four years by the American party system the show generally proves amusing. Intelligently enough the common taxpayer has given up any notion of getting a lead in the main show; he is content to pay his ticket of admission and send in his vote (usually based on personal or inherited prejudice) much as he votes for his favorite amateur on the radio.

As one columnist put it—the season for "scourging" is on. First Al Smith with his rasping voice and two-edged pen damns Roosevelt and the New Deal; then his former running mate of the 1928 campaign, stolid, genial Joe Robinson brings his "Hands of Esau"to the front pages, condemning Smith and branding him as a turncoat. In the meantime Senator Clifton Woodrum of Virginia has hurled the most stinging personal accusations at Smith in an impromptu speech in the house. Now the "Happy Warrior" in his turn blandly condones "Joe" for stumbling over the "canned speech" put into his hands and retaliating for every measure. Farther South Gene Talmadge the would-be successor to Huey Long flays New Deal measures with a vim at the Grass Roots Convention. But wait, the Republicans are not to play the role of the "forgotten man" forever. Into the limelight steps Alf Landon, Governor of Kansas and colorful hope of the Republican nomination. And there'll be more to come.

Already Mr. Average Citizen is eagerly awaiting the opening of the two biggest hits of the season in Cleveland and Philadelphia next June. We can hardly wait for the curtains to rise!

The Californian's theory that a man may be frozen into suspended animation and later brought to life seems reasonable if you study Hoover.—Detroit News.

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy was asked what he thought about the Ethiopian war and is said to have replied: "I don't see how I can lose. If we win, I will become King of Ethiopia. If we lose, I will become King of Italy."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Vox Discipulae

Dear Editor:

In every school there is some particular liberty set aside for the seniors. What ever this may be, the underclassmen seem to long for the time when they may become seniors and enjoy this special concession.

In our school the seniors are allowed the privilege of going down town from ten till ten-thirty. To maintain this it is important for every senior to realize that from ten till ten-thirty does not grant the liberty of going before ten. Seniors are assumed to be old enough and have pride enough to make it a success without overstepping its bounds. It is not the obligation of the student council to enforce this, but the duty of each member of the senior class to see that she herself abides by the ruling. This way, and only this way, can the seniors maintain their respect and standing as a class.

Not only are the seniors called on to cooperate. Under-classmen are also obligated to realize that it is not for them. They must bide their time, as all seniors once did, 'till their turn comes. By abusing this they are stepping into someone elses territory unwelcomed.

Why then cannot we all have school spirit and sportmanship enough to do what is right and not force the class to give up something which has been successfully carried out in the past, may be enjoyed now by the seniors, and looked forward to by underclassmen?

An interested student.

World News

Republican leaders in Virginia are preparing to launch a boom to nominate in the coming convention for the presidency Colonel Henry W. Anderson of Richmond. Colonel Anderson, the brother of the late Dr. Anderson of Farmville was a candidate for the Vice-presidential nomination in 1920.

A determined offensive seeking bonus payment through currency expansion rather than new taxes sprang from a meeting of a powerful House inflation bloc.

Half a hundred representatives, both Democratic and Republican, approved a resolution opposing "additional taxes to pay the debt to the veteran" and urged the use of "new money backed by the credit of this Government and its metallic reserves."

With nineteen injunction suits pending against enforcement of the Wagner-Connery Labor Disputes Act, the National Labor Relations Board revealed it is arming for a Supreme Court test of the statute this spring.

United Mine Workers voted endorsement of President Roosevelt's candidacy for reelection and pledged contributions to the campaign fund, an action contrary to American Federation of Labor policies. A "social justice" amendment to the constitution was also asked.

Newspaper officials powwowed over Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr.'s report that between now and June 30, 1937, the Treasury would have to raise $12,000,000,000. They were alarmed at the prospect of a $36,000,000,000 public debt.

Alumnae News

Announcement has been made by Captain and Mrs. John Sherman Barlech of New Haven, Connecticutt, of the approaching marriage of their daughter, Claudia Paxton, to Mr. William A. Burkey. The wedding will take place on February 7 in New Haven.

Miss Sylvia Slocum, home demonstration agent in Amelia county, has been doing outstanding work in her field. She recently conducted a most successful club institute in which she emphasized some aims and ideals which the clubs should try to accomplish. There are organized in Amelia county 12 home demonstration clubs, which are now doing very active work under the direction of Miss Slocum.

Miss Josephine Johnson is one among the Virginians represented in Contemporary American Women Poets". This anthology edited by Tooni Gardy, is to be published in New York this week, and includes the work of Edna St. Vincent Millay and other noted Virginiians.

Rev. and Mrs. Myron B. Marshall anonunced the marriage of their daughter Elizabeth Barrand, to Mr. Dudley Watlington Digges of Washington, D. C. The wedding took place January 19 in the St. John's Episcopal church, at Halifax, Virginia.

Dr. Linus Ward Kline, who retired last June from Skidmore College, Syracuse, N. Y., where he had been head of the department of psychology for fifteen years and Mrs. Kline, who was associate professor in the same department, have returned to Virginia to make their home at Charlottesville. Dr. Kline was a member of the State Teachers College faculty of Farmville from 1900-1902. Mrs. Kline, who was Miss Fannie Littleton, is an alumna and was for some years a teacher in the Farmville College.

Mrs. E. H. Ould, formerly Miss Ethel Cole, is now chairman of American Citizenship of the First District Virginia Federation of Woman's Clubs. Mrs. M. G. Willis, Jr., formerly Miss Carrie Hunter is Fourth District President.

Rudyard Kipling

"The tumult and the shouting dies;
The captain and the kings depart . . ."

and writers of such lines join the ranks of those who pass on. England and the rest of the world mourn the loss of the renowned author of the "Recessional" January 19, 1936.

The English Kipling was born December 30, 1865, in Bombay, India—the country which he has pictured in all its variety of mystery and strange beauty. When a young man he married Caroline Bolestier, a Vermont girl. After four years he returned to his native country and lived and worked there until his death in Middlesex Hospital as a result of an operation for a perforated gastric ulcer.

Mr. Kipling's popularity had fallen of late years rather below its former high level. A note of imperialism seen throughout his works has lost its appeal. Yet to him must be assigned a high place as an imaginative artist, certainly the greatest artist writing in English at the time when his talent flourished.

While he was not popular enough in England to win the laureateship, he won the Nobel Prize in literature in 1907 and more than three and three-quarter millions of his books have been purchased.

His favorite characters were strong silent men—who did their duty, lived their code, thought little, and talked less. To many Kipling and his characters will be immortal.

RECESSIONAL

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful Hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine-
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget-lest we forget!
The tumult and the shouting dies:
The captains and the kings depart:
Still stand Thine ancient sacrifice
An humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosets, be with us yet,
Lest we forget-lest we forget!
Far-called, our navies melt away!
On dune and deadland sinks the fire:
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!
Judge of the Nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget-lest we forget!
If, drunk with sight of power, we loose
Wild tongue that have not Thee in awe,
Such boasting as the Gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the Law-
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget-lest we forget!
For heathen heart that puts her trust
In reeking tube and iron shard,
All valiant dust that builds on dust,
And guarding, calls not Thee to guard,
For frantic boast and foolish word-
Thy Mercy on Thy People, Lord!

WHEN EARTH'S LAST PICTURE IS PAINTED

When Earth's last picture is painted and the tubes are twisted and dried,
When the oldest colours have faded, and the youngest critic has died,
We shall rest, and faithful we shall need it-lie down for an aeon or two,
Till the Master of All Good Workmen shall put us to work anew.
And those that were good shall be happy: they shall sit in a golden chair;
They shall splash at a ten-league canvas with brushes of comet's hair;
They shall find real saints to draw from-Magdelene, Peter, and Paul;
They shall work for an age at a sitting and never be tired at all!
And only the Master shall praise us, and only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame,
But each for the joy of the working, and each, in his separate star,
Shall draw the Thing as he sees It for the God of Things as They are!

Pledge parties Entertain Rushees of College Sororities

Alpha Sigma Alpha

The pledges of the other sororities were received cordially last Thursday afternoon from four until six when the Alpha Sigma Alpha pledges entertained in their chapter room with a tea. Pattie Bounds poured tea and Jane Branch received at the door. Sandwiches, cakes, mints and peanuts were served with hot tea.

Mu Omega

Mystery surrounded the pledge party given Thursday night by the Mu Omega sorority pledges. The pledges of each sorority were taken—blindfolded—from their respective chapter rooms and led up and down steps finding themselves at ten o'clock inside the Mu Omega chapter room. Fortunes were handed each girl as she stepped over obstacles before being seated. These were later read. After refreshments were served, ghost stories were told.

Sigma Sigma Sigma

The Sigma Sigma Sigma pledges entertained the pledges of the other sororities Monday night from ten o'clock until eleven o'clock.

The room was decorated in red and the sorority colors violet and white. Valentine favors and games entertained the guests. The Queen of Hearts read the Horoscope of many of the visitors.

Alpha Sigma Tau

The pledges of Alpha Sigma Tau entertained the new girls of the other sororities last Wednesday night with a "Hollywood party". Each girl, dressed as a movie star, spoke a word of two before the mike, having been called up by announcer, Frances Bryan. Vera Ebel, dressed as Charlie Chaplin, and Gwen Bell as Fred Astaire received prizes for the "most attractively dressed." The Gamma Theta pledges were awarded a bag of mints for the "best dressed" group. Afterwards refreshments were served.

Gamma Theta

Gamma Theta sorority had an informal supper in the chapter room on Sunday, February 2nd. A salad course was served.

Florence and Lelia Sanford were entertained at dinner Sunday evening by Miss Brownie Tallaferro.

Virginia Tilman attended Interfraternity-sority dance of Pratt Institute given at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, New York City.

Tib Zimmerman was entertained at dinner Sunday at the home of the Reverend and Mrs. Gardner.

Mary Louise Carr of Huntington, West Virginia, a niece of Mrs. Laing is now visiting in the college and will be enrolled in the College High School for the remainder of the school year.

Frances Yester and Helen Boswell had dinner and afterwards played bridge in the home of Mrs. Thomas Henry Fallwell on Tuesday night.

Amanda Wilson and Julia Asher, alumnae who are teaching at Gladys, Virginia, were visitors at the college over the week-end.

Class Notes

The Senior Class annually presents in the last ten issues of the Rotunda under Our Caps and Gowns, write - up the ten outstanding girls in the class and college. At the last class meeting they had the task to elect ten from the following representative list: Hazel Smith, Lucy Potter, Louise Walmsley, Elizabeth Huse, Tac Waters, Margaret Clark, Helen Hoswell, Dodds Coates, Elizabeth Walton, Margaret Farrar, Mary Robeson, Margaret Pollard, Evelyn Massey, Bug Byrd, Grace Eubank, Kathleen Ranson, Florence Sanford, Lelia Sanford, and Agnes Bondurant.

The Junior Class regrets that their President, Mary Bowles, is in the infirmary.

The Sophomore production held on January 3, was financially successful. The class realized $80 profits.

Dr. John A Cunningham

The second president of our college, Dr. John Atkinson Cunningham, came into office in 1837. He was worthy in every way to become the successor of Dr. Ruffner and carry on his work. Dr. Cunningham's mother was Mary Johnston, a granddaughter of Peter Johnston of Longwood and a cousin of General Joseph E. Johnston. This fact is of peculiar interest to us who now share Longwood as a recreational center.

He received his early education from a French governess at home. Afterwards he attended private school in the home of his uncle in Powhatan County, Virginia, and under Mr. Jacqueline Amber in Farquire County. When only seventeen years old he entered the Confederate army and srved as a private until the end. After the war he studied at the University of Virginia and later received his M. A. from the University of Nashville. In 1896 Hampden - Sydney College gave him the honorary degree of L. L. D. In 1874 he was married to a Miss Boyd of Nashville, where he was then a teacher of Latin. She lived for only a year after their marriage; so in 1877, he married Miss Martha Eggleston of Cumberland county, Virginia. At this time he was made principal of Madison school, Richmond, where he taught with success until he came to Farmville.

Ten years of fruitful service he gave to his State and to our college. The school was his life; to it he gave his thought, time and marvelous power as a teacher. He was also an excellent administrator and progress under his guidance was steady. The enrollment grew to two hundred and seventy-seven with twelve members of the Faculty.

His great ambition was to make character and to develop the mind To develop the first he felt it necessary to leave the individual upon his own resources, to have few rules, to teach truth and honesty, and to punish severely when this trust was betrayed. To develop the mind, "His method," writes one of his teachers, "was Socratic, with additions of his own. "Students that were pretty well up on a subject he forced to go deeper by showing them that they had not grasped it thoroughly. The timid undeveloped minds he encouraged, and when they realized they could answer some of his questions he led them on until they were induced to do real work. As he expressed it "he made them mad with themselves."

The most distinguished qualities of this great man were: originality of thought, strength of purpose, sympathy, and sense of humor. Of these his sense of humor was perhaps the most valuable. With a laugh or a timely anecdote he upset many a strained situation.

During his administration the King Daughter's Society was organized to loan money to those students needing financial assistance. Dr. Cunningham was deeply interested in this organization and for this reason his friends have established similar fund bearing his name as a memorial to him—the Cunningham Memorial Loan fund. The Junior Senior building better known as C. H. or Cunningham Hall is also a memorial to him.

Nothing that pertained to the general uplift of the school, its real religious interest was ever viewed by him with indifference and in the spring of 1896 the Y. W. C. A. was organized. We are all aware of what a power for good this has become.

Many years have elapsed since then and the school has gone on its progressive stage. All honor goes to those who have brought it to its present position. But when we are walking through its beautiful halls enjoying and admiring its well-known success, let's step into the waiting room of Dr. Jarman's office and on beholding the portrait of Dr. Cunningham let us glance backward—lest we forget the one who saw our college when in its narrow sphere who labored and died in service for it and who instilled into its life his active ability and his sympathetic heart.

Ph.D.'s are almost certain job-tickets today, says Northwestern University's placement bureau, with starting salaries averaging $200 monthly.

It's Fun To Be Fooled

Golf is a form of work made expensive for a rich man to enjoy. It is a mental and physical exertion made attractive by the fact that you have to dress for it in a $200,000 club house.

Golf is what letter-carrying, ditch-digging, and carpet-beating would be if those three tasks had to be performed on the same hot afternoon in short pants and colored socks by gouty looking gentlemen who required an implement for every mood. Golf is the simplest looking game in the world when you decide to take it up, and the toughest looking after you have been at it ten or twelve years. It is probably the only known game a man can play as long as a quarter of a century and then discover that it was too deep for him in the first place.

The game is played on carefully selected grass with white balls and as many clubs as the player can afford. These balls cost from 75c to $2.50 and it is possible to support a family of ten people (all adults) for five months on the money represented by the balls lost by some golfers in a single afternoon.

The golf course has 18 holes, 17 of which are unnecessary and put in to make the game harder. A "hole" is a tin cup in the center of a "green." A "green" is a small parcel of grass costing about $1.98 a blade and usually located between a brook, a couple of apple trees, and a lot of "unfinished excavations." The idea is to get the golf ball from a given point into each of the 18 cups in the fewest strokes and the greatest number of words. The ball must not be thrown, pushed, or carried. It must be propelled entirely by about $200.00 worth of curious looking implements especially designed to provoke the owner. Each implement has a specific purpose and ultimately, some golfers get to know what that purpose it. They are the exceptions.

After each hole has been completed, the golfer counts his strokes and then subtracts six and says "made that in 5. That's one over par. Shall we play for 50c on the next hole, too, Ed?"

After the final or eighteenth hole, the golfer adds up his score and stops when he reaches 87. He then has a swim, a pint of gin, sings "Sweet Adeline" with six or eight liars and calls it the end of a perfect day.

his nurse, Elizabeth Watterson. Joe Collich, the unsophisticated girl-crazy, peppy, college student, was played by Will Scott. In contrast with Joe was the sophisticated, polished Richard Edward Truesdale. Virginia Agee, who suffered the ennui of women and life in general and was quite ready to settle down with some nice girl. This nice girl proved to be none other than the lovely Jaqueline Adams played by Virginia Lane. Her aunt, the dignified, old-fashioned, prim Miss Primrose Winston furnished additional humor to the journey.

The tourists first reached Paris, where they attended a street cafe. Here they were entertaind by a giglo, Elizabth Carroll, who sang "An Evening for Sale." Susan Lane and Mary Joyner Cox, famous Apache dancers, gave a thrilling performance.

Our friends proceeded to Spain, where a bull fight was about to take place. The king, Ruth Sears, and the queen, Juanita Callis, were to give the hand of their beautiful daughter, Frances Farris, to the winner of the fight. After much struggle, Billie Arthur advanced to claim the hand of the princess. In honor of the great occasion, tango dancers, Bonnie Powell and Buck Pleasants, soothed the nerves of the spectators with their unique steps.

The ship having docked in Egypt the passengers were directed to the palace of Cleopatra. Here they were entertained royally by Cleopatra the Twentieth, Gertrude Levy, who believed the Americans know nothing about putting on a really excellent show. Ann Johnson and her Egyptian dancers fascinated the Americans, especially Joe Collich, with their unusual rhythm.

As their last stop, the tourists dropped by the "land of the cherry blossoms," Japan. Japanese girls with their many-colored fans danced gracefully in a flowered garden.

Once more on board the S. S. Syncopator, their journey almost ended, the tourists headed for California. Now American performances claimed their attention. Elizabeth Harris sang "I'm Building Up for an Awful Let Down", while Buck Pleasants crooned the sentimental "Dinner for One, Please, James." A rhythm chorus led by Eleanor Dobson, and a tap dance by Mary Joyner Cox, helped keep the passengers in good spirits.

After the passengers had retired our hero was no longer gay but thoughtful and romantic. As he sang "Alone", Jacqueline Adams returned to get her coat. The budding romance now blossomed and expressed itself in 'I Couldn't Believe My Eyes."

Sad because their trip was almost over but happy because they were approaching their homeland, the tourists sang the grand finale, "California, Here I Come."

The Widow at Windsor

By Rudyard Kipling

'Ave you 'eard the Widow at Windsor
With a fairy gold crown on 'er 'ead?
She 'as ships on the foam-she 'as millions at 'ome,
An' she pays us poor beggars in red.
(Ow, poor beggars in red!)
There's 'er mark on the cavalry 'orses,
There's 'er mark on the medical stores-
An' 'er troopers you'll find with a fair wind be'ind
That takes us to various wars.
(Poor beggars!-barbarious wars!)
Then 'ere 's to the Widow at Windsor,
An' 'ere 's to the stores an' the guns,
The men an' the 'orses what makes up the forces
O' Missis Victorier's sons.
(Poor beggars! Victorier's sons!)
Walk wide o' the Widow at Windsor,
For 'alf o' Creation she owns:
We 'ave bought 'er the same with the sword an' the flame,
An' we've salted it down with our bones.
(Poor beggars!-it's blue with our bones!)
Hands off o' the sons o' the Widow,
Hands off o' the goods in 'er shop,
For the Kings must come down an' the Emperors frown
When the Widow at Windsor says "Stop!"
(Poor beggars!-we're sent to say "Stop!")
Then 'ere's to the Lodge o' the Widow,
From the Pole to the Tropics it runs-
To the Lodge that we tile with the rank an' the file,
An' open in form with the guns.
(Poor beggars!-it's always they guns!)
We 'ave 'eard o' the Widow at Windsor,
It's safest to let 'er alone:
For 'er sentries we stand by the sea an' the land
Wherever the bugles are blown.
(Poor beggars!-an' don't we get blown!)
Take 'old o' the Wing o' the Mornin',
An' flop round the earth till you're dead;
Bu you won't get away from the tune that they play
To the bloomin' old rag over-'ead.
(Poor beggars!-it's' 'ot over'ead!)
Then 'ere 's to the sons o' the Widow,
Wherever, 'owever they roam.
'Ere's all they desire, an' if they require
A speedy return to their 'ome.
(Poor beggars!-they'll never see 'ome!)

Hockey was first played in America in 1901, starting at Vassar, Bryn Mawr, Smith and Harvard Summer School!

Junior Class Wins Prize in Contest

two other fair damsels displayed their country grace in clog dance, their feet kept time with "Dixie".

The band struck up "Turkey in the Straw". The figures were called and a square dance was on again. But duty was weighing heavily on the domestic-minded. The chickens had to be fed and "Old Sookie" milked. So after the singing of "The Old Oaken Bucket" and "Good Night Ladies", the merry evening of lantern-light, beer, and music (?) was ended, and each "homeward wound his weary way."

Thus ended the sing contest, which the sing committee of the Y. W. C. A. sponsored. The judges went into consultation and came back with the verdict that the Junior class won the prize. Their "Amateur Night" had what it took —originality, talent, and general appeal of entertainment. Sophomore maneuvers brought that class honorable mention.

Liberals Are Seated Together in Senate

Washington, D. C.—Study of the seating arrangement of the Senate for this session reveals that the small group of liberal Senators are seated together in what almost appears to be a purposeful arrangement. At no time in the past have they been so close to each other. The grouping in a way suggests the manner in which the party representatives in the French Chamber of Deputies are seated, with members of the same parties clustered together in blocs.

There is no basis for supposing that the liberals in the Senate maneuvered for position, but whether it was accident that brought them together or merely the fact that the Senators feel most natural in the company of fellow liberals, the fact remains that on the left side of the Chamber, starting with the last row and moving to the left one finds Senator Shipstead, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, Senator Borah, classed with the liberals usually but often found in other camps, Senator La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive, and Senator Nye, liberal Republican from N. D. In the row ahead, in front of Shipstead, is found Senator Couzens, Michigan Republican with quite frequent liberal tendencies, and in front of Borah is Norris, one of the Senate's outstanding liberals. Senator Benson, Farmer-Laborite appointed to take the place of Senator Schall of Minnesota, killed last month by an automobile, is at the extreme left in the front row, scarcely within shouting distance of his fellow liberals, where he was placed because of the recency of his advent into the senate.

Siberian Musicians To Give Program

Upperclassmen Look Forward to Return of Chorus

On Tuesday, February 18, the Siberian Singers, under the direction of Nicholas Vasilieff, will appear here in one of the lyceum numbers. We upper-classmen will remember the fine liturgical music, folk and gypsy songs, presented here last year by these singers in authentic cathedral robes and national costumes.

Each member of the chorus is a soloist of unusual ability, yet in ensemble they attain a vocal blend as beautiful as the notes of an organ. Their phenomenal range is from contra G to treble E and perhaps unrivalled by any other male ensemble in the world. They created a sensation on their first American tour, and their broadcasts over the NBC network called forth letters from every section of the United States.

They received favorable press comments from the places they visited. One place is the Tremont Temple, Boston, Massachusetts.

The Siberian Singers created a taste for colorful variety. We are hoping that another year will bring them again to New England and to us to give us another real thrill.

Many of the newspapers have given most favorable write-ups. The "Worcester Daily Telegram" Worcester, Mass. said: "Representing the highest in the achievement of Male Choir Singing, Siberian Singers triumph in con-

Holton and Walmsley to Relate Current Trends

February 19, Alpha Phi Sigma will present one of its most interesting programs this quarter. It will consist of material and information important to us not only as members of Alpha Phi Sigma, but as a member of present day society—emphasizing some of the current trends of today. Mr. S M. Holton will stage and comment upon some of the "Current Trends of Education" — including problems before the National Educational Association at this time. Dr. J. E. Walmsley will discuss some of the "Current Trends of Government" including trends in the decisions of the Supreme Court, trends in State Government, national government, and the government of the leading nations of the world today.

March 9, a program on the history, existing chapters, purpose, and work of Alpha Phi Sigma will be given by the student members.

Presbyterians to Sponsor Benefit Party at Church

The young people of the Presbyterian church are giving a benefit party at the church Saturday, February 15, at 8:00 o'clock in the church. The proceeds will be used in the interest of the Massenetta Swimming Pool.

Several S T. C. girls are working on the various committees. Elizabeth McIntosh is in charge of plans for the entertainment. Sarah Button, Virginia Hooke and Elizabeth Cralle have charge of the ticket sale in the college. The tickets are 15c each and only one hundred will be sold.

S. T. C. Basketeers To Meet W. & M.

Home Team Expects Hard Fought Battle

Saturday night, February 15, in the S. T. C. gymnasium the varsity basketball squad will meet the team from William and Mary College. The game will be called promptly at 7:30 p. m.

For the past two years, the Farmville girls have met defeat in their encounters with the William and Mary team with comparatively close scores of 17-23 and 17-24. Farmville has a strong team this year and the game promises to be a hard fought battle.

The William and Mary team is beginning its season's tour and after playing Farmville will go on to Sweet Briar for a game Monday, Feb. 17.

The S. T. C. basketeers were victorious over the Lynchburg College team in their opening game of the season with the final score of 40-15. Because of the bad weather, the game scheduled at Blackston, Friday, February 7,

Committee Selects DramaticClub Play

The Dramatic Club will present "Taming of the Shrew" on April 3. An appointed committee—Josephine Quinn, Audrey Clements, Margaret Farrar, and Margaret Pollard—with the assistance of Miss Wheeler are now working on the casting of the play.

The many distinct types of characters that Shakespeare presents, will give the cast place to display various types of talent. The willful, stubborn, yet attractive Katherina; Petruchio, her diplomatic, determined suitor; Bianca, Katherina sister, sweet, gentle, mild, the acme of docility; and the jovial Grumio, to keep the play alive and moving and hold the interest of the audience throughout.

Ever since its first appearance the "Taming of the Shrew" has had an unusual appeal to its audiences, and there is no doubt that the Dramatic Club's production this Spring will uphold its old standard.

The Dramatic Club's presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was proclaimed an outstanding success from every viewpoint—artistic.

The tickets will be fifty cents.

Debate Club Plans Forensic Schedule Of Coming Session

Program Announces Rival Colleges as Contestants

The Debate Club, after a good showing for its work, is now planning for a heavy season of debates. Early in December the two teams went to Winthrop College to take part in a practice tournament before the opening of the season. There were twenty-five teams engaged in this contest, and the Farmville representatives, Mildred Slayton and Isabelle Sprinkle for the affirmative, and Virginia Hooke and Juanita Callis for the negative, won a large majority of their debates.

March 5, 6, and 7 another set of teams will attend the South Atlantic Forensic Tournament, and each team will engage in a series of six debates.

The tentative schedule is as follows: Emory and Henry, Feb. 26 here; Harrisonburg (dual) there; Waynesburg, Pa. (dual) March 3 here; University of South Carolina, March 4, here; South Atlantic Tournament, March 5, 6, 7; Randolph-Macon, March 11, here; Emory and Henry, March 20, there; Westhampton, March 27, there; Gettysburg (dual) April 23, here.

Girls Install League In Church Service

The members of the Young People's Fellowship, an organization which was established by the young people of the Episcopal church in October were formally installed Sunday night at a candlelight service.

Rev. A. C. Tucker presided. During the service the ideals and purposes were presented. Among the S. T. C. girls installed were: Mary Robeson, pres.; Grace Cox, secretary; Novell Montague, Emma Bingham, Roberta Haskins, Crenshaw Jones, Nancy Gregory, Elizabeth Berryman, Nette Gregory, Elizabeth Moss, Alpha Lee Garnett, Henrietta Ivers, Kitty Nelson, and Virginia Hannah.

Mardi Gras Spirit To Reign Supreme In Annual Carnival

School Will Pattern New Orleans Custom

This year, on February 25, S. T. C. will again hold its annual Mardi Gras Festival. This has been the custom in our school since 1933, and during the three years Nancy Bergyn, Margaret Parker, and Lucy Potter have ruled respectively as queens over the gaiety.

Our Mardi Gras is patterned after the Mardi Gras held each year in New Orleans, and a spirit of happiness and festivity permeates the entire affair.

Each Mardi Gras finds the city of New Orleans overflowing with visitors, balconies and galleries overhanging the street being filled with spectators. The carnival colors, yellow, green and purple, are festooned from house to house. There are day and night parades, when glittering mock-monarchs ride through the streets.

While all New Orleans is in a social whirl from the New Year on, the actual Mardi Gras pageantry begins on the Thursday before Ash Wednesday. Each night during this period some organization sponsors a procession and ball, the climax being the parade of Rex on Tuesday morning, followed by the ball of Comus and the ball of Rex on Tuesday night. The rulers of Mardi Gras are Rex and his Queen, the Queen and her maids being chosen from the year's debutantes. Rex, King of the Carnival, is chosen by a committee.

By eight o'clock the adult maskers are abroad, making their way to the center of the city where the pageants take place at noon. Bands are playing and street vendors are out. Traffic is barred from the streets, which are given over to dancing. There are original and beautiful costumes: nuns, clowns, pirates, red-devils, ballet girls, snake-charmers, old maids with grotesque curls, giants on stilts, and men dressed as cows, horses, and elephants. The streets are full of singing laughter, and there is a constant tinkling of tiny bells, forming parts of costumes. Horns blowing, showers of confetti floating down from balconies, flags fluttering everywhere, sunlight

Deep Snow Brings Thills As Lessons Are Forgotten

It's strange what a few inches of snow will do to the college campus. When old King Winter heaved a sigh of north wind and settled down to real business last Thursday night he wrought some interesting changes at S. T. C.

"It's snowing!" shouted some diligent girl staying up late to study.

"Snowing!" echoed the gleeful cry from hall to hall.

With that the whole of S. T. C. was astir. There was a mad rush for the windows to watch the soft downy flakes of snow gently fall upon the earth. Next morning many a late sleeper ventured out to breakfast just for the sheer fun of it. Many a senior sacrificed her traditional dignity and performed unique gymnastics in descending the hill from the Senior Building.

The fast falling flakes gave habitual day dreamers something to stare at; even attentive students found it difficult to resist an occasional glance at the fascinating panorama of a whitening world. It seemed that classes would never end for those that longed to frolic in the great white spaces.

When seven hundred customarily bare-headed lassies blossom out in bonnets of all descriptions it creates a real spectacle. And in honor of this heavy snowfall, snow pants and pants of all kinds were donned. Snow men were soon standing all over the campus, only to be knocked down by some energetic ball thrower. Sleigh-riding on Buffalo Hill presented a real temptation, wildly yielded to when Miss Mary granted all students permission to indulge. The bitter cold of the nights was forgotten amid the merry bunch of sports that crowded near the fire and waited their turn to "hop a sleigh."

Perhaps the finest of all have been the capers cut by the faculty members. Their philosophical looks of non-concern quickly transformed themselves into serious contemplation of the problem at hand—to make an uneventful expedition up the street — when one or two of them missed their calculations—well, what girl would help laughing up her sleeve?

When one loves the snow it is a sure sign that he hasn't grown old, it is said. How many at S. T. C. are yet youthful?

Class To Present Unique Production

Dr. Josef L. Kunz

DR. JOSEF L. KUNZ, lecturer in international law at the University of Toledo.

Telegrams Arriving "Over the Wires" Thursday

On Thursday, February 13, the Freshman Class will present their first production, "Over The Wires", a musical comedy directed by Nan Throckmorton.

It is the story of a young girl who leaves New York to see the world and sends wires back home from all parts of the globe. These telegrams will be flashed on the screen after each act. Anna Bell, the typical American girl, is played by Margaret Britton. We find her visiting such well known places as Paris, Monte Carlo, Spain and Persia. In Paris the scene is laid in a modiste shop. The models are Helen Green, Jane Saunders, Nancy Sellman, Louise Anthony, Peggy Young, Margaret Stollard, Katherine Habel, Sarah Button, Alpha Lee Garnett, Jane Burke, and Patty Bounds, who will display the latest models.

In Monte Carlo she finds entertainment in Ethel Water's blues singing (impersonated by Betty Fagg) and Eleanor Powell's (Gwen Bell) famous tap dancing. She will appear in a solo number while the Eton boys sing; and later she will appear with a chorus.

Next we find her journeying to Spain to learn what the future holds from the dark fortune teller, Jane Branch. After this comes a pleasant interlude in a Spanish dance, led by Dot Lewis.

In Persia we find the Sultan of the palace who never smiles. Although he has a harem he remains immune to the wiles of women un-

Wood Will Attend I. R. C. Convention

Mary Elizabeth Wood will represent the Virginia Gamma Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu at the International Relations Club convention to be held at Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C., February 27, 28, 29. This is the one hundred and twenty-first convention which is held under the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The principal guest speakers will be Dr. Josef L. Kunz, lecturer in international law at the University of Toledo, Ohio, and Dr. Edgar J. Fisher, former dean and professor of history and political science at Robert College, Istanbul, Turkey. Miss Amy Heminway Jones, Division Assistant of the Carnegie Endowment, will also speak.

The International Relations Clubs are groups of students organized under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, in universities, colleges, and normal schools for the study and discussion of international problems.

The purpose of the Endowment in undertaking this work is to educate and enlighten public opinion. As Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of the Endowment, says, it is not to support any single view as how to best treat the conditions which now prevail throughout the world.

International Relations Clubs are organized in many countries in the world. There are 595 clubs at present in the United States and 158 in foreign countries. Those include Alaska, Puerto Rico, Ha-

"Leap Year" Edition of Magazine Appears

February 10 is the date for the distribution of the second issue of "Goolsap", the Southern Gothic. Many radical changes are being made in its makeup, and it will be a much bigger and better magazine.

The editors of the publication will give great care and consideration to any material that is submitted. Is is urged that everyone try his hand in the art of drawing or writing humor. Cartoons, stories, jokes, sketches, everything of a humorous nature is desired. Material for each issue should be submitted to the editors before the 10th of the month of the issue.

Only a limited number of copies are being sent. If you want a copy put in your order now.

Members of Society Apply for Degrees

Thursday night, February 6, Beore Eh Thorn held its monthly program meeting in the honor room. Several papers were presented to the society by members in application for degrees.

The program opened with a review of "King Jasper" by Claudine O'Brien. This is Edward Arlington Robinson's last published poem. It is an interesting psychological study of melancholy introspection. Following this Dorothy Price read an informal essay on "Greetings." In this she explained how greetings show a person's personality, and how they effect each of us. Lucille Rhodes presented an informal essay next, titled "On Watching Husband Eat Steak and Onions." After this Alice Grainger read her paper on "Beauty As Defined by the Romanticists." She gave some well know quotations including "A thing of beauty is a joy forever" and "Beauty is truth, truth beauty. That is all ye know on earth and all ye need to know." She concluded her speech by citing Keats' poetry as the true beauty.

Dr. Jarman Attends Educational Meeting

Dr. Jarman was among the outstanding educators of the state to attend the annual meeting of The Association of Virginia Colleges which convened in Richmond on February seventh and eighth. The headquarters were at the Thomas Jefferson Hotel.

Dr. Walmsley was to have been another of our representatives to receive suggestions for broadening the scope of our curriculum, but weather conditions prevented his going.

The topics for discussion were: "Virginia Colleges and Curriculum Revision" and "Curriculum Readjustments in Colleges."

Abraham Lincoln

"A blend of mirth and sadness, smiles and tears;
A quaint knight errant of the pioneers;
A homely hero born of star and sod;
A peasant prince; a masterpiece of God."

By Judge Walter Malone.

When we mention Lincoln, there is interminglded in our minds a mass of contradictory thoughts and mental images. Thinking of him according to his outward appearance we see a tall, lanky, awkward man, all in all—crude looking. But inwardly quite a different sight—a gentle spirit, a kind heart, a sense of justice and a live knowledge of true democracy.

"All his life, a dim sense of destiny hung over him and always with only the dull tools supplied by his environment. he strove to fit himself to meet what fate would exact of him." This is one of the main vantage points in which we find many men weak, but where we find Lincoln strengthened himself. He was always prepared for any situation which confronted him. We find unpreparedness not only a weakness in governmental affairs, but in everything — our own everyday life, and the things in it— our classes and our other private duties.

Knowing that you are prepared, gives one a feeling of assurance and self confidence which is decidedly lacking when we neglect our duties and forthcoming events.

Do You Care to Remember?

Wending our way through the trends of tomorrow, cherished memories of yesterday will be locked in our treasure chest. Some of us do not realize as we wing our way through college life how dear some things will be to us in the future—the ideals, golden friendships, joyous success, cherished ambitions, trials and errors, disappointments and tears—all these through which our Alma Mater has fostered us. Even now, our wandering fancies glide back to our childhood days and we long for some material form that could bring more vividly to our memory those carefree, happy times. The same will be true of our college life in those long years to come. When we are old and gray, that flood of memories and college reminiscences will come, and we will long for some concrete form reminding us of them.

There is not a single one of us who should let one of our four years at school pass without adding to our chest of souvenirs our annual the Virginian! Indeed, this is the only transferable form picturing vividly to us our school. (Some of us wait until our senior year to get an annual; but we can not realize that no one year in school is similar to the next.) Activities, friendships, living in general, go through almost a complete change in twelve months. We think of each year as a unit apart almost, and that is what our Virginian pictures for us. We want to remember them as such and in no way can we do this as vividly as through the pages of the annual. Even the tiny memoirs our schoolmates scratch by their names will bcome a cherished reminder of certain joyful times.

We do not only help ourselves when we buy an annual, we support our Alma Mater. We are showing school spirit. Our friends at home become interested in our college life through this book.

Let's each stop and think how many incidents, friends, and pictures we would wish always to be painted on memory's page. Now can't we see how very necessary it is for us to have a reminder of these? Let's each this year show our school spirit, prepare ourselves for tomorrow by getting a lasting reminder of today, add to our chest of souvenirs a Virginian which will always keep our fires of memory glowing.

Is Education a Racket?

"Education has ruined the country. The reason you find so many fools today is 'cause the world's gettin' over-educated." Thus Mr. Whittica. biting that white mustache, rasps out his favorite theme:

"Old man Whittica's in his dotage — rather argue than eat when he's hungry."

And thus, the old man's statements are passed up—.

In trying to see just why this old man thought the world was getting "over-educated," we come to this conclusion:

Every day we encounter people who have studied so much that their heads are so stocked with what we term theory, or as some would say—"book-sense", they have no time for the practical things life offers, which after all prove the more important.

There is an old saying that after teachers teach so many years, you can pick one out in the dark.

There are exceptions of course to the rule, but it is certainly true to a certain extent. Teachers seem to develop little mannerisms peculiar to their profession. They tend to assume a disciplinary air with everyone. They are always correcting mistakes in grammar which sometimes cause rather embarrassing situations. Many teachers take their work so seriously and study the subjct so thoroughly that they begin to put the theoretical into practice before long, people begin to rumor that Miss— is hipped.

The majority of us are planning to be teachers. Thus, even though it's difficult to realize it at present, we are going to have to content with this same problem. After all, it is so easy to put our professional life into the part of life which isn't profession. Very few of us can do this so successfully that a degree of our personality isn't lost; therefore let us as oncoming teachers try not to assume the attitude that we know more than the whole world just because we realize in the schoolroom that we know more than the children. Let's not try the same disciplinary problems on society that we do on Johnny and Susie in classes. Let's not go to parties and absent-mindedly correct our bridge partners' errors in grammar. Let's begin to make our profession one in which we do not become pointed out as "Cut and dried school-marms," who are simply as Mr. Whittica would say, "over-educated."

Biscoe-McDaniel

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McDaniel of Hampton announced the marriage of their daughter Rachel to Mr. John S. Biscoe of Fredericksburg and Alexandria. The wedding took place at high noon, Saturday, February 8 in the Hampton Baptist church, Hampton, Virginia. The bride and groom will make their home at Alexandria, Virginia. Mrs. Biscoe is a graduate of Farmville State Teachers College in the class of '33.

Davis-Fraser

A marriage of interest in Virginia was solemnized on February 6 in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral when Miss Lois Gertrude Fraser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Fraser of Blackstone, became the bride of Jesse Edwin Davis, of Richmond and Mobile, Alabama.

The bride is an honor graduate of the Farmville State Teachers College, where she was a member of Pi Gamma Mu, Kappa Delta Pi, and Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Cooper-Mason

The marriage of Miss Margaret Mason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Mason to Mr. Hugh Berkley Cooper, son of Mr. R. S. Cooper of Pelham, N. C., was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage in Boydton on Friday, January 17. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Burke.

Mrs. Cooper is a graduate of the State Teachers College in Farmville.

Miss Dorothy Harrison, a graduate of the State Teachers College, is teaching in the English department of Mrs. Layne's Business School during the mid-winter term.

Rotunda Reverberations

What Price does a girl pay after riding twelve miles to tell a gentleman goodnight—and forgets it?

Could it be the bad weather that's responsible for the smiles of the rural school teachers!

Horses ,horses crazy over horses! That's all we need now to turn S. T. C. into a Riding Academy.

What student is on such good terms with the faculty that she can push them aside with only a "Pardon me, honey" in order to speak to Mr. French?

Contrary to what we might think, natural dancing is a rather dangerous activity—for Alice Grainger anyhow.

We trust your box of candy was from a platonic friend, Billy. Surely you would not shatter our ideals of the B. G. I. U.'s.

We can't decide whether it was mirth, stage fright, or the handsome football hero that put the bride in such a twitch in Sing last Saturday night.

We're anticipating a "Hit of the Season" from the freshmen. After all the talk and rehearsing we feel sure their production will be a real inspiration to Earl Carrol and George White.

It wasn't told to us, we only heard—that Florence Sanford's snow outfit had the official O. K. Not Bad!

The Infirmary is doing a rushing business these days—what with all the black eyes. broken fingers, sprained arms and stiff joints received "while at play."

"First come, first serve." That's what you think. Marjorie still can't figure out why she was literally pushed out of her seat by a professor the other day when Grace Eubank walked into class late.

We're willing to bet that Mary B. and Minnie will live on the third floor left wing of Junior-Senior Building next year.

Intercollegiate News

College-bred refers to something which requires a fearful amount of dough, is seldom self-rising, and usually proves to be nothing more or less than a four-year loaf.

A preacher walked into a saloon, ordered milk, and by mistake was served a milk punch. After drinking it, the holy man lifted his eyes and was heard to say: "Oh, Lord, what a cow."

Advertisement in the West Virginian University daily: "Men Wanted by two popular sorority girls, two handsome gentlemen for dating purposes. Social assets required."

The influence of Popeye, the comic strip character, is being felt by the school cafeteria at North Carolina State College where spinach disappears more rapidly from the steam table than other vegetables.

Harrisonburg S. T. C. students have decided that silence is fatal. Either it indicates that our neighbor is cooly taking stock of us, or it is extremely intimate. This may be so, yet it may not. Nevertheless, small talk is the preliminary skirmish to the engagement of acquaintanceship, friendly, or love. Maybe your aloof silence isn't so clever, after all!

They evidently play a rough game! Insurance for athletes as a possible answer to responsibility incurred by colleges for the physical welfare of the huskies who endanger their life and limb in competition is under investigation by the University of California.

Love—It's an itching around the heart that can't be scratched, an experience from which you never learn better; and it's undefinable because you can't see it, but, oh, how you can feel it. That's what several University of Georgia student think love is. Another definition is, "Love, when returned, is man's greatest possession; when unreturned, his sharpest thorn. It's an experiment, often tried, but never proved—love is a misunderstanding between fools."

World News

Alexei Stakhanov, a shrewd Soviet coal miner from his bleak hut on Donbas Steppe, rose to temporary fame, last week, when he came to Moscow, bringing with him a method, "Stakhanovism", for speeding up the toil of Russian workers. Dictator Joseph Stalin decreed a nationwide speed up of toil for ten days and gave Stakhanov the highest Soviet-decoration, the order of Lenin, as a climax.

As a result of this method, coal production really dropped below normal. For this failure, he was warned to wipe out his disgrace. The first five days of Stakhanovism were successful, but the last five days failed, carrying along with it a drop in wages. Sulkiness and weariness are said to have been the cause of this failure.

Alexei Stakhanov, however, is still going to receive a life long pension and a pass for him to travel free twice a year on Soviet railways, boats, airplans, trains and busses. The world sympathizes with Russia in this failure and hopes that recovery is in store for this nation.

How many of us are aware of the fact that on January 26, the National Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, voted, at a meeting in St. Louis, the endorsement of plan of Sir Herbert Samuel and Felix M. Warburton to finance emigration of Jews from Germany?

On January 28, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, opened an eastern campaign for Republican nomination for president with an address before 3,500 persons in Kismet Temple, Brooklyn, New York. It is wondered whether his campaign will meet with success.

It seems as if Americans really are to be protected at sea, after all, since the National Committee on Safety at Sea demanded that Congress strengthen Federal Steamboat Inspection Service both in personnel and equipment; this really is an effort for protection.

Poetry

Valentines

Eleanor Hammond

On each window pane the frost
Paints a silvery design
Fringed with lines of icicles-
Maybe it's a valentine!
Do you think each flake of snow
Frozen daintily in place
Is to trim the valentine
Like a bit of frosty lace?

Song

Good morrow, 'tis St. Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window
To be your valentine.

Wm. Shakespeare.

Valentine Verses

My patron saint, St. Valentine,
Why dost thou leave me to repine,
Still supplicating at her shrine?
But bid her eyes to me incline-
I'll ask no other sun to shine-
More rich than is Golconda's wine;
Range all that woman, song or wine
Can give; wealth, power, and fame combined;
For her I'd gladly all resign.
Take all the pearls are in the brine,
Sift heaven for stars; earth's flowers entwine-
But be her heart my Valentine.

Thomas Nelson Page

To St. Valentine

St. Valentine, though wide your fame,
You don't reserve your pious name,
And this the reason of my plaint-
Your conduct misbefits a saint.
From youthtime up to middle age
I've catered for your patronage,
But ever since we've been acquaint
You haven't acted like a saint
For when comes round, as fixed as fate,
The day which you appropriate,
You give me cause for new complaint
In manner most unlike a saint.
I long have sued for Mabel's smiles
And yielded to her costly wiles,
But ardent lines or baubles quaint alike are spurned, ungrateful saint.
Your halo's rimmed with many a dart;
Your symbol is a wounded heart;
Fond swains you lure with artful feint;
Such actions don't become a saint.
Your name no longer should appear
In saintly calendar, 'tis clear,
For I affirm, without restraint,
You're more a sinner than a saint.

Jennie Betts Hartswick.

How Do I Love Thee

Elizabeth Barrett Browning

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways,
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight.
For the ends of Being and ideal Grace.
I love thee to the level of every days
Most quiet need, by sun and candle light
I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from Praise
I love thee with the passion put to use
In my old griefs, and with my childhood's faith.
I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints—I love thee with the breath,
Smiles, tears, all my life!—And, if God choose,
I shall but love thee better after death.

Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes

(To Celia) Ben Jonson

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine;
Or leave a kiss but in the cup,
And I'll not look for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise.
Doth ask a drink divine;
But might of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.
I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
Not so much honouring thee
As giving it a hope that there
It could not withered be;
But thou thereon didst only breathe
And sent it back to me;
Since when it grows, and smells,
I swear,
Not of itself but thee!

Book Review

HONOR BOUND

In "Honor Bound", Faith Baldwin faces the question which puzzles many members of the younger generation today: Is it possible for two young people not in love, to make a success of marriage? Miss Baldwin portrays the married life of two young people bound by friendship and the knowledge of unhappy love affairs which left them both stranded. She uses small events and apparently trivial incidents which lend surface color to the underlying drama of happiness and tragedy. The young married couple, Larie and Hank, are handicapped in the very beginning by the lack of love for each other. However, is love one of the divine passions which lasts forever? Or is love a product of sympathetic understanding, close companionship, and mutual interests? "Honor Bound" answers all of these questions—not merely as an attractive story, but as a problem of modern marriage in all its complicated implications.

Beauty Hints

"I only have eyes for you"—as goes the song. But are your eyes the kind that a gentleman would like to have all for him? If you have small, deep-set eyes, draw a thin line with eye pencil out past the end of the upper and lower lashes to make them look larger; but don't let the lines meet. Blend with the finger tip. Use shadow near lash line, from center out toward corners.

It is best not to darken light lashes and brows for daytime. For evening brush on brown mascara, delicately separating the lashes. On the brows touch mascara only to the longest hairs, thus avoiding a dark line.

Often eyes have a slight, starry look from wearing glasses, which can be corrected by carefully brushing on mascara with a not-too-wet brush. Smooth on eye shadow, too, for depth.

Because plucked brows usually spell extreme sophistication, rather than wide-eyed innocence, on the screen, Jean Muir is keeping hers naturally arched. She thinks that too much plucking takes away character. When she uses mascara, it is done without artificiality.

Now girls, for the next dance be sure to keep in mind a few of these hints.

Radio Highlights

On Wednesday night "One Man's Family", a dramatic sketch, comes on the air at 8:00 over NBC-WTAR. Wayne King and his orchestra also can be heard at 8:30 over NBC-WEAF. "Town Hall", starring Fred Allen and Portland Hoff broadcast at 9:00 over NBC-WTAR. Just before you retire for the night, Eddie Duchin and his orchestra play at 11:00 over the same network.

On Thursday night Rudy Vallee plays an hour of delightful music for us at 8:00 over NBC-WEAF. Lanny Ross and the Show Boat play a big part by rendering a program at 9:00 over NBC-WTAR. There seems to be plenty of good music on the air Thursday night. Tune in on Bing Crosby and Jimmie Dorsey's orchestra at 11:00 over NBC-WTAR.

If anyone isn't at class on 11:00 A. M. Friday, be sure to tune in on Walter Damroch's "Music Appreciation Hour" over NBC-WTAR. At 8:00 P. M. over NBC-WEAF Jessica Dragonette will sing on a variety program, while Frank Munn, tenor, will sing with Bernice Claire, soprano, along with Abe Lyman's orchestra at 9:00 over the same program. Best of all, though, is the well known Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians over NBC-WTAR at 9:30.

On Saturday, one can hear "Il Travatore", Verdi's popular opera, broadcasted by Metropolitan Opera Co. over NBC-WTAR at 1:55 P. M. Also can the Hampton Institute Singers be heard over NBC-WTAR at 7:35. Of course you must not miss Rubinoff and his violin over the same program at 9:00.

Sunday night, Jack Benny comes on the air from WJX at 7:00. Ozzie Nelson at 7:30, Major Bowles Amateur Hour at 8:30, and Wayne King at 10:00 are programs it would be hard to miss on Sunday nights.

Dr. Robert Frazer

Upon the death of Dr. Cunningham, Dr. Robert Frazer was called to the presidency of the Normal School—our college now.

According to his father's plans, Dr. Frazer as a young boy was destined for the law. Yet there was ever present in his consciousness, a protest against it and a steadfast conviction that his duty was in the direction of teaching.

Acting upon the advice of his instructor at the University of Virginia, he held on to his law even declining an offer to teach in the Florida Military Institute. Later he was able to accept this position, and at the end of the war he had become enamored with teaching and law was abandoned.

In the fall of 1885, he returned to Virginia and opened a school for boys. In 1671 he bought Fauquier Institiute, a boarding school for girls, at Warrenton. Here he remained until 1882, when, yielding to the wishes of Dr. Curry, one of the beloved founders of our college, he became president of Judson Institute at Marion, Ala.

The Industrial Institute and College of Mississippi at Columbus, called him to service in 1891. He remained there seven sessions, and made the school the pride of the state.

In February, 1898, Dr. Frazer became the third president of our college. Due to his richly stored mind, his broad knowledge of life, his varied and valuable experience in schools of many types, his four years resulted in growth an expansion of a steady stable kind.

"His aim in conduct of school affairs was, first, to provide the best possible advantage for the students; second, to offer those advantages to students at the lowest cost that the benefits might reach the largest number."

Then, and today, definite and visible fruits of his work stand out clearly. Among these may be mentioned:—a large increase in attendance, enlargement of faculty, addition of new departments, notable the separate department of education and department of physical training, with a large new gymnasium, and infirmary, a steam laundry and a steam heating plant. To him, credit is also due for the organization of the Virginia Normal League that has helped and is helping today many a student to obtain an education at our Alma Mater.

"When Dr. Frazer resigned the presidency of the State Normal School to enter upon the duties of Field Agent of the General Education Board, he left in many many hearts grateful memories of a courteous, cultured, sympathetic Christian gentleman of earnest and unbending principles, staunchly loyal to his lofty ideals of duty."

Sing

One of the most spectacular social events of the season took place in Sing Saturday night at the marriage of Ruth Phelps, tennis queen, and Louise Walmsley, football hero.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Edna oBlick. Sue Eastham was maid of honor. There were four bridesmaids, Mary E. Badger, Maxine, Burke, Army Butterworth and Ginny Carroll. Chic Dortch was flower girl and Ines Chappell, ring bearer. Among the audience, however, was the grief-stricken mother, Claire Eastman, and her impudent son, Gracie Allen Pittard.

Preceding the ceremony a very appropriate song was rendered by Betty Butterworth, "You Gotta Be a Football Hero." She was accompanied by Dot Wise who also played the wedding music.

The bride was attired in white wool with a train of tennis net. She carried a tennis racket and balls. The bridesmaids wore blue gym suits and carried tennis rackets, balls, hockey sticks, and la crosse sticks. The maid of honor wore a grey bathing suit with a white cap.

Wedding bells were furnished by Lelia Sanford.

Our basketball girls on the varsity team beat Lynchburg, Jan. 31 —would probably have treated the Blackstone team the same way last Friday—it snowed though, so the game was postponed. There really is, however, a hard fight on hand for our girls when they meet the William and Mary basketball team next Saturday, Feb. 15. They'll certainly need your support. The game is to be played in our own gym; so, come on everybody, let's be there when the first whistle blows—back up the team as it's never been backed before.

You know we are fortunate this year. We'll see four honest-to-goodness basketball games this season; they'll be in our gymn, too. We'll see our team play William and Mary Feb. 15, Sweetbriar, Feb. 21, Lynchburg, Feb. 28, and (last but not least) Harrisonburg, March 6.

Have you noticed the color cup poster? Green and white and red and white are neck to neck—both have ten points each. There'll be more points added after the class basketball games are played. Wonder which color will win the color cup this year? Green and white won it last year—better get out for a few more practices before the class basketball games are played. Stick to your class you girls—they need you!

All you girls with brothers or basketball heroes at Hampden-Sydney and V. P. I. have a treat in store. V. P. I. basketball team will play Hampden-Sydney in our own gym—right under our own roof, Wednesday, Feb. 12. You'll be there, I wager, but decide first which team you'll root for.

There will be plenty of room for everybody down at the pool the day after Mardi Gras, Feb. 26. It really is an affair which no one can afford to miss—a swimming meet. All you have to do is pick up your best swimming stroke or that dive you learned last year. Polish up a bit with a few practices and then you are entering the water meet. Come on you swimmers, beginners, old heads, and all; let's have some fun at this meet. I'll meet you tomorrow at the pool for practice—huh?

The Varsity Tennis team has been announced. It is composed of the following girls: Army Butterworth, Betty Butterworth, Virginia Carroll, Doris Eason, Kitty Nelson, Evelyn Massey, Dorothy Wright, Kathleen Ranson, Elsie Cabell, Anne Dugger, Mary Virginia Walker, and Ruth Sears.

Each girl must have an hour's practice a week during the remainder of the winter quarter to be eligible to play in the spring.

By the Way!

Heaven and Hell had no place in the historical religions. The soul of the dead went to an underground world. Only gods and deified heroes lived in heaven. The author of Ecclesiastes (about 977 B. C.) wrote "all go unto one place" III, 20.

Churches on Racetracks are certainly unique. In Chelmsford, England, there is a church located in the center of a racetrack. Although the vicar enjoys its location he is irked by the large number of horses and dogs that roam about the churchyard.

Repeal of Prohibition pleased the manisters of Scotland because it increased the low wages of the parishioners who are still paid according to the current price of barley. Some of the wages increased five hundred dollars during the past year.

The Serpent that tempted Eve became the cause of a unique racket many years ago when an American offered to sell the skin of the serpent that tempted Eve in the garden of Eden. No museum accepted the offer.

Gambling is regarded as the besetting sin of the Chinese. In China countless numbers have gambled away all of their possessions, including a daughter or two, within a few hours. In New York City Chinese laundries frequently change hands as stakes in the game of fan-tan.

Oriental Marriages, especially in India, have both a religious and social purpose. The corpse of a person who has died before marriage must go through a wedding ceremony with an effigy of a woman before burial.

From "The News" in Lynchburg, Virginia was the following: "Siberians delight a large audience at Randolph-Macon Woman's College. Such an interpretation of the Russian Art of Music as given last evening has rarely been accorded a Virginia audience and was presented in brilliant costumes. Solos and choral numbers alike were sung with artistry and that vigor and abandon which characterizes Russian music. Suffice to say the offering has so been unrivalled here in music of its type."

Dear Editor:

It seems as though the underclassmen are taking all the privileges allotted to the Juniors and Seniors. In this case it is not so much a privilege as a consideration that we feel is our due. Dr. Jarman has requested that we march out of chapel up the middle aisle; the Seniors leading, followed by the Juniors, Sophomores and Freshmen. But this is reversed. We, the upper-classmen must be kept waiting in the aisle while the Freshmen and Sophomores slip out first, and by the time we reach the door we are the last to leave the auditorium.

I feel sure that they need only to be reminded of this and they will cooperate with us in making the marching more systematic and orderly.

"Have a good time while you may"—that is the spirit of Mardi Gras. All inhibitions are lost and all superficial dignity is cast aside. Troubles are forgotten.

The Exodus

It was a great profession
I entered in my youth,
That strove to right the grossest wrong
And find elusive truth!

They trained me at the Normal
And sent me on my way,
To right the wrongs of many years
And never think of pay!

And then whate'er I tried to do
'Twas always out of date,
I got to be the cow's tail,
"Twas my eternal fate.

And then the State Department
Put in its wizened thumb,
And out it pulled from parts unknown
The new curriculum.

Its attitudes and aspects,
They almost drove me wild.
One thought was always uppermost
To be once more a child.

There was no magic wand to wave
Above my graying head;
To learn the new curriculum
Would serve the end instead.

And so my thoughts turned backward;
I longed for days of yore
To gather up the learning
From Farmville's ample store.

I thought of Ponce de Leon,
Who sought eternal youth:
But through the new curriculum,
I sought eternal truth.

I cared not for the span of years,
Between that neatly hung
The quest of the new curriculum,
Forever made me young.

I saw the children of my friends,
In socks with curls galore,
I watched them play, and dance, and trip
The light fantastic toe.

But always pushing onward,
I saw the prize ahead;
'Twas not a Grail, but just a Grasp
Of curriculum, instead.

And now I've caught the vision,
I know the aspects well
My attitudes are so improved
My age you'd never tell.

But in this new perfection
My heart is filled with fear.
Who knows what Education
Will do another year?

Dan Cupid Sharpens His Piercing Arrows

Here comes St. Valentine's Day again, sandwiched in between Abe Lincoln and truthful George, and it's quite the most important of the three to college girls. Old Dan Cupid is sharpening his darts, and many a heart is beating double time.

Do you remember when Valentine's Day didn't mean flowers and candy and sayers of sweet nothings? It was such fun to find the most horrible comic for dear teacher and to ring doorbells and jerk strings. Any small boy will show you how to construct an excellent window tapper which lets you hide safely yards away. They all know the secret of drawing valentines in chalk, and do they chuckle when you try to pick them up.

Dad always raves when his pal from Peoria sends him a fisherman's slam, and you laugh; but the joke's on you when some smarty sends you one that sneers at your long nose, and you can't help it anyway. It was an old gag to sit in the living room while sister's boy-friend got a cramp in the arm from holding his flowers behind him, and finally relented to the extent of two bits.

Nottingham Reigns Over Mardi Gras On Tuesday Night

Crowning of Queen Opens Dance at 8:30

The annual Mardi Gras fete sponsored by Pi Gamma Mu, will take place Tuesday night, February 25, at 8:30 p. m., in the S. T. C. gymnasium. No person will be admitted on the dance floor who is not in costume and mask. The queen, her court, and their escorts are as follows: Martha Nottingham, queen—Dave Rice; Jennie Belle Gilliam—Will Rogers; Mary Bowles — Bill Hoppstetter; Tac Waters—Berry Hodgson; Hazel Smith—Fred Burton; Kitty Roberts—Wallace Gathwright; Bonnie Powell — Jimmy Powell; Carter Belle Munt—Fred Williams; Chic Dortch—O. B. Babbitt.

The coronation of the queen will take place at 8:30, at the beginning of the dance. The pages are Vera Ebel and Gwen Bell. Betty Fagg is the court herald. The judging of the costumes follows the crowning of the queen. There will be a grand parade before the court; everyone present is requested to join in the costume period. Costumes will be judged on the basis of: Prettiest, most original, and most attractive couple. Unmasking will be in order after the costume judging. The queen and her court will lead in the dance, and the other couples will fall in.

The admission to the dance is twenty-five cents, instead of the usual ten cents. There is a limited number of tickets, which are on sale by members of Pi Gamma Mu.

Freshmen Present Musical Production

Exceptional Talent is Shown in Varied Performance

On Thursday night, February 13, the talented Freshman class made its debut in an original musical, "Over the Wires," under the capable direction of Nan Throckmorton and Miss Moran. In six scenes, two roaming sightseers took the audience around the world—and then some.

The telegraph boys Nan Throckmorton and Mabel Burton kept the family well-informed of the wanderers whereabouts at intervals by telegraph flashes. Suza, that unspeakable aunt, traveling companion and what-not, cocked a stylish piece of felt over two ears and declared herself fortified for the trip Vera Ebel seemed quite natural in this role. Margaret Britton as Annabelle, the charming heroine, declared to her father, Dot Wright, and mother, Caroline Gwaltney, in no uncertain tones that she was "Footloose and Fancy Free;" the astonished sister, Dot Tillet, brother Dibby Green, Ann Kelly, and Conrad, Ruth Barlow, could only look on. The grandmother, Elizabeth Wilson, who was only financing the trip, merely rocked peacefully and added to the general commotion with a wise saying or two. Annabelle and Suza, highly animated,, departed to strains of "Fare Thee Well, Annabelle."

Betty Fagg fairly scintillated between acts with impersonations each time returning to her own surpassing style as "Nobody's Sweetheart Now."

Educators Praise Work of Tributum

"Thank you sincerely for your tribute to Horace. I rejoice that you keep alive the sacred flame of the Classics. The Ages will show gratitude to you," says Dr. S. C. Mitchell, Professor of History, University of Richmond.

"I thank you so much for sending me the Tributum, dedicated to Horace. I wish very much my students could or would do as much as the Farmville students are doing to commemorate the Bimillenium of Horace. How do your students know so well what is necessary for a love-poet? I enjoyed the reading.

My congratulations," says Dr. R. E. Blackwell, Pres. Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, Virginia.

"I congratulate you on your fine tribute to Horace.

Tibi omnia bona precor in proximum annum," says Dr. Herbert C. Lipscomb, Professor of Latin, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg, Va.

"Pardon my long delay in answering your letter of December 5, last; I waited at first in order to read "The Tributum" carefully. I think "The Tributum" a most creditable production. All the translations are good, but some are excellent and measure up to those of Lord Lytton, which are usually considered the best," says Judge Robert M. Hughes, member of the Valentine Program Given By Sodalitas Latina Thurs.

Sodalitas Latina held its regular meeting Thursday, February 13, at 5 in the Language room. In the absence of the president, the meeting was presided over by Libby Morris.

The program was divided into two parts: The first part was introduced by a story, "Manes Caesaris—The Ghost of Caesar", by Ruth Phelps, followed by two articles on Latin subjects, and two Latin games were next in order.

The second part of the program centered around St. Valentine's Day. There was a reading on the Roman customs in regard to the feted day, and a valentine poem. The program closed with the translation of individual Latin Valentines.

Siberian Musicians Return to S. T. C.

Program is Received With Heartv Applause

On Tuesday evening, February 18 at eight o'clock the Student Body was delighted for the second time with the Siberian Singers. Nicholas Vasilieff, the director, proved once more a great singer, an inspiring leader, and most dramatic person in his interpretation and leadership.

In Cathedral Robes of the seventeenhh Century they rendered sacred selection portraying the beauty of religious music. It was the music of the Christmas spirit of Russia. Outstanding among these was the number, "In A Cathedral." One heard the bell in the tower chimng the call to prayer as Mr. Seligman effectively accompanied the chorus.

The second part of the program was of a lighter vein which fascinated the audience. The singers appeared in the National Costumes of old Russia. "The Laughing Polka" and "Pirate Song"

Survey Shows Rapid Progress Under Present Leadership

It is impossible to put into a brief article even a small part of what Dr. Joseph Leonard Jarman as fourth president of our college has accomplished. The institution has grow, expanded, developed under his wise leadership until today it is recognized as one of the outstanding Teachers colleges of the United States.

When Dr. Jarman entered upon his duties in 1902, he found a small school with a faculty of thirteen members offering three years of academic work and one year of professional work. In that year there were only fifty-eight students in the professional course—In 1928 there were one thousand and ninety-five.

During his administration the campus has been extended from time to time and many buildings have been erected. Two of the most notable chievements of this sort were the addition of the Student Building and Longwood.

Among the many changes that have taken place during the thirtyfour years of his service to our college we may note that the name has changed twice. The old State Female Normal School existed as such from 1884 to 1914 when the Virginia Legislature changed it to State Normal School for women. In 1936 the privilege of conferring degrees was granted, and in 1924 it became the present State Teachers College. In 1934 the college ceelbrated its fiftieth anniversary —thirty-two of these years, our college was under the guidance of Dr. Jarman. The power of conferring the B. A. degree was given to the college in 1935.

The facts that the college is an

Farmville Defeats William and Mary In Spirited Game

S. T. C. Will Meet Sweet Briar Friday

With a final score of 26-18, the Farmville S. T. C. girls were victorious over the William and Mary basketball team Feb. 15, at 7:30 in the S. T. C. gymnasium. This was the first time since 1933 that S. T. C. has won over William and Mary.

There was good teamwork and hard playing on the part of both teams. The pass-work and speed exhibited by the players were spectacular. The girls kept their pep and spirit throughout the whole game because of the enthusiasm and constant encouragement from the spectators.

The line-up was as follows:

Farmville	W. & M.
R. F.—Hudgins	Horn

Referee: Miss Dabney
Umpire: Miss Young
Scorers: Fairchild, B. Mann
Time-keepers: Cummings, E. Mann

The team has another game scheduled here for Friday afternoon, February 21, at 3:30 P. M. with Sweet Briar College. Last year S. T. C. defeated the Sweet Briar team. The entire student body will be expected to be present Friday, and help the S. T. C. team make more certain its prospect for an undefeated team.

Program Planned For Founders Day

The Founder's Day Committee with Mr. M. B. Coyner as chairman, has announced the holiday program, featuring Ex-Governor Trinkle and Dr. R. H. Tucker of Washington and Lee University as speakers. Mr. Trinkle is now chairman of the State Board of Education of Virginia.

An outline of the program is: Friday, March 6, 8:00 p. m. in the S. T. C. gymnasium, basketball, Harrisonburg S. T. C. vs. Farmville S. T. C.; Saturday morning, March 7, 11:00 a. m., dance recital by the natural dancing classes and exercises in the auditorium; 1:00 p. m., alumnae luncheon at Longwood; 3:15 p. m., swimming meet; 6:00 p. m., banquet with speeches by Mr. Trinkle and Dr. Tucker; 10:00 p. m., alumnae dance.

Original Dances Given Show Great Talent

On Friday night, February 21, at 8:00 P. M., there will be a program of dances given in the auditorium of S. T. C. by Mrs. Fitzpatrick's natural dancing classes. Each dance is entirely original, and the program promises to be an exceptional one, since the girls have given both their time and energy to each dance, not only since Christmas, but for some time before. The practices have been ably directed by Mrs. Louise R. Fitzpatrick, who has received the cooperation of each girl. The town people as well as the Student Body are cordially invited to come out Friday evening for a delightful entertainment of natural dancing.

A program of the dances follows:

Dr. J. L. Jarman

Receives commendation for lengthy service.

Jarman Receives State-Wide Praise

On this, the thirty-fourth anniversary of Dr. J. L. Jarman as President of the State Teachers College at Farmville, the State Board of Education joins the faculty and students of the college in congratulating him on his distinguished and unselfish service to the state.

As President of the only state-supported institution of higher learning for women he encouraged the establishment of other state institutions for the education of women, and as a member of the State Board of Education at a time when the public expressed little interest in the support of public education he was always among those who sought to promote the welfare of the State through the improvement of the public schools.

The commanding position which the college occupies in the life of the state is due in large measure to his gracious manner, his fine spirit of cooperation, and his state-

Y.W.C.A. and Council Stage Circus Scene

Saturday night's Sing was put on by the Y. W. C. A. and the Student Council. The theme was a circus scene featuring the future of various members of these organizations. The scene was introduced by Elizabeth Huse, Circus Barker, followed by Dot Deans' five-piece band, playing "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight". Aggie Crockett and Libby Morris, matrons in an orphanage, entered nosily with their brood of many orphans. Featured in the "free-ring" circus stunts were: "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" Winnie Frances Eubank; Madame Duflop, Fan Dancer, Toot Walton; grand entrance of Mrs. Gotrocks, Julia Ann Waldo, followed by Louise Gathright, recently from Paris, Lucy Potter as lion-tamer easily conquered the ferocious lion (Liz Shiplett in disguise); the high-diver, Martha Hamlet, with her daring performance, was indeed a sensation; the tight rope walker, Caroline Upshur, really thrilled every circus-goer, and the delighted orphans left reluctantly, at the insistence of the impatient matrons.

The Student Body wishes to extend its sympathy to Roberta Haskins in her recent bereavement.

Prominent Athletes Bid to Membership

Required Activities Passed by Six Successfully

The Monogram Club has issued bids to several girls who have completed the required activities sucessfully and have the required number of points for admission into the club. Those girls receiving bids are: Edna Bolick, Mary Bowles, Inez Chappel, Ruth Phelps Lellan Sanford and Louise Gathright.

Initiation will take place Wednesday night, February 19, at 7:00 o'clock.

Students Entertained at Informal Supper

Miss Mary White Cox entertained with a plate supper in the Student Building lounge on Tuesday evening at 5:30. The girls from the following counties and cities were invited:

Roanoke, Botetourt, Craig, Alleghany, Rockbridge, Lexington, Bath, Highland, Augusta, Nelson, Amherst, Bedford, Lancaster, Northumberland, and King George.

The faculty members who were invited were: Miss Mary Clay Hiner, Miss Grace Moran, Miss Leola Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Coyner, and Mr. R. H. French.

Hazel Smith, Elizabeth Huse, Bonnie Lane, and Dorothy Buckland served the guests.

During the evening Mary Elizabeth Stone rendered several piano selections, and Elizabeth Sieber entertained with a violin solo.

Why Sororities at S. T. C.

Granting that all society is satisfied; granting that in any group, from the smallest on the proverbial desert island to the student body of the largest university, there will always be divisions due to differences in the personalities of which it is composed, granting that a real democracy is an ideal, not an attainable reality—still we ask why is it necessary or desirable in a State college that trains young women to teach in the public schools of our democracy to create artificial lines and barriers, to foster snubbery, to undermine all democratic spirit, by having social sororities? With no malice or jealousy in our hearts but only honest, well-meaning curiosity to find the answer to a real problem, we ask what thing of value sororities contribute to S. T. C. that outweighs the heartaches and dissatisfaction, the cruelty and friction they breed? Laying aside pretense and sham, laying aside the masque we have placed on our Alma Mater—the masque that pretends S. T. C. is a Vassar or Smith—we realize that our girls are average people from average homes that make up the very foundations of our nation, girls in college to train for a wonderful work, not Miss Astor or Vanderbilt who goes to finishing school. Why pretend to be something we are not when what we are is really quite good enough?

With an ardent wish to make S. T. C. the lovely place it could be, we laud scholarship and sports, school spirit and service, character and ambition and ask you to be intellectually honest and consider if they are not higher than a pun and a combination of Greek letters. We challenge you to answer—what justifies sororities at S. T. C.?

In Virginia, at the present time, there are no institutions where negroes may receive professional training or do graduate work. For this training, they must go outside the state and secure it at their own expense. When large appropriations are being made by the state legislature for the education of its white citizens, it hardly seems fair that no provisions are made for state-supported negro colleges where graduate work may be done, and no appropriations made for the negroes' professional education. While there is a negro college at Petersburg, this does not meet these higher education needs.

When we are striving so hard to establish a better understanding between the races,, it would seem extremely near-sighted to so completely ignore the legitimate claims of negroes. Do they not pay taxes? Let Virginia follow the lead of some of her sister states, namely, Maryland and West Virginia, and make appropriations whereby those negrooes who desire it, ,and are qualified, may receive state aid in securing professional training and doing graduate work.

Care of Books

It is hard to believe that anyone so heartless, so inconsiderate of others, so set on her own again, as to absolutely mutilate a book belonging to the library, would call herself a student.

Books are written to be read and enjoyed by all. And yet, some people regard them with no feeling at all. Are they meant to be cut up thus destroying the sources of reading material? Of course not! We rather think they are put in the library for the common use and good of all. It seems that anyone using a library book could and would remember this. Books taken from the library are merely borrowed property. It is up to everyone who uses a library book to see that it is returned in just as good condition as when it was taken out.

Gold Versus Soul

The love of gold, the craving for wealth has not lain quiet for ages in the human heart, waiting for the twentieth century to call it into being. It is keener now than it has ever been, but it is no ranker in its growth and expression.

Great waves of freedom, struggles for religious thought and principles, great births of national life, great discoveries, great passions, and great wrongs,—these things have swayed the world, wrecking and saving the souls of men without regard for money. Great qualities, too, have left their impress upon the human race and have endowed it for all the years to come.

Mohammed, who prayed that he might be found among the poor on the Judgment Day, took some pains to insure its being answered. Yet of what worth is poverty? The jewels in the toad's head are as glittering as adversity is sweet.

For our own sake, no less than for the world's sake, we must show that we coin money in no base spirit, that we cherish it with no base passion. The angel who looked too long at heaven's golden pavement was flung into Torment.

War Still?

The European nations, it seems, have taken as their slogan "Only in strength lies peace." George Lambert stated in the House of Commons Saturday that "Europe today was one vast arsenal." It has been reported that in no less than seven leading nations of Europe the chief problem before the government was the question of "strengthening defense forces." Those nations are Great Britain, France, Russia, Germany, Belgium, Spain and Iitaly.

In spite of their successes in the East African campaign the Italians are forced to admit that the Ethiopians still have upward of 250,000 men under arms.

Reports from Peiping state that a great many of the women and children of the wealthier classes are leaving Manchurian cities as a result of rising alarm over the possibility of Russo-Japanese hostilities.

These are some evidences of belligerence among civilized nations. Must peace lie in strength alone?

Alumnae News

V. P. I., the attraction for the week, seems not to have drawn some of our alumnae, who returned to their Alma Mater for a few days.

Margaret Hix of Wise, Virginia, an outstanding member of the class of '33 was a guest of the college for the week-end. She is teaching in Appalachia, Va.

Katherine Walton, an honor graduate of '35, who is teaching in Virginia, spent a few days with her sister here.

Elizabeth Kelly, who teaches in Covington, visited her sister, Lloyd this week-end. She was graduated in '34, and lives at Big Stone Gap, Va.

Mrs. Elizabeth Malcome Durham, who was graduated from here, in 1917 as Elizabeth Malcome, has held since her graduation, many important positions on the Ledger of Philadelphia, The World Teller of New York, and other noted newspapers. Besides being a journalist, Mrs. Durham is a poet of no little note, having won the Southern prize given by Mrs. Craig Barrow of Savannah, Georgia, in the Southern contest. The following poem is representative of Mrs. Durham's work as a poet:

Farewell Gesture of a Society Editor

Here is this cubby-hole, littered with paper,
I've watched the old world at its comical capers;
I've talked on the 'phone to the socially prominent,
The weak-voiced sisters, the stern and the dominant,
The poor-but-grand and the rich-and-lordly,
And elegant ones who conversed quite boredly;
I've cheered my soul with over-much reading
And begged for pictures in tones most pleading.
Times have been when I've given them blessing
Because they were kind beyond all confessing,
As one at a horse show sees gallant steeds prancing
So I have observed Society, dancing,
Made notes on flowers, and persons, and dresses,
And left unprinted quite obvious caresses.
I have smiled at their airs and ignored their passions
And shrugged my shoulders, "So this is Fashion!"
And this is the end: I leave tomorrow;
I shall write a book to drown my sorrow!
The local chapter of the Farmville Alumnae Association will have a business meeting Thursday, February 20, in the Student Lounge, from 4:00 to 5:00 p. m. The main purpose of the meeting is to plan the chapter's part in the Founders Day program. Following the business meeting, the social committee will serve tea.

All non-graduates as well as graduates are invited.

The Teacher

Leslie Pinckney Hill

Lord, who am I to teach the way
To little children day by day,
So prone myself to go astray?

I teach them Knowledge, but I know
How faint they flicker and how low
The candles of my knowledge glow.

I teach them Power to will and do,
But only now to learn anew
My own great weakness through and through.

I teach them Love for all mankind
And all God's creatures, but I find
My love comes lagging far behind.

Lord, if their guide I still must be,
Oh, let the little children see
The teacher leaning hard on Thee

"So, you've been to college, eh?"
"Yeah."
"How high can you count?"
"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, jack, queen, king."

Intercollegiate News

Northwestern chemistry students are participating in "Black Art"; they are learning how to change water to wine wine to water, and water to milk.

Petitioning their Board of Trustees "that compulsory religious services do not accomplish their primary purpose," Trinity students are trying to abolish required chapel attendance.

Till, of The Breeze, Harrisonburg, says "Coffee isn't the only thing that's fresh when dated.

After a six year survey Dr. Ray Erwin, Professor of Sociology, a New York University, says: "You may think you'd like to marry money, but the chances are that when you come to a decision you won't much care." Of 321 young men and 321 young women interviewed, 93 percent of the men and 82 percent of the women declared that economic status was a small concern when it came to selecting a mate.

According to the K. C. Star: "Leap year will be just like any other year for a woman to look for a man she likes well enough to marry. In most cases, however, the woman will not "pop the question." That will always be the man's prerogative.

If we are to believe College Topics, there's been lost at the U. of Va. "a pianist as a radio accompanist." Maybe someone didn't like her program.

It might even be interesting to some to know that Hal Kemp is the only orchestra leader known to have insulted King Edward VIII but that was way back when he was only the Prince of Wales. It seems that in England there is a custom that the orchestra continues to play as long as a member of the royalty is on the floor. Hal thought the Prince was leaving. P. S.—They later made up and the prince actually played the drums for Hal on one occasion.

A coroner is an official that decides whether or not a person is killed by an inevitable force or murdered. He exames the body after each death.

Rotunda Reverberations

Who is the cute girl who gets three letters from Hampden-Sydney but only one means anything to her?

Our baby class isn't doing so badly judging from the freshman production. We're proud of you.—Keep it up.

What three girls are campaigning for a certain Kappa Sig? Whoever they are, we're all for it.

The very obvious lack of riding breeches this week-end was quite a relief after such a large dose last week-end.

Did someone say S. T. C. girls could always eat candy? We'll take a look at their faces after Valentine's Day—too much of a good thing is just too bad.

This may not be so sudden but growing interest in basketball for the girls is most obvious, but we do believe in cooperation with Hampden-Sydney.

We agree with Miss Taliaferro—Robbie can't meet you and you won't get any cocoanut pie if you don't tell mother whose child you are.

It seems that Betty Fagg "wants to be alone" in the dining hall.

Two seniors must have lost their "Emily Post'" last week-end while we had the visitors in the dining room.

Who is the junior who, after she was kicked sympathized with the other girl, because she knew her kick was coming?

Poetry

February Birthdays

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime;
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of Time"

—Longfellow.

In the month of February two great men of our country, Washington and Lincoln, were born. These two have left such deep and clear "Footprints on the sands of Time" that they inspire our lives as well as our poetry, of today and yesterday.

WASHINGTON

Where may the wearied eye repose
When gazing on the great,
Where neither guilty glory glows
Nor despicable state?
Yes,—one, the First, the Last, the best,
The Cincinnatus of the West,
Whom envy dared not hate,
Bequeathed the name of Washington
To make men blush there was but one.

—Lord Byron

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Vain is Empire"s mad temptation!
Not for him an earthly crown!
He whose sword hath freed a nation
Strikes the offered scepter down.
See the throneless Conqueror seated,
Ruler by a people's choice;
See the Patriots task completed;
Hear the Father's dying voice!

Father! We, whose ears have tingled
With the discord-notes of shame
We, whose sires their blood have mingled
In the battle's thunder-flame,—
Gathering, while this holy morning
Lights the land from sea to sea,
Hear thy counsel, heed thy morning;
Trust us, where we honor three.

—Oliver Wendell Holmes

WASHINGTON'S MAXIMS

Think before you speak.
Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of anyone.
Labor to keep alive in your heart that little spark of celestial fire called conscience.

LINCOLN,, THE MAN OF THE PEOPLE

He held his place—
Held the long purpose like a growing tree—
Held on through blame and faltered not at praise
And when he fell in whirlwind, he went down
As when a lordy cedar, green with boughs
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills, ,
And leaves a lonesome place in the sky.

—Edwin Markham.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

This man whose homely face you look upon,
Was one of nature's masterful, great men;
Born with strong arms, that unfought battles won;
Direct of speech, and sunning with the pen.
Chosen for large designs, he had the art
Of winning with his humor, and he went
Straight to his mark, which was the human heart;
Wise, too, for what he could not break, he bent!

—Richard Stoddard

WORDS OF LINCOLN

I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true.
Learn the laws and obey them.
The face of an old friend is like a ray of sunshine through dark and gloomy clouds.
I am nothing, but truth is everything.

"Judge", said the funny prisoner, "give me a sentence with the word freedom in it."

SOCIETY

Dances Attract Many

Since sleigh-riding has had to cease, and old man sun has proceeded to "warm up the land" S. T. C. girls change from riding habits to dresses and from sleigh-riding on Buffalo Hill to dancing at V. P. I.

Those who attended the Mid-winters at V. P. I. are:

Doris Adkins, Dorothy Adkins, Frances Dickinson, Adelaide Dresser, Virginia Doughty, Grace Eubank, Gladys Hendrickson, Jess Holland, Mary Harper, Jane Holland, Anne Johnson, Ruth Montgomery, Katherine Nelson, Livian Powell, Mary Lee Powell, Helen Fern Perdue, Nancy Pobst, Anthelia Robinette, Elizabeth Smith, Casell Schools, Virginia Tilman, Marjorie Wicks, Peggy Young, and Susan Lane.

A great number of girls spent the week-end at home.

To Richmond: Virginia Baker, Kathryn Cox, Eleanor Dodson, Mary Denny, Marion Hansborough Evelyn Montgomery, Lucile Moseley, Jane Main, Ruth Sears, Clara Nottingham, Elizabeth Pinnell, Mary Jane Pendleton, Tac Waters, Jean Willis, Martha Nottingham.

To Other Places: Mary R. Black, Casy Boswell, Annie Leigh Bailey, Alice Collins, Audrey Clements, Virginia Coe, Mary Emily Dunton, Katheryn Fitzgerald, Mary Harvey, Claudia Harper, Frances Irving, Deane Jones, Ruth James, Margaret Long, Sue Mallory, Tapelle Pruden, Buck Pleasants, Elizabeth Rawlings, Kathleen Sawyer, Elkanah Simpson, Deane Saunders, Rose Somers, Elizabeth Silker, Mary Lynn Thomas, Zaida Thomas, Elizabeth Tyree, Marion H. Umberger and Catherine Waite.

Reception

A reception for the William and Mary basket-ball girls was given by the A. A. Council in the Y. W. C. A. lounge after the game Saturday night. Tea and Longwood buns were served.

Mary Bowles and Mary Lib Slater were in charge of the entertainment.

Miss Iler Honored

The Pi Kappa Sigma sorority room was filled with the Valentine spirit on Thursday evening, February 14, when Miss Iler was entertained with a birthday party. The Valentine color scheme was carried out, decorations being in red and white. Miss Iler was presented with a birthday cake decorated with valentines. Each person received a favor—a valentine on which was written an original verse.

Miss Grace Moran was a guest.

Cake, coffee and mints were served.

Valentine Party

The Alpha Sigma Tau sorority entertained its members with a valentine party on Thursday evening, February 14. The color scheme was red and white. Games were played and refreshments—coffee, sandwiches, potato chips, candy, peanuts and mints were served.

All those having birthdays in January and February were presented with a cake and gifts.

A Connatary

We recommend Dr. John Garland Pollard's "A Connatary" to the lover of humor. Below are excerpts from the third edition.

Boy—Noise with dirt on it.

Cannibal—One who loves his fellow man.

Causes for divorce—Matrimony and alimony.

Classical Music—Music you can't whistle and wouldn't if you could.

College bred—A four-year loaf made with father's dough.

Coat of Arms—A shroud for the family skeleton.

Puppylove—The beginning of a dog's life.

Pedestrian—Man who has two cars, a wife, and a daughter.

Originality—Undetected imitation.

Monologue—An argument between a man and his wife.

Lie—An abomination to the Lord, but a very present help in time of trouble.

Joan of Arc—Noah's wife.

Epistle—Apostle's wife.

Gossiping—A keen sense of rumor.

Genealogy—Tracing yourself back to people better than you are.

Eskimos—God's frozen people.

Echo—The only thing that ever cheated a woman out of the last word.

Dirt—Mud with the water squeezed out.

Detour—The roughest distance between two points.

Depth—Height turned upside down.

Steam—Water gone crazy with the heat.

Saxophone—An ill wind that nobody blows good.

Relatives—Inherited critics.

P. S.—The importance of a woman's letter.

Profanity—A blank check on a bankrupt vocabulary.

Platinum Blonde—One who dyed by her own hand.

David Frankfurtur, a nervous, hollow-eyed young Jew born in Yugoslavia took a train from Berne last week to the Swiss winter sports resort of Davos. He found his way to the home of Dr. Wilhelm Gustoff physicist at the Davos observatory. When Gustoff rose to greet him, Frankfurtur sent five bullets through his body. Gustoff died instantly, Frankfurtur then walked across the park and quietly surrendered himself to the Swiss police.

Fashion Suits You Or Else

"Oh, wind! If winter comes can spring be far behind?" And stylists are all prepared to give Milady the chic and dash that this season requires of her outfit.

Milady constantly denounces the uncomfortable suits that men have to wear but, nevertheless she is turning definitely toward the mannish in her suits this spring. Severe coats with bi-swing or form-fitting backs, few buttons, and wide lapels predominate. Her skirt will be straight with a small slit or a slight flare. To relieve the severity she will wear a boutonniere to match her gloves and bag.

Even materials are the sort once limited to Bond Street. Chalk, herring bone, and pin stripes, and tweeds will be on parade this season.

To offset the plainness of her suit she goes to the extreme in completely feminine blouses. Frilled collars with shirred fronts made of dotted swiss, batiste, or even silks and satins peek saucily above masculine jackets. If Milady prefers a printed silk suit, she still cannot escape masculinity. Fluffy blouses are particularly effective with this type.

If Milady does prefer to keep her femininity, she goes to the extreme in this direction also. Dressy clothes show more ruffles, plaits and tucks. Flowered prints are often favored.

White and gray cottons are taking the southern beaches by storm. Silk jackets are popular with these dresses.

Hats are even wider brimmed than last year, and crowns are conspicuously absent.

In the Easter Parade Madam's hat will either be a jaunty fedora with veils, feathers, or starched organdy for her dressy outfit. The milliners have invaded old court styles for hats of the Elizabethan age which made Milady's forehead once more outstanding.

Shoes show comfortable walking heels and are made of fabrics. Often they are trimmed with buckles and bows.

Classes Will Compete Soon In Annual Swimming Meet

The swimming meet is scheduled to take place Wednesday, February 26 at 8:00 p. m. promptly.

Students may enter in three distinct classes—the beginners, the intermediate, or the advanced class.

Anyone wishing to enter may see the manager of swimming in your class, or Louise Walmsley. The class managers are: Senior, Lelia Sanford; Junior, Frances Hudgins; Sophomore, Helen Fern Perdue; Freshman, Sidney Yonce.

Intra-Mural Basketball Begins

The first basketball class game will be played Monday afternoon, February 24.

The class games will be conducted in the form of a tournament. Each class will play every other class, so class teams be sure and have your ten required practices by Monday.

The Freshman class will be represented by three teams due to the exceptionally large squad. Each Freshman team will play one of the upperclass teams.

A schedule will be placed on the A. A. bulletin board, giving time and date of each game.

ter, and Mary Frances Simpson, who are responsible for the staging of the production must be congratulated particularly on this scene. The outstanding blue and silver color theme and effective lighting created the atmosphere, while Hebe Wilkins, the character of M. Beaucaire, and Charlotte Minton as hostess, supplied true local color.

Stunning models endeavored to convince Suza that this was the place in which she could receive her "money's worth." Jane Burke appeared dashing in a riding habit. The following mannequins modeled afternoon dresses: Jane Saunders, Sue Adams, Alpha Lee Garnett, Sarah Button, Rebecca Williams, and Elsie Dodd. In evening gowns were Peggy Young, Nancy Sellman, Ruth James, Louise Anthony, Margaret Stollard, and Pattie Bounds. Seated around the fashion show were patronesses, Suza, Annabelle, and Mitzi, friend of Annabelle's. A tapping chorus featured the floorshow, led by Dot Lewis. It included: Army Butterwor, Ann Dugger, Lucy Baskerville, Boo Speak, Henrietta Ivers, and Dot Lewis. Annabelle, under the spell of lovely gowns, kept continually sweeping poor Suza, and the finances off her feet, she protesting all the while. Regardless of the fact that Jean Taylor and Bessie Hart Powell thought they were "Lovely to Look At", Suza says, "Cheap Stuff."

Between acts Louise Chandler sang the ever popular "Truckin'."

In a Gypsy Tea Room in Madrid, Jane Branch, the fortune-teller, stirred up a romance for Annabelle from the leaves of her tea-cup. Carlos, Ann Hardy, lost no time at all in tunefully declaring his love for Annabelle. "The Beautiful Lady in Blue." While Dot Lewis gave her version of "In a Little Gypsy Tea Room," two flower venders, Elizabeth Rawlings and Tee Pate, interested Suza in a large pink rose. A Spanish chorus composed of Frances Taylor, Bessie Hart Powell, Dot Lewis, Gwen Bell, Marguerite Blackwell, Sidney Yonce, Cornelia Penn, and Beverley Sexton gave a tambourine dance. The fortune teller reiterated her prophecy that Annabelle's romance was at hand. Carlos seemed quite sure of it.

Between Acts III and IV Frances Steed became the laudable "Melancholy Baby" in a fashion all her own.

Annabelle, who had become quite tired of American night clubs found the continental air of Monte Carlo with Carlos doing strange things to her heart-strings. The hero, with that persuasive tune, "It's So Nice Seeing You Again", practically convinced her of certain facts.

With Betty Fagg as Ethel Waters and her Harlem chorus of rhythm-makers (Katherine Cox, Eliza Aldrich, Casell Schools, Kitty Morrison to found that shining Harlem highlight right beneath the stars of Monte Carlo. "Underneath the Harlem Moon" and "Weather Man" by Betty Fagg added just the right spice to the floor show.

Would that there were a word to fittingly describe Suza's musical account of "They Met One Night in Monte Carlo". In a "sweet girl graduate" dress, the old dear accomplished not a few striking poses, and notes foreign to any particular key.

Some one of these days, Gwen Bell will tap her way to well-deserved fame. In the role of Eleanor Powell, she thrilled her audience again and again with her irresistible smile and flying feet. The Eton Boys, Jean Taylor, Frankie Bryan, and Nan Throckmorton, well supported the tap dance by singing "Living in a Great Big Way." Nancy Sellman and Dot Lewis, costumed in blue and gold evening gowns, respectively, added a touch of harmony in a smooth European dance.

Carlos must have found a permanent position in the heart of his sweet heart for suddenly "If I Should Lose You" became his theme song.

Eliza Aldrich, between acts, informed all that "Lulu's Back in Town." With Eliza's certain ability, "Dinah" 'deceloped a brand-new personality. Bessie Hart Powell (and everyone else) wondered "Why Can't This Night Go On Forever."

In a round of excitement, the tourists visited the harem of the Sultan of Persia. With no little anticipation, Annabelle had feared for Carlos, but she was hastily reassured when Carlos sang to her "I Only Have Eyes for You".

Amid the sighs from the harem —and Suza—the rotund Sultan, Em Easley, strolled in sedately, hands clasped across his broad expanse.

After brilliant tumbling antics byp Army Butterworth and Hebe Wilkins, Annabelle was terrified to learn that Suza's romance with the sultan was in full swing and that Persia was practically under the rule of a new sultaness.

The "Dance of the Black Widows" was presented for the pleasure of the Pasha and his guests. Suza, the sage, believed, "It is better to have loved a short man than never to have loved at all" as the travelers completed their journey without her.

A passenger plane, homeward bound, formed the scene for Act V. Frances Steed and Julia Raney began entertainment by harmonizing on "Where Am I?"

In answer, Ann Dugger, the perfect Uncle Sam, donned her top hat of red, white and blue, and tapped a spirited number for the homeward journey. An irritable gentleman passenger, Kitty Roberts, attempted in vain, to explain to one of the sultan's divorcees, the fundamental principles of a pair of spectacles. Miriam Picklin, as an ol dmaid, read "True Confessions" and reminisced too loudly. Jenny Carroll proved to be a most charming young man. As a final form of enjoyment, Clara Nottingham, the airplane hostess, introduced once more the popular Ethel Waters—Betty Fagg! To the tune of "Flying High", the pilot plotted his course to the good old States and happy landings for Annabelle and Carlos.

An original song, written and played by Virginia Ritchie, and sung by Dot Lewis was one of the more delightful surprises of the freshman production.

Rapid Progress Under Present Leadership

"A" class member of the American Association of Teachers Colleges, is ranked as a standard teachers college, is an accredited member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools is all needed for one to recognize what Dr. Jarman's services have meant for putting the college where it is today.

In an editorial published in the News Leader in 1927, we find these words said of him: "Dr. Jarman knows how to be a college president without seeming to be. He never struts, never preaches, never becomes pedantic. In his dealings with the 700 girls who idealize him, he is always friendly and always natural, without palaver, condescension or 'side'. He talks to them at assembly as a man addressing the equals of his own family, and not as a reincarnated pontifex maximus." For these reasons and others Dr. Jarman is loved and esteemed by his students, alumnae and friends.

In view of this, is is clearly understood why the citizens of Farmville, the students and alumnae of S. T. C. pleaded so earnestly in 1930 that he not accept office of Superintendent of Public Instruction offered to him by Ex-Governor Pollard. However they agreed with Dr. Pollard when he said: "After surveying the whole field of possible appointees, I consider myself fortunate in having secured the services of Dr. Jarman. Of all the possble appointees, I know of no man who could more certainly secure the hearty cooperation of all interested in public education. He has been an outstanding leader in all movements for the advancement of education."

Immediately upon his appointment, he was bombarded with letters and telegrams from friends everywhere pleading that he withdraw his acceptance. Trips were made to Richmond and protests in various forms reached the Governor urging him to release Dr. Jarman that he might continue his work as president of our college. There was great rejoicing among the students of S. T. S., alumnae everywhere and by the town of Farmville itself, when the message came that he had been released from his acceptance.

Someone in an editorial once said, "He is worth a hundred thousand dollars a year to Virginia in the influence he is exerting in the teaching profession today. Few things as fortunate as his coming to Farmville happened to the Commonwealth in the year of grace 1902."

Fortunate, too, are we as students in 1936 to have Dr. Jarman as our college president, as a source of inspiration from whence there is a challenge to all youths, as an ideal to us of the highest type of character, but more than this we are fortunate in having him as our sincere counselor and true friend.

MUSIC NOTES

The members of the orchestra are planning a program to be presented in chapel soon.

On Friday, February 21, the orchestra will give a program at Rice, at the regular League meeting.

Miss Purdom will attend the Music Educators National Conference in New York City the last week in March. This conference is to be held in the Metropolitan Opera House and many prominent musicians will be on the program.

Siberian Musician Returns to S. T. C.

which especially pleased students last year, were presented again. These folk and traditional songs are favorites among the young people of Siberia. "The Siberian Prisoner's Song" had as an accompaniment the clank of chains which added to the effectiveness of its impression and emotional appeal.

After the intermission, "Night", a selection from the opera "Demon" was given. This choral work by Rubenstein gave a picture of the mountains where the Cossacks spent a carefree life. A satire, the "Song of the Flea" closed this division of the program.

An additional attraction to the performance this year were the selections by the pianist, Isiah Seligman. Mr. Seligman is of international fame and pleased the audience with his piano solos.

The Final selections were gypsy songs. Among these were "Kalinka" and that great favorite, "Dark Eyes". Up to the present time, Russian gypsies still wander from village to village entertaining people with their songs. For this reason the gypsy songs were particularly characteristic of Russia.

Each member of the group is a soloist of unusual ability. In ensemble they attain a vocal blend that expresses the force of spirit and intensity of emotion which characterize the Siberian Singers. The artists responded to the hearty applause of the audience with several encores. Among these was the Russian conception of the story of "The Big Bad Wolf".

The beautiful voices of the singers and the artistic presentation of their program created a sensation. This brilliant performance will be remembered for the exquisite harmony and unique and characteristic music presented by the Siberian Singers.

Said the firefly to the lightning bug: "You glow your way and I'll glow mine."

St. Peter: "How did you get up here?"
Latest arrival: "Flu."

Orchesis Performs In Program of Dance

Mrs. Fitzpatrick Presents Group in Recital

A large audience enjoyed the recital presented by Orchesis and group on Friday, February 21, in the College Auditorium. This was the first program of its kind that has ever been given by the students of this school. The recital was given under the direction of Mrs. Louise R. Fitzpatrick who studied last summer under Doris Humphries and Charles Weidman at Bennington. Miss Humphries and Mr. Weidman are two of the most outstanding promoters of the modern dance trend. The dance composition group is to be complimented upon the perfection of its original dances, and the dancers upon their artistic interpretations.

One of the most effective dances was "Agitation," led by Crenshaw Jones. A strong feeling of the writhing emotion portrayed by the dancers could be sensed. The "Fire Ritual'", composed and danced by the Orchesis was an unusually fine interpretation of the ceaseless flickering motion of flames, rising and falling.

For all the dances, unique costumes and beautiful lighting effects aided in making the performance a memorable experience.

This recital was among the outstanding entertainments of the year's program.

Professors Discuss Education Trends

Alpha Phi Sigma Conducts Open Meet

The Alpha Phi Sigma held its first open meeting of the year last Wednesday evening. Speakers on the program were Dr. Walmsley and Mr. Holton.

Dr. Walmsley took as his topic, "Trends in the Virginia General Assembly" and in his own sparkling way described bills in the present legislature. His opinions, formulated after many years observation, of the functions of the assembly proved to be most interesting and educational.

"Modern Trends in Education" as taken by Mr. Holton was a timely topic. He broadly discussed the possibility of the new curricula that are becoming so important in the state. Other points in this opportune speech were the necessity of teaching children to think for themselves and to apply their already gained knowledge to everyday things. The emphasized points of application and self-thinking are invaluable to older people as well as the children who are being taught those various "trends."

Miss Mary White Cox Gives Buffet Supper for Students

The second of a series of dinners being given for the students of S. T. C. was given by Miss Mary White Cox this afternoon, Wednesday, February 26, at 5:30. Girls from the following counties were present: Wise, Washington, Russell, Buchanan, Tazewell, Smyth, Bland, Wythe, Grayson, Pulaski Montgomery, Giles, Patrick, Bristol, Franklin, Henry, Pittsylvania, Danville, Campbell, and Lynchburg.

The hosts and hostesses were: Miss Royal, Dr. and Mrs. Walmsley, Dr. and Mrs. Jeffers, Mr. French, Miss Moran, Miss Wheeler.

S. T. C. Basketeers Play in Maryland

Home Team to Meet Western Maryland at Westminister

The varsity basketball squad will leave here by special bus at eight o'clock on the morning of February the twenty-eighth for Western Maryland College at Westminister, which is about thirty miles outside of Baltimore, Maryland.

Following a basketball game at eight P. M., by the boys' basketball squad of Western Maryland, our team will play the girls of Western Maryland at nine o'clock.

The members of the team and Miss Iler will spend the night as guests of Western Maryland. Saturday will be spent either in Baltimore or Washington, where the girls will have an excellent opportunity to do some sight seeing. Early Sunday morning the team will start homeward after what we hope will be a happy and victorious trip.

Dr. Linus W. Kline Former S. T. C. Prof. Returns to Virginia

Dr. and Mrs. Linus Ward Kline, who were appointed by the trustees of Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, N. Y. as professors emeritus in June, 1935, have recently removed to Virginia and are now settled in their new hom. Memory Lane Farm, four miles from Charlottesville.

Dr. Kline was a member of the faculty of Farmville State Teachers' College from 1900 to 1902. Mrs. Kline the former Miss Fannie Littleton, was an alumna of Farmville as well as for some years a teacher here. Dr. Kline had for 15 years been head of the department of psychology at Skidmore, and Mrs. Kline had been an associate professor in the same department.

The college had executed by the well-known sculptor, Robert Davidson, an excellent life-size portrait bust of Dr. Kline, which was cast in bronze in Munich, Germany, and placed in the hall of the new Administration building last September.

Mardi Gras Carnival Spirit Is Evident In Festival Here

Gayety and revelry held sway amid bright lights, brilliantly colored costumes, and the music of the Hampden-Sydney Collegians, as the fourth annual Mardi Gras festival was celebrated in the Sttae Teachers College gymnasium on Tuesday night.

At the sound of the herald's trumpets the doors were flung wide and the members of the court with their escorts took their positions about the throne. To the strains of "Liebestraum" Queen Martha Nottingham gorgeously arrayed in silver and white Spanish costume, advanced to her place. Page Betty Fagg placed upon her head the flowing white lace mantilla which made her queen for the night, and she reigned with her court over nearly eight hundred pleasure-bent subjects.

After the coronation the queen and her court led the uniquely costumed revelers in the grand march for the judging of the costumes. The entrants remained masked during the judging. A Gibson Girl with wide ruffled hat, in the person of Louise Morgan was judged the prettiest costume. The most original costumes were Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy, worn by Mary Robeson and Norvell Montague. The most attractive couple were attired in patent-leather pirate costumes. The judges were Dr. Sydnor, Mrs. Mattie Leigh Walker, and Mrs. Armstrong Smith.

The height of the gay confusion was reached when a large hoop full of balloons which had been suspended from the ceiling was released upon the dancers. The popping of balloons kept pace with laughter and music as the ball drew to its close.

It is the consensus of opinion that the 1936 Mardi Gras festival was the most successful ever held here.

Mu Omega Tops List In Sorority Averages

In the quarterly check-up of averages for the various sororities as groups the Mu Omega sorority leads the list. The sorority averages for the fall quarter, 1935, are as follows: Mu Omega—1.931; Alpha Sigma Tau—1.770; Sigma Sigma Sigma—1.704; Pi Kappa Sigma—1.648; Gamma Theta—1.611; Alpha Sigma Alpha—1.337.

Elizabeth Walton Conducts Student Day Exercises Today

The devotional exercises in chapel were lead this morning by Elizabeth Walton, chairman of the Students Day chapel programs. Sylvia Somers rendered several delightful solo numbers, among which "Flower Song" by Faust was especially enjoyed.

"What is this life if, full of care,
We have no time to stand and stare?"—W. H. Davies

"And best of all along the way is friendship and mirth."

Local Alumnae Plan Founder's Day Tea

Before an open fire in the lounge, an important business session of the local alumnae chapter was held. Reports of executive and finance committees were heard and action taken in making contributions for the Jennie Masters Tabb Memorial fund and the Student Building fund. From the Prince Edward Loan fund committee of the chapter, it was reported that two girls were being aided by the chapter.

The president read the Founders Day program after which the chapter voted to have an informal general tea from four to five o'clock in the lounge. Special reunion teas had been planned in private homes by the general association. Mrs. Farrar accepted the responsibility of securing transportation for the guests to the luncheon at Longwood. Miss Louise Richardson, Miss Mary C. Hiner, and Miss Helen Draper were appointed to acts as a nominating committee for the annual election of officers in April.

Miss Jennie Masters Tabb Remembered as Administrator

When the papers carried over Virginia the news of the death of Miss Jennie Masters Tabb in June 1934, students of her Alma Mater, friends and educators experienced a sense of surprise and a feeling of irreparable loss that such a personage had passed on. Yet they knew that with her fortitude, so

"Miss Jennie" as she was affectmuch a part of her character that she went "unterrified into the gulf of death".

Miss Jennie Tabb had for thirty years been officially connected with the college—first as secretary to the President, then as Registrar. No one perhaps knew her better, her true worth to our college than Dr. Jarman, who said: "In her passing the college lost an efficient officer, and I have lost a loyal and devoted friend." Her contribution ranks second to that of the president in the marked growth of the college and the development of a spirit of loyalty and cooperation.

But her gift to the life and growth of the college was more than was demanded by her official position. She was the author of many of our college songs, notably our "Alma Mater". She was the author of numerous poems among which she left her slender volume entitled "For You" with the hope that it might bring joy and contentment to its reader.

tionately known to all, gave to the college a high quality of service. Efficient, painstaking in the very details of her work, but intolerant toward laziness and futility, clever and quick in mind, facile in tongue and pen she performed her duties remarkably well. She was capable of speaking own mind and did not hesitate to disagree with others and to give her reasons. Too bad for any student whom she found neglecting her opportunities, trying to get by with shaves, or on the other hand taking too many hours of work. She had an unusual sense of humor, a faculty for making any story interesting that made her an exceptional conversationalist. Her interest was not only with our college where she formed the connecting link between students, alumnae, and administration, but in her church where she was most active, and in her community developments to which she contributed her talent and financial aid.

Though we cannot go to the Registrar's office and hear her say in her characteristic voice, "What do you want?", we can see her above her portrait, given by the senior class of 1935 that almost speaks these words—Her indomitable spirit, her sympathy, loyalty and radiating influence we can feel all around us fused into a spi-

Farmville Defeats Sweet Briar Team

Honor Fraternity Announces Member

Alpha Kappa Gamma Elects Former Students

The Alpha Kappa Gamma honorary fraternity for leadership wishes to announce three new members who were elected last week. Amanda Gray, Ruth Gleaves and Josephine Gleaves have been chosen for their outstanding leadership and spirit of service and loyalty as evidenced by the active part which they took in college affairs in the past. Since their return to State Teachers College the same qualities have been apparent.

Amanda Gray, junior, received her cedificate from S. T. C. in 1926. Her two years in college were full for she was outstanding in several phases of school life. She was a member of the Argus Literary Society, and Le Circula Espanol; she belonged to both the Choral and the Glee Clubs; she was on the Freshman and Sophomore basketball teams; as a member of Student Standards Committee and the Freshman Commission she entered into the government of the school. In dramatics Amanda was and is especially active. Since she has been in college this year she has made a name for herself by her acting in the fall play. She also has one of the leading roles in the spring play.

Ruth Gleaves, who graduated from S. T. C. in 1914, was the president of the student body in 1913 and 1914. She was the treasurer of the junior class, secretary of the Argus Literary Society, and a member of the Student Standards Committee. She also participated in athletics as manager of the Track Team and a member of the Tennis Club.

Josephine Gleaves, a graduate of 1918, was president of the Sophomore class, Vice-president of the Junior class, Secretary of the Argus Literary Society and held many other offices in her years here. Josephine was one of the most outstanding girls in true friendly spirit that has ever attended S. T. C. She was very active in the field of athletics.

House Council Sing Stars Model Group At Work and Play

Saturday night, February 22, the House Council presented Sing. The theme was the activities of an ideal student group on a weekday night. Would that we all could behave in such a fashion!

The scene was laid in the Student Building lounge during the study hour. When the curtains were drawn, a number of girls were found sitting about in the lounge studying most intensively. At the gong of the ten o'clock bell books fell from the hands of every girl and they all ran to the piano to enjoy a few minutes' recreation before time for "lights out". Nancy Polst took her usual place at the keyboard and they all gathered 'round to sing. Just then Rebecca Carter came in looking for her little sister in the person of Betty Butterworth. When Betty was found she told the exciting story of the Three Bears and their trip to the A. B. C. Store in her inimitable way. Virginia Leanord was prevailed upon to sing two numbers: "Dinner for One Please James" and "I'm in the Mood for

Varsity Gains Victory In College Gym

On Friday afternoon, February 21, the S. T. C. varsity basketball squad added another victory to its list of triumps when it defeated the Sweet Briar team in the third game of the season, the final score being 23 to 15.

A large number of students attended the game and cheered the team on, led by Mary Lib Slater and Will Scott. The enthusiastic support thus rendered and the school spirit shown encouraged our basketeers. The game was exciting, with the score very close at the half, but Farmville's fighting spirit was outstanding. Both teams played well and displayed grand sportsmanship. Very few substitutions were made by the Farmville team.

The line-up was as follows:

Farmville

R. Forward	F. Hudgins
L. Forward	V. Carroll
J. Center	K. Ransone
S. Center	S. Eastman
R. Guard	L. Sanford
L. Guard	K. Roberts

Substitutes: S. Center, B. Butterworth; L. Guard, V. Smith.

Sweet Briar

R. Forward	Lockett
L. Forward	Judd

Emory And Henry Debates at S. T. C.

Bondurant, Pollard, Represent the Affirmative

Wednesday afternoon, February 26, from 2 to 3 o'clock in the Small auditorium, Emory and Henry College will hold a debate with our debate squad—affirmative, Agnes Bondurant and Margaret Pollard. The question is resolved: That Congress should have the right to override, by two-thirds majority vote all laws declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

This will be good experience for the squad since they will attend the South Atlantic Forensic Tournament, March 5, 6, and 7, at Winthrop College, South Carolina.

March 3, a dual debate will be held there between Farmville and Waynesburg College, Pa.

Members of the debate squad and Dr. Walmsley attended a debate at Hampden-Sydney, February 19, between Hampden-Sydney and Washington and Lee on the same question.

Pi Zeta Chapter of Beta Pi Presents Two New Members

Thursday night at the regular Beta Pi Theta meeting two new membesr, Jess Holland and Elsie McMillian, were received. According to the usual custom, these new members presented their papers in French before the society. Thus, the Pi Zeta Chapter of Beta Pi Theta greeted two new members.

George Washington

George Washington, general, statesman, and first president of the United States. was born in Westmoreland County, Virginit, on February 22, 1732. His father was Augustine Washington, and his mother was Mary Ball Washington.

Until the fall of 1747, George irregularly attended school, first with the local sexton, and later with a school master named Williams. His chief education, however, was received from practical men and outdoor occupations, not from books.

Washington's father died when he was eleven, which left him under the guardianship of his half-brother, Lawrence. The lad turned to surveying as a profession. In March he was assigned to cross the Blue Ridge Mountains, work his way up the valley of the Shenandoah and survey the vast Fairfax estates, whose boundaries had never been defined. So well did he do the work that Lord Fairfax procured for him an appointment as public surveyor, at which he worked for three years.

At the age of nineteen, George Washington was major in the Virginia Militia. In October 1753,, Gov. Dinwiddie appointed him to warn the French not to trespass upon the English territory. Shortly afterwards he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the single regiment which constituted Virginia's military force.

Through the death of his half-brother Lawrence's daughter,, Washington became owner of Mt. Vernon. Later he married Martha Custis, which added 5000 acres to the estate. Almost immediately after his marriage, he was elected one of the six Virginia delegates in the First Continental Congress.

In June of the following years, Washington was chosen commander-in-chief of the continental forces, and proved to be so capable that it led to his being unanimously elected as President of the United States. after the war was over.

After serving two terms, he returned to his Mt. Vernon estate,, against the wishes of the public, and in December, 1799, he died with an attack of acute laryngitis.

Up With the Times

We are all conscious of being members of various institutions, the home, the college, the church, but one of the most important is one that seems very far from us. This is the institution of the United States of America. We may bring it closer by reading. At the present time the majority of us are in the apprentice period of membership. We are studying the constitution that governs the group. It will do us very little good. however, to know the rules of the institution unless we know its work. How may we as citizens of the great institutions of the United States know the work of the group unless we keep up with the current events by reading the newspapers, news weeklies, etc.

The work of the government affects many of our lives. If a bill were passed to lower the salary of government employees, or to lower the price of the farm products, or to lower the tariff in order to let foreign articles come in many of us would have to leave college or readjust our lives. We should want to know about anything that affects our lives. We may do this by spending a few minutes with our daily newspapers.

We as students do not realize that as future teachers we will be leaders in the communities, and will have the responsibility of guiding the thoughts of hundreds of children placed in our hands. Our duty will be to train them to be good citizens. They cannot be good citizens unless they keep up with the news. We cannot teach them to keep up with the work of the government unless we do it ourselves. We should lay the foundations now for this part of our teaching.

Our study of current history should serve as a guide and incentive to further a wider reading study and inquiry. We should become aware of the fact of propaganda and learn to be on guard against it. We should make studies of newspapers, magazines, the radio, and the movies. We should learn not to remain neutral in the face of great issues but should, after having determined their positions by study and thought, enter the lists and participate in the conflicts of opinion. Above all we should acquire habits of reading which are really to be continuous and educative for years to come.

Congratulations

We wish to congratulate Mrs. Fitzpatrick and the Orchesis on the excellent performance which they presented before the student body Friday night. The originality of the compositions and the artistry with which they were executed made the recital one of the most interesting and enjoyable events of the college year.

The finished performance of the dancers showed long practice and close attention to technique which was appreciated by the large audience in attendance. We also wish to express admiration for and pleasure in the unusual costuming and the striking lighting effects which lent much to the beauty of the dances.

In other colleges, notably Sweet Briar, such recitals are an annual event eagerly anticipated by the students and faculty. It is our hope that the enthusiasm with which the student body received this, our first recital, will encourage the dance group to continue the work so well begun.

Marriage-license clerks complain that the girls aren't availing themselves of leap year. Perhaps they're waiting to make sure 1936 is constitutional.—Kansas City Star.

Senator Carter Glass probably wouldn't have minded the college professors' invasion of Washington if they hadn't brought their senior classes with them.—Life.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Editor,

The opportunity to proclaim publicly "what thing of value sororities contribute to S. T. C." is indeed welcome. In replying to the excellent editorial appearing in last week's Rotunda, we must make clear at the outset that the sororities at S. T. C. are not social sororities. They are fundamentally educational in nature. By the terms of agreement made between The National Pan-Hellenic Congress of Social Sororities and the Association of Educational Sororities, only Educational Sororities enter Teachers College field. The sororities on our campus are distinctly professional in character.

In the second place we cannot agree with the writer of the editorial that S. T. C. is masquerading—that our college pretends to be anything but what she is namely, the oldest teacher-training institution in Virginia, a member of the American Association of Teachers Colleges, ranged in a recent study as one of the twelve outstanding teachers colleges in the United States. At Farmville we hide our face behind no masque.

"There is a law that brings people together in groups. It acts like the law of gravity and regardless of what is done to divert it, it holds true. Thus we have the college fraternity." This force has brought people together since the world began and will continue long after S. T. C. is dust. This same force, this congeniality, an interest in common, serves as the reason for the formation of our honor societies in scholarship, leadership, etc. The efficiency policy of the present day requires every organization no matter what the type, to justify its survival on the basis of utility alone. The high ideal of the sorority today is a concentrated effort to prove of such value to the college that the college will frankly admit that it cannot get along without it. The mere fact that sororities have served at Farmville for forty years would seem that they have proved themselves a fundamental part of the institution.

Material contributions which sororities make are easily cited. Three of the chapters on campus maintain student scholarship loans the administration of which is entirely in the hands of our president. The establishment of libraries, hospital beds for crippled children, and local social service work may be added to the list.

We feel that sororities form a binding link between our Alma Mater and her alumnae and this connecting link stresses love and loyalty to the college first and foremost. This value alone offers one of the chief reasons why sororities are of prime value to our college.

In conclusion, the badge of the sorority with its combination of Greek letters, is, with the Education Sorority, a pledge to high endeavor in scholarship and sports, school spirit, and service, character and ambition. These standards and the significance of a pin are the same.

Dear Editor:

As a non-sorority girl, may I voice a few sentiments in regard to an editorial in your paper last week?

The writer of the editorial seemed to think that there is no school spirit at S. T. C.—that only snobbery, rivalry and malice between sorority girls and non-sorority girls exists. As a senior, and one who has an opportunity for four consecutive years to work in groups and lead groups composed of sorority and non-sorority girls, thus coming in contact with them from every angle, I have never found such to be true. In truth, the relationship has been unusually fine. I have had opportunity in talking to members of both groups to hear them express their attitudes toward the other and have never discovered the slightest feeling of bitterness. If such a feeling were so marked on our campus, would there be the spirit of cooperation and fellowship in our classes, our fraternity organizations and clubs that we now have?

Now whether there were sororities here or not, there would naturally be social groups and some who would be snobbish psychologically; both are to be expected.

It is true that sororities, or any orgainzation for that matter, if not properly guided can make themselves dominant on any campus—but never have sororities been in the forefront at S. T. C.

To me, and many others have expressed the same view, there is an unusually fine relationship and a most democratic spirit between our sorority and non-sorority girls. If the writer for one moment doubts this, may she have the opportunity to visit other colleges and universities and contrast the relationship.

Our Alma Mater is wearing no masque and along with the many other achievements of which she can take pride in and does take pride in is the splendid spirit of fellowship and cooperation among her students.

Rotunda Reverberations

We hear that the favorite song of a certain little brunette town freshman is "My Buddy".

Why is it our Maryland "yankee" hates little black dogs?

What rare attraction can there be for a certain freshman which makes it impossible for her to stay away from third floor Senior Building at night?

Though it is not the end of the month the "Bill" came Friday. What bout it "Tac"?

If you've noticed certain sad faces around this week-end it was just the fact that the H.-S. Basketball team was away. Cheer up, girls ,they'll soon come home.

Wonder why so many of the girls have decided to go Oxford Group? Do you suppose it could be the good looking male members?

We wonder who that brunette was who lost her way Saturday night after the dance getting to her room.

We wonder how a certain blond felt after seeing the sender of the telegrams and specials. Must be great!

Literary Column

Riches

One of the most inspiring and uplifting lectures heard on our campus for sometime was given by Miss Lula O. Andrews, Friday, February 15. Miss Andrews, who formerly taught English at S. T. C. is now head of the Extension work of the University of Virginia in Richmond.

The subject of Miss Andrews' address was "The Riches We May Find in Times of Depression." She confined her talk to the expression of these riches found in modern poetry. In order that those who were not fortunate enough to hear her lecture may yet enjoy some of the enrichment which she brought to our campus, there are painted below a few of her quotations which she called simply, "Riches".

"I m the heir of all the ages,
The beauty of the living earth,
The power of the golden sun."
—Abbie Farwell Brown

The Coin

"Into my heart's treasury
I slipped a coin
That time cannot take
Nor a thief purloin—
Oh, better than the minting
Of a gold-crowned king
Is the safe-kept memory
Of a lovely thing."
—Sara Teasdale

"Sell all you have for livelines."
—Sara Teasdale

"Strive not for gold, for greedy fools
Measure themselves by poor men never;
Their standard still beeing richer men.
Makes them poor ever.
Train up thy mind to feel content,
What matters then how low thy store?
What we enjoy, and not possess,
Makes rich or poor"
—William H. Davis.

"Infinite riches in a small room."
—Jane Addams

"One grows by becoming more."
—Zona Gale

"The fine arts are the source of real wealth."—John Erskine

The Cornfield

"The color has painted itself in my heart, I've fifty acres in my head."
—Harriet Monroe

"The things men desire—
Are transient as the leaf upon the hill—."—Paul Benjamin

"I have seen a valley with a blue mist blowing
And it has become imperishably mine."—Grace Noel Crowell

"The enchanted dogwood with its ivory trays."
—Richard La Gallienne

"And when all is over
I shall take with me dogwood and clover."—

"Words have color and wisdom."
—Rebecca McCann

"I wonder that God is so prodigal,
His moonlight was spilled in silver."—Pearl Bigelow Brown

" 'Tis friends alone who make us rich."—Edgar Guest

One of the freshmen here last term seems to have caught this mood, too, when she wrote the following poem.

Bits of Gold

When clouds have gathered o'er our lives
And friends have gone way,
When worries set in thick and fast,
We'll look back on today.
We'll cherish all these things we do,
We'll not forget a one;
The laughter, tears, and joys we've shared
The many hours of fun.
Will we forget our friendship, dear?
The plans we've made together;
The way we've always stuck it out
No matter what the weather?
No, never shall these memories go,
We hold them all too dear,
We'll cherish them like bits of gold
Which brighter gleam each year.

Daze at Shannon's

All the thrills of a lifetime packed into an hour may be experienced at the Mecca for Collegians. But, wait a minute, there are certain conditions or facts which you should understand before you flit away so much of your life in such a short time. First, you should have small, piercing eyes which can be enveloped in smoke and still gleam brightly. Second, you must have hardened eardrums which have become accustomed to the grinding, crashing roar of locomotives. Then, thirdly, you must be versatile enough to talk to the Cicero student, the "Hi, there, Cutie", the saxaphone player, or the pre-ministerial student.

This may sound exaggerated, but after a long, grinding school day it seems only a slight interruption. There is nothing unusual about it although some people might think so; for what could be better relaxation than a carefree, hilarious adventure into modern entertainment and society.

Desert Shannons? Why no, that's our pride and joy.

Class Games

With the class games beginning this week, we again find that certain determination in the eyes of so many students, and in order not to cause any hard feelings let us say, "May the best class win". Remember that there is a cup still in the Rotunda awaiting the color of the best class.

Swimming Meet

The swimming meet scheduled for tonight, Wednesday, will give the school a chance to find out just who our charming "mermaids" are and if we have just classes of the watery nymphs or schools of them. Maybe Neptune himself will be present. Why knows?

Five Mile Hike

Even with the cool weather and the Hampden-Sydney dances there were still some girls in the school that craved the "great out of doors". After all there's nothing like fresh air and long hikes to help keep that "school girl complexion" and those "slim hips".

Varsity Basket Ball

Who's been winning all the games between Farmville and her opponents? We have heard that our basket ball team has really been making itself known. So far, we stand undefeated, and here's hoping we continue to do so, but don't forget that Harrisonburg is yet to come.

The varsity basketball team seems to be "shooting high" and reaching the goals in a big way. Not only have the goal shooters or forwards been outstanding, but also the centers and guards. The entire varsity squad has done its part in making our basketball season a success, and its real success is due to its unselfish and tireless practice and to the experienced coaching of the coach, Miss Iler.

What, No Mail?

"Ouch! That was my foot", some indignant voice loudly exclaims. Then it is quite apparent that the rush for the postoffice is "on". Eagerly I move on, inch by inch, anxious to reach my box, yet fearing that it will be quite empty. Hours drag by. Others joining the line, and some more fortunate students are passing on their way to chapel, having already obtained their goal. Finally I reach the door, look hopefully toward the box and then disappointedly turn away. It does look as if the family would realize that I need a cloth to dust the box, even if they are too busy to write.

Bathing Suits Versus Snow

Have you ever heard of people wearing bathing suits in the snow? It seems that two Florida freshmen, who thought the snow on the cold college campus resembled the sandy, warm beaches of Florida to such a degree that they pranced out to play in the fifteen inch snow wearing bathing suits as their only garments. Can you feature a more unique yet ridiculous picture? To make matters more complicated the young ladies posed for several pictures with the greatest of ease, as if they were really enjoying some sandy beach in Florida.

I cannot wonder that a group of wide eyed students, some thoroughly disgusted and others chuckling with delight at the original thought, assembled by chance to observe the two Florida freshmen, who were so gleefully making themselves at home on the snowy grounds of Virginia.

Fashion Notes

Some of the ancient gaiety and color of the gay nineties is being reflected in women's hose for this spring.

Orange and apricot are very popular shades with the well dressed lady. Copper tones with outfits of navy blue, dark green and rust will also be worn a great deal.

But wait—these are not the only popular shades. There is a new grey which can be worn with a wine suit and wine shoes provided all the other necessary accessories harmonize.

Heavy ribbed silk or lisle hose in forceful colors such as green or blue are being used to some extent for sports wear. For the lady stepping out at night, shades of apricot and peach are just the thing!

Here's some extra good news for those who usually have hard luck with their hose. A crepe twist stocking which is sheerer and duller and also resistant to snags and runs is now being manufactured by many concerns.

This is the latest in hose, girls, now do your part and catch those racing socks.

rit that can never die.

Though she is with us no more, her life of unselfished service is a challenge to us all of whom she leaves this message:

For You

There's no great honor I can win
For you
No mighty work I can begin
For you
No stirring drama can I write,
No canvas limn with colors bright,
Nor wondrous melody indite
For you
But I can live a life that's strong,
For you
Can cherish right and shun all wrong
For you,
And as each little task is done
One ended and the next begun
I live each day from sun to sun,
For you.

The Song of the Ward

It is nearing the dawn, and across the dully sky
Comes a streak of the glow that will herald the morn.
My wards are yet him; the shadows are deep,
And the beds 'gainst the wall are more ghost-like than real.

Even now, 'tho, the sky getting brighter the while,
Comes a stir from the sleepers, a mumble, a sigh.
Soon my calm shall be broken,—a step in the hall—
And I'll know it is time to begin for the day.

The nurse, starched and white, with a black sweater on,
Will soon switch on the light, rouse each slumbering girl,
Put a slender glass rod in each slow, sleepy mouth,
And begin to count pulses and time by her watch.

"Now get ready for breakfast!"—Each face will be washed,
Each tousled head combed, and each cough-urge suppressed.
AOne by one and each girl will prop up her head
And wait for her breakfast to come in its turn.

Some will shout when they see solid food on their tray,
Others—temperatures high — will wail, "Liquids again!"
Thus the day will be started; each patient will make
A step toward recovery, for none are quite ill.

Through the day will come nose drops, long swab sticks and pills,
And peculiar white pitchers with spiced steam to be smelled,
And 'though groans and complaints will be made all the time,
They all of them mean mostly nothing at all.

And the doctor will make noiseless rounds through the day,
And will learn from each patient just how she may be—
"Do you cough? Do you blow? Have you aches? Now say 'ah'!"—
And will write in her book what conditions she finds.

There will be restless girls who will long to be out,
Who are eager to be with their friends in the school.
And others wil count up the tests that they've missed,
And will vow that they never will make them all up.

Still others whose natural taste runs to rest,
Will leisurely stretch-out and drink in their ease,
And say that they really have not a complaint,
And would just as soon stay where they are for a year.

As the day wears along, perhaps some of the girls
Who "don't cough" or "don't blow" will be able to leave,
But the beds which they vacate will soon fill again,
For each girl who leaves there's another to come.

So it goes through the day, and the week, and the year,
And I in the picture alone stay the same.
Yet my life, 'though unchanging, seems perfect to me,
And I love to think of it like this, in the dawn.

The Night Before Mardi Gras

'Twas the night before Mardi Gras
When all thru the school
Not a person was studying
As they do as a rule.
The girls were nestled all snug in their beds
Visions of gypsies dancing in their heads.
Elsie in her kerchief and Em in her cap
Shining around when we wanted to nap.
When all of a sudden I heard down the hall
Lights out! And a hush fell over all.
Then out in the hall there arose such a clatter
I sprang from my bed to see what was the matter.
Away to the door I flew like a flash
Tore it wide open and leaped like dash.
When what to my wandering eyes should appear
But water-water-water dripping from nose and ear.
With a glass on the floor which had fallen so slick
I knew I had been a sucker and must do something quick.
More rapid than eagles their courses they had taken
Whistling I looked in the beds—forsaken.
Now Sarah! Now Selma! Now Peggy and the 3 Libs!
Oh Margaret! Oh Dickie! Oh Jane and Dibbs!
Huse at the top of the steps!
Now dash away, dash away all!
We spring to our rooms and cut out the lights
Radios off and heads out of sight
Best I heard the gals exclaim as they jumped into bed
Mardi Gras tomorrow—'Nuf sed!

Debate Team Wins Over Emory-Henry

Waynesburg Defeats S. T. C. in Meet Tuesday

Farmville representatives defeated the Emory and Henry team in a debate held Wednesday, February 26, at Farmville. Margaret Pollard and Agnes Bondurant upheld the affirmative and Mr. Beard of Emory and Henry and his colleague defended the negative side of the question. The issue discussed was whether or not Congress should be given the power to overside by a two-thirds majority, a decision of Supreme Court declaring acts of Congress unconstitutional.

According to the Reverend Mr. Bryant of the Farmville Methodist Church, who judged the debate, the Farmville team won on the strength of its argument and the force and appropriateness of rebuttal. On the other hand, the Emory and Henry speakers exhibited good delivery and displayed splendid team work, he said.

Defeated by Waynesburg

In a dual debate with Waynesburg College, Pennsylvania, on Tuesday evening, March 3, both Farmville teams lost the decision. Farmville's affirmative team was the same as that which debated Emory and Henry. Their opponents were Mr. Anderson and Mr. Hutchinson of Waynesburg. Louise Frances and Dudley Allen composed the S. T. C. negative team. They were opposed by Mr. McPherson and Mr. Phillips of the visiting school.

Dr. Beale of the Hampden-Sydney faculty and Mr. John Lewis, Farmville lawyer, acted as judges for the S. T. C. affirmative and negative teams, respectively.

Moore Represents STC at Convention

Kappa Delta Pi Convenes at St. Louis, Mo.

Doris Moore, representative of Beto Epsilon Chapter to the biennial Kappa Delta Pi Convention, returned to Farmville Tuesday, March 3. The convocation met at the Coronado Hotel in St. Louis, Missouri, February 24-26, as a part of the National Education association.

Approximately 200 delegates from over 100 chapters, thirty-seven states being represented, attended the Kappa Delta Pi Convocation. Radford, Harrisonburg, and William and Mary chapters were represented from Virginia. Many charter members and laureate members were also present.

The opening convocation, Monday afternoon in the Crystal Room of the Coronado Hotel, was followed by a "get together" tea. After the "call to order" by the executive president, Dean T. C. McCracken of Ohio University, Dr. Trueman Lee Kelly presented the first address on the "Principles Underlying an Honor Society".

Tuesday night the convocation met for the banquet at the ballroom of the Statler Hotel. The program included: "A Resume of the First Twenty-five Years of Kappa Delta Pi" by Dr. Alfred L. Hall-quest, Division of General Education, New York University; Vocal selections by Miss Elda Vettor, Metropolitan opera star; "A Century of the Universal School" by Dr. William C. Bagley, Teachers College, Columbia University; and the presentation of guests.

S. T. C. Basketeers Meet First Defeat

Final Score 24 - 23; S. T. C. Holds Lead at Half

The varsity basketball team went down to its first defeat of the season before the Western Maryland, Westminster, Md., team on February 28. The final score of the game rested 24-23.

At the half the local team held a lead of ten points on their opponents. At this point the Marylanders rallied and the score became a tie, 18 all, in a short time of play. Not until Maryland had a lead of five points in the last quarter could Farmville make another tally. However, they were able to even the score but for the lack of one point. They were unable to score the necessary point.

Virginia Carroll and Frances Hudgins, Farmville were top scorers of the encounter. Farmville excelled in pass work, but were not so accurate shooters as the opposing team.

The line-up:

Farmville	W. Md.
R.F.—Carroll V.	Price
L.F.—Hudgins	Patterson
J.C.—Ranson, K. (c)	Morris
S.C.—Eastham, S.	Hall
R.G.—Sanford, L.	Irvin

Farmville substitutes: Walker, Roberts, Phelps, McConnaughey, Butterworth, Chappell, Badger.

Farmville Graduate Contributes Articles To Richmond Paper

Mrs. E. H. Ould, the former Miss Ethel Cole, graduate of Farmville in the class of 1902 and Citizenship Chairman of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, has recently written a series of articles on citizenship to be published in the Richmond Times-Dispatch. The first of these articles appeared in a recent edition of the paper.

In this article Mrs. Ould suggested that "Informed and Performing Citizens" be made the slogan of the American woman of today. "It is not enough", she states, "that we become conscious of our obligations when voting is the order of the day. We must stop being the spring and fall variety and become perrennial citizens."

She points out that every day is the opportunity for women to train real American citizens in their homes. Juvenile delinquency in an important field in which women could consecrate much time and effort. She also suggests

Dramatic Club Gives Sing Saturday Night

The Dramatic Club presented the "Leap Year" version of the great lovers throughout the ages in "Sing" last Saturday evening.

Juliet, portrayed by Dot Buckland, appeared calling, "Wherefore are thou, Romeo?" Before he knew it Romeo was captivated by the aggressive young maiden. And so, contrary to history's teachings, Henry VIII spurns his loving wives, Mark Anthony resides on the lounge while Cleopatra rushes about in obedience to his commands.

Though the skit didn't command any great dramatic ability it did draw a goodly number of laughs from the audience.

Plans Go Forward For Early Edition Of New Magazine

Committee Appoints Editorial Staff for 1936

Plans for the organization of a magazine to be published by the students of this institution are well underway. A board of editors has been appointed. Those appointed are: Mr. Grainger, chairman, Miss Camper, Miss Jennings, Dr. Walmsley, Virginia Bean, Elizabeth Walton, Winnie Frances Eubank, and Mary Harrison Vaughan, Katherine Roberts, Norvell Montague, Alice Grainger, and Bess McGlothlin will act as assistants to the board of editors. A committee composed of Mr. McCorkle and Martha Hamlet will attend to all business matters.

There will be only one issue of the magazine this year which will appear in May. All students are urged to cooperate and to submit essays, stories, poems and library criticisms to the editors for their consideration. Every department in school may contribute and the cooperation of each is expected. The publication will be wholly for the pleasure of the students and for the encouragement of literary achievements at S. T. C.

Freshmen to Present Annual Feature

That the Freshman "gym" classes will give a demonstration of folk dances Saturday, March 2, at 3:30 P. M., has been announced by the physical education department. This event in which all the freshmen are supposed to take part has become a permanent feature of the annual Founder's Day program at the college.

The exhibit will include these folk dances from many countries: Jumping Jack, Rustic Dance, Irish Lilt, Half Moon, Highland Schottish, French Reed, Athletic Barn Dance, Virginia Reel, Green Sleeves, Serbian Kolo (Slavic Folk Dance), New Castle (English), Quadrille (American), Kolowyka (Russian), Bummel Schottische (German), Seven Jumps (German

Coach Announces Cast For Comedy And Date of Play

Agee and Gray Take Leads in Spring Classic

April 3 is the date set for the annual spring play presented by the Dramatic Club under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler. Virginia Agee and "Chubby" Grey will co-star in Shakespeare's comedy, "The Taming of the Shrew". Virginia will take the part of the untamable Shrew and "Chubby" as Petruchio, has set her mind to the task and will tame her opposite in the cast.

Rehearsals are well underway for the production and the cast to date is virtually complete. The play this year will be presented to the student body and administration as one of the series of Lyceum programs.

Other members of the Dramatic Club who are taking part in the play are: Margaret Pollard as Baptista, a gentleman of Padua; Clara Nottingham as Bianca, daughter to Baptista; Virginia Hooke as Vicentio, a merchant of Pisa; Elizabeth Carroll as son to Vicentio; Alpha Lee Garnett and Marjorie Thompson as Gremio and Hortensio, suitors to Bianca. Others taking more minor parts are: Carter Belle Munt, Madeline McGlothlin, Nan Throckmorton, Nancy Gray, Katherine Ryburn, Elizabeth Seiber, Elizabeth George Wilson, Nellwyn Latimer, Mary Lou French.

Student Body Meets To Discuss Program For Coming Holiday

The student body held its regular meeting Monday night, March 2, in the large auditorium. The time was devoted to the discussion of the Founder's Day Program. Louise Walmsley made a pep talk on the approaching basketball game with Harrisonburg, which will be Friday night, March 6. This game is featured as the opening event on the annual celebration program. Mary Elizabeth Slater and Mary Bowles led the group in yells and songs. Miss Mary followed this with a brief talk on the dormitory arrangements, and the students' part in the program.

Interview Of Mrs. Jamison Reveals Food Consumed

By Mary Harrison Vaughan

Mrs. Jamison was surprised when I asked her for an interview, but she gave me the facts willingly. She was born in Salem, Virginia, and was educated in private schools. She came to Farmville as dietician in the fall of 1923 and has held that position ever since. Previous to this time Mrs. Jamison taught school for some years.

When Mrs. Jamison took over her duties here, there were 270 people eating in the dining room. Her charges have certainly grown in number since them. One year she fed over 900 and now there are 650 people eating at 66 tables. Twice before the fire of 1923 which destroyed the dining room and kitchen, improvements were made in this department. In 1923 our present dining room with a capacity for feeding 1000 was built.

The equipment in the kitchen is up-to-date and very efficient. All vegetables are cooked by steam. There are electric mixers, dish washers, meat cutters and potato peelers. Mrs. Jamison believes in sanitation and puts it into practice in every phase of preparation our food goes through.

When Mrs. Jamison casually mentioned barrels of flour, bushels of potatoes and the like for one days' provisions my eyes increased in circumference until they resembled the proverbial tea-cup and my chin lodged with a jar on my chest. 'Tis indeed fortunate we are forced to move about during the days activities else we might meet the fate of the gluttonous kings of he Middle Ages. In one meal we down 60 dozen eggs, 4 1-2 crates of grapefruit, 40 gallons of milk, 60 pounds of butter, 24 gallons of canned tomatoes, 75 pounds of ham, 72 large hens for baked chicken.

This business of feeding girls is no joke and Mrs. Jamison with the help of Mrs. Shelton, three cooks, two assistant cooks, six maids, and sixty-five student waitresses certainly manage to keep things going smoothly and efficiently.

Sophomore Edition Wins First Prize

Judges Award Senior Class Honorable Mention

That the sophomore Rotunda staff put out the best of the class issues was announced by the judging committee today. For honorable mention the committee selected the senior issue. A prize of $2.50 will be awarded the sophomore class.

Elizabeth Morris assisted by Ruth Phelps, served as editor of the sophomore issue; Agnes Bondurant assisted by Elizabeth Walton edited the senior issue.

In criticizing the papers the committee commended the sophomores on the general news value and the make-up of the paper, stating that the articles and accompanying features were of timely interest. The editorials in this issue were particularly good. The senior issue demonstrated a genuine newspaper style in the presentation of its news, according to the committee.

The class issues were judged on the following points: news, make-up,proof reading, style, and editorial value.

Class Day Exercises Discussed by Classes In Meeting Tuesday

Regular class meetings were held on Tuesday night on a discussion of Founder's Day.

Freshmen, after finishing some minor business, had a pep meeting over the coming championship game between Freshmen and Seniors. The game will be played in the gym Monday afternoon.

After the swimming meet, a part of the Founder's Day Program, the Juniors will repeat the prize-winning stunt which they gave in the water carnival this fall.

The interest of Seniors and Sophomores is concerned with class day exercises in June. At the Tuesday meetings, discussion was introduced and will be carried on in detail later. Sophomore election of historian, giftor,an, and phrophet resulted as follows, respectively: Juanita Callis, Mary Lynn Thomas, and Julia Ann Waldo.

Helen Fern Perdue will be chairman of the Sophomore Class Day exercises.

Tucker and Trinkle Listed to Speak Here

This week-end students, faculty members, the administration and friends of the college will join in the celebration of the fifty-second anniversary of the founding of the college. Classes will be dispensed with on Saturday in order that students may participate in the programs planned for the day.

Opening Event

The opening event on the Founder's Day program will be the varsity basketball game with Harrisonburg State Teachers College. The teams have been rivals of long standing and this final game promises to be one of unusual interest. Both teams have been unusually successful this season the local six having met with but one defeat.

Arrangements are being made by which alumnae will receive complimentary tckets to the game.

Alumnae Meeting

At nine o'clock Saturday morning the Association of Alumnae of Farmville State Teachers College will hold its formal business meeting in the small auditorium. Mrs. Mildred Dickerson Davis of Hampden-Sydney, president of the Association, will preside at this meeting.

At eleven o'clock the annual presentation of gifts to Alma Mater and reports from the alumnae chapters will take place in the large auditorium. The student body is invited to this session.

Entertainment Features

The usual Alumnae Luncheon will be served at Longwood at one o'clock. During the afternoon organizations will be at home to serve tea to the returning graduates. At six o'clock the annual Founder's Day Banquet will be served in the main dining hall. At this time the Honorable E. Lee Trinkle, President of the Shenandoah Life Insurance Company of Roanoke, and Dean Robert H. Tucker of Washington and Lee University will be the principle speakers.

The banquet is a formal affair.

At nine o'clock everyone is invited as the guest of the school at a dance in the gymnasium. The music for the occasion will be supplied by the Hampden-Sydney orchestra. An announcement will be made regarding tickets.

Freshmen to Dance

Features of the afternoon program Saturday will be a performance by the freshman gym classes. The girls will present a number of folk dances. At three o'clock guests are invited to attend a swimming meet.

To date more than one hundred graduates have notified the administration that they will be back for this annual celebration.

Freshmen Take First Place In Class Swimming Meet

The Green and Whites proved themselves to be the winners of the Swimming Meet Wednesday Night. The Freshmen won first place, and the Juniors won second. In the advanced class, Virginia Carroll came out first and Sidney Yonce came second. In the intermediate class, Elizabeth McIntosh came first and Katherine Coleman second. In the beginners class Martha Gwaltney came first and Nancy Hunter came second. All of these girls did well and deserve a lot of credit.

Mardi Gras and Lent

That the gayety and reveling of Mardi Gras should be followed by the solemnity of church bells announcing the coming of Lent is paradox to those who observe but do not know the underlying facts. After a little thought, one realizes that both of the customs come originally from the Catholic church. Mardi Gras comes directly from the French Catholics at New Orleans and Lent from the Angelican Church, as one of the forms retained when the Church of England was separated from the orthodox Catholic Church.

Is there any relationship between the two? Mardi Gras, the French for fat Tuesday, is celebrated one the day better known as Shrove Tuesday, so called as the day on which "shrift" or confession was made in preparation for the fast of Lent, the first day of which is Ash Wednesday.

This confession was made forty weekdays before Easter. It was the beginning of preparation for the sacred anniversary of the Risen Lord. During the forty week-days that followed all Christians (Catholics) were supposed to fast in further preparation for Easter. Sunday, however, was a feast day. As this fast falls early in the year it became confused with the season and gradually the word, Lent, which originally meant spring, was confined to this use.

How Shrove Tuesday has come to change from a day for confession of sins to a day of merry making is not known. It is thought that as the Christian (Catholic) religion of the Middle Ages degenerated largely into a matter of form, the observers of church law, knowing that they would be deprived of luxuries for a period, feasted and reveled to their hearts' content on the day preceding the beginning of the fast. Thus in France originated the name Mardi Gras, which was given because a fat ox was carried through the streets of the town to be killed and roasted for the feast. In England people have held themselves to the mild diversion of eating pancakes. Hence it is there called Pancake Tuesday.

Shrove Tuesday, like Christmas, has become for the majority of people, a day of joyousness while originally it had entirely a sacred significance.

On the Use of Spare Time

It is surprising what can be accomplished by the wise use of spare time. A close study of biography reveals the fact that many of the world's most famous characters attribute their success mainly to the utilization of spare moments.

The greatest authority on William Shakespeare, Howard Furness, ascribes his personal success to advantageous use of spare time. It was this man who studied the life of the great English writer while spending a seemingly useless half hour on a train bound daily to and from his suburban home.

William Jennings Bryan, one of America's greatest public speakers, credits his marvelous flow of oratory to practical investments of leisure moments. Benjamin Franklin, a shining light in history of youthful America, was a miser of time, hoarding every second. To him the loss of a single minute was a loss as extravagant as that of a dollar.

Humanity has produced many similar characters, who by the careful application of spare time have made history for their nation. To the majority, freedom of time affords a golden opportunity for enjoyment and amusement. It also renders an excellent chance for idleness. But if a satisfactory division of play and work could be enacted and installed by us as individuals, a wiser and more profitable distribution of leisure moments would be brought about.

Help!

The prime function of a paper of this type is to present the news of the college in a creditable fashion and to serve the students. The staff cherishes the interest shown in the progress of the paper, but it is hard to know what the readers like as critics seldom come to the staff. Instead they go about grumbling among themselves.

The staff welcomes such contributions from the student body as those appearing in the last two issues concerning student organizations. The paper desires to serve as a dignified forum for the discussion of college problems and urges students who have something worthwhile to discuss to share it with the student body using The Rotunda as their instrument of expression.

Support Your Magazine

The whole student body voted in favor of publishing a magazine. Now the time has come when everybody must come through with whole-hearted support of the magazine. The first issue will appear in May, and the help of the entire student body will be needed to make it worth the time and effort of the faculty advisers and the editorial staff. Every person with any semblance of talent can submit some of her literary attempts for consideration. Contributions from students must be made as this is to be a publication made up entirely of student's works. The chief motive in organizing the magazine is to further interest local literary talent and to further its advancement. It is your magazine. Make of it what you demand of it. Keep the same enthusiasm now that you showed when the idea was first presented to you. Support your magazine.

World News

How many of us were aware that President Roosevelt sent personal letter to heads of twenty Latin-American States, suggesting inter-American Peace Conference to be held at Buenos Aires, to "decide how the maintenance of peace between American republics may be safeguarded?"

Dr. James H. Robinson, historian, died of heart attack at his home in New York City; his books, "The Mind in the Making", "Introduction to History of Western Europe," and other world famous books. The whole world feels as if one of its greatest sons has passed on.

It has been rumored that the United States Government will take over Boulder Dam in Black Canyon of Colorado River between Arizona and Nevada; constructed, begun in April, 1931, by six companies to be completed two years before contract date.

It has been announced that former Gov. Al Smith will attend the Democratic National convention in Philadelphia, as district delegate; here will be given opportunity to "take a walk" if Party supports New Deal.

The world is amazed over the fact that Rich Glauber salt deposits, discovered by Federal relief workers last summer in N. W. North Dakota, is giving forth deposits valued at $350,000,000.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who claims the discovery of North Pole in 1908 and who at the time was jeered as a "faker" and "fraud", emerged from retirement and demanded that science recognize his claim and clear his name "before I die".

It seems as if Belgium is going to prepare for another German Invasion since Defense Minister Albert Beveze in Brussels keeps repeating the demand for preparation. Even all countries, Great Britain included, considers the danger of war a reality. The possibility is a sudden and powerful invasion. It appears today that many military experts recommend military invasion without notice or declaration of war.

Japan has only since 1925 had "universal man-hood suffrage. Women toddled about larger cities, recently, urging men to vote and wore scarves reading not "Votes for Women" but "Pure Election". Up to last week, there has never been an election that the party favored by Government failed to win. Apathy was such that the candidates found their hired hall for speeches empty.

Campaign literature could only be circulated through the Government, and peasants couldn't seem to puzzle it out. However, in the last week Japan's few proletariat candidates were actually drawing audiences of respectable size. At last "Social Masses" was seen to have won eighteen seats in the new diet and can make Japanese politics lively if they dare.

Motion Picture Guide

By the committee of the Woman's Club.

"The Magnificent Obsession"—Irene Dunn and Robert Taylor bring to the screen Lloyd Douglas' gripping novel. The story of a fun-loving youth whose life is changed entirely when he finds that he has been saved at the sacrifice of the life of a great doctor. Fine production, splendid acting and lovely photography mark this outstanding picture.

Adults and young people.

"Here Comes Trouble"—Inadvertently aided by a sailor, a jewel thief traps a master crook. P. Kelly plays in this picture. Adults.

"Rose Marie"—Nelson Eddy and Jeannette MacDonald again charm their public with fine singing in a musical comedy of sweet romance. Highly recommended as one of the exceptional musical films. Family.

"The Scarlet Pimpernel"—starring Leslie Howard and Merle Oberon. This is one of the best pictures Alexander Korda has produced. It deals with the part that an English Lord, known as the Scarlet Pimpernel, plays in saving French aristocrats from the guillotine. An engrossing story, with splendid acting. Family.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Editor:

Some of us have been wondering for quite a while why we do not have fire drills here at S. T. C. All other colleges, with newer, fireproof buildings have fire drills at regular intervals; why don't we? It is true that we have little signs in the halls to point out the direction of the fire escapes, but in case of a fire who would think of looking for them? If we were drilled in marching out a certain way, in case of a fire we would quite naturally and easily seek that way to get out. There would be less danger of losing lives, and the buildings would be emptied in less time. Confusion, that surely would occur now, would be eliminated.

We have found that in the larger fires where many lives were lost, it was not because they were trapped in the building that they were killed. It was because the persons were not familiar with the fire escapes and became panic-stricken. Instead of marching out in orderly procession they rushed madly for the exits. Some were pushed down, crushed and trampled by the onrush of the others! Confusion! Hundreds of lives lost! And why? Because of the lack of preparation. Fires are dreadful things and we hate to think of them. But, why couldn't we apply that old adage "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and have a few fire drills?

A Freshman

Rotunda Reverberations

Well, hello, I think I saw you in Richmond last week-end, didn't I? What could have been the attraction? We did have a few left at school, however, and you "prom" trotters missed some fun. Libby Hardy, so we understand worked every minute during the week-end. She attempted to clean her room sometime after twelve when that touch of morning came on the door. Upon opening the door the house president was horrified to see sweeping being done on Sunday morning.

Changing the subject a bit—nice going team, and here's more power to you in your encounter here Friday night.

By the way, Smitty, what is the point in this form of leisure? It seems that you were seen walking with your hands over your head and singing all the while. We're glad to see you so happy, but why the hands overhead?

He seized her, drew her to him, and deliberately struck her. She made no outcry. Again, and again the brute repeated the blow, and still she gave no sign of suffering. But, when with rapidly increasing anger he struck her the fourth time, she shrieked out loud and her head blew off. She was only a match.

It seems that we have a few rules which must be followed. First, if you know nothing about your lesson, look wise. 'Tis easier to look wise than to be wise. Second, if you are in music class and can't carry a tune in a bucket, open your mouth and punch your neighbor. The results will be much easier on your roommate. Charlotte Rice made this contribution. Third, never walk single file down the steps or down the street; go six abreast so the citizens of Farmville will know you own the town. Fourth, if you spill coffee on the table cloth, butter a piece of bread and accidentally let it fall on the spot (buttered side down) and no one will ever see the spot. Enough said.

Literary Column

Since it is our privilege to lead in the use of correct speech, we may find interesting some of the everyday errors that we make, but errors of which we are not aware.

Above—Expressions such as "the above statement, "according to the above," though common in use, are not sanctioned by the best authority. "The foregoing or preceding statement" is preferred.

Ad—A common trade abbreviation of advertisement to be avoided in careful writing or speaking.

Adult—Pronounced a-dult', not ad'-ult.

Ain't—Not a proper contraction of am not or are not. It is meaningless.

And—"Come and see me" should be "Come to see me."

Anxious—Misused when "desirous would better express the meaning. Incorrect, "I am anxious to go."

Any place—"Are you going any place?" should be, "Are you going anywhere?"

At you—Not "mad at you" but "angry with you."

Awful, awfully— Colloquailisms that grate upon the ear in such phrases as "awfully good," "an awful headache," "thanks awfully." Their use, even when regarded as slang, always in poor taste, and generally betoken a limited vocabulary.

Blame it on—A gross and improper expression. We blame a person "for" an offense, but to "blame it on" is not even excusable slang.

Both alike—In this connection both are misused. "They are both alike" should be, "They are alike".

Broke—This word has acquired a certain respectable colloquial use in a sense, "without funds".

Couple — Misused when the meaning is simply two. "A couple of pencils" should be, "Two pencils." '

Says I—Inelegant at all times.

Firstly— Improperly used in place of word first.

Initiate—Often used for the word begin.

Saucy—Should not be corrupted to "sassy" or, worse yet, "sass."

Gent—An abomination confined to the vulgar.

Say!—The use of this exclamation is too frequent. It is a vulgar method of attracting attention or of introducing a remark.

If—Misused for whether— "Go and see if he will come."

Compexion—Do not corrupt the good word complexioned into complected, there being no authority for the latter.

Cute—A better word will always be found for use in place of this word, which is an abbreviation of acute.

Beat—Do not use this word for the more expressive word deefat.

The Southern Girl

God took the threads of a spider's web
And dipped them into a pool of night,
Then gave them the wave of the summer sea
And the gloss of a moonbeam's softening light.
Thus he made her hair.

He took the amethyst sky of June
And the laughing gleam of a midnight star,
The magical depth of his universe
Fashioning truth's own water.
Thus he made her eyes.

He took the tint of a budding rose
And weaved it into the sunset's glow
And He poured the color upon a cloud
As soft and white as the drifted snow.
Thus He made her cheek.

He took the sigh of a gentle breeze
A note of silver, celestial lyre,
The clean, free tone of a wild bird's cry,
And the sweet soft song of an angel choir.
Thus He made her voice.
He took the simplicity of the dawn;
He added the freshness of the rain;
And He gave the tenderness of Himself
To guide men over a world of pain.
Thus He made her soul.

BOOK REVIEW

NORTH TO THE ORIENT

Ann Morrow Lindbergh

"North to The Orient" is a story vividly told by Ann Morrow Lindbergh, about people and places seen on their trip by plane. Giving a brief insight into the life of the people on each stop, the book describes their homes, their joys, their sorrows, and their entertainments. Many thrilling experiences are narrated in Mrs. Lindbergh's own personal way. While stopping in Draka, Japan, a stowaway was found in their plane, and in Allavik they were awakened in the night by the cry of "Fire". Their most breath-taking experience was a forced landing before reaching Burton Bay. Mrs. Lindbergh relates her sensations as graphically as she can without making them too personal. China was in the midst of the flood season when they arrived. The Colonel had to anchor in the Yanktze and his plane was wrecked. No one was hurt, and later with streamers and fire-works, the people of Japan bid farewell to the Lindberghs as they sailed for the United States.

Having completed numerous preparations, Colonel Lindbergh and Ann took off by plane from College Point, Long Island, for the Orient. They proceeded north by way of North Haven, Maine, Ottowa, and a little post at Baker Lake. Skirting the coast of Canada, the plane continued north to Allavik, and thence to Point Barrow, Alaska. After a forced landing at Nome they flew over Saint Lawrence Island to Cape Navarin on the Siberian Coast. Continuing from Oraka, Japan, they crossed the Yellow Sea to China, but flew up the Yangtze River to Nanking where the trip north ended.

The style is very clear and simple and the interest of the story is increased by vivid descriptive passages. It is very readable because of the simplicity of its language.

Spring

As the days grow longer so do student body meetings. And as figures get slimmer, so do pocketbooks. There's something about the zip in the air that makes strong-willed girls weak, and weak girls strong. Girls who have made resolution after resolution to reduce finally get up will-power enough to do it, and girls who have kept religiously within their allowances all year go in and charge pink sweaters. If you haven't parted your hair in the middle or cut bangs yet, you just aren't human. The little fences are again beginning to appear and disappear with satisfying regularity. The flowers are not yet blooming, but bright colors are seen on the campus in the forms of our own gay flowers what go to school at S. T. C.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

MARGARET CLARK

We point with pride to the vice-president of our senior class. During these four years, her versatality of talents has been shown through her work done in the debate Club, Choral Club, Mathematics Club, Coûillion Club, the Dramatic Club, and the Granddaughters Club.

This year Mrgaret has done outstanding work as business manager of the Virginian. She has been recognized as an inspirational, quiet leader, not only by Alpha Kappa Gamma, but by the student body as a whole.

In her quiet, unassuming way, "Mag" manages to accomplish a lot of work which has not been awarded much glory, but always appreciation.

With her sincerity, loyalty, willingness, dependability, and personality, Margaret Clark is a girl of whom her Alma Mater may justly be proud.

Haberdashery

With Easter nigh, every girl has visions of a perky outfit to suit the occasion; and, most likely, that vision floating in her mind is of a suit—a gay, colorful, little outfit that will express her personality and exhuberant spirit.

Suits of elegant checks and stripes and herringbone weaves are good. They're very masculine, but a little softer than the original men's suitings, and they come in the same reserved colors — the browns of seeds, the blues of ink, the grays of withered shingles.

Of course, with this fine suit there must be a blouse. Printed silk ones with dark or light backgrounds, silk jersey, taffeta, sheer organdie, soft handkerchief linen, striped shirting, plan white silk, or soft, handknit sweaters in one of a hundred colors—anyone of these would be an excellent choice.

And there are always the accessoris that add just the right touch. Shoes of brown suede, alligator skin, or antelope; gloves of white Guardsman's cloth with one button, of white doeskin or chamois, or dark leather to match the shoes; felt hats or any small, sharp, felt beret in black, pale misty blue, or a queer bright suede. The bag will be of medium size and tailored. It should be tough and firm and when it is handsewn like the gloves, the effect will be very fine.

This spring has come in with the dainty little buttonaire that was so fashionable "way back when". Bouquets of daises or Russian violets or pink bachelor's-buttons—(any of the flowers that give the effect of packed bloom, as the gardeners say) — any of these would be just the thing.

But one little hint of warning to you—don't do this tailored thing too deliberately. If you can't feel as comfortable and as inconspicuous as a well-dressed Englishman in your new tailored "get-up," don't force yourself into it. Perhaps you aren't a tailor-made girl.

The Book Sampler

The uneasy political and racial situation of Europe is reflected from different angles in two very interesting publications.

The former head of the press department of the British Foreign Office, Sir Arthur Willert, recently produced "What Next in Europe?" In this book, from the events of the past year or two, Sir Arthur constructs a background for understanding the events of this year and the next. Austria he describes as peacefully inclined, even Italy as not so warlike as events in Africa would show. Germany, however, he declares is "discontented already strong and growing stronger", preparing for future war. In conclusion, Sir Arthur reverts to the soothing line that so long as most European peoples prefer to attend to their peace-time affairs, and so long as England serves as international policeman, no one is likely to start anything serious.

The power of these peoples to keep themselves out of war is questioned in John Gunther's "Inside Europe". This "dean of American correspondents" wandered through Germany, Italy, Austria, Russia and France. In the first four countries (Mr. Gunther is decidedly pro-French), he was deeply impressed by the attitude of the men in power. Hitler, he says, would be capable of killing tens of thousands should they oppose his armed rule, but so far has not found killing more than a few hundreds necessary. Mussolini and Stalin also come in the category of dangerous ego-maniacs wielding absolute power. So, it appears that if the dictators want war, no one at home is going to oppose them.

Negley Farson also writes of European events ("The Way of a Transgressor" is an autobiography that turns out to be the best travel book in an age). He just puts down what he has seen and heard in the past twenty years, and leaves most of the concluding to people whose minds run in that channel. There is a lot more about Egypt and India, and America during the Hokum Era before 1929. The way of a transgressor may be hard, but it is also exciting and covers a good deal of territory.

Increase Shown Over Last Year in Higher Education for Women

Washington, D. C. (NFSA) — Women are favored in the United States at least in the field of higher education. In January, 1936, there are 44 more institutions of higher education in the country than there were one year before and women have profited most from this increase. Of the new schools established, 21 are for women and 32 co-educational, while the number devoted to male education suffered a loss of 9. This includes colleges, universities, professional schools, teachers colleges, normal schools and junior colleges, both Negro and White. The total number in 1935 was 1,662 while there are now 1,706 in existence.

3 new Negro institutions were established, 1 private and 2 state, while 1, Protestant-sponsored, was closed. All of the new ones are co-education. 9 White state-controlled and 12 Protestant-sponsored were closed during the year. 1 White city sponsored institution, 45 private and 17 Roman Catholic sponsored were established.

There are 14 new colleges and universities for white for women and 7 co-educational. Of them, 9 are private, 1 state, 1 city and 3 Roman Catholic. One Protestant college for Whites was closed. Junior Colleges suffered most, 9 being closed. And professional schools registered the largest gain, 25 being added.

(This summary is based on figures prepared by Ella B. Ratcliffe for the U. S. Office of Education, Division of Higher Education.)

Formwalt Annexes All-State Honors

Tiger Star Also High In Scoring Race

Bill Formwalt gained all-State honors last week when the brilliant Tiger cager was named on the second team of the All-Virginia mythical basketball combine selected by eight Virginia coaches at their recent meeting. Overshadowed only by Brown of Richmond and Pette All-Southern of Washington and Lee, Formwalt was rated as one of the best forwards in the state.

The first All-State five was dominated by Washington and Lee who placed Spassard, Pette, and Tier of their championship team. Two Richmond performers, Lacy and Brown, well known by Tiger fans, made the other positions. Brown has also been the leader in the All-state scoring race.

In the American University game Monday night in which Hampden-Sydney beat the visitors 51-22, Formwalt scored 34 points thus assuring himself the State high-scoring championship with a total of 251 points.

There are two main reasons why people can not mind their own business, according to Emory and Henry. The first is that they haven't any business and the second is that they haven't any mind.

In a recent census it was found that there were more Episcopalians than any other denomination at Virginia. Presbyterians came next. There are 730 of the former and 330 of latter. Ninety percent 330 of the latter. Ninety percent of the students had some church affiliation. What we wonder is how often they attend church?

When Paul Schroeder's phone rings in the early morning hours, it isn't a prankish friend calling to ask if he is sleeping well, or news that someone's finally died and left him a million. Nine times out of ten it's the police, or state troopers, or the emergency ward of a hospital, with the request that Schroeder drop around with the hearse and pick up a little business.

Schroeder, a liberal arts student at Syracuse University, is official custodian of the city morgue from 6 p. m. to 4 a. m. of every day. The job doesn't bother him, he says—he took the job a year ago—and he thinks it may prove to have been a useful experience. He plans to enter medical school next fall.

Duke Consultant on Education Policies

Washington, March 2—The Educational Policies Commission announced at its headquarters offices here today that President Samuel P. Duke of the Harrisonburg State Teachers College has been appointed as consultant ex-officio for the commission.

Appointment of a group of educational leaders as consultants is an important item in the program of the Educational Policies Commission.

The commission was appointed for a five-year term of office in December, 1935, by the joint action of the National Education Association and the Department of Superintendents to develop long-range planning for the improvement of American schools.

Committee Names New Staff Heads

Bean, Baker, to Edit Publications in 1936

That Virginia Bean will serve as editor-in-chief of The Rotunda and that Virginia Baker will hold the same position on The Virginian for the year 1936-37 was the announcement made by the committee on appointment for the college publications today. Elsie Cabell was selected for business manager of the weekly and Mary Elizabeth Slater was chosen for business manager of the yearbook. All four girls are outstanding members of the class of '37 and contributing citizens of the student body as well.

Virginia Bean has worked on The Rotunda Staff for almost three years. Her work was interrupted last year as she did not expect to return to school but she resumed her activities last fall and worked up to the position of Editorial Editor on the staff. She has worked well in her class serving as vice-president this year; she is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, Beorc Eh Thorn and other student organizations. At the end of her two year course she was honor student in her class.

Virginia Baker has proved herself as associate editor of The Virginia this year. She has worked hard and has shown an unusually keen interest in the progress of the book. "Baker" is secretary of her class, a member of the English honor society, the Portsmouth Club and others. In recognition of her work and ability, Virginia was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma in January.

Elsie and Mary Elizabeth have made themselves indispensable to the publications staffs here. Elsie has worked well on the business staff of The Rotunda for two years and this year worked in the capacity of assistant business manager. Mary Elizabeth has contributed to both publications, but her real love has been The Virginian. She has been a strong supporter of the Athletic Association and at present is a member of the Athletic Council.

Names of the associate-editor of The Rotunda and The Virginian will be withheld along with those of the art and literary editors until just before the minor elections take place.

Vaughn to Edit Literary Magazine

Mary Harrison Vaughn has been announced as Chairman of the editorial board for the new college magazine which will be known as "The Farmville Quarterly Review." Elizabeth Walton was named as literary editor, and Winnie Frances Eubank as assistant literary editor. Martha Hamlet will serve as business manager with Zaida Thomas as assistant business manager.

The magazine which will include short stories ,essays, reviews, poetry, and other literary types, will appear for the first time around May 15, the dead line for the articles having been set at April 15. Students, faculty, alumnae and friends of the college are contributing for the first issue. Mr. James M. Grainger, chairman of the faculty advisory board, or any member of the staff will be glad to receive materials for publication.

The editorial board as previously announced consists of the following members: Alice Grainger, Norvel Montague, Bess McGloth-

S.T.C. Wins Second In Reading Contest

That Winthrop and Appalachian College tied for first place in debating for women and that Shepherd State Teachers College and Wake Forest tied for first place for men is the news brought back by the Farmville representatives to the South Atlantic Forensic tournament at Winthrop College, Rock Hill, South Carolina.

In the reading contest Winthrop won first place and Farmville second place. Marjorie Thompson was the Farmville contestant.

Margaret Pollard and Agnes Bondurant, affirmative debaters, Dudley Allen and Louise Francis, negative debaters, took part in contests for women. Dr. Walmsly who accompanied the delegation acted as judge in a number of the contests on the program.

Student Building Fund

Each year at Founder's Day the figures of the Student Building fund shrink and this year the situation looks more hopeful than ever. To-day the fund stands:

Original cost of building	$169,900
Total amt. given by March, 1934	$147,500
Total amt. given since March, 1934	$2,786.95
Total amt. to be given	15,713.05

Fraternity Honors Student and Coach

Agnes Bondurant and Dr. Walmsley Win Diamond Key

As a result of the debates won at the South Atlantic Forensic Tournament, held at Winthrop College, Rock Hill, South Carolina, Dr. Walmsley and Agnes Bondurant are both entitled to the highest honor—that of Special Distinction which is conferred by Pi Kappa Delta, national forensic fraternity.

Dr. Walmsley gains the honor for having coached five students who won the Special Distinction degree and Agnes, for having won seven debates during three years of college debating. Both now have the privilege of wearing the diamond-set key, emblem of the degree of Special Distinction.

Though Agnes has been debating for three years, she took part in only non-decision debates during her sophomore year. Therefore, her record of winning debates has been made during her junior and senior years. This record has been made possible largely by her attendance at two debating tournaments.

Before this year, this honor has been conferred upon only four girls at S. T. C. since Pi Kappa Delta was installed at the college. Fran-

Longwood Luncheon Attended by Over a Hundred Guests

Over a hundred guests were entertained Saturday, March 7, at the alumnae luncheon given annually at Longwood.

Following the long established custom, many S. T. C. alumnae attended the luncheon given for them at one o'clock Saturday. The house at Longwood was beautifully decorated with lovely arrangements of snap dragons, jonquils, tulips and other spring flowers. A bright open fire in the front parlor added another cheery touch to the setting.

The guests were served plate lunches, which consisted of chicken salad, fresh tomatoes, potato chips, asparagus, sliced ham, buttered rolls, and coffee. Ice-cream with caramel sauce, angel cake, mints and nuts completed the delightful menu.

Among those present were members of many past classes, faculty members, Miss Mary White Cox and Dr. Jarman. Miss Cox acted as hostess and was assisted in the serving by Miss Jane Royall, Hazel Smith, Lucy Potter, Agnes Crockett, Ellen Mason, Tac Waters, and Madeline McGlothlin.

Orchestra, Dancers Entertain Alumna

Student Body Gift Presented to Dr. Jarman

Many alumnae attended the Founder's Day program in chapel Saturday morning, March 7, 1936. The orchestra opened the program with several selections; then, Mrs. Fitzpatrick's artist dance group presented some numbers. Following this there was a welcome address by Mildred Dickinson Davis, alumnae president, and greetings from Alumnae Chapters.

The orchestra played the following selections:

(a). Country Gardens .. Grainger
(b). The Old Clock .. Creighton
(c). The Merry Widow —(Selection Lehar)

Dr. Simkins Speaks to Open Meeting of Y. W. C. A. in Lounge

Declaring that the only period of international peace that ever existed was during the Middle Ages when the civilized world was dominated by the supremacy of the Church headed by the Pope, Dr. Simkins opened his address to the open meeting of the Y. W. C. A. last Wednesday afternoon. The speaker next outlined the various wars that crowd the annals of history since Medieval times, pointing out the nationalistic influences and the militaristic developments which led to each. The efforts of Grotius and others established an international code for the governing of war which terminated in the last great World War "to end wars". Today there is no Pope to humiliate war-hounds and war-minded monarchs as Gregory VII forced Henry IV of Germany to wait in the snow for three days for an audience at Canossa; but there is a weapon in the form of public opinion which can prove just as powerful," remarked Dr. Simkins in closing. He urged his hearers to wield their weapons, the Christian consciousness of anti-militarism, with a zeal and a passion.

Dr. Simkins' talk is one in a series of peace talks sponsored by the cabinet for their open meetings. Previous to this time Dr. Walmsley and Miss Florence H. Stubbs have spoken to the group.

The social committee served refreshments to the members and friends present.

On April 15 the final open meeting of the present cabinet will be held with Dr. Viastos of Canada as special guest. All students and faculty members are invited to attend.

Miss Lulu Andrews Speaks to Society on Patron Saint

Leaning back in her chair before the open fire in the senior building lounge, amid the members of the local circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Miss Lulu Andrews, well known poetess of Virginia and able literary critic, talked in her engaging manner of Joan of Arc, patron saint of our school.

Know Joan as a human, she urged. It is not right to treat her as a mystical character apart from the world of human experience. In her conversation Miss Andrews turned the pages of several biographies of the Maid of France. Anatole France treats her as a politician would, and worse than that plants her on a pedestal to be gazed and wondered at, not to be known and communed with. Mark Twain treats Joan as Joan, the simple peasant girl, and in so doing animates the statue that Anatole France has carved, gives her the human air that was characteristic of her life. Her latest boigrapher, Waldman, takes further steps in this direction and breaks down the barrier that makes us hold her at arms length, her visions and voices. Waldman explains that Joan's voices were the result of an indescribable faith combined with an intense imagination. Miss Andrews went on to say that it is not improbable to believe that Joan, as an impressionable child, was greatly influenced by her worship in the church where statues of Saint Catherine, Saint Margaret and others resided.

Joan had three great, passionate

Anniversary Draws Prominent Guests

The Hon. E. Lee Trinkle, who made the principal address at the Founders' Day banquet here, Saturday, March 7.

Ex - Governor and Dean Tucker Speak

Students, faculty members, the administration and friends of the college had the pleasure of hearing Honorable E. Lee Trinkle,, President of the Shenandoah Life Insurance Company of oRanoke, and Dean Robert H. Tucker of Washington and Lee University speak at the annual Founders' Day dinner. The Honorable Trinkle spoke of the work of the State Board and the problems that face it today. Dean Tucker spoke of the responsibilities of citizenship, especially as applied to the responsibilities of teachers.

Professor Coyner, chairman of the Founder's Day Committee, welcomed alumnae and guests, and after presenting Dean Tucker he introduced Dr. Thomas D. Eason, Mr. Joseph H. Saunders, Miss Lulu O. Andrews, and Dr. Jarman who in turn introduced former Governor E. Lee Trinkle.

The Jarman Cup was presented at this time to Mrs. Anne Smith Greene, president of the class of 1926. This award is given each year to the class having the largest percentage of its members present. The class of '26 had 19 per cent present.

The members of the administration and faculty members, town ministers and their wives were also guests at the banquet.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the college orchestra under the direction of Miss Lizabeth Purdom.

The menu for the banquet was as follows: grapefruit cocktail, broiled chicken, country ham, candied yams, green peas, pickles, celery, tomato apic salad,, and ice cream and cake.

Farmville Defeats Harrisonburg Six

Enthusiasm Exhibited as S. T. C. Wins 28-21

Before a record gathering of fans and to the tune of an unprecedented storm of cheering the Farmville varsity six literally swept to a victory of 28-21 over the invading Harrisonburg squad in the local gymnasium on Friday night, March 6. The local team started off with a vengeance and in the first seconds of play Virginia Carroll, freshman forward, scored two points for the team. Carroll came out top scorer of the encounter with a total of 17 points to her credit while Kellam of Harrisonburg came second with a total of 12 points. Frances Hudgins, junior forward on the Farmville team, displayed excellent floor work which proved effective when combined with her unusual speed and endurance.

The whistle at the end of the first quarter left the score 4-all and from this time on it seemed that the fates smiled on one team and then the other while the onlookers went mad. However, Farmville maintained a slight margin throughout the last three periods.

The Farmville teachers, favored by strong support and stimulated by the importance of the game, starred in a series of sensational plays. High, swift, accurate passes kept the game going at a break-neck pace. Harrisonburg was virtually unsuccessful in breaking up the Farmville attack and was forced to play the defensive all night. However, working under the handicap of inexperienced players, the visitors played well, their for-

Hi School Contests To Be April 23, 24

The second annual play contest for high schools of Southside Virginia will be held in the S. T. C. auditorium on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, April 23, 24, and 25. The contest is under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler, director of the Dramatic Club, and Margaret Pollard, president of the club. Josephine Quinn, vice-president of the club, is chairman of the contest committee.

Those schools expecting to enter the contest so far are Prospect, Clarksville, Orange, College High School, Crewe, Curdsville, Rice, Worsham, C. H. Friend (South Boston), and Appomattox. The contest is scheduled to continue through the three nights; this however, will depend upon the number of schools entering the contest.

In the contest last year Orange High School received the cup award for the best amateur presentation. "Thank You, Doctor." Rice High School carried off the small cup for second honor with "My Cousin From Sweden." Clarksville made a good showing with "You Tell 'Em."

It has been announced by the Virginian staff that this year's subscription for the 1935-'36 annual totals 411, a 25 per cent increase over last year's sales. Lelia Sanford, editor, states that the publication will appear on campus around May 10.

Founders' Day

Old hearts mingled with new; old friendships were renewed; while for two days representatives of the generations of alumnae lived as of old under the shelter of Alma Mater.

One of the notable characteristics of our student body is their whole-hearted cooperation on projects in which the school as a whole is entered. This spirit is especially in evidence during the annual Founders' Day celebrations.

This year, in spite of increased numbers which caused the "doubling up" to be more intensive, the hearty welcome with which our alumnae are accorded did not lack the usual enthusiasm. The students were eager to show their guests all the hospitality which is the tradition of the college.

All alumnae naturally appreciate a return visit to S. T. C. However, the entertainments arranged in their behalf must certainly have increased their enjoyment and reaffirmed their belief in the progress of the college. This year's anniversary is a reminder that the basketball team has improved under wise guidance, that the artistic ability of the girls is being nurtured and trained, and that those interested in water sports have been given access to a modern swimming pool through the foresight of Dr. Jarman.

The Founders' Day Committee and the entire faculty are not to be forgotten as workers for the betterment of the college and as makers of a better anniversary celebration.

The demonstration of a smooth-playing, cooperative team, as well as the exhibition of sensational plays, which characterized the basketball game with Harrisonburg aroused the enthusiasm of the student body to highest pitch. Farmville State Teachers College had the chance to show her ability in the sport world as well as other fields of endeavor during the course of the week-end, and we are proud of the versatility displayed by our girls.

We are indebted to the Dance Group for their beautiful and impressive interpretation of the spirit of Alma Mater. The three compositions which showed "Mind, Body and Spirit join in love and praise of Alma Mater" were impressive of the purest feelings we have toward our school. It was a crystallization of attitudes which was deeply appreciated by both students and alumnae.

The Freshman Dancing Demonstration was the annual success which we have come to anticipate. The work of the freshmen under their instructors in this project means much to both themselves and the spectators. The demonstration gave to all a realization of what can be done in training a large group to a response to rhythm.

An educational feature of the day's program was the units which were exhibited in the Training School. It is this type of thing which displays the standards of quality which we must achieve as representatives of Farmville State Teachers College, and as such, proved of great help and interest. The opportunity to see what can be done in the various fields of our chosen profession is something that keeps us "toeing the mark."

Founder's Day has its place for students as well as alumnae. To freshmen, it, perhaps, brings the first serious realization of life after college. To upperclassmen, it serves as a reminder that the college carries on its part in the great world and that the education begun here continues to grow as its use continues in larger and larger practical life situations.

To the Basketball Team

Yes, it has been decided that our cheering etiquette is all right. We were courteous to the visitors who played us Friday afternoon in the gym. Our hearts were with our varsity team. We particularly held our breath when the ball traveled too near the Harrisonburg goal. But while we, on the side lines, cheered each good play by both sides and sang our songs so well that a Harrisonburg visitor said she had never heard better, it seemed to some of us that there were some other figures also on the floor. We seemed to see the girls of the second team; they must not be called scrubs—their title should be sports, playing hard. Each afternoon during basketball season has found them faithfully at practice with the varsity. They work in no half-hearted way, for it is against their guards that our forwards have learned to shoot goals from any angle, and against their players that the varsity has gained their skillful passing.

The student body remembers and appreciates the girls who practice day after day down in the gym; they commend those girls both on the floor and on the sidelines for our victories in the field of sports. The fine spirit of unselfish service which moves both the varsity and the second team, their example of loyalty and sportsmanship, are such that the players affect all with whom they come in contact.

Sour Grapes

Sour grapes—fruit for the green-eyed monster—Jealousy. Do you like them? Nobody likes them. Yet, all of us at times thrive on them.

It seems as if this character-destroying influence grows on people from infancy. Even little children, who are envious of their playmates' possessions, scorn the things which they cannot have.

And it is not only material things which are coveted. Traits of character, athletic abilities, and individualistic actions are but a few of the many things which some people take pleasure in "running down" because they are unable to possess them.

We should remember whenever we see something which it is impossible to have, that even if we can't have it, it is just as worthy of commendation, anyway, and that when we stoop to "run it down," we are only detracting from our own good character and making ourselves susceptible to somebody's declaration of—Sour Grapes

President's Letter

March 7, 1936

To Our Alumnae:

Fifty-two years ago today the Legislature of Virginia established this college. The appropriation was small—only $10,000. An old college plant was taken over. Through the years this small plant has grown into a splendid group of college buildings. The curriculum has grown from a one year Professional course to many curricula leading to B. S. and B. A. degrees. Some 2400 alumnae are now teaching in the State and thousands are married—many of whom are sending their daughters to us. We have had a Grand-daughters Club for many years.

We look forward to Founders Day or Home Coming Day with a great deal of pleasure—for it means the coming home of Alma Mater's daughters. We are proud of you and take delight in claiming you as our own and have done what we could to build an institution worthy in every way of you. We appreciate your loyalty which you show in many ways. You send your daughters to us—you are active in sending your friends. Through your Alumnae Chapters and as individuals you have helped to build a beautiful Student Building—you have established local Loan Funds and helped with other Loan Funds such as the Cunningham Memorial Loan Fund and the Jennie Masters Tabb Memorial Loan Fund. In fact you have always stood reay to cooperate with your Alma Mater in her various undertakings. We appreciate this whole hearted loyalty and cooperation and send you greetings and our best wishes and assurances of a cordial welcome whenever you can find the time to come to see us.

Cordially your friend,
J. L. Jarman, President

Intercollegiate News

It's a topsy turvy world after all. At least that's the way they feel about it at Swathmore college. This being leap year the feminine section of Swathmore's student body is wearing the "pants". All this week girls will do the "dating". They will buy the tickets for all the dances, call for their boy friends, attend to the liquor, see that the boys never want for cigarettes, and do the "cutting" at the dances.

The sixty year old student honor system at the University of North Carolina brought suspension to forty-three students for alleged cheating on exminations and the student council is scrutinizing the code with the idea of a possible revision. If changes are to be made it is probable that they will be submitted to the student body at the spring election.

Recent statistics show more men from Hawaard than from all of the rest of the colleges put together to be found in nudist colonies. The Ring-Tum-Phi, commenting on this, wonders if American collegians will continue to look upon Harvard as a sort of fashion plate.

An Englishman laughs at a joke three times. When you tell it, when you explain it and when he understands it.

A German laughs at a joke only once, when you tell it. He never understands it.

A Frenchman laughs at a joke twice. When you tell it and when you explain it.

An American doesn't laugh at all because he has already heard it before.

Girls at Smith college prefer that their gentlemen friends wear only solid color shirts—preferably white and blue. If you have a pair of suede shoes in the closet, a Smith girl's advice to you and to you and especially you, (we hope you catch the hint) is to confiscate them. Haven't you heard? They are "Oh so naive and so awfully collegiate!"

From Mercer University, Macon, Ga., comes the unbelievable report that the students of that institution have voted almost unanimously to abolish the Honor System. As yet the faculty has not sanctioned this action, but campus opinion has it that the administration will capitulate to the popular vote.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Margaret Farrar

Margaret Farrar, just "Farrar" to you, has in her four years at Farmville made herself a part of the place, and won for herself an enviable position in the hearts of those who know her well.

She has rendered valuable service through her work in the Dramatic Club; this year she has worked as president of Pi Gamma Mu; her articles have appeared frequently in this publication, she has danced in, sung in, and directed class productions since she became a member of the class of '36. "Farrar" has been recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma, she is a member of the Cotillon Club, Beore Eh Thorn and Sigma, Sigma, Sigma. She is a prominent member of the Artist Dance Group and for the fourth time she will appear in the May Court this year.

Versatality is her chief trouble, a bit of an optimist, hitches her wagon to a star and some folks say that the vehicle's got wings on it, has a twinkle in her eye that's born of a rich sense of humor. She is pretty sophisticated to strangers but just folks to us, has brains in her head and, incidentally, she uses them. Looks? O. K., I'd say. At present she has dreams of a Masters from N. Y. U. so watch the headlines.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Editor:

We have no occasion to doubt the efficiency of the news-sending agency of our sister college at Harrisonburg, but we do question the infallibility of their news-receiving sets. Here we have been patting ourselves on the back at the result of the basketball game on last Friday night and the news evidently has not yet reached the Valley of Virginia, for in the news bulletin from Harrisonburg to the Times-Dispatch yesterday morning (March 10), we still read about the undefeated basketball team of that institution.

It may be that we of Farmville have a wrong concepion of what defeat really involves, but surely if another basketball team had scored 28 points to our 21, we would not consider ourvelves undefeated.

We admired the spirit which the Harrisonburg team displayed while visiting us, and if they referred to the fact that they were undefeated in spirit, we sincerely agree with them, but we would like for our team to be credited with their physical victory. —A Student

Jennie Masters Tabb

With the pleasant memory of our fifty-second anniversary with us, it is with devotion that we look back and remember also, Jennie Masters Tabb our friend.

For You

There's no great honor I can win
For you;
No mighty work I can begin
For you;
No stirring drama can I write
No canvas line with color bright,
Nor wondrous melody indite
For you
But I can live a life that's strong,
For you;
Can cherish right and shun all wrong,
For you;
And as each little task is done,
One ended and the next begun,
I live each day, from sun to sun,
For you.

These Three

To feel, through years is mystic silence pass,
That all is right;
To know that each long, speechless month but leads Toward the light—
That, dear, is Faith.
To think with each new morn, mayhap some word
Will come today,
Yet bearing disappointment with a smile
At each delay—
That, dear, is Hope.
To trust through evil days, forgiving all
That may have passed,
To hope, to trust, to know that like and strength
Will come at last—
That, dear heart, is Love.

Does It?

When you're heartsick, discouraged and tired,
And nothing seems right anywhere;
When you're all out of tune with the world—
Does it help you to know that I care?
When you sympathy need, and your load
Seems almost too heavy to bear,
Although I speak never a word—
Does it help you to know that I care?
When the world is all sunny and bright,
And the pleasures of others you share,
Does it add to your joy just a bit—
And help you to know that I care?
So, Friend, as the years pass us by,
Be they dark ones, or sunny and fair,
Rest assured that it helps to know
That it helps you, to know that I care.

Home

The world and its cares shut out,
A world of love shut in;
It matters not
Be it palace or cot,
Here the joys of heaven begin.

My Choice

O tell me not that fondness grows
With absence of the dear one!
I'd rather have love less intense
And have it from a "near" one
'Tis sweet to feel when Love's away
He's growing ever fonder—
But I prefer one kiss right here
To a life's love 'way off yonder.

All Hail! Alma Mater, Dear Mother to thee,
Thy daughters true, faithful, and loyal will be.
Thy gentle instruction, thy influence so sweet,
Will go with them always—a guide to their feet.
Thy loving protection ,thy nurturing care,
Will lead them to cherish things lovely and fair,
All Hail! Alma Mater, Dear Mother to thee,
Thy daughters true, faithful and loyal will be.
Thy halls and arcades with their calm, classic air,
Thy campus with blossoms perennially fair,
Thy trees, and thy fountain, thy vine covered walls
Will live in their memory, whatever befalls.
Though far from thy care and protection they roam,
They still hold thee dear, as a well beloved home.
All Hail, Alma Mater, Dear Mother to thee,
Thy daughters true, faithful and loyal will be.

Club Lists Names OfGranddaughters

The daughters of former students upon entering college are invited to become members of a group that Alma Mater is very proud of, known as the Granddaughters Club. Many daughters indeed are enrolled long before they become active members. Little Rachl Ann Caulk of Maryland (Clara Thompson Caulk), two years old, is already registered on the club's list of future members. So also are Mary Emma Jackson of Pennsylvania (Pattie Mauzy), Betty Glenn Myers of Washington (Mollie Mauzy), Mary Stuart Walmsley (Margaret Hiner), and many others, including the daughters of Margaret Alexander Tucker, Harriet Purdy Blackwell and Edith Estep Gray.

The list below is doubtless incomplete. If there are others that should be added Victoria Gillette, president of the club, will be glad indeed to welcome them into the group.

Rotunda Publishes Series of Sketches of Noted Graduates

Since September 1934, the Rotunda has published, from time to time, brief sketches of some of the distinguished alumnae of the college. The purpose has been to acquaint students and others with outstanding achievements of our graduates, and to let them know how far and into how many spheres of usefulness the influence of the college extends. It is obvious from the list given below that only a beginning has been made In time we hope that a series of sketches may be brought together which will, to some extent, represent what Farmville girls have done in many fields. Ultimately these sketches may be published as a bulletin.

It is hoped and urged that all alumnae take it upon themselves to report whatever distinction may come to themselves or to other graduaes. Information,, clippings, articles, and reports concerning things done by former students notable things done by former students especially about books and other publications and degrees, will be welcomed. The Rotunda wishes to chronicle everything of note.

Reports may be sent to Mrs. M. W. Watkins, secretary of Farmville Alumnae Association, or to James M. Grainger, head of the English department.

The list of sketches, so far published, is as follows: Jennie Masters Tabb, September 1934; Lillian Rhodes, November 7; Julia Johnson Davis, poet,, November 14, 1934; Constance Rumbough, November 27, 1934; Carrie Sutherland, '04, president of Arlington Hall, December 12, ,1934; Grace A. George, January 9, 1935; Pauline Williamson, January 16, 1935; Ruth Jamison January 23, 1935; Jean Cameron Agnew, February 6, 1935; Elizabeth Malcolm, February 13; Whitia Parrish, March 20 and 27, 1935; Jean Carruther Boatwright; Ethel Cole Ould, Mary Coleman, Maria Bristow Starke,, Betty C. Wright, Germania Wingo, Olive Hinman.

Freshmen Entertain With Folk Dances

A large crowd of visiting alumnae, parents and friends of the college witnessed the demonstration of folk dances of many countries given by the freshman gym classes in the gymnasium Saturday afternoon, March 7 at 3:15 P. M. The dances were under the direction of Miss Olive T. Ier and Mrs. Fitzpatrick. This demonstration is an annual event on the Founder's Day program.

Included in the dances were: Old Rustic Dance, Siberian Kolo, Jumping Jack, New Castle, French Reel, American Quadrille, Hall Moon, Kolymeko, Green Sleeves, Boomel Scottische, Seven Jumps, Athletic Barn Dance, Harvest is Over, Christmas Time, Irish Lilt. The program was concluded with the dancing of the Virginia Reel.

Ninety-two Students Increase 1935-36 Roll

Our enrollment has jumped from the 640 of last year to an enrollment of 732, an increase of almost 100 students.

Not only is every section of Virginia represented but twelve other states as well. These states and the number of students representing them are: Florida 1, Kentucky 1, Maryland 5, New Jersey 1, New York 2, North Carolina 18, Pennsylvania 1, South Carolina 3, Tennessee 1, Texas 1, Washington D. C. 1 West Virginia 11.

The alumnae met in the Student Building auditorium at nine o'clock, March 7. Mrs. Mildred Dickinson Davis welcomed them back to their Alma Mater, especially the reunion classes. The roll call of chapters revealed many representatives bringing greetings and also contributions to the Jennie Master Tabb Memorial Fund, and the Student Building Fund. A group of Pennsylvania alumnae, represented by Mrs. Olive Smith Bowman, received special recognition for their interest and work. Letters, telegrams, and gifts also testified to the loyalty of individuals and groups.

Miss Carrie B. Taliaferro reported the organization of three new chapters. Hopewell, ,Northampton County and Potomac,, and preparation for organization in four other places.

Dr. Jarman reported a balance on hand of $478.92 for the Cunningham Memorial Fund. He estimated that more than one hundred girls had been aided through this fund and that untold good had been done. The Jennie Masters Tabb Memorial Scholarship Fund, established in 1935, amounted to $104.50. (Later in the day it had grown to $261.00) Answering the question of an alumnae, Dr. Jarman said, "Within five years the Student Building will be paid for."

Mrs. Anne Smith Green, president of the class of 1926, paid a beautiful tribute to the memory of Miss Jennie Tabb, who was their "silent partner". She presented to Dr. Jarman in behalf of her class a gift for the Memorial Fund in a book of Miss Jennie's poems, saying, "For You" from us for her."

Mrs. Davis had secured from the publishers all the remaining copies of the book, "For You", now out of print, and offered them for sale, the proceeds to be added to the Memorial Fund. There were not enough for the demand.

Mildred Dickinson Davis

A committee, Miss G. Elizabeth Rawls chairman, was appointed in 1935 to investigate the matter of some insignia for alumnae, especially for non-graduates, to secure a design and find out the probable cost. The committee, after making a report of the results of its study, was continued and directed to consult with the Alumnae Council.

Miss Moran and her Methods Class in Geography extended an invitation to all alumnae to visit an exhibit of a unit of work on geography and to be served a cup of tea.

Mrs. Davis spoke of her attendance last April with Mrs. Coyner as delegates to the meeting in Washington of the American Association of Alumni Secretaries, from which real inspiration and helpful suggestions for alumnae activity were derived.

Miss Florence H. Stubbs and Miss Leola Wheeler were unanimously elected honorary members of the Association of Farmville Alumnae.

Details of some of the business of the morning are included in articles appearing in this issue of The Rotunda.

Founders Day Originates From "Normal School Days"

In the fall of 1920, a class in Applied Sociology at Farmville with Miss Florence H. Stubbs as instructor and with the assistance of the Y. W. C. A., put on a program known as "Better School Week". The last day of the week being Saturday, was known as Normal School Day. The five girls from the sociology class with Miss Helen Draper of the Y. W. C. A. serving as chairman, composed the committee.

"Better School Week" then was the same as what we know now as Education Week. During this week numerous talks were made giving something of the history of the school; something of its distinguished alumnae, etc. On Saturday, December 11, Normal School Day, a most interesting program was given as a sort of culmination to all that had been done during the week. Everyone in school took part in making the program a success and in consecrating the day as a school day with this purpose in mind: To make a great school greater. Dr. Jarman in his talk at this time stated that he believed December 11 would be epoch making in the history of our school.

Great enthusiasm was shown by the students, alumnae, and faculty at this time in adopting a resolution that the second Saturday in December be set aside each year for observance in the school and by alumnae throughout the State as Farmville School Day.

During "Better School Week" much interest was aroused among the students and faculty in the fund that was being raised for the erection of a Student Building. The class of 1911 was the first to make pledges toward this fund. In 1920 a resolution was adopted that students, alumnae and all interested in the school give their hearty support and contributions to the erection of the Student Building. The building was erected and each year on Founder's Day, students, and alumnae contribute to this fund.

Out of "Normal School Day" grew the idea of Founders' Day. The date was changed from December 11 to March 7 which date marks the day that the bill for establishing a Normal School at Farmville passed the State Legislature. On March 7, 1921 the first real Founders' Day was celebrated, Miss Taliaferro was chairman of the committee in charge.

And so the purpose of "Better School Day" is being fulfilled each years as student, alumnae, and friends gather at Farmville to witness the progress of the school and lay on their Alma Mater's shrine their gifts to make "a great school greater."

Class of '26 Holds Service in Memory of Miss Tabb

A short memorial service in memory of Miss Jennie Tabb was held at Johns Memorial church, which the class of '26 attended in a body. Miss Tabb was a silent partner and was asked to be classman, but because of ill health was unable to accept.) Flowers for the altar were presented by the class.

Alumnae Continue Memorial Library

Several years ago, the alumnae, wishing to place in the college a memorial to Mrs. Portia Lee Morrison, head of the Home from 1887 to 1904, gave $200 for the initial purchase of a collection of books as the most suitable form of memorial. An interesting shelf of books has been assembled. An attractive bookplate marks each book. Also a separate card catalogue is kept for this library, which enables one to examine the collection with ease.

This library grows slowly by gifts of books from friends, and a small annual sum from the Association of Alumnae. If space permitted, it would be of interest to list the titles, which represent the choices of the alumnae who sent in suggestions at the request of the first committee in 1925. President J. D. Eggleston of Hampden-Sydney generously supplied the volumes from Alfred Morrison's works that the library did not already have. The class of 1894 gave three beautiful and valuable books by W. H. T. Squires "The Days of Yesteryear", "The Land of Decision," and "Through Centuries Three." Several of the alumnae have presented copies of their own publications or other books—real additions to the collection. Perhaps there are still other friends of Mrs. Morrison who would like to add a book to this library—a memorial to one who loved books and who inspired hundreds of alumnae to find in their reading "veritable friends with whom they may take refuge in the intervals of work and by whose intimacy they refine, sweeten and embolden their own limited existence."

Founders Day Breathes Life Into Statue Of Joan of Arc

"Goodness, there goes the last girl to bed; things certainly have changed since I've been sitting here—year in and year out. With all these alumnae back it's fun to remember their flaming youth and compare it with that of these young rascals that are enrolled here now.

"Everyone's been so busy all day long . . . I've never seen such a crowd, and it's been so exciting I've nearly shouted aloud more than once.

"The students looked so girlish in their white frocks; and it was so sweet to see them with their mothers who were school girls "way back when". I'm glad it didn't rain today 'twould have been a calamity to have had all those lovely dresses spoiled.

"When that first bunch of alumnae walked in this Rotunda, you could have knocked me over with a feather. Beth still has that flash in her eyes, and Marge's step is still as light and springy as ever, Elizabth's hair is getting gray, but it's very becoming to her. They're still sticking together just as they did in nineteen (ahem). And Nancy—I hardly recognized her. She hasn't been gone so long, but she's changed so! I remember her as a fat, pudgy girl with a grand sense of humor: she's grown almost sophisticated since she's left us.

"The banquet must have been a huge success. The girls looked so grown-up in their evening clothes —very different from the way they fly around here during the week. While they were waiting for the dining room doors to open, the atmosphere reminded me of Grand Hotel or something similar. The only thing that sort of spoiled it was the hungry look on most of the faces. And when they came from the banquet. They all looked so tired—I wonder why?

"Then the boys came to get their dates for the dance. When the girls came down there was so much laughter and light chatter—I often wonder what these youngsters talk about that makes their eyes so brilliant and their smiles so radiant. I overheard old Lucy muttering that to herself once not so long ago, too.

"It seemed hours before they came back—I strained my ears to see if I could hear a bit of the music, but I couldn't. When they finally did come back, both girls and boys looked tired and happy: come to think of it, there were a few unhappy looking couples—perhaps they fussed—that's too bad if they did! Chatter, chatter, chatter—a few squeals—tired, lagging steps—but the ever-present smile—and before I could take everything in, everyone was gone!

"Ah me—it's been a wonderful day. I haven't done anything but sit here, but I've enjoyed every minute of it. Let's see—next year on March 6, it'll happen all over again! I can't wait, but I guess I will."

Alumnae Organize Chapters in State

Plans Are Underway For Further Extension

The number of alumnae chapters has grown to thirty-five by the addition of three new ones since last Founders Day. On a rainy day in November twenty-five Northampton alumnae met, effected a county organization under the leadership of Lila Jacob, and made plans for the future which included three meetings for the year. Nine more members have joined, and the chapter seems to be sailing forward on the sea of success.

Later in the fall the alumnae in Hopewell announced the formation of a chapter there. Practically all former Farmville students became members. Miss Stubbs was guest speaker at one of the meetings. The officers are: President, Mrs. Louise Doyle Rigdon; Secretary, Mrs. Judith Fenner Barnard.

Something a little unusual is expected when the president of the degree class of 1926 "starts the ball rolling". This time it is the organization of the Potomac Chapter of Farmville alumnae on February 29. Miss Carrie Suthpeulin and Mrs. Anne Smith Greene were hostesses at Arlington Hall, Washington, to the alumnae of Washington, Alexandria and Arlington County. Twenty-six were in attendance, and concrete evidence of their interest was given by the checks sent to the Association President and to Dr. Jarman for the Jennie Masters Tabb Memorial Fund and the Student Building Fund. The Officers are: President, Mrs. Rachel McDaniel Biscoe; Vice-president of Washington Group, Mrs. Anne Smith Greene; Vice-president of Arlington Group, Mrs. Minnie Miller Parish; Secretary, Hildegarde Ross; Treasurer, Mrs. Jessie Niedermaier Cooley; Reporter, Mrs. Lucy Haile Overbey Webster.

Alumnae of other localities are making plans for organization this spring. Some of these places are Richmond (there are now two chapters in the city), Lexington, Gloucester County, and Isle of Wight County.

Honor Fraternity Initiates Alumni Into Local Chapter

Kappa Delta Pi honored one of the college's alumnae, Mrs. Bowman, and also Mary Elizabeth Wood, and Margaret Ferguson, present students of the college, with initiation into the local chapter on Monday afternoon on March 9.

Mrs. Bowman is the wife of the College High School Principal and professor of education who immediately preceded Mr. Holton. She was formerly Olive Smith, a member of the class of 1926. Mrs. Bowman, since receiving her B. S. degree here, has studied at Emory University and the University of Chicago. She is now living in Huntington, Pensylvania.

New Staff Invites Alumnae to Write

The FARMVILLE QUARTERLY REVIEW is a literary magazine which begins publication in May, 1936. It is sponsored by the students and Faculty of the State Teachers College, and though primarily intended to encourage literary expression among the students, it will open its columns also for suitable materials from the alumnae, members of the Faculty and other friends of the College who may care to contribute.

The contents will include the usual types of magazine literature —stoulles, poems, essays, sketches, and articles on subjects of current interest. Every department and activity of the College is urged to lend its support to the REVIEW by contributing. Each issue will contain material of real value and interest.

The editors invite you to submit for consideration any writing you may have in hand which you would be willing to have published in the REVIEW if found suitable. The management also urges you to aid the undertaking in every way you can, particularly by subscribing and by prevailing upon others to do so. The price will be $1 per year or 25 cents per copy. At the beginning each issue will contain some sixty pages of reading matter.

Correspondence is invited.

Sincerely,

Mary Harrison Vaughan,
Chairman Board of Editors
Elizabeth Walton, Literary Editor
Martha Hamlet, Business Manager
James M. Grainger,
Chairman Advisory Committee

Large Social Sorority Had Birth at S. T. C.

Zeta Tau Alpha, the seventh largest fraternity for women of the twenty-three National Pan-Hellenic Congress fraternities, the first fraternity to be chartered by the State of Virginia and the only one ever chartered by a special act of the Legislature, was founded at the State Teacher's College in 1898. The membership is now over 10,000. There are 65 active chapters in the leading colleges and universities of this country, Canada and Mexico.

For the past twenty-four years, Zeta Tau Alpha has maintained a Scholarship Loan Fund, for members of the fraternity and non members; recently one hundred girls used this fund in order to complete their college work in the colleges of the United States.

The Fraternity also awards a Fellowship at the University of Texas, in honor of Dr. May Agnes Hopkins the third Grand President. This award is given to a graduate student for the purpose of promoting higher education and research in the field of child development.

A most interesting piece of work is being done by the Fraternity at Marion, Virginia, in the form of a Health Center

Perhaps the most interesting piece of work of this organization to the alumnae, however, is the Maude Jones Gift Scholarship which for the past eight years has been given to a Buckingham County girl in honor of the first Grand President Maud Jones at the College here at Farmville—the birthplace of Zeta Tau Alpha.

Annual Founders' Day Dance Closes Week-end Festivities

Bright lights, gay laughter, colors, excitement! A dance floor, thronged with gaily dressed, happy people is perhaps the loveliest event of our modern life. It was a well suited way in which to conclude the fifty-second anniversary of the State Teachers College.

After a day spent in meeting old friends, renewing ties they had established while here, and making new ones quite as interesting, with the work and students of their Alma Mater, alumnae and friends joined the student body in the gymnasium for dancing. Several hundred persons were present and enjoyed the evening, dancing to the music of the Hampden-Sydney orchestra. The orchestra has played several times for the dances here, but those who heard them Saturday evening thought that they did unusually well. Smooth rhythm, interesting arrangements of favorite numbers, a spirit of enjoying playing as much as those on the floor enjoyed listening made it really sound good.

The gymnasium was not decorated, other than by the crowd itself but that seemed quite sufficient. Nothing more was needed than was there. Some complaints were heard of the great number on the floor, and it was crowded, but that served only to add to the pleasure of almost all present. Getting around to dance with all one's friends and friend's friends may have been a little difficult in spots on the floor, but what would a dance be without people, and since the more the merrier, who cares? Only happy memories linger of the occasion, and the student body eagerly awaits next March when daughters and granddaughters may be together here again.

Geography Dept. Hostess at Japanese Tea Saturday

Saturday afternoon from 4 to 6 Geography 331 taught by Miss Grace Moran displayed an exhibition of work of this methods class on a "Unit of Japan". In this exhibition there were displayed maps, charts, flat maps, gift-shop, graphs, picture posters of Japan, and articles from the Valentine Museum.

Geography 331, methods in geography entertained the alumnae of S. T. C. on Saturday afternoon with a Japanese tea at the Japanese exhibition.

Monday afternoon from 2 to 4:30 the Methods in Geography entertained the geography department at a Japanese tea.

A reception was given by the A. A. Council Saturday night after the basketball game for the Harrisonburg and Farmville basketball teams. Longwood buns and tea were served in the Y. W. C. A. lounge.

Bess and Madeline McGlothlin have been fortunate in having their mother as their guest for several days recently.

Miss Winne V. Hiner, S. T. C. Treasurer, has been granted a leave of absence of a month in which to recuperate from injuries received in a fall this winter.

The absence of Miss Maude K. Talliaferro from her place in the S. T. C. post-office is noted with regret. She has been quite ill with the flu for some time. Anne Johnson, her assistant, is carrying on her work.

Germany Startles Europe

It seems as if France is ready for armed action against the Reich since she is rushing soldiers to the Border in protest against German occupation of the Rhineland. The French government has also asked that Germany be punished by the League of Nations for committing "a hostile act".

Great Britain is lying low. A big part of her forces are in the Mediterranean and Egypt so she has left the question as a subject for debate in a future cabinet meeting.

Italy, on hearing of Hitler's move, decided upon an official policy of no action as far as the Locarno Pact abrogation is concerned.

Russia and Czechoslovakia have pledged unlimited support to France.

Cuban Situation

The three years of governmental turmoil which has been prevalent in Cuba, now seems to be coming to a standstill.

The revolution has been responsible for the overthrow of President Machados, the lyching of Mashadistas, and to the seizure of the army command. Military authority fell into the hands of a group of non-commissioned officers who are guilty of indiscriminate crime.

There are rumors abroad that Dr. Orestes Farrara, Italian born lawyer and diplomat, Secretary of State in Machado's cabinet, and the most astute politician Cuba has known is back. He is reported to be planning the establishment of a new newspaper to take the place of "Heraldo de Cuba", Machado's strongest defender.

Planet Nears Earth

Astronomers have announced that the new-found minor planet may be only the size of a small mountain. Professor E. Delporte of Belgium claims that the body just missed the earth as it rushed by on February 7.

"Anteros", as it is called, "was only 1,500,000 miles away and most minor planets never come within 50,000,000 miles of the earth." It is said, too that "the gravitational disturbance of its motion can be very great." Calling all flit guns.

On the first Monday in April the new administration will come in headed by the Liberals. Dr. Miguel Gomez will be inaugurated President of Cuba. The newly elected members of Congress will take the oath of office on May 20.

loves. She was in love with France, she was in love with the church, and she was in love with war. The latter love, when so stated, is startling. However, Joan loved war as a means by which to deliver France from her state of despair and suffering. For one hundred years France had been plunged into the ravages of war and all deliverance seemed futile. During her whole career as commander of the French forces, not once did Joan draw her sword to kill, she used it as a symbol of her strength.

As Miss Andrews concluded her reminiscenses with the reading of one of her favorite poems on Joan of Arc, her listeners stretched, rubbed their eyes and heaved a sigh. Somebody produced hot coffee and sandwiches and not until the ten-thirty bell rang did the group disperse.

Rotunda Reverberations

What this school needs is: an emplifier for the announcement reader in the dining hall an umbrella over the Geography Department steps; an extra bench at library hall steps; a flag for the flag-pole; ten more telephone booths; a radio in the "rec"; an extra night in the week for meetings; a little less voice during the study hour; more bran for breakfast; more basketball teams like the one we have now; fewer term papers; a Dorothy Dix to settle a few affairs; less spring fever; dozens more Nelson Eddies.

I just heard that Johnny and "Ginny" are all washed up. Awful sorry!

The Esquire models from Richmond last week-end made me catch my breath when they paraded the campus all day Sunday in Tuexdo pants.

Grace, you're entirely excluded from the noble organization that you helped organize a few weeks ago. You were seen rolling your eyes not less than three times last week-end. The sisters of the order are disgusted and request that you hand in your resignation.

3rd Row: L. Sanford, R. Phelps, J. McConnaughey.

Final Scores Give Varsity Forty-Seven Point Lead

Basketball season is over! May the spirit of sportsmanship of the varsity team of '36 live on!

Journeying to Lynchburg for the first game of the season, Farmville defeated Lynchburg College January 31 by a score of 40-15. Those playing were Inez Chappell, Frances Hudgins, Jennie Carnoll, Kathleen Ranson, Ruth Phelps, Sue Eastham, Betty Butterworth, Jean McConnaughey, Lelia Sanford, Agnes Bondurant, Kitty Roberts, Edna Bolick, Virginia Smith, and Linda Walker.

The second game played was with William and Mary in the Farmville gym, February 15. Farmville again was victorious by a score of 26-18. The game proved thrilling to the spectators and was a forecast of the success with which the S. T. C. varsity was to meet her opponents during the remainder of the season.

The following Friday, Sweet Briar went down to defeat under the accurate goal-shooting and the brilliant passing of our squad. The score was 23-15. Farmville having held a lead throughout the game.

Farmville played her one out-of-the-state game at Westminister, Maryland, on February 28, when she lost to Western Maryland College with a score of 24-23.

Then, last, but by no means least, Farmville "topped off" her brilliant season by displaying excellent floor work and fine cooperation in winning from her greatest rival, Harrisonburg S. T. C. The game was played March 6, and resulted in a 28-21 victory for F. S. T. C. It was a memorable game to every spectator for the spectacular plays and the "fight to the finish" spirit displayed by both teams has rarely been equaled in our gym.

Congratulations and acknowledgement of the great part she played in our victories are given to Miss Iler, coach, by both team and student body.

Kathleen Ranson served as captain of the 1936 team; Sue Eastham was manager, with Ellen Conyers as assistant manager. Kathleen, since 1932, has been a main support for the team and this year her moral leadership as well as splendid playing inspired the team in each game. Sue Eastham, side center, displayed fast passing and running consistently.

Virginia Carroll, a crack-shot forward, shows great promise for the future. Credit is given to her for running up our scores when emergencies demanded it. Frances Hudgins, forward, worried our opposing guards more than once with her quick, accurate goal-shooting.

Lelia Sanford, guard, prevented many a goal and score by her timely defense, and Virginia Smith, freshman guard, broke up every dribble directed her way, intercepting many a pass.

With only three graduating members of the varsity squad, S. T. C. may look forward to a strong and competent team in the next few years.

wards showing up well.

Enough cannot be said for the Farmville centers, captain Kathleen Ranson and Sue Eastham who never failed to keep the ball going in the right direction. Lelia Sanford and Virginia Smith, guards, lost no time in ruining opportunities for their strong opponents.

This game marked the close of Kathleen Ranson's and Lelia Sanford's career at S. T. C. Both have made history this season.

Hats off to Miss Iler and her team for starting Founder's Day off with a proverbial bang!

The line-up:

Harrisonburg	Farmville
R.F.—Kellam (C)	Carroll, V.
L.F. Duncan	Hudgins
J.C. Brennan	Ranson (C)
S.C. Byers	Eastham
R.G. Stoames	Sanford, L.
L.G.—Irby	Smith, V.

Substitutions: Harrisonburg, Fruberg, Powell, Puller, Stevens, Fitzgerald.

"Too Many Marys" will be presented by the College High School in the large auditorium on Friday, March 13, at 8:30 P. M. The play is under the direction of Miss Margaret Farrar. There will also be dance selections by Mrs. Burnett's dance class. Admission 25c.

Freshman-Senior Game Ends 18-8

Badger and Bondurant Are High Point Players

Supported by a strong cheering group, the freshmen defeated the seniors with the score 18-8 in the last of the inter-class basketball games on Tuesday afternoon.

Although there were just five players on the senior team, they gave the freshmen some strong competition. No goals were made by either team durng the last half of the game.

Badger scored twelve points for the freshmen and Carroll six points. On the senior team, Bondurant scored eight points.

The lineup was as follows:

Freshmen	Seniors
R.F. Carroll	Walmsley
L.F. Badger	Bondurant
J.C.—McConnaughey	Ranson
S.C. Nelson
R.G.—Butterworth, A.	Walker
L.G.—Smith, V.	Hurtt

Substitutes: Burton, forward; Ebel, side center.

Officials: Miss Iler, referee; Bernice Mann, umpire.

Leap Year Foolscap Appears in Red

February Issue Dedicated to "Reverse Courting"

The February issue of "Foolscap" managed, apparently by dint of much effort, to make its appearance on this Campus about the 26th of the month. This issue was daringly clad in red and entitled Leap Year Number to remind the poor helpless darlings of the male sex that the females were planning a man hunt. It contained some excellent "game" advice for the ladies in their hunt to exterminate all bachelors in the various colleges of the state. It might be of interest to some of the students on the Hill that they prefer girls of the "Josephine College" type which means the mythical, rather abstract creature featured in fiction and the movies as a searing flame of personality. It seems that we resemble Randolph-Macon in this respect.

The cartoons in this issue dealt chiefly with the theme of reverse courting or the open chasing of men by women. The jokes followed the same thought scheme and taken as a whole might produce a dozen laughs and a few chuckles.

There were some columns that contained some useful data for the footloose college students, such as the one giving dates, where, etc. of the various dances and athletic functions being given in the state.

The magazine also solicited contributions from the aspiring humorists of the various colleges.

Reporter Reviews Proverbial Fire

People of Farmville were aroused from slumber at 4:30 on the morning of November 17, 1923, by the shrill sounds of the fire whistle. Instantly the alarm spread. S. T. C. (State Normal, then) was on fire! Quickly the local fire department sped to the scene of the blaze which was located in the dining hall and kitchen building, the site of the present dining hall.

Mrs. Blanton sounded the alarm, and with very little confusion the fifty girls whose rooms were over the kitchen and dining room marched to safety. Everyone escaped uninjured, although a few unfortunate souls lost all their belongings.

Nobly the Farmville Fire Department led by Mr. Shannon fought the blaze which spread wildly, threatening the Main Building. Finally at 7:30 the fire was checked within thirty feet of the Rotunda. Damages were estimated between $150,000 and $200,000. The kitchen was completely destroyed and the dining hall was nearly as bad.

Dr. Jarman was called home from Richmond. Governor E. Lee Trinkle, then in office, also rushed to the scene. During chapel exercises that morning Governor Trinkle commended the girls for their order and behavior. At this time Dr. Jarman announced that school would be disbanded until after Thanksgiving since the pipes of the main heating system were destroyed. Only the senior class did not share the holiday granted as classes in the training school were not interrupted.

The townspeople rose to the emergency and served the girls' meals in their homes and in the churches. The erecting of the Student Building, then well begun, was rushed in order to accomodate the students whose rooms were burned. The gymnasium was turned into a dining hall.

ted "The Spirit of the Alma Mater," Knowledge, Recreation, Inspiration, and Alma Mater. At the end of this dance, Hazel Smith, president of the student body presented a gift to Dr. Jarman. The costumes were designed by Ruth Gleaves, Josephine Gleaves and Virginia Tilman. Ligthing was by Fletcher Walker and the pianist was Dorothy Wise.

After one stanza of the Alma Mater by the audience, Mildred Dickinson Davis, the President of the Alumnae Association, made a welcome address. She also read a telegram from an alumna who was unable to attend. Many wires and letters had been received, she said, from alumnae chapters unable to send delegates. Eleven chapters had representatives who gave their gifts to Dr. Jarman. These were from: Amherst, Appomattox, Culpeper, Farmville, The Jennie Masters Tabb Chapter (Powhatan), Lynchburg, The Peninsula Chapter, Petersburg, Richmond, Northhampton, and the Potomac Chapter. The Potomac Chapter is the youngest one, having been organized last week.

Wise To Head Y. W. For Coming Year

Organization Sponsors Talks on Peace in Meetings

As a result of the major elections held on Monday, March 23, Dorothy Wise, Craddocksville, has been chosen president of the Y. W. C. A. for 1936. Dorothy has been prominent in Y. W. work ever since, as a freshman, she was a member of the music committee of the organization. In 1934-35 she was chairman of that committee, and this year she has served on the Y. W. Council as treasurer.

The Y. W. C. A. holds an outstanding position of the Farmville S. T. C. campus. It has always taken an active part in backing any worthwhile movement, either locally or in connection with the sectional or national movement. At the convention last fall the theme of Peace was selected for the year's program and the Farmville Y. W. C. A. joined other schools in Virginia and other states in endorsing this nation-wide movement.

This week the theme is being carried out in Prayers and the Students Day chapel program by a series of talks on that subject. Among the speakers who are participating in the program are Miss Mary W. Cox, Dr. Walmsley, Hazel Smith and Agnes Crockett.

The national organization of Y. W. C. A. will hold its biennial convention at Colorado Springs, Colorado, from April 29 through May 6. Both incoming and outgoing president, Agnes Crockett and Dorothy Wise will attend the convention.

Levy to Go South As S. T. C. Speaker

Representative Goes to Pi Kappa Delta Convention

On Friday, March 27, about midnight, Gertrude Reyner Levy will leave on train for Houston, Texas, to represent S. T. C. at the Eleventh National Biennial Convention of Pi Kappa Delta. Gertrude will compete in the National Oratorical Contests for Women, being the only contestant from Virginia.

The convention will have its headquarters at the Rice Hotel in Houston from Sunday, March 29, through Friday, April 13. Preliminary reports from seventy-four Pi Kappa Delta chapters show that 401 delegates are expected. Of these 40 will be in the Women's Oratorical contests.

Prominent on the plans for entertaining the delegates are luncheons, dinners, a sightseeing trip to Galveston and the Gulf, social evenings, and the Pi Kappa Delta Convention banquet, at which an address will be made by Cameron Beck, Director, New York Stock Exchange Institute.

Gertrude has represented S. T. C. in three previous inter-collegiate oratorical contests during her two years at college: the South Atlantic Tournament held at Hickory, N. C.; the Tau Kappa Alpha State Convention held at Randolph-Macon Women's College at Lynchburg; and the Strawberry Leaf Tournament held at Winthrop College at Rock Hill, S. C. She won the South Atlantic Women's Oratorical Championship for the first time for S. T. C.

Hamlet is Elected To Succeed Huse

New House Council Head Voted on by Students

Martha Hamlet of Phenix, Va., will be next year's House Council president, as a result of the major elections Monday, March 23. .

Martha was a member of the House Council in her sophomore year, as a hall president. In her junior year she was treasurer of the Student Council. Other extra-curricular activities have claimed Martha's time. She is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, national scholastic fraternity, Alpha Phi Sigma, national honorary society, and the Debate Club. She has served on the Service Committee of the Y. W. C. A. for two years, and is head of the costuming department of the Dramatic Club. Martha has been recently appointed Business Manager of the new literary magazine, by the faculty appointing committee. She also belongs to the Cotillion Club, and the Mu Omega sorority.

Martha, in the office of House Council President, will follow Elizabeth Huse, present head.

Supervisors Attend Administrative Meet

The Virginia Council of Administrative Women in Education will hold its annual spring seminar on March 27-28 at State Teachers' College, Fredericksburg. The theme of the seminar is to be "The Challenge to the Administrative Women."

Miss Pauline Camper, Farmville S. T. C. supervisor, who is a charter member of the organization and who served as secretary for some time, will attend the meetings, and take part in the program.

The convention will open with a banquet on Friday night, with speakers including Mrs. F. R.

Dr. Walmsley Speaks On Peace Program

The Students' Day chapel exercises on March 25 were led by Dorothy Wise, who introduced Dr. Walmsley as the speaker of the morning.

In keeping with the theme of "Peace" which the Y. W. C. A. chose for 1935-36, Dr. Walmsley spoke on the subject of a "Program for Peace". He brought out the fact that we all have sentiments and feelings against war. We have signed pledges and carried on strikes, talked disarmament and signed treaties, but these are mere gestures which

University Teacher to Lecture and Read Poetry

"I have written much poetry since I was seventeen", said Mr. Lawrence Lee recently in connection with his coming visit to Farmville and the State Teachers College on April 17, for readings from his poems; and "I hope to continue." Mr. Lee is coming at the invitation of Beore Eh Thorn, the English Honor society, which will present him to the College as another item in the literary programs which it inaugurated last fall by the delightful visit of Miss Nancy Byrd Turner. Mr. Lee will also lecture on Emily Dickinson and other recent poets.

Though a native of Montgomery, Alabama, Lawrence Lee is sprung from the distinguished Lees of Virginia and is a graduate of the University of Virginia. Since his graduation, he has lived abroad for a time and also spent six years in New York, editing a group of popular magazines. He now lives at Charlottesville where he teaches French in the University.

His poetry has appeared in many magazines and anthologies of a literary character. "A Hawk from Cuckoo Tavern", his ballad on Jack Jouett's ride in revolutionary Virginia, more notable in many ways than Paul Revere's

Ninety - Two Guests Enjoy Entertainment In Lounge, March 24

Eighty-six girls from the following cities and counties were entertained with a supper in the Student Building Lounge Tuesday evening, March 24, with Miss Mary White Cox as hostess: Norfolk, Norfolk County, Portsmouth, Princess Anne County, Nansemond County, Albemarle County, Orange County, Spotsylvania County, Madison County, and Culpepper. Miss Pierce, Miss Carter, Mr. and Mrs. McCorkle, Dr. and Mrs. Jeffers were guests.

During the supper Julia Anne Waldo and Elsie Greene sang several numbers, accompanied by Nancy Pobst at the piano. Virginia Ritchie played piano selections.

Margaret Clark, Eleanor Dodson, Frances Haskins, Frances Irving, Mary Elizabeth Minor, Ruth Sears, and Sue Waldo helped in

Beorc E h Thorn Will Award Prizes For Best Articles

Magazine Will Accept Stories, Poems and Essays

Three prizes will be awarded by Beorc Eh Thorn to the persons writing the best essay, the best short story, and the best poem submitted for publication in the forth-coming literary magazine. The contest is open to all girls in school who wish to take part, and the prize-winning articles will be given places of recognition in the magazine.

The judges for the contest are to be selected from the town of Farmville or its vicinity, and will be persons of recognized ability as writers and critics who are not closely connected with the college.

The contest closes at midnight on April 15. The first announcement of the winners will be made in the magazine itself, and the prizes will be awarded in chapel on the first Tuesday after the magazine appears.

Gamma Theta Holds Twenty-Fifth Annual Celebration, March 21

On March 21, the twenty-fifth anniversary of Gamma Theta Sorority was celebrated. The occasion was honored by presence of seven of the eight founders of the chapter; Louise Eubank Broaddus, Nita, Evans, Ruth Shepard Forbes, Ann Wilkinson Cox, Lilly Percival Rucker, Florence Buford, and Irene Briggs. About seventy-five alumnae returned, representing every year since 1911.

A formal banquet was held at Longwood on Saturday night; those present included the alumnae, the active chapter, Dr. Jarman, Miss Stubbs, Miss Mix, and Miss Mary White Cox. The alumnae presented three hundred dollars to Dr. Jarman to initiate a Gamma Theta Alumnae Student Loan Fund.

At a meeting of the alumnae after the banquet, Pat Cowherd Adkins was reelected president, and Dorothy Leonard Moore was elected secretary for next year.

Fifty of the guests were accomodated at Longwood overnight and others in school. Sunday morning an informal breakfast was served at Longwood to the alumnae and the present chapter. With the help of Miss Stubbs and the founders, the early history of Gamma Theta was related with interesting and personal incidents.

Dramatic Club To Present Annual Spring Play, April 3

All prospective husbands should be notified of the production of "Taming of The Shrew" on our stage April 3. Quite a few outstanding features of courting and marrying may be of great help to the bewildered males who are contemplating nuptial ceremonies.

Virginia Agee did not bargain for a gym lesson or a ruff and tumble bout when she accepted the leading lady part but—oh well, "the plans of mice and men". Now she daily suffers cave-man treatment at the hands of her tamer, Chubby Gray. Chubby has a whip that she cracks coming and going. (If you see her coming, you better start going for even Director Wheeler has felt its sting). Miss Wheeler stamps her foot, Chubby cracks her whip, Gin Agee jumps and so a cracking good time is had by all.

Just one week from Friday the big affair comes off. Practice has become intent on the finishing touches. Virginia and Chubby are taking less and less time out to stop for laughing at the hilarious speeches and gestures characteristic of a Shakespearian comedy. They have even gotten so that when Virginia calls an old withered, lame man a sweet blushing maid, neither of them crack a smile though the object of their remarks, Katie Ryburn, sometimes has to burst out giggling at their very seriousness.

Our little Yankee talking freshman, Nan Throckmorton, plays the personal servant of the quick wit and sharp tongue to her lovelorn master, Elizabeth Carroll. The contrivances of these two men of Padua to marry the latter to the shrew's beautiful, bashful but time-making sister, Clara Nottingham, are considereable enough to carry on an interesting theme all

Lane Elected Head Of Student Body

Hudgins is Elected President of A. A.

Athletic Presidency is Held Again by Local Girl

Frances Hudgins, of Farmville, was chosen by the Student Body vote as president of the Athletic Association for the coming year. During her three years at Farmville, Hudgins has been very outstanding in athletics. Her sophomore year she was elected secretary of the Athletic Association, and served on the A. A. Council this year. She also made the varsity basketball team in her sophomore year. She is a star forward, and has been outstanding in that position in this, her junior year. In swimming, also, Frances has been one of S. T. C.'s best, entering all the swimming meets for class and group teams. At different intervals, she has taken first place in swimming for speed and form, and in diving.

Frances is a member of the Cotillion Club, and the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority. She follows Louise Walmsley in the presidency of the A. A.

Delegates Attend Physical Ed Meet

Charlottesville, Virginia, will be the meeting-place of the Virginia State Society of Physical Education on Saturday, March 28. The Convention, which will be held in Madison and Monroe Halls, is the first of its kind to be held in the State.

Starting at nine o'clock with registration, the program will continue until 5:00 p. m., including lectures and discussions on the different sports, health topics, and the modern dance. Demonstrations of activities will include archery, fencing, badminton, deck tennis, hand tennis, horseshoes, group games, by students from William and Mary and Fredericksburg S. T. C.

Representatives from Hollins, William and Mary, University of Virginia, University of Richmond, Washington and Lee, Westhampton, Fredericksburg, Farmville, Sweet Briar, Mary Baldwin, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, will be present, in addition to various high school representatives from different parts of the state.

Luncheon will be held at 1:15 with Dr. Seward C. Stanley, Professor of Physical Education at University of Illinois, as guest speaker. "The Curriculum in Sports" will be the subject of his talk.

Miss Barlow will give a talk on "Health Education Materials

Sodalitas Latina Has Election of Officers

Sodalitas Latina held its regular meeting Thursday, March 19, at 5:00 in the Language Room, for the election of new officers. The following were elected for next year: President, Libby Morris; Vice-president Ruth Phelps; Secretary, Sue Baynard; Treasurer, Katherine Milby. Initiation will be held at the April meeting.

The latter part of the meeting was devoted to the program which consisted of a series of Latin games.

Old and New Heads Attend Annual Convention

Bonnie Lane, Roanoke, Va., was elected president of the Student Council for 1935-36 in the election of major officers, Monday, March 23.

Bonnie has been quite active in curricular and extra-curricular activities during her three years at S. T. C. In her freshman year she was a member of Student Standards Committee; as a Sophomore, she represented her class on the Student Council, and as a junior she was Secretary of the Student Council. Bonnie was a cabinet member on the Y. W. C. A., chairman of Sing committee, and was one of the five girls who represented S. T. C. at the Y. W. C. A. Convention at Blue Ridge, N. C. in June, 1935, and she again represented Farmville and the Y. W. C. A. at the International Youth's Conference at Indianapolis, Indiana, from December 26 until January 2, 1935. She has been a reporter on the Rotunda Staff all three years. She is a member of Alpha Phi Sigma, in the masters degree, and served as president of that organization for the past year. Bonnie is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary fraternity for scholarship and Beorc Eh Thorn, Englishh honor fraternity. In fall of 1935, she was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary fraternity for leadership.

In the field of athletics, Bonnie has been on the class hockey and swimming teams. She is on the Dean's List, a member of the Dramatic Club, Cotillion Club and the Mu Omega Sorority.

The president of the Student Council, Hazel Smith, and the president elect will leave Thursday to attend the twenty-first annual meeting of the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government, which will be held March 27, 28, and 29 at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Georgia. Last year's convention was held at the Florida State Teacher's College for Women at Talahassee, Florida.

Purdom to Attend National Conference

Miss Purdom will leave Farmville Friday to attend the National Conference of Music Educators in New York.

Eight thousand prominent educators from all parts of the United States are expected to attend. The conference will begin Sunday, March 29, and will last one week.

The Metropolitan Opera Company will give a special performance of the opera "Lohengrin". The New York Philharmonic Orchestra will also give special concerts. Dr. Walter Damrosch, Dr. Finda Williamson, and Dr. Tertius Noble will give talks.

New Girls Initiated Into Honor Society

Virginia Hannah, Doris Coates, Elsie Cabell, Ruth Scott, and Dortha Harrison were initiated into the Apprentice Degree of Alpha Phi Sigma on the night of March 15. Ruth Phelps and Norvell Montague were promoted to the Masters' Degree.

All of the girls initiated are upperclassmen and therefore entered the second degree of the fraternity. The Masters have met the requirements of a high scholastic average and of membership in the fraternity at least one year.

Smiles

Did you ever stop to think that man is the only animal on earth who has the power to smile? The sky can't smile, cats and dogs can't smile—even flowers can't smile.

What a wonderful gift he possesses! How good it makes us feel to receive a sunny smile from someone—even if only from a girl we casually pass on the hall. A smile could be compared to a drop of a stone in water—the ripples spread, each one growing broader—just like a smile.

It really isn't any trouble to smile, and it makes you as well as the other person feel better. This world could be a much happier place if we would just stick to the adage:

"Smile and the world smiles with you
Kick and you kick alone
For a cheerful grin will let you in
Where a kicker is never known."

The Ever Recurring War Threats In Europe

While the thud of war continues in Ethiopia, the flash of German arms in the Rhineland draws first attention at present. Since the supposedly peaceful settlement of control of the Saar Basin early in 1935, the eyes of the world have been turned from the moves of France and Germany on the European checkerboard to gain more territory in Africa.

Just what is German's motive in openly violating the letter and spirit of the Locarno Treaty, no one knows certain! None of Hitler's policies have accorded with the spirit and requirements of the Versailles Treaty. But the obligations of the treaty of 1920 were forced upon the defeated and broken German people. In 1925, on the other hand, Germany met on an equal footing with four nations and signed a treaty that, if kept inviolate, would guarantee the peace in Western Europe. Some argue, along with Hitler, that Germany's move was justified by the fact that France had just a while back signed a treaty with Russia that increased French security and thus furnished a menace to Germany. But Germany's occupation of the Rhineland affects not only France but Belgium as well. Belgium,, then, happens to be the goat a second time as Germany takes her aggressive steps against France.

It is difficult to draw any conclusions at present to justify the moves of either nation or to prophesy the outcomes. Show of antagonism between Germany and France is ever recurring. Will war result in this generation, is the age-old question in Europe.

School Ethics

The foundation of school is confidence which springs from integrity and fair play.

The reward of school for the study put into it is success.

Knowledge, thorough and specific, and unceasing study of the facts and forces affecting a school are the essentials for success.

Permanency and continuity of success are the basic aims of school, that knowledge gained may be fully utilized.

Obligation to the student and to society prompts the school to trive toward perfection of the student, bettering the conditions of the professors, and increasing the efficiency and opportunities of its charges.

Representation of knowledge by the student should be truthfully made.

Waste in any form—time, ability, or opportunity—is disastrous, and constant effort should be made towards the elimination of these things.

Unfair competition is a public 'wrong. The schoolar should rely for his success on the excellence of his own work.

Arguments should, when possible, be adjusted by a voluntary agreement between the persons.

Responsibilities of the student should be performed and discharged as though he were acting for some employer.

Hearty co-operation among school organizations in support of the highest principle is necessary.

The Flood

Newspapermen, relief crews, railroad offcials, public utility magnates, Red Cross workers, radio stationers all worked feverishly throughout the past few days when floods have wrought terror up and down the eastern section of our country. With lights out, gas mains cut off, transportation at a standstill and water rising with terrifying rapidity from four great rivers, the Connecticut, ,Susquehanna, Ohio, and Potomac, the population of the unaffected areas read of the disasters.

As they read the latest editions or listened to the final news bulletin from candle lit radio studios, ,they gave expression to their horror; they voiced their sympathy aloud in the seclusion of their homes, on the streets, even in the pulpits. In many cases their generous impulses found the way to Red Cross and relief agencies. Yes, we Americans have tender feelings, warm hearts, charitable impulses which end in worthy constitutions. Our community chest drives, our campaigns to release our churches from debt, yes even our Student Building funds show that the Americans have sympathetic hearts and kind natures.

If a Virginian reads of a fellow citizen in distress in Pennsylvania, he rushes willingly to the rescue with any aid he can summon, monetary or personal. While storms wreak havoc in one section destroying with a deadly vengeance homes, lives, property, help is awaiting the unfortunate victims. America is criticized by many who don't know her as a money mort, a materialistic vampire; but those who understand her best testify first and last to the humanitarian spirit which rules her domain of forty-eight sisters.

Such people! No sooner do we begin to emerge from a depresion that we start worrying about the depression that will follow the next boom.—St. Joseph News-Press.

At Wake Forest College they have been having a flu epidemic. It seems that when hospital business increased a bit, the college engaged four beautiful young nurses to assist. The news spread like wildfire and before long the infirmary was packed and jammed with violently (?) sick sutdents. Dr. White may file this for a rainy day when students are too healthy.

It seems that the sense of equilibrium of the would-be dances of West Point is easily disturbed. Mr. and Mrs. George Roberts of Tulsa, Oklahoma, went to the academy to teach dancing to those cadets who didn't know how, they took along as accompanists two young women from their dancing school. It was a good idea but it didn't work. The young ladies disturbed the equilibrium of the U. S. Army cadets and so have been banned forever.

Just as a traveler was writing his name on the register of a Leavenworth hotel, a bed-bug appeared and took its way across the page. The man paused and remarked: "I've been bled by St. Joe fleas, bitten by Kansas City spiders, and interviewed by Fort Scott graybacks, but I'll be darned if I ever was in a place where the bed bugs looked over the hotel register to find out where your room was!"

OPEN FORUM

Dear Editor:-

In my estimation and in the estimation of a great many other students, the entire school owes a debt of gratitude to a member of our Student Body. I am referring to Anne Johnson who, during the recent illness of Miss Tallifero, kept the wheels turning in the Post Office.

It would have been no little joke to have the incoming mail lay dormant in the canvas mail bags, or the outgoing correspondence pile up in the basket behind the letter slot. And, you know, that would have been the exact situation had it not been for Anne's "knowing the ropes" and pulling the right strings at the right times.

We wouldn't have enjoyed seeing the dust collect in our boxes, would we? We would have sadly missed our weekly checks from home—and can't you see love-lorn looks on the faces of those girls who get letters every night from "the" one-andonly?

Anne didn't have to do it—but she did—cheerfully and faithfully. For our sakes she spent her entire afternoons in that stuffy-looking little room, and for our sakes she nearly lost her mind trying to find whose box was whose. It was the spirit of cooperation in her: would that more of us had just that spirit in us.

And so—let's take our hats off to Anne Johnson—she deserves it!

Lawrence Lee: Virginia Poet

Lawrence Lee, one of Virginia's younger poets is connected with the famous Lee family and with the South Carolina Alstons. He was born in Alabama, but loves Virginia, particularly Albemarle County, and he teaches French at the University of Virginia, his alma mater.

As a poet, he has contributed to such magazines as Scribner's, Harper's, American Mercury, and others. He has had two small volumes published in limited editions.

It is to be our great pleasure to hear Lawrence Lee read some of his verse on the night of April 17, and in order that we may better know him here are some comments by critics concerning his work:

"He is the born lyrist. There is an exquisitely pure and crystal quality about his work and a certain Elizabethan touch. Few write lyrics now with such delicacy, spontaneity, and charm."—Jessie B. Rittenhouse.

"His lyrics really sing. The sonnets are firmly, delicately poised."
—Theodore Maynard.

So One Remembers

I shall not think of you with grief.
Time was too fleet, and you seem fair;
Yea, but the blossoms, too, are brief,
And you were rarer than they are.
I ask no miracle to stay,
Nor beauty to grow intimate;
Enough that beauty went this way
On feet too sure to hesitate.
And I shall thank swift time for you,
More than for many things that last,
Happy that I was he who knew
One secret little way you passed.
So one remembers silent bells
That tumbled music on the town,
And thinks of rain in fresh earth smells
And green things sprung where rain came down.

When Summer's In Full Bloom

When summer's in full bloom, full bloom,
You will be sitting in your room,
Radiant, secret, and serene,
With wind and sunlight in the scene
And blue beyond your window sill.
The morning will be very still,
As though wou were a bloom or bird
And it hung breathless till you stirred.
Only the little winds shall shake
Green, leafy thoughts of you awake,
And quicken in the waking heart
Passions more deeply set than art—
That spring and sing me from the gloow:
'Summer is in full bloom, full bloom!'

For A Poet Growing Old

If you should go, and beauty still be hidden
Beyond the woods and the last meadow wall,
We shall keep up the lonely chase, unbidden,
Except by a far horn which we heard call.
Who catches beauty as a hound must run,
Nose in the wind and trembling for the race;
And we, whose hunt is scarcely well begun,
Feel, with the thrill, the terror of the chase.
Yet, should our eager muzzles never find
The fields where beauty in her speed goes by,
Or we, grown old, come limping up the wind,
There shall be younger hounds to hear the cry
And leap to overtake her like a hind;
And down the world the hunt shall never die.

This Was Her Country

This was her country. She returns.
Oh, gentle clay,
Receive a heart which never yearns
To go away.
Make of this body now some green
And graceful thing
To grow and flourish and be seen
When it is spring.
Since death must change her anywhere,
In this red loam
What wakes of her will be aware
That she is home.

Y. W. C. A. and Student Council Honor Miss Mary

Thursday night, March 12, the Y. W. C. A. and Student Council entertained in honor of Miss Mary's birthday with a lovely banquet at Longwood.

Other guests included Dr. Jarman and Miss Jane Royall.

The color scheme, yellow and green, representing spring, was very attractively carried out in the flowers, vases, menus, place cards and the salad course.

At the end of the dinner, Dr. Jarman sang several songs which was a real treat to everyone present.

AS A PARTY

Pledges of Alpha Sigma Alpha were entertained by the members of the sorority, March 21, by a weiner roast held at the cabin at Longwood. Those attending included both old girls and new, and Miss Grace Moran, adviser.

Last Pledge Party

The pledges of Apha Sigma Tau entertained Thursday night after exams in honor of Jane Main who graduated at the end of the winter quarter. The pledges first had a business meeting and then had the party.

Spring Sends Students Forth on Trips, Visits

With the relief of "exams over at last" making them even more gay, and the gorgeous spring weather bringing forth the wanderlust a large proportion of students took themselves away to foreign parts over the week-end.

A majority of those who were away visited their homes. These include: Martha Hamlet, Phenix; Doris and Dorothy Adkins, Danville; Louise Anthony, Danville; Virginia Bean, Chic Dortch, Rose Puller, Minnie Smith, and Buck Pleasants, South Hill; Dot Buckland, Roanoke; Mary Wilson Clark, Newport News; Elinor Dunham, Durham, N. C.; Elsie Dodd, Richmond; Jennie Belle Gilliam, Eugenia Jolly, Kathleen McCann, and Isabel Plummer, Petersburg; Will Scott, Orange; Elizabeth Smith and Lucille Moseley, Newport News; Dorothy Price Brookneal; Sue Mallory, Lawrenceville; Mary H. Vaughan and Lib Harris, South Boston; Charlotte Rice and Elizabeth Huse, Roanoke; Claudia Harper, Newport News; Dorothy Lewis, Raleigh, N. C.; and Henrietta Salsbury, Richmond.

Among those who sojourned in Charlottesville last week-end, attending dances, etc. were: Lloyd Kelly, Virginia Tilman, Zell Hopkins, and Bernice Jones.

A number of the girls went on shopping trips ,or visited friends. These were: Leslie Bradshaw, Burkeville; Marguerite Blackwell, Roanoke; Doris Coates, Norfolk; Virginia Carroll, Rocky Mount; Lucille Davis, Clarksville; Margaret Clark, Miller School; Vera Ebel, Richmond; Frances Parris, Crewe; Kitty Fitzgerald, Richmond; Louise Gathright, Suffolk; Merwyn Gathright, Goochland; Edna Earl Harvey, Dillwyn; Sara Hayes, Newport News; Rose Marie

Stop! Look! Watch!

Milady walks down the boulevard doing that inevitable "woman-habit"—window shopping! She stops; she looks; then, as she resumes her jaunty way down the street, she watches. Watches what? . . . why, didn't you know—she watches other women. You see her eyes start at the top of another woman's head and quite steadily and calmly take everything in to the tips of her toes.

And speaking of toes, did you know that people's eyes dwell more on that part of the anatomy visible from the skirt hem to the very tips of the shoes? That is the absolute truth—so, not knowing who is going to be looking at your limbs, you'd better—

Watch spring skirts! They'll hover about twelve inches from the ground. That means more shoe and stocking harmony. More planning of color notes and contrasts.

Watch the straps! Oxfords and ties lead for daytime, but this spring presents more strap shoes than ever. Wide and narrow straps. Buttoned straps. Strap-over-tongue effects. T straps, wishbone straps. Straps for comfort—straps for style.

Watch the colors! There's a brighter tinge to dark colors; blue, brown, some gray. Fo rsports are sporty tailored suits, luggage tan or pigskin, dark and bright costume colors.

Watch the fabrics! They're better than ever in new leather combinations; woven to keep their finish; reinforced to keep their shape. Through lightweight, they wear well.

Watch the toes! Rounder, more babyfied, younger, easier to wear. Some are squared off in the Puritan manner.

Watch the heels! A bit lower in general, sometimes squared off too. If you wear flat heels, give yourself a chance to get used to them. They're especially effective with evening or sports costumes, and grand for tall girls.

Watch hosiery colors! Beiges are brighter and bolder; suntans take on coppery hues. Consider sheer navy, wine, green and the whole flock of pastels. Look at the spidery meshes. Remember the line with special sizes for length and width of leg. Notice elastic garter tops on "knee-high" stockings, the flexible insteps, for greater freedom, woven above the knees of full-length hose. Try out the new, invisible flat thigh garters for wear with panty girdles.

Watch stocking economy! Buy at least three pairs at once in the same shade. Wash them inside out after each wearing. Fold the top down well to prevent garter pulls.

It's all very simple, and you know yourself how Dad would welcome that last "watch". So pay more attention to your legs and feet—they're just like the rest of our anatomy—very nice-looking if well and properly groomed.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

ELIZABETH HUSE

"Ready to serve and that with a smile", is an appropriate description of Elizabeth Huse's personality. Her willing appearance and cheery smile are the outward indications of a true heart and a kind, sharing spirit.

"Lights Out" is not Huse's only theme song. Although she's held a prominent place as head of the House Council she is identified through the many other activities she has entered into during her college career. Besides having held offices on the House Council her first three years, she has served on the Freshman Commission, been president of the Roanoke club, and served on the Sing and Social Committees of the Y. W. C. A. She has also taken great interest in Students' Standards Committee, and her junior year she was secretary of the Student Council.

Elizabeth is a member of Pi Kappa Sigma sorority and has been recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma for her excellent spirit in leadership.

The senior class as well as the student body is proud to call her their own.

The fatherly hand of Margaret Pollard as the parent of these two girls sways the destiny of suitors, Marjorie Thompson and Alpha Lee Garnett representing the old and the young in love making. Alpha Lee is over her slight difficulty of not knowing how to do a doddering old man's cackle; now she cackles like a chicken and thinks nothing of it.

So far as Carter Belle Munt and Nancy Gray are concerned, servants' lives are dog lives. Carter comes in for a big dose of whip cracking, and Nancy has a hard time convincing Elizabeth Carorll that the only way to win Clara is to elope with her. Virgnlia Hooke is drawn into the plans of Nan Throckmorton who transforms the unsuspecting person into Elizabeth Carroll's father.

Nor do the other servants of Chubby escape her wrath felt in the form of swearing and whipping. They are Mary Lou French, Meriel McAllister and Madeline McGlothlin.

People who have watched play rehearsals here for four years say that they never saw a more hilarious, romping, jolly cast of characters. The way they rip through "The Taming Of The Shrew" brings spasms of laughter from all present, even from Miss Wheeler, the dignified and honored director.

April 3 will be a long remembered night in the history of Dramatic Club and the school at large.

Mr. Lee has also translated into English a French work on "Rochambeau and the American Revolution, which will appear from the press this month. He also has in hand a new volume of poetry from which he wil read selections on his visit to Farmville.

Class Notes

Junior Class News

A short surprise party was the feature of the Junior Class meeting Tuesday night. It was a sort of good fellowship meeting, chatting and singing being the entertainment. Following the singing of the class songs, popcicles were served.

Sophomore Class

Financial and class day plans were up for discussion before the sophomores. A comic basketball game between faculty members and some outstanding students will be sponsored by the sophomores on Monday night, April 6, in the gym. More about it will be announced later.

Freshman Class

From now on more interest will be added to the freshman meetings by featuring short stunts by members of the class.

Quiet Reigns And Gloom Prevails As Girls Face Exams

The halls of S. T. C. are uncannily quiet. Girls who are usually playful, walk purposefully alone with a resolute air and determined steps. Eyes are dull and sleepy looking. Hair is left uncurled and faces are shamelessly "natural".

The dining room at breakfast is crowded. New faces are greeted with mildly surprised smiles by old participants of the morning meal. Some real "studes" appear with notes or books and read industriously as they consume their food forgetting all etiquette in the energy of the moment. At lunchtime small bunches gather around discussing different topics of the curriculum—such as Latin, History—O, all the subjects that are usually pleasantly forgotten as S. T. C. girls down their food.

The campus and streets, usually so crowded with noisy girls, are practically empty. The few who do manage to skip duty and vacate rooms and books, look guilty and hurry back to school with worried expressions. Some are carrying small blue-books under their arms. A few of the braver girls look as carefree as ever and easily manage to laugh off their troubles. They merit cold stares from their more diligent schoolmates.

The library strangely enough is crowded. Girls with circles under their eyes wait impatiently as rushed librarians hurry to keep them from losing much time. Girls slouch uncomfortably in hard chairs and pour over endless pages as they unconsciously chew their pencils up. Unfortunate souls who chance to make unnecessary noise are rewarded with resentful glances from the sullen laborers.

Lights burn practically all night, and hall presidents are among the evil-doers. At all minutes from six A. M. on, alarms can be heard shrilling to awake restless sleepers. Maids appear, astounded at the sound of girls who are stirring about in the halls before they arrive.

The whole run of life is different—less regular, more serious. Only at lunch after four days of such conditions do things appear to be returning to normal. Then once more the halls begin to echo with happy voices, even gayer than usual, almost deliriously happy voices! Smiles bedeck faces once more and curls reappear miraculously on proud young heads. Out of doors they pour. Once more they saunter up and down the streets and lounge on the benches in front. The library's crowd dwindles back to normal. The days of torment have ceased. Exams are over!

Bushnell, Dean of Women of S. T. C. Fredericksburg; Miss Lucy Mason Holt, Norfolk; Dr. Combs, president of the organization; and Dr. Lauma Ende of Johns Hopkins University. Dr. Ende is one of the foremost women leaders in the United States, and is a member of the Maryland legislature. At the business session on Saturday Miss Chari Williams, former president of the N. E. A., will address the group. Three round table discussions will follow, which will be led by Miss Cornelia Adair, Miss Pauline Camper, and Miss Elsie Davis, respectively.

The meetings will close with an address by Mrs. Fred Alexander, Newport News, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

have failed to accomplish anything.

Dr. Walmsley suggests that the light of realism should be brought to bear on the subject. The first question to face is why nations fight. The second is, what can be done about it. In answering these questions there are two procedures which we should follow: first, acquire a knowledge of the great powers of the world and why they are satisfied as they are; and of the lesser powers and find the sources of their discontent; second, take steps toward bringing about justice in the world. These two steps constitute a definite program for peace.

Dr. Walmsley stated that he is not interested in "peace-making"—the stopping of war — but in bringing about justice in the world. Peace will follow as a direct result. Peace should be in the program, rather than the aim. We should discard the sentimental nonsense we have been talking and thinking and face the facts.

We had quite a few peculiar visitors here a few week-ends ago. They were disturbed because they had to sign their names to so many slips. They were afraid they'd be forced into matrimony before they left. I wonder if they will return.

Baker, control your temper my dear. We'll forgive you this once but don't let it happen again.

Ann what is this power you possess? We're happy to know you. Will he be up again Sunday.

Mary B., life is just a merry-go-round of disappointments. Better luck next time.

Audrey, you say you had company for the week-end. Two little girls seemed pretty desperate Friday because they thought perhaps they'd be the only two left in the main building. Having no place to go they signed up for permission to spend the week-end in the Senior Building. The hostess was quite surprised.

Have a good time in Atlanta, Hazel and Bonnie. I'll be looking for a card every day.

Honor Society Holds Program on Kipling

The members of the Boere Eh Thorn society recently made a study of the life and works of Rudyard Kipling under the direction of the program committee. High points in the life of this noted poet and author were brought out in a paper by Carter Belle Munt. Kipling's cosmopolitanism, acquired through travel in almost every part of the world, is one of the most distinguishing features of his writings. His love for India and for the "under-dog" is also a pervading quality in his poems and stories.

Virginia Baker gave a review of the various fields of literary endeavor in which Kipling excelled; these include poetry, the novel, and the short story. His characteristics of vigorous language, keen wit, and character delineation make his works a source of pleasure to many readers. As an example of Kipling's art in story telling, Mary Robeson reviewed the story "The Brushwood Boy", in which imagination and romance are the keynotes. In "Soldiers Three", read and discussed, Kipling's intense interest in the common soldier, and his sympathy with the rough and ready "backbone" of the army were emphasized.

The musical quality of many of Kipling's poems has been proved by the popularity with which they have been received when set to music. Alice Grainger, Mary Alice and Helen Glass, and Marguerite York formed a quartette to sing the "Recessional". Alice Grainger led the group in singing "Mandalay," mimeographed copies of which were distributed. Copies of "If", perhaps Kipling's most well known poem, had been mounted and were also given to the girls.

The study concluded with a brief memoriam to Rudyard Kipling in the form of a concert recital of the lines from "Recessional": "Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, Lest we forget; lest we forget."

Miss Nora Staeel, of Sweet Briar, will lead the modern dance demonstration.

Mr. L. T. Ludwig, of University of Virginia, is program committee chairman, with Mr. Glenn F. Thistlewaite, University of Richmond, and Captain M. G. Ramey, V. M. I. as members.

Miss Mary B. Barlow, Mrs. L. R. Fitzpatrick, and several students who are majoring and minoring in physical education will attend the convention Saturday.

Elects Delegates To I. R. C. Conference

The Virginia Gamma chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, at its regular meeting Tuesday, March 24, elected five delegates to attend the I. R. C. conference next week. Those elected were Zaida Thomas, Grace Eubank, Chic Dortch, Ann Galusha and Virginia Bean. Dr. Walmsley will also attend the meetings.

The International Relations Clubs of the State of Virginia are holding their third annual conference on April 3-4. Headquarters of the convention will be at State Teachers College, Fredericksburg, Va. The delegates will find accommodations in the college. The conference was held last year at Washington and Lee.

Miss Olivia Wheeler, Fredericksburg, president of the state association, will ipreside at the meetings. Among the entertainments planned are a dance and a banquet.

Bowles Is President of Senior Class for 1936-'37

Mary Bowles, Madeliene McGlothlin, and Sarah Hayes were elected next year's Senior, Junior, and Sophomore class presidents respectively, at the regular class meetings held on Tuesday night, March 31.

Mary Bawles will head her class for the second time, being this year's junior class president, and as a result of last night's election, will be the Senior class president for next year. Mary served her class both her freshman and sophomore years as secretary. On the A. A. Council, she was treasurer for two years, and athletics claimed a part of her time. She has been outstanding in swimming, as a member of class and group swimming teams, and on the hockey teams, this year she has been a varsity squad player; she also played basketball on the Freshman class team. Mary is a member of the Dramatic Club, and was head of the staging department this year. She has been elected to be in the May Court for all three years, and belongs to the Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority; and Alpha Kappa Gamma, national fraternity for leadership.

Madeliene McGlothlin will be president of the Junior class next year, fololwing her presidency of the present Sophomore class. Madeliene is business manager of the Dramatic Club, and has served remarkably well in this capacity. She has been on the hockey team for two years, this year being

Try-Outs Are Open For Minor Parts in May Day

Final work is under way for this year's May Day. With only a month for practice, costume making and finishing touches, everyone taking part in any phase must be at "top notch" in doing everything possible to make the program a success.

The May Day committee has been hard at work choosing the main characters and group dancers. As yet, the groups have not been completed. Girls taking character parts are as follows:

Sarastro—Dorothy McNamee

Scribes—Mary Ellen Pate, Claudia Elmore

Hunters—Mary Joyner Cox, Gwendolyn Bell, Anne Peple.

Tamino—Alice Grainger

Papageno—Mary Alice Glass

Guards of Queen of Night—Katherine Irby, Sue Clark.

Queen of Night—Crenshaw Jones

Princess—Lucy Potter

High Priestess—Martha Nottingham

Doris Moore has a solo dance as Bondage in the Prologue and Joy in the Epilogue.

Members of Orchesis are teaching the group and mass dances, practices of which are getting well under way this week. However, more girls are needed, and if anyone wishes to try out for dances or other parts, see Mary Robeson immediately.

Pi Gamma Mu Holds Discussion in Lounge

"Germany and Her Remilitarisation of the Rhineland" was the subject of discussion at the open meeting of Pi Gamma Mu held in the Student Building Lounge on Tuesday night, March 31. Doris Coates, chairman of the program, gave the subject and announced that four aspects of the question would be presented by various members of the organization.

The German viewpoint was given by Virginia Hannah. Germany's pride in regaining her honor was brought out, as well as her willingness to join the League of Nations and enter into pacts with the other nations. Louise Francis presented the French aspect of the problem. She reminded the group that the Rhineland has always been considered by France as rightfully hers. There must also be considered the insecurity that France feels with German soldiers

Students Respond to Red Cross Drive

In response to the appeal of the Red Cross in behalf of the thousands of sufferers in the recent floods in many sections of our country, Prince Edward County, under the chairmanship of Mr. Sam Holton, raised more than its quota. The students of State Teachers College took their part in the drive by voluntary contributions amounting to $22.86 by Tuesday morning. On Monday night the various hall presidents made the rounds of the rooms, collecting any amount which the girls wished to give. The sum collected represents very small contributions from a great number of girls, nearly every girl in college having given something.

Students Attend I.R.C. Convention at Fredericksburg

Educators to Discuss Current Problems at Meeting

The Virginia Gamma Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, which also functions as an International Relations Club, will send five delegates to the Virginia Association of International Relations Clubs to be held April third and fourth at Fredericksburg State Teachers College.

Chic Dortch, Ann Galusha, Virginia Bean, Zaida Thomas, Grace Eubank, and Dr. Walmsley will leave for Fredericksburg Friday morning and return on Sunday. While there, they will hear Dr. William C. Johnson, Professor of Political Science at George Washington University, speak on "Relations of the United States to the Problem of Peace in Asia", and Dr. Elmer Louis Kaiser, Professor of History at George Washington University speak on the "Present European Diplomatic Alignment".

The question of whether the United States can stay out of war will be discussed by Miss Jeannette Rankin, a member of the National Council for the Prevention of War. Mr. Clark Eichelberger, Director of the League of Nations Association, will speak on "The Future of the League fo Nations and Efforts of International Cooperation with Particular Reference to the United States".

The program will also include social features, such as a dance and banquet.

Dr. Simkins Involved In Controversy With U. D. C. in New Book

"The Women of the Confederacy" by Dr. Francis B. Simkins of State Teachers College, Farmville, Va. and Dr. James W. Patton of Converse College, S. C., has found its way to front page publicity even before publication. The Richmond Times Dispatch has carred front page articles relating to the controversy provoked by the U. D. C. over the term "Civil War" used in the book.

The U. D. C. for many years has upheld the connotation "War Between the States", implying a struggle between two nations, against the name "Civil War". Other authorities have suggested "The War of Secession" or "The Hazel Smith and Bonnie Lane represented F. S. T. C. at the convention of the S. I. A. S. A. held at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Georgia, March 27-30. The most important features of the program were the addresses by Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, Dean of Women at Florida State College for Women, and Dr. Hilda K. Threckheld of Louisiana State College.

The seminar groups were centered around the topics: "What Student Government May Expect From the College" and "What the College may Expect from Student Government". The representatives from each college discussed their current problems concerning application of rules, relative power of students and administration, and central aims of student government. The delegates described the judicial and legislative bodies of their respective institutions. The major college policies, governing boards, and cooperative systems were compared. Out of these group discussions the delegates formed

Physical Education Association Convenes at Charlottesville

Virginia athletic and health instructors met in Charlottesville, Saturday, March 28, for the first convention of the Virginia Association of Health and Physical Education. With programs in Monroe and Madison Halls, there were meetings and discussions from 9:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m., with a lunch at 1:15 p. m. breaking the day.

During the morning there were speeches in Monroe Hall on men's athletics and the problems of health and physical education. At the same time in Minor Hall, women's athletics were being discussed. Miss Crenshaw, of Westhampton College, was elected chairman of the athletic section for the ensuing year.

"The Curriculum in Sports" was the topic of Dr. Seward C. Staley, Professor of Physical Education at the University of Illinois, who was the guest speaker at the luncheon for the occasion.

At the business meeting after luncheon, Professor Hoskins, of

Hot-Cakes For Breakfast Make All Right With World

Ding dong! Ding dong! Why, that must be the breakfast bell! What day was this? I consulted my watch. Eight o'clock. My eyes popped open! There must be something wrong. Breakfast was at seven-thirty. Fearfully I sniffed the air. No smoke. I hopped out of bed, gingerly stepped between dust balls, and looked out on a gorgeous spring morning. I was a bit relieved. After all, nothing could be very much wrong on such a day. Still dazed, I gave my roommate a blow and asked her opinion as to the relation of that bell to us. Sleepily, she mumbled something about my being a fool because this was Sunday morning. Why, of course! But she needn't be so vehement about it. I gave her a hurt look.

With a bounce I was back in bed. Was something wrong with me? How on earth had I managed to wake up at such an hour on Sunday morning? It was beyond me! Suddenly I remembered how girls always raved about the pancakes they fed us on Sunday morning. That was crazy. Of course they wouldn't have them this morning. I tried to go back to sleep, but the vision of crisp brown pancakes haunted me. Nice, tall stacks of them with golden butter and shining syrup. Aw, forget it, I told myself, but I just wouldn't. Finally, I could endure it no longer. I bounded out of bed, rolled up my pajamas and began putting on my coat. My roommate roused up and asked anxiously if I were still sane. I assured her that I was if I had ever had been, and departed, leaving her with a puzzled expression in her eyes—obviously trying to recollect my past behavior.

I was late, of course. I managed to walk by the head table without even feeling guilty as to my appearance. The girls at my table

Shakespearian Play Is Lyceum Number

Editor Announces Chief Assistants

Staff Heads Endorse Future Policies of Paper

According to an announcement today by Virginia Bean, incoming editor of The Rotunda, Elizabeth Morris will serve as news editor on her staff; Agnes Bondurant, senior, will serve temporarily as editorial editor; Virginia Agee will be feature editor; and Minnie Smith is to act as social editor. All of these girls have served on the Rotunda for a period of time and have shown unusual interest and ability.

Other members of the staff will be chosen according to an editorial policy drawn up by the editor. Among the provisions drawn up are:

A deadline is set for articles being handed in. Failure to comply with this puts the staff member on probation, and a second offense automatically drops her from the staff.

Every member of the staff will learn to write headlines and read proof. The staff will be divided into groups with leaders which will alternate in wroking on this part

Education Chairman of V.F.W.C. Outlines Adopted Objectives

The objectives adopted by the Department of Education, Virginia Federation of Women's Club for 1935-38 were outlined by the Chairman of Education, Mrs. N. R. Hoyle, in an article published in the Richmond Times-Dispatch on March 8. These objectives include: (1) That one meeting during the year be devoted to an educational forum; (2) that one program dealing with some phase of the revised curriculum be presented for discussion; (3) that a definite survey be made by the education committee in the various clubs, assisted, if desired, by the citizenship committee, to see that every club member is a qualified voter in good standing and that she votes; (4) that student loan funds be established wherever possible in the district and larger local clubs; that they be placed on a sound business basis, and that these funds be loaned to further educational training, not necessarily of a college nature; (5) that the department support in every way the minimum education plan for Virginia

Students Give Talks For Kappa Delta Pi

"Specialize in more than one subject to teach. Secure a major and two minors rather than two majors if you want a teaching position," advised Geneva Parker in presenting a paper: "The Teaching Fields in Which There Are the Greatest or Least Opportunities" to the members of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor fraternity in education. The paper which was worked up by Geneva Parker and Ruby Blanton was presented as a part of the theme "Securing and Maintaining the Right Teaching Position" which Kappa Delta Pi has used throughout the year. Among the interesting statistics brought out in the paper was that there are about four times as many

'Taming of the Shrew' Will Be Presented by Local Club

Production of "Taming of the Shrew" on April 3 the Dramatic Club will be an attempt to follow the same procedure as that used in the recent Broadway presentation by the New York Theatre Guild starring Lynn Fontaine and Alfred Lunt.

It is practically impossible for modern producers to put on a play in true Shakespearian style. Stages of the Elizabethan period had no draw curtains; the stage jutted out into the center of the theatre, a large percent of the audience standing on the ground around three sides of the platform itself. With the modern stage built as it is, adaptions have to be made in the setting and stage business of Shakespearian dramas to suit the facilities.

The stage is copied from the period following the later Elizabethan period. This type was used for many years and is a slight improvement over the regular Shakespearian stage. A fixed set is used throughout the play. For the convenience of modern audiences who favor short intermissions between acts, the play is divided into two parts, the curtain being drawn but this one time. Between scenes stage boys move the few pieces of furniture used to give the impression of in or out-door settings.

For school girls and those having season tickets, the play will be a lyceum number. Admission is fifty cents for all those not owning lyceum tickets. A special section is being kept for those buying tickets. Reservation may be made at any time after Thursday, nine A. M. at Whites Drug Company.

An unusually large cast is presented under Miss Wheeler in "The Taming of the Shrew". Amanda "Chubby" Gray plays Pe-

Swan Song!

The 1935-36 Rotunda staff presents its last issue of the paper tonight. The realization that our work on this publication has come to an end brings many things to mind. At once we realize what fun it has been to work together in the effort to present the news of the college in a creditable fashion. Those hair-tearing hours spent in poring over headlines, in gathering up news, in planning, in writing, in selecting and rejecting material are indelible memories. More valuable than gold are the associations we have made with our colleagues and with the faculty who have been of such valuable service.

We would not sever our connection with the work without expressing our faculty advisers, Miss Lucille Jennings and Mr. S. M. Holton, for their untiring interest; to Mr. Barrye Wall and his staff for their conscientious work in printing our news; to our advertisers for their indispensable cooperation; and to the readers of our columns for their hearty support.

And so tonight, realizing that our work on The Rotunda has been an experience to be cherished for years to come, we render our places to our capable successors, Virginia Bean, Elsie Cabell, and their staff. We, the present staff, relinquish our positions rather reluctantly, but with confidence in those who are to carry on. May we add this fond wish—that your work may give the pleasure and satisfaction that ours has given. And now—goodbye.

"In the Spring—"

"Spring has 'sprung,' in the words of Hazel Smith. The time has come, say all, when the usual problem of dating on campus, afternoons, and nights, on week days as well as week-ends, becomes manifest.

There is a rule which states: "Dates are allowed on Saturday and Sunday from seven to ten P. M. All dates are entertained in the parlors of the main building." It is impossible to believe that there is any member of the student body who is ignorant of this regulation. Nevertheless, year after year, member of the Student Council and especially the Campus League Chairman find themselves placed almost in the position of policemen, enforcing a rule which should be automatically respected by the students.

There are a number of excellent reasons why this rule has been made. For one, habits of daily preparation for classes are disrupted. For another, we are attending a girls' school, preparing to enter a profession; although we value our relations with Hampden-Sydney, we can see enough of the students on week-ends. Thirdly, (and this affects all of us) for passersby the effect of numerous couples wandering about the campus is not a favorable one.

This is by no means a new thought, but one to which, seemingly, attention must be called periodically. That is, that anyone who accepts the advantages of an institution and willingly enters into its life should do so with the determination also to abide by its regulations. It is the only sportsmanlike thing to do.

A new spring is at hand. If a new method of behavior were followed it would be an innovation well worth our while. If, as it has been said, we have a cooperative spirit here, now is the time to show it by making "spring" a pleasure rather than an added responsibility to the administration.

A Gentle Reminder

Too often we are prone to shift our responsibility in creating undesirable conditions. To be exact, we complain unrelentingly about the conditions in the local theatre, but fail to acknowledge our part in the situation. We condemn the management when we find mice and rats in the house; we fuss and fume at the noise that goes on during the performance; we voice all manner of criticism.

Now, just who is responsible for the dreaded animals that lurk in the dark? Who chatters endlessly, exclaiming in admiration or jeering in scorn?

If we must stuff ourselves with popcorn and sip coca-colas in preparation for the show, let's do it before we enter the theatre and deposit the accompanying trash in containers provided for that purpose. And if we must relieve our minds let it be done in a quiet, lady-like manner. In short, let's practice what we preach.

Science Defeats Life?

That scientific study has helped to prolong life and thereby complicated the life situation is suggested by an article in the current issue of the Literary Digest. Both Marjory Van de Water and Arthur Brisbane are shown to support the fact of the longer life of man as a factor in increasing the problems of youth.

The solution, some would have us believe, lies in paying pensions to those persons above sixty years who consent to do no work of remuneration. But it must be remembered that men and women are no longer old at sixty, and to "shelve" them then would be to "sign their death warrant."

People of three score years are still useful. It is they who have the broadest view of life and very often the best solution to problems. If youth does have to wait, why grieve? Will it not have the possibility of even longer life than the passing generation? And while waiting, youth need not fold its hands but take lessons from those more experienced and better versed in the way of life.

Dr. Lillian Jane Martin offers a splendid example of an old age well spent. Though she has been retired from the professorship of psychology at Leland Stanford University, she has begun a new career —one destined to be worthwhile to her contemporaries and also those of the next generations. She has spent her time studying old age and has published two books. "Salvaging Old Age" and "Sweeping the Cobwebs." While she is actively employed by no one, Dr. Martin is doing everyone a service yet. She is opening the door to her fuller experience so that those younger can profit by her knowledge and study with less of waste in time and energy.

Alumnae News

Farmville Alumnae Organize

The William Henry Ruffner Chapter of the Farmville Alumnae was organized on March 17, 1936, at Lexington, with the assistance of Miss Leola Wheeler. The organizing officers for this year will be Henrietta C. Dunlap, leader, and Mrs. B. D. Mayo (Jennie Ludwell Earnest), secretary-treasurer.

Eastern Shore Alumnae

The chapter of alumnae at Eastern Shore met at the home of Mrs. R. V. Nottingham, Eastville, Virginia, on Friday, March 29, from four till five P. M. Miss Florence H. Stubbs, of S. T. C. was the guest of honor. There was a program consisting of musical selections by Dorothy Justis; a reading by Mrs. Loda Fitchett Dunton; a solo by Lila Jacobs; and a talk by Miss Stubbs.

Stables-Houchens

Miss Elsie Florence Stables and Mr. William Kenneth Houchens, of Richmond, defied superstition by choosing Friday, March 13, as the date for their marriage. They will make their home at 3016 Hull Street, Richmond, Va.

Mrs. B. S. Dyer

The funeral services for Mrs. B. S. Dyer were held on March 21 from the Methodist church at Pulaski, after her death at her home in Barren Springs on March 19 following an illness of several months. Mrs. Dyer was a graduate of State Teachers College in 1895, and has frequently visited her daughter, Mrs. L. B. Sanford, in Farmville.

Miss Susie Phaup

Miss Susie Phaup, formerly of Buckingham County, died at her home in Norfolk on Monday, March 23. Miss Phaup was educated at State Normal School, now State Teachers College at Farmville, and spent many years teaching in the state.

South Boston Alumna

"Probably the most enthusiastic class ever taught in the C. H. Friend High School, South Boston, is the home economics class this session. For the first time in the history of the course in the school boys have joined and are taking an active interest in the work"—Richmond Times Dispatch. Miss Laura Motley, of Farmville State Teachers College, has taught this work for the past several years.

Intercollegiate News

Then there was the U. of C. professor who asked his history students to give the Monroe Doctrine in their own words and as briefly as possible. The prize winning answer: "Scram, youse foreigners." Also there was the professor who dreamed he was lecturing to his class, awoke and found he really was.

From Miami Students comes this description of the 1936-37 Collegian. The picture usually presented of collegiate life in the years previous to 1929 might be mildly described as wanton, consisting of loudly checkered knickers, beating jazz band tom-toms, and a continuous chorus of rah-rah's. In contrast to that has been the scene presented in today's college by optimistic college editors and observers. The 1936-37 collegian is a serious minded individual, we have been told. . . the great depression apparently sobered him—he is now possessed of a realistic outlook—he has attained a sense of values more in keeping with modern stresses.

Laura Crawford, Wesles Junior College co-ed, had to go to bed, because the doctor ordered it; but that didn't prevent her from attending classes. She did it by proxy sending her mother daily to pick up assignments at the same time turning in previously assigned work. The system brings high grades, Miss Crawford reports.

Because Mississippi's Gov. White secured virtual control of the six state colleges, Mississippi State may lose membership in the Southern Association of Colleges.

Nine New York Catholics are conducting a series of symposia on the problems of collegiate communism and atheism.

Columbia's famed Seth Low College will be discontinued when the last of the classes now enrolled graduates in 1938.

So that he wouldn't have to listen to Sweet Adeline at 3 a. m., President Arnold Middlebush of the University of Missouri built a week-end cabin 100 miles from campus.

Recently uncovered at the University of Nebraska were these two ingenious observations. One student identified Milton's Sonnet on His Blindness as the one beginning "I think that I shall never see—". And another sage defined a papal bull as "The Animal kept in the Vatican to give milk to the pope's children."

The Los Angeles Junior Collegian tells one about a certain professor who was having difficulty securing the attention of the class. Finally thoroughly exasperated he shouted, "order please!" "Hot beef san'wich", came a sleepy voice from the back row.

Using a zipper on an operation is no longer a gag. Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, has revealed that the use of the ordinary zipper to permit the opening and closing of an incision for day by day surgical treatment of a cancer in the stomach has been carried out.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

LUCY POTTER

When Lucy Potter was born she quite adequately disproved the ancient maxim "Beautiful but dumb". Beauty alone would be sufficient, but when it is combined with poise, dignity, tact, stability and leadership—well, that's news! And yet with such serious qualities she is the first to appreciate a good joke. A typical pose: her head tilted saucily to one side—a twinkle in her eyes—emitting a most delightful giggle. Although she wouldn't admit it for the world she is just a trifle bashful. What could be more pleasinng than to see this tall, stately senior suddenly blushing a delicate pink—truly a southern girl!

Lucy's chief interest is art. Her talent quickly won her a place in Gamma Psi, honor fraternity in art. If you were to glance through her notebook no doubt you would find a "cheerful cherub" winking at you from every page. The deftness with which she sketches cherubs is amazing. That little creature seems to be symbolic of Lucy as she goes about her work. She has served efficiently on the Y. W. C. A. and the student government association, this year acting as vice-president of the latter. She was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma for her splendid work in both departments. Lucy is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority and the Cotillion Club. Her outstanding beauty has brought her many honors. She reigned as queen of the Mardi Gras last year and has been in the May Court. This year she has been selected as the Golden Goddess, and will rule as May Queen in that celebration.

Lucy has made herself invaluable to us, as well as to others, judging from the deluge of fan mail she receives. When she turns on the charm you'd better watch out! No function is complete without her. That gal has something and she is going far.

Literary Column

Spring

"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love"—thus Tennyson characterizes spring. Each poet, at some time expresses his feeling for this liveliest and gladdest of seasons. We can thrill with Lizette Ruse when she says:

"Oh, let me run and hide,
Let me run straight to God;
The weather is so mad with white
From sky down to the clod!
"If but one thing were so,
Lilac or thorn, out there,
It would not be, indeed
So hard to beat.
"The weather has gone mad with white;
The cloud, the highway touch.
White lilac is enough;
White thorn too much."

She feels that spring is so full it is hard to take it all in.

Edna St. Vincent Millay agrees with this in her sonnet, "God's World".

".....Lord, I do fear
Thou'st made the world too beautiful, this year.
My soul is all but out of me, let fall
No burning leaf; prithee, let no bird call."

Unable to choose her favorite season, Elinor Wylie says:

"I love those skies, thin blue or snowy gray,
Those fields sparse planted, rendering meager sheaves;
That spring, briefer than apple-blossom's breath,
Summer so much too beautiful to stay,
Swift autumn, like a bonfire of leaves,
And sleepy winter, like the sleep of Death."

Our winter has awakened. With the campus aglow with yellow blooms and with the bird songs in the air, we can say with Emily Dickinson:

"Write me how many notes there be
In the new robin's ecstasy
Among astonished boughs—"

For Amy Lowell spring means lilacs—

"Lilacs,
False blue
White,
Purple,
Color of lilac,
Your great puffs of flowers
Are everywhere in my New England."

For Sara Teasdale—"Spring Night"—

"The park is filled with night and fog,
The wells are drawn about the world,
The drowsy lights along the paths
Are dim and pearled.
"Gold and gleaming the empty streets,
Gold and gleaming the misty lakes,
The mirrored lights like sunken swords,
Glimmer and shake.
"O beauty, are you not enough?
Why am I crying for love?"

The coming of Easter brings a calmer love of spring, and a more sacred interpretation of that season is found in Sidney Lanier's "Ballad of the Trees and the Master".

"Into the woods my Master went,
Clean forspent, forspent.
Into the woods my Master came,
Forspent with love and shame.
But the olives they were not blind to Him,
The little gray leaves were kind to Him:
The thorn-tree had a mind to Him
When into the woods He came.
"Out of the woods my Master went,
And he was well content.
Out of the woods my Master came,
Content with death and shame.
When Death and Shame would woo Him last,
From under the trees they drew Him last;
'Twas on a tree they slew Him—last
When out of the woods He came."

SOCIETY

Even with Easter holidays not two weeks off, many girls were away for the week-end attending conventions and dances, and visiting friends and family. The following girls went home: Bonnalynn Avery, Edna Bolick, Irene Bailey, Nancy Leigh Bland, Elizabeth Butler, Cassie Boswell, Margaret Critcher, Kitty Chappell, Rebecca Dale Carter, Margaret Carroll, Doris Coates, Dorothy Deans, Virginia Doughty, Sue Eastham, Margaret Ferguson.

Alpha Lee Garnett, Virginia Hannah, Louise Harris, Evelyn Howell, Marian Hansbrough, Pattie Jeffreys, Lois Jenkins, Florence Jeffrey, Anna Love, Ruth Montgomery, Charlotte Morton, Martha Nottingham, Margaret Pollard, Cornelia Penn, Nannie Parker, Pauline Pearson, Bessie Powell, Tapelle Pruden, Anne Johnson, LeNoir Hubbard, Sallie Perrow, Ernestine Payne, Lucy Smith, Browney Shenton, Elizabeth Shiplett, Mildred Slayton, Henrietta Salsbury, Elise Turner, Elizabeth Tyree, Mary Elizabeth Wood, Martha Williams, Marjorie Wicks.

of the paper. Absence from these meetings without a substitute will place the staff member on probation, and a second offense will automatically drop her from the staff.

Members of the old staff are to work under these rules for two weeks, those who cannot comply with them dropping out.

Tonight at seven o'clock the editor, four associate editors and the business manager will meet all members of the student body who are interested in trying out for a position on the staff. This meeting will be held in the publication office in Student Building. There will be a period of a month taken up with tryouts before the new staff will be complete.

Held Annual Spring Banquet Pi Kappa Sigma Sorority

The Pi Kappa Sigma Sorority held its annual spring banquet on Saturday night, March 28, at Longwood in honor of its pledges. The color scheme of blue and yellow was carried out in place cards, decorations, etc.

Besides the active members of the sorority present, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Mix, Miss Iler, Dr. Jasman, Miss Jane Royall, Miss Mary Diehl, Miss Dorothy Goodloe, Miss Margaret Gathright, Miss Marian Shoffner, Miss Blanche Kahn, Miss Blanche Murrell, Mrs. Dorothy Hughes Harris, Mrs. Dorothy Epes, and Mrs. Katheryn Royster attended the banquet.

Miss Royall Entertains

On Saturday afternoon, Miss Jane Royall entertained at Longwood for the alumnae who returned for the Pi Kappa Sigma banquet.

Annapolis Hop

Lucy Potter, Zaida Thomas, Marian Hansbrough, Marion Umberger and Frances Hudgins motored to Annapolis over the week-end to attend the Regimental Hop there on Saturday night. Their trip included a stop-over in Washington, also.

Steak Fry

The members of the A. A. Council together with the Varsity Basketball and Hockey Squads enjoyed their annual social event in the form of a steak fry at the Longwood cabin on Monday evening, March 30. The group left the campus at 5:30 and returned at 7:15, after having had their supper and played a few games.

Every one enjoyed roasting steak down at the chimney and toasting marshmallows over the big fireplace in the cabin. As surprise favors chocolate Easter eggs, decorated by flowers and the names of the individuals in icing, were distributed. Miss Iler was presented with a gift from the members of the Athletic Association. After supper, all joined in playing games around the fireplace.

In addition to members of the teams and the A. A. Council, Miss Iler, Mr. McCorkle and Mr. Graham were present.

Hot Cakes Breakfast Makes World Right

nearly fainted as I slid into my chair. Gleefully I surveyed the table. No hotcakes greeted my eye! Something had happened. I suspected vaguely that I was the goat. Then they arrived, and my spirits rose again. They were brown! They were crisp! There was lovely yellow butter and shining syrup! I ate and ate and got happier and happier. At last I put my fork down. I could down no more! The meal was over. I stepped out of the dining room at peace with everybody. It was Sunday; it was spring; and I had had pan-cakes for breakfast. Blissfully I exclaimed with Browning's Pippa, "All's right with the world".

Rotunda Reverberations

Maybe I'm mistaken, but just when is Easter Sunday? Our campus was certainly adorned with a delightful array of colors this past Sunday. 'Twas a pretty picture for passers-by. The only thing that was lacking was a few corsages, but jonquils served the purpose very nicely.

Smitty, you'd better watch Johnny, 'cause we heard that he had a bit of "scotch" in his blood. While on the verge of playing golf the other day Johnny was approached by a little boy who wanted to be his caddy. "Well, little man, how good are you at finding balls?" he asked him. "Pretty good sir", was the reply. "Well", says John, "run and see how many you can find; then we'll tee off." A word to the wise—.

What the spring weather is doing to us—making us forget our worries; we want to roam about; we like to sleep after lunch, but classes are still going on—what luck! We want to buy new clothes —and fall in love!

Grace, by the way, are you teaching this term? Most of your friends think you graduated in March. Show us your pleasing smile once in a while.

If you have a chance, go out to Longwood and commune with nature. There is an advantage in that for you dreamy girls. While out there write a few lines of poetry and maybe we will publish it—make it good!

Just eight more days before we'll be homeward bound! So long—

NEW GIRLS THIS QUARTER

The following girls came into school at the beginning of the spring quarter: Chloe Clevinger, Grundy; Myrtle Atkins, Green Bay; Susie Turner, Petersburg; Ellie Marshburn, Rocky Mount; Mary Wander Porterfield, Newport News; Ann McCready, Parksley, and Boundalynn Avery, Holdcraft.

Dr. H. J. Ecknrode, historian of the State Conservation and Development Commission, suggests the simple title "North-South War". However the U. D. C. makes it plain that it was a "War Between the States" or no war at all, and that if Dr. Simkins' publishers, Garrett and Massie of Richmond, do not strike out the term "Civil War", the Daughters cannot give it their approval.

Dr. Simkins declares that he will leave the matter in the hands of the publishers. If they want to change terms and secure the favor of the U. D. C. it will not incur his displeasure. He says, "I have consulted Dr. James Elliott Walmsley of the Farmville State Teachers College, and he said the term, 'Civil War' was accurate."

However, the co-author, Dr. Patton, is not so yielding in his views. He says: "I think it would be well to keep the term in the narrative—that is, the term, 'Civil War'. It seems to me that we have softened the contents enough to satisfy the Daughters already. And, besides, it will not make much difference to them anyway, for it is not likely that they will read it."

Students and faculty at S. T. C. are awaiting the publication of the book with much interest. Dr. Simkins has been at work on it for several years. The date for publication has been given for September and it will be available to the reading public at that time.

Russia is now planning a medical center where, among other things, healthy people are to be studied to find out the best diets for people engaged in various activities.

Protect Your Crowning Glory With Brushing And Combing

We have been told by numerous authors and poets, by many advertisements and write-ups, that the hair is the crowning glory of womanhood: it has been in the past, according to ancient writers; it is in the present, according to all reports; and it shall be in the future, according to our sense of foresight.

It has been said that a girl or a woman may have a face that will just get her by—(you know, the nice, honest face) a figure that is merely passable—she may be bow-legged)—but if her hair is beautifully lustrous and thick and well-groomed, she will stand out like the constellation Venus on a clear night.

Now, we are faced with a grave problem. Not all of us have lustrous hair; not all of us have thick hair; but there is no excuse for all of us not having well-groomed heads!! Brushing will help luster that "lusterless" hair—and with a little time, we can keep it very attractive and in place.

Hollywood, our own little American city that has a promising future of usurping Paris's place as a fashion dictator, sets our style of hair-dressing. And the name, Hollywood no doubt will make the most of you think of decidedly eccentric styles of coiffure. But did you know that they abide by the unaffected and the plain? Plainness is smartness anywhere—in anything—in fashions or in the dressing of the hair.

First of all, clean, well-brushed hair is essential. If your hair is naturally curly, you're very lucky and congratulations to you! If you have a permanent, for heaven's sake take care of it and don't let it go "footloose and fancy free"—it looks not unlike a wooly, curly dog!

Short hair or long hair—they're both lovely. Short hair is good worn in a few loose waves with or without a few, dainty little curls in the back or over and around the ears. Fluffy bangs are swell for the demure girl who has a little too much forehead for perfect beauty. Long hair is good in soft loose waves and "put up" in a tidy, attractive knot at the nape of the neck. Some women are very fortunate in being able to wear their hair perfectly plain and sleek in "Indian" fashion. Braids in coronet style are very effective and add just the needed thing to the madonna type of girl.

So now, look at yourself in the mirror! Don't let others tell you you're conceited when they walk in and find you primping—they do it just as much as you. Get your good features and accentuate them with your hair—keep it clean—brush it well—remember—your hair is your "crowning glory"—keep it that way!

Sport Slants

I wish everybody here could have seen the actual demonstrations which took place in Charlottesville Saturday. That archer from William and Mary could really wield a wicked bow.

We wonder if archery had anything to do with the good-looking figures one sees around the campus. They tell me Martha Glenn Davis is becoming a modern Robin Hood. And Margaret Stallard is also getting along in that direction. Maxine Burks has chosen Casey Coleman as her assistant manager. They have both been practicing steadily. Banged-up arms have come into evidence since this sport has appeared on the campus. But they all say the fun deuced overshadows the pain of the bruises on the arms.

Just any Monday ro Thursday one can see gay crowds in the gym playing volleyball. Mary Bowles, with her sissy blouse, Hudgins in her natural dancing costume, Inez, displaying her jumping ability, and Miss Iler, poised, ready, are among the many spectacles to be seen.

Until the tennis courts come into their own, practice your strokes in the gymnasium. You can get onto the swing by using the wall as a target. Get ready for the doubles tournament which will be played later in the spring. Dorothy Wright is getting her practicing in early. Anne Dugger has also been seen around the gym lately. We understand it is the varsity squad getting into shape.

English and History teachers in the state as there are positions; that the supply of home economics and mathematics teachers does not meet the demand; and that the supply of science and language teachers is nearly equal with the positions open, with a slight tendency towards an over supply of teachers.

Clive Dorfeh then spoke on "How Members of Kappa Delta Pi Can Aid Each Other Professionally". The members were advised to keep in closer contact with their alumnae, to read more professional literature, and to arrange for more discussions following programs.

An informal discussion was held at the conclusion of the program. It was decided that further work should be done on the subject of the best openings for teachers and to present it to the freshmen next year in an effort to guide them in the selections of their majors and minors.

the University, was elected president of the Virginia Association of Physical Education for next year. Miss Ruth White, of the Portsmouth High School, was elected vice-president; and Miss Grace Chevraux, of Hollins, secretary and treasurer.

Dance interpreters and instructors met in Madison Hall where actual demonstration of the dance technique was given, led by Miss Nora Stacel, of Sweet Briar College. At about the same time the Intramural Section met in Monroe Hall with discussions on the value of intramurals. Mrs. Louise R. Fitzpatrick, of S. T. C., Farmville, was elected chairman of the dance section for the coming season; and Miss Lowry of William and Mary, corresponding secretary.

Miss Mary B. Barlow, who had a prominent part on the program, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, who also gave a talk, Kathleen Ranson, and Margaret Russell attneded from this institution.

new ideas for the oncoming year.

The social session opened with an informal tea held in the Alumnae House on the west wing of the campus. Over the tea-cups the girls discussed the quaint traditions, socail festivities and campus life of their Alma Maters. A tour of Atlanta followed by the banquet on Saturday night, culminated the social program.

After Dr. McKune, president of the college, introduced the most distinguished guest at the conference, Dr. Elizabeth Wright, Exchange Professor from England at Rollins College, she talked on the "The Curriculum as the Students in America and England see it". She stressed the common trend of enthusiasm in our colleges toward the Honor's Courses upon her borders, although her elaborate fortresses lately established along that frontier give her much greater protection than she has ever had before. The position that the United State will hold in case of war was discussed by Ruth Crumley. Ruth brought out the fact that although Germany has repudiated treaties and disregarded pacts, all the other nations of Europe have done likewise.

Virginia Acworth gave the standpoint of the League of Nations. After a secret meeting of the League it was decided to allow German representatives to attend without vote, the meeting which would decide the policy toward Germany; a statement was also made to ignore peace messages of Hitler.

An open discussion which was actively participated in by those present followed these talks and concluded the meeting.

Roberts To Serve As Vice-President Of Athletic Assn.

Elizabeth Shipplett Is Vice-Head of the Y. W. C. A.

Kitty Roberts, Farmville, will serve on the Athletic Association Council as vice-president of that group, as a result of the minor elections held April 7. The other minor officials elected were Virginia Carroll, Rocky Mount, secretary, and Jennie Belle Gilliam, Petersburg, treasurer.

Another result of the election was the selection of Zaida Thomas, Wytheville, as secretary of the House Council to succeed Virginia Leonard.

Kitty Roberts has an outstanding record in athletics for every year she has been at S. T. C. She has been member of both hockey and basketball varsity squads for two years. Virginia Carroll, a freshman, has shown great ability and interest in athletics, and was one of the few freshmen to make the varsity basketball squad. Jennie Belle Gilliam, sophomore, has been a member of the varsity hockey and basketball squads, as well as class teams.

These girls have been recognized for their qualities of dependability and capability. They will take office sometime soon. The Athletic Association is coming to take more and more a lead in the affairs and interests of the Student Body.

The varsity basketball team this year had only one defeat on its record, while class teams in hockey, basketball, volley ball, swimming and tennis are showing more spirit of rivalry and sportsmanship.

Zaida Thomas, besides serving on the House Council as a hall president, has made herself known by her activities in the various honorary organizations of which she is a member. She is assistant business manager of the literary magazine and was recently elected treasurer of Pi Gamma Mu.

S.T.C. Wins Debate From Bridgewater

Bondurant & Pollard Uphold Affirmative for S. T. C.

Farmville scored another success by defeating Bridgewater College in a debate on Tuesday, April 7. Agnes Bondurant and Margaret Pollard upheld the affirmative for S. T. C., while Mildred Hite and Vera Miller of Bridgewater defended the negative side of the question. The issue discussed was the Pi Kappa Delta question—Resolved that Congress Should Have the Right to Override by a Two-thirds majority vote decisions of the Supreme Court declaring laws passed by Congress unconsti-

Gamma Psi Installs Four New Officers And Initiates Two

In a combination initiation and installation Tuesday night, Gamma Psi, art fraternity, initiated Louise Anthony and Norvey Montague to membership. The following officers were installed for the year 1936-37: Virginia Whitehead Smith, president; Katherine Roberts, vice-president; Merwyn Gathright, secretary; and Martha Gwaltney, treasurer.

Following the services, the entire group of active Gamma Psi members with their adviser, Miss Bedford, enjoyed an Easter party.

Leonard To Head Honor Fraternity

Alpha Kappa Gamma, national fraternity for leadership, held its elections for the coming year on Monday, April 6. Virginia Leonard, Richmond, was chosen president, of the organization. The other officers are as follows: Elizabeth Shiplett, vice-president; Virginia Baker, secretary; Mary Bowles, treasurer; and Dorothy Wise, associate editor of the Torchbearer, Alpha Kappa Gamma publication.

Virginia Leonard has done outstanding work on the Y. W. C. A. She was chairman of the Freshman Commission, served on the Publicity Committee and World Fellowship Committee. She is the junior representative on the student council, and is secretary of the House Council. She was recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma in January, 1936. Elizabeth Shiplett has also been prominent in Y. W. C. A. work, serving on committees, and as Freshman Conciler this year. She is president of the Latin Club and has been on the annual staff for two years.

Virginia Baker, new editor of the Virginian, has shown outstanding ability in her class, the Y. W. C. A., the Sing Committee, as well as in honorary societies. Mary Bowles, president of her class both junior and senior years, has served as treasurer of the Athletic Association 1935-36. She was an executive of the Dramatic Club, member of the Monogram Club, held offices in her class both freshman and sophomore years, and has been prominent in almost

French Fraternity Chooses Officers

Beta Pi Theta, French national honor fraternity, has elected the following officers for the 1936-37 session: Jess Holland, president; Margaret Carroll, vice-president; Elise McMillan, secretary-treasurer. Jesse, who was elected to membership this year, is a transfer from Catawba College in North Carolina. She is an outstanding student in French and is majoring in that subject, and Spanish.

Following the election of officers two papers dealing with Moliere as a dramatist were presented. They were "The Drama of Moliere" by Izell Houck and "Contemporary Seventeenth Century French Drama" by Margaret Carroll.

In May the members of Beta Pi Theta will dramatize a scene from "Les Precieuses Ridicules", one of Moliere's famous comedies. The members of the French Circle will be invited to attend the performance.

Pi Gamma Mu Elects Chic Dortch Head

The president elect of the Virginia Gamma chapter of Pi Gamma Mu is Chic Dortch as the result of the elections held on Tuesday, April 7. Other officers for the coming year will be as follows: Virginia Ackworth, vice-president; Virginia Hannah, secretary; Zaida Thomas, treasurer; Ann Galusha, news reporter.

Mr. Holton was elected to succeed Dr. Walmsley as corresponding secretary and faculty adviser. Dr. Walmsley was forced to retire because of pressing duties. Mr. Coyner and Miss Moran were elected as members of the faculty advisory board.

Chic Dortch has been an unusually active member of Pi Gamma Mu for several months, taking part on committees and programs. The other girls elected were chosen for their outstanding ability and interest in social science and in the organization.

Purdom Witnesses Music Conference

Well Known Educators Make Contributions

Miss Lizabeth Purdom, teacher in the Music Department of S. T. C. has returned from the Music Educators National Conference in New York held March 29—April 3.

The educational phases of the program were presented in five general sessions in the Metropolitan Opera House, Madison Square Garden and Center Theatre of Radio City. Several music educators, well known artists, general educators and leaders in national affairs contributed to the progress. Among them were Dr. Walter Damrosch, Dr. S. Parks Cadman, Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, Dr. Howard Hanson, Mrs. August Belmont, Sir Granville Bantock, Thomas H. Briggs, Helen Christianson, Henry S. Drinker, Dr. Edwin Franko Goldman, Dorothy Gordon, L. Thomas Hopkins, William H. Kilpatrick, Estelle Liebling, Mrs. Francis McFarland, James L.

Y. W. C. A. Invites Speaker to S. T. C.

On April 14 and 15, the Y. W. C. A. will bring to the Student Body, Dr. Gregory Vlastos. Dr. Vlastos is professor of philosophy at Queen's University, Kingstone, Canada. He is also, author of the well-known book, "Religious Thinking".

As a lecturer, Dr. Vlastos has been called to such campuses as those of Harvard, Princeton, etc.

He will speak at Randolph-Macon Woman's College and Hollins during the Easter holidays because they could get him at no other time. On April 14, he will come to S. T. C. directly from Hollins.

The student body and faculty are not only invited but also urged to hear Dr. Vlastos as many times as possible while he is here.

The tentative schedule is as follows:

April 14—5:00

Open Cabinet Meeting

April 14—6:40 ..... Prayers

April 15—10:30 ..... Chapel

April 15—4:30 Discussion and Tea

The topic of Dr. Vlastos's discussion in the lounge will be "Things Canadian."

Levy Holds Place Until Final Round

Gertrude Levy again brings honor to Farmville State Teachers College and the State of Virginia by holding her place in a national oratorical contest up to the final round.

In the oratorical contest held at the Eleventh National Biennial Convention of Pi Kappa Delta, held at Houston, Texas, March 29 to April 13, Gertrude Levy was eliminated only after three rounds leaving just five speakers in the contest.

There were forty delegates participating in the women's oratorical contest; it may, then, be concluded that Gertrude won over thirty contestants and was equally as good as the other five eliminated with her.

The representative from Farmville was the only delegate sent from any college in the State of Virginia.

Shakespeare Play Delights Audience

Agee and Gray Play Leading Roles in Farce

"The Taming of the Shrew", the Shakespearian drama selected for the annual spring production of the Dramatic Club, was presented before a full house on Friday night, April 3. Under the able direction of Miss Leola Wheeler the talented cast moved faultlessly from an effective entrance to a thrilling conclusion.

The major roles were splendidly interpreted by Virginia Agee and Amanda Gray, who portrayed the characters Katherina (the Shrew) and Petruchio, her masterful suitor and husband. In wooing and winning this tempestuous maiden, Petruchio relieved not only the mind of her anxious father, Baptista (Margaret Pollard), but also the many admirers of her younger and more subdued sister, Biana, played by Clara Nottingham. With the parental marriage ban removed the latter was soon wed to Lucentio, in the person of Elizabeth Carroll, who had been faithfully assisted in her suit by the servant Tranio (Nan Throckmorton). In the end, much to the surprise and probable discomfiture of Lucentio the dispositions of the maidens are exactly reversed and the position

Missouri High School Youth Wins Eddie Cantor Prize

Lloyd Lewis, 17-year-old high school student of Plattsburg, Missouri, is the winner of the Eddie Cantor $5,000 peace scholarship competition, it is announced by the radio and screen star. The identity of the recipient of this award was first revealed by Cantor during his Columbia broadcast, Sunday, April 5.

Young Lewis' 500-word essay on "How Can America Stay Out of War?" was chosen by the four judges—all presidents of leading educational institutions—as the best of 212,000 entries received from every section of the United States.

The judges were Robert M. Hutchins, University of Chicago; Frederick Bortrand Robinson, College of the City of New York; Ray Lyman Wilbur, Leland Stanford University; and Henry Noble MacCracken of Vassar College.

For the final elimination, they considered fourteen letters, each identified only by number. Of these fourteen, the prize essay, designated merely as "Number 2" in the group, was the unanimous selection of the judges. They based their decision on the quality of "the most constructive, sincere and interesting letter, regardless of fancy writing and technical knowledge."

Since the winner was not notified in advance, Lewis first learned of the fact when he listened to the Sunday evening broadcast. The boy, a farmer's son, is a junior in the Plattsburg High School, Plattsburg, Missouri, has a population of 1,670. Lewis' address is Rural Route No. 4, and he receives his mail in Post Office Box 58.

Through a trust fund created by Cantor, Lewis will receive an adequate allowance for tuition and complete maintenance during the four-year course of study at any college or university in the country. The fund will be administered by the Bank of the Manhattan Trust Company of New York. The actor deposited $5,000 for this specific purpose immediately following his first announcement of

Virginia Poet

LAURENCE LEE, poet laureate of University of Virginia.

Poet To Lecture At S. T. C. April 17

The young poet, Mr. Lawrence Lee of the University of Virginia wil speak at the State Teachers College, on Friday evening, April 17, at eight o'clock. The work of Emily Dickinson and other recent poets will be the subject of his lecture; but he will also read many of his own poems, which have won recognition for him as a "contemporary poet of real significance."

Mr. Lee is sometimes spoken of as unofficial poet laureate of the University, because some of his best work has interpreted the beauty of the surroundings of the Albermarle institution from which he graduated in 1928 and where he is now a member of the faculty in the Department of French. He also comes of Virginia ancestry, though born in Montgomery, Alabama; and his work distinctly carries on the finest literary and spiritual traditions of the South.

Mr. Lee will speak at Farmville under the auspices of Beore Eh Thorn, the honor society in English, at the College. And his poetry aptly exemplifies what this society has undertaken to work for in the life of the College. The three mystic old English rune letters, which constitute the society's name, symbolize the fine inspiration and the exacting discipline which the pursuit of literature yields to its devotees. And Mr. Lee's poetry conveys a rare sense of mystery and beauty of life, in finely wrought patterns of exquisite delicacy and finish. Elizabethan in the freshness of his mind and Cavalier in frankness and facility and unerring sense of form, Mr. Lee also has a portion of the subtle art of Poe without his gloom and of Lanier's serious enthusiasm for beauty without his Puritanism and affectation.

Professor James Southall Wilson has written:

Lawrence Lee has the gift of lyrical beauty as only few American poets have had it. He belongs

Ruth Phelps Retains Choral Club Office

At the regular meeting of the Choral Club on Monday, April 6, Ruth Phelps was unanimously re-elected president of the organization, and Emily Channell was re-elected secretary. Other offices will be elected at the next meeting.

Mr. Strick, the director, gave a complete report of the standing of the Choral Club. The club unanimously voted their thanks for the splendid report given by the director.

The Choral Club will sing in one of the local churches some time in May, and there is much enthusiasm over this program.

Eastman Will Hold '36 Vice-Presidency Of Student Body

Zaida Thomas To Be House Council Secretary

In the minor elections held on Tuesday, April 7, Claire Eastman was chosen vice-president of the Student Council; Elizabeth Morris, secretary; Marjorie Robertson, treasurer, and Dorothy Buckland, chairman of campus league.

Elizabeth Shipplett was elected vice-president of the Y. W. C. A. in the same election. Other officers of the Y. W. C. A. will be: Nan Seward, secretary; Isabelle Plummer, treasurer; and Ruth Montgomery, freshman conciler.

An advisory board consisting of Mr. French, Miss Mary Clay Hiner, Miss Winnie Hiner, and Miss Moran was also chosen by the student body.

Claire Eastman is council representative of the junior class, besides her outstanding work in other fields, such as the Rotunda, Pi Gamma Mu, Alpha Phi Sigma and the Dramatic Club. Elizabeth Morris was freshman representative on the council, and this year has served as Campus League Chairman. Morjorie Robertson and Dorothy Buckland have both been class representatives.

Elizabeth Shipplett has been prominent in Y. W. C. A. work since her freshman year. She was secretary of the Freshman Commission, worked on the Service Committee her second year, and this year has been Freshman Conciler. Nan Seward was chairman of the Freshman Commisston and Ruth Montgomery was treasurer of that group. They both took an unusually active part in this work. Isabelle Plummer has heretofore held no position in the Y. W. C. A., but has shown outstanding ability in other phases of college life.

The advisory board is chosen yearly from members of the faculty or administration who show particular interest in the work which the students are carrying on.

Editor Announces Staff for 1936-'37

Charlotte Rice is Associate Editor of Virginian

Virginia Baker, editor-in-chief of the Virginian for 1936-37, wishes to announce her staff. Members of the literary staff are as follows: Charlotte Rice, associate editor; Carter Belle Munt, literary editor; Kitty Roberts, assistant literary editor; Merwyn Gathright, art editor; and Mary Ellen Mims, assistant art editor. Besides the business manager, Mary Elizabeth Slater, the business staff includes Charlotte Minton, assistant business manager; Ruth Montgomery, photographic editor; Miriam Ficklen, assistant photographic manager; Virginia Leonard, circulation manager; and typist, Lois Vassar. Assistants to the circulation manager and typist will be selected from the freshman class next fall.

Mr. T. A. McConkle will continue his position as business adviser, while Miss Virginia Bedford retains her post as art adviser. Miss Nancy Foster has been selected to succeed Miss Jenkins as literary adviser. Miss Jenkins was forced to give up because of her many responsibilities concerning the literary magazine and the Rotunda.

Our Aims

The Rotunda staff of 1936-37 wishes to express its desire to uphold the high standards of excellency which have made the paper of such interest in the past. We intend to do all in our power to cooperate with students, faculty and the administration in furthering their aims for the coming year.

We realize that a great responsibility has been laid upon us. The opportunity for service and representation of the student body wihch has been placed in our hands will not be taken lightly.

It has been the policy of the Rotunda at all times to reflect the interests and opinions of the school as a whole. It is our earnest wish that this policy be carried out in the fullest sense of the word. We request that the students express their ideas and wishes freely so that we may feel the supporting strength of being a representative group.

In the numerous fields of work which the publication of a paper has to offer there is ample opportunity for the development of a broad viewpoint. The principles of impartiality and clear judgment on a critical plane are essential for success in these fields. The cultivation of these wider viewpoints constitutes one of the chief aims toward which we are striving. We shall endeavor to broaden our outlook through a well-rounded program of duties which will be the framework of our activities.

We call upon you for the cooperation and backing which interest and sympathy with our undertaking will arouse. Our services are in your hands. Use us, and through the using you encourage us to higher endeavor.

Attitude In Chapel

Is it not possible to be quiet, attentive, and reverent for ten or fifteen minutes of the school day?

Chapel time is the short daily period reserved to develop the spiritual side of our life here in college. It is a break in the morning's classes, when we should quietly and respectfully take our seats in the auditorium and give our whole attention to the minister's words as he reads the morning worship.

However, when the ten-twenty bell rings, the auditorium immediately begins to fill with chattering, giggling girls, who yell "Hello!" to each other, crackle letters and newspapers, noisily let down their seats, pop gum, eat, etc.

In fact, several pages could be filled with a description of the irreverent behavior of many individuals in assembly. Talking and writing about this matter, however, will not help. It is the individual herself who must change from a listless chatterer, knitter, ,or whatever she may be, ,to a quiet worshipper for fifteen minutes of each morning. It is your chapel and that of the person sitting beside you, not the preacher's or the faculty's.

Just as bad, if not worse than the behavior, is the way the girls march out of the auditorium. The minute the march begins, they start pouring out of the back rows, and in a few minutes there is such a mob that those in the front of the auditorium, who are supposed to march out first, ,have to wait in the aisles until those in the back push their way out.

Repeated embarrassment is expressed upon the presence of guests and visitors in chapel, mostly on account of the lack of interest and poor marching on the part of a large number of girls in the student body. If for your own self-respect, you do not wish to behave, ,remember that what does not appeal to you may appeal to someone else, and vice-versa. Consideration for others is never to be overlooked. Why not begin showing it tomorrow morning?

Jersey Justice

Last Friday night at 8:47 p. m. a curious crowd gathered outside the state prison at Trenton, New Jersey, learned that the miserable object of their curiosity had gone to his final fate via the electric chair. Twice before they had waited for the word only to learn that last minute reprieves had been granted or instigated by the governor of the state.

These interventions have excited the indignation of virtually every sane citizen of the country. The tactics employed by the lawyers on both sides have been questionable; the action of the grand jury suggests political implications; the confession of Wendel is admittedly and obviously a farce—a stall for time; and beyond a doubt the actions of Governor Hoffman propose federal inquiries.

Justice may be blind, but, in some cases, it is also ridiculous. From all sides, both popular defenders and accusers of Hauptmann agreed that "something ought to be done." Even the American newspaper public which has avidly enjoyed the whole side show of a spectacle from the instant four and a half years ago when the news was flashed

Are we to blame our court system, the unrestricted "freedom of the press", or ourselves that American justice has become the butt of European humor, and that one writer with apologies to Segar featured an article in "The Richmond Times Dispatch" to the effect that a confession for the crime had been obtained from Eugene, the Jeep, and that the proceedings would probably be cleared up about July 28, 1952? Where the root of the evil lies we cannot attempt to say. We will leave the problem to the deans of the various law universities, coupling it with the severe struggle they are having to teach equitable theories in the face of "Jersey Justice."

Palm Sunday

Among those oft-seen but poorly-understood marks on the calendar, such as Shrove Tuesday, Ash Wednesday, and the period of Lent, is also to be found Palm Sunday. This is an anniversary recognized by the Christion church. It is the Sunday which precedes Easter. The name, Palm Sunday, is significant of the event which it marks. One week before His resurrection, according to Biblical chronology, Christ rode triumphant into Jerusalem. The throngs of men, women, and children who gathered to see the King ride forth, strewed flowers, branches, and palms in His way. And thus is the name of Palm Sunday derived.

While this anniversary is not nearly so important as Easter in the Christian religion, one should certainly know its significance.

Alumnae News

Lynchburg Alumnae

The Alumnae chapter of Lynchburg held an interesting and well-attended meeting on Monday, March 16. Miss Grace Moran ,0 S. T. C. was the guest of honor. Miss Blanch Murrill is president of the organization.

New Chapter Formed

Another Alumnae chapter was organized Wednesday, March 18, in Martinsville with the assistance of Miss Leola Wheeler and Miss Grace Moran. Seventeen people attended the meeting, and Miss Bonnie McCoy was elected president of the club.

Miss Kate Trent

Miss Kate G. Trent, supervisor in the Training School of the Fredericksburg State Teachers College, has been released from her position in order that she might accept a similar one at the Wilson Teachers College in Washington, D. C. Miss Trent, in her new position, will supervise kindergarten work and will also teach classes in education.

Miss Trent has been a member of the training school faculty in Fredericksburg since 1926, except for a half a year during which time she was at columbia completing her work for her Masters Degree and for two years which she spent supervising kindergarten work at the State Teachers College Ypsilanti, Michigan.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Editor:

On April 14th and 15th, the students of State Teachers College in Farmville, will have the opportunity to hear one of the most outstanding members of the National Council of the Y. W. C. A. At this time Dr. Gregory Vlastos, a member of the faculty of Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario, Canada, will visit our campus.

Through talks at chapel and prayers, Dr. Vlastos may contact a large number of students. This is interesting and helpful. True inspiration will come, however, through the personal contacts made with him by the individual students. You are urged to meet Dr. Vlastos and talk with him. He will be more than glad to discuss your problems with you.

It is the wish of the Y. W. C. A. that each student, not only those who are actively engaged in Y. W. work, should take advantage of the presence of this great man on our campus. Let his visit mean something to each of you.

Sincerely,
Agnes Crockett

Intercollegiate News

In the opinion of the serious-minded class of 1939 at Princeton things to be desired at that University are music with dinner and dinner without scrambled eggs, larger cream pitchers at all times, and the addition of co-eds and abolition of classes. Otherwise, say the Frosh, the place is all right.

Admission requirements of American Universities have reached a dangerously low level, according to Frank Bowles, Columbia authority.

The University of Toronto reports that 75 per cent of those applying to the date bureau ask for brunettes. However, at the date bureau for Occidental College 25 cents for redhead, 15 cents for blondes, and 10 cents for brunettes are the price charged.

It might even be interesting to know that Hal Kemp is the only orchestra leader known to have insulted King Edward VIII, but that was way back when he was the Prince of Wales. It seems that in England there is a custom that the orchestra continues to play as long as a member of the royalty is on the floor. Hal thought the Prince was leaving. P. S.—They later made up and the Prince actually played the drums for Hal on one occasion.

A Harvard zoologist risked his life to enter his burning home the other day. He was after a set of corrected exam papers.

Students at the University of North Carolina had their professors tense for a while. It looked as if the students would go on record asking that "prof" take comprehensive exams in the subjects they teach. But they did not vote that way, although they did vote their desire for all professors to take compulsory courses in public speaking. This all goes to show how generous N. C. students are t teachers.

If college men would hold their girl friends, they should abide by the following rules, according to a professor in a northern university:

1. Leave off the cave-man tactics. Clark Gable may be able to get away with it, but everyone is not a Clark Gable.

2. Don't try to be a Don Juan type.

3. Don't boast of your achievements.

4. Don't have the critical attitude. Remember that common faults are what make others human.

If by following this advice you fail to have success, just console yourself with the thought that she probably wasn't your type anyway!

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

MARGARET POLLARD

To us who know her well, it must appear that we have among us one whose destiny will be to lead wherever she may be. Margaret Pollard is the type of person who brings to mind such adjectives as "fine", "generous", "thoughtful," capable," "ambitious". There are so many admirable qualities as well as lovable ones that it is hard to choose those of hers which are more deserving of mention than others.

There is one thing of which we may be certain. If we need anyone to do anything, Margaret is one we can count on to help us in any way possible. She is a "tower of strength". Her membership in the senior class adds to it a distinction no other class can claim.

With the wide variety of activities ranging from oratory to social science Margaret is also a sincere friend and a girl whose ideals are hard to match.

In debating, Margaret has won an enviable place. She has been a member of the varsity intercollegiate debating team for four years, and the president of Pi Kappa Delta, National Forensic Society, for two years. In the latter capacity she won the diamond key, highest distinction in debating given by that society. She was president of the Debate Club two years.

In honor societies, Margaret also has a noted place. She was president of Solidatas Latina in 1934-35, president of Sigma Pi Rho, national Latin fraternity in 1935-36, has the Degree of Masters in Alpha Phi Sigma and is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, national Social Science honor fraternity. For the past year she has been president of the Dramatic Club, one of the most active organizations in school, and has taken parts in a number of plays. In the fall of 1934 Margaret was recognized for her leadership by Alpha Kappa Gamma, and she has served as vice-president of that organizatoin this year.

Literary Column

A recent editorial in a well-known magazine was written on Wild-Flower Day which is celebrated on April 24. This editorial was really instructive and a few of its points are worth passing on.

About 1919 Mr. Albert E. Stillman, well-known naturalist of California, suggested the observance of a national wild-flower day. By this wild-flower day it would be possible to call the attention of people to the importance of the conservation of our wild-flowers. It is for the benefit and enjoyment of all future generations as well as those of today. that emphasis be given to the necessity of protecting our wild-flowers and to ways and means of so doing.

In an article in "The Instructor" for April 1925 was a poem written by Mrs. Maud Wood Henry which emphasizes the significance of the Wild-Flower Day.

"When fields and woods are green and gay
And some new flower unfolds each day
And everywhere are birds a-wing,
All children feel the lure of spring.
In every bird song is a call
That strikes responsive notes in all;
And in the heart of every child
Is born a longing for the wild.
In little groups throuhout the land
They trop afield a merry band;
With baskets armed, they go in quest
Of wild flowers with an eager zest.
To teach them how to pluck with care
The flowers of spring, so frail and fair,
So as to save their dainty seeds
For future flowers and season's needs:
To be content with small bouquets,
Remembering the coming Mays;
To not despoil a blooming tree
Or any woodland plant they see,
We'll celebrate a "Wild-Flower Day"
In time to save the flowers of May;
We'll have a wilf-flower savers' band
In every school throughout the land."

Much nature poetry has been written by our American poets. One of my favorite nature poems by an American poet is "The Yellow Violet" by William Cullen Bryant.

"When beechen buds begin to swell,
And woods the bluebird's warble know,
The yellow violet's modest bell
Peeps from the last year's leaves below.
Ere russet fields their green resume,
Sweet flower, I love, in forest bare,
To meet thee, when thy faint perfume
Alone is in the virginal air.
Of all her train, the hands of Spring
First plant thee in the watery mould,
And I have seen thee blossoming
Beside the snow-bank's edges cold.
Thy parent sun, who bade thee view
Pale skies, and chilling moisture sip,
Has bathed thee in his own bright hue
And streaked with jet thy glowing lip.
Yet slight thy form, and low thy seat
And earthward bend thy gentle eye,
Unapt the passing view to meet,
When loftier flowers are flaunting night.
Oft in the sunless April day,
Thy early smile has stayed my walk;
But midst the gorgeous blooms of May,
I passed thee on thy humble stalk.
So they, who climb to wealth, forget
The friends in darker fortunes tried,
I copied them—but I regret
That I should ape the ways of pride.
And when the genial hour
Awakes the painted tribes of light,
I'll not o'erlook the modest flower
That made the woods of April bright."

SOCIETY

H. S. C. German Club Sponsors Dance Set

The Spring Pan-Hellenic dances at Hampden-Sydney this past week-end were well-attended by S. T. C. girls.

Johnny Hamner's orchestra furnished the music for the dancers, who reported the affair as being a very successful one. Girls from school, with their dates who attended the dances were:

Sue Adams, John Kincaid; Annie Leigh Bailey, Bob Evans; Frances Britton, Arley Hayman; Frances Bryan, Birch Douglass; Jane Burke, W. D. Temple; Elizabeth Butler, Gene Caldwell; Frances Channell, Jim Kirk; Mary Joyner Cox, Buck Rady; Virginia Doughty, Bruce Franz; Mary Denny, Joe McLain; Adelaide Dressler, E. R. of the husbands subsequently altered.

Not only was unusual ability evidenced in these more outstanding roles, but decided talent was shown in the splendid portrayals of the lesser characters. For this remarkable cast, for the true Shakespearian atmosphere, and for its steadily increasing interest, "The Taming of the Shrew" may well be marked an epical production.

Homes Claim Many S. T. C. Week-Enders

Spring is in the air. Week-ends arrive and students go. The halls and dining room take on that forlorn look that lots of room with no one in it gives a place. Although they know very well that the holiday begins Thursday, a great number of girls checked out for home. Among them were:

Katherine Habel, Frankie Bryan, Florence Bross, Ruby Blanton, Jane Burke,, Edna Bolick, Louise Briggs, Winnie F. Eubank, Martha Harrison, Dortha Harrison, Nellwyn Latimer, Doris Moore, Ruth Montgomery, Valla Nimmo, Rose Puller, Nannie M. Parker, Livian Powell, Sarah Parker, Marian Pond, Tapelle Pruden,, Charlotte Rice, Anthelia Robinette, Lucy Smith, Pattie Jeffreys, Frances Faris, Jennie Rock, Sylvia Dunnavant, Dot Henderson, Fletcher Walker, Doris Eason, Cornelia Penn.

Richmond

Annie Leigh Bailey, Audrey Clements, Elsie Dodd, Zell Hopkins, Margaret Long, Minnie Smith, Florence Sanford, Doris Johnson, Amy Cunninghan, Kitty Spiers, Margaret Crenshaw, journeyed to Richmond during the week-end.

Crewe

To Crewe went Kitty Brooks, Margaret Pittard, Mildred Slayton, Clara Uinehard, and Virginia Scanlan.

Roanoke

Roanoke called two girls, Billie Arthur and Bessie Hart Powell.

Burkeville

Virginia Pilcher, Dot Tillet,, Cassie Boswell, and Frances Gaskins went to Burkeville.

Lynchburg

Lynchburg proved the drawing card for Virginia Hall, Martha Nottingham, Kitty Nelson, Marguerite Snell, Kitty Maynard, India Martin.

Other Places

Virginia Boyd visited Edith Hart in Union Level.

Mary Rives Black, Pamplin; Mary Wilson Clark, Newport News; Kitty Chappell and Elizabeth Trent, Drakes Branch; Adelaide Dressler and Mary Annes Harper, Darlington Heights; Evelyn Holmes, Rice; Gladys Hendrickson, Blackstone; Helen Greene and Frances Taylor, Prospect; Evelyne Howell, Norfolk; Virginia Hooke, McDowell; Copeland Johnston, and Virginia Tilman, Charlottesville; Florence Rowett, Franklin, N. J.

Mary Sullenberger,, Monterey; Nan Throckmorton, Appomattox; Virginia W. Smith, Hopewell; Eleanor Shackleton and Virginia Price, Meherrin; Cassell Schools, Washington, D. C.; Pauline Reid, Keysville; Sue Turner, Petersburg.

To Fredericksburg

Chic Dortch, Virginia Bean, Zalda Thomas, Evelyn Massey and Ann Galusha attended the I. R. C. convention at Fredericksburg this week-end.

At Races

Eleanor Dodson, Will Scott and Lelia Sanford attended the races at Curles Neck during the week-end.

University Dances

Bernice Jones attended the dances at the University of Virginia during the week-end.

Fourteen Girls Accept Bids of Five Sororities Following Rush Week

Following a week of rushing, the following girls accepted bids into these sororities:

Gamma Theta: Elizabeth Wilson, Lexington; Beverly Sexton, Arcadia, Florida.

Alpha Sigma Alpha: Jane Holland, Danville; Frances Maxey, Clarksville; Kitty Nelson, Crozet.

Pi Kappa Sigma: Cassell Schools Norfolk; Catherine Cox, Norfolk.

Alpha Sigma Tau: Dorothy Babby, Ashland; Cassie Boswell, Burkeville; Mary Harper, Marion, S. C.; "Boo" Speak, Luray.

V. P. I. Picks Potter For Beauty Selection

The V. P. I. annual staff has announced that Lucy Potter, Farmville S. T. C., will represent our student body in their book this year.

In the fall of 1935 the annual staff of the V. P. I. publication asked that a number of pictures of beautiful students of S. T. C. be submitted to them for the selection of one to be "Miss Farmville" in their feature section. The pictures were in turn to be sent to McClelland Barclay, noted artist, for the final judging. Of the five pictures sent from our studnet body. Barclay has chosen Lucy Potter, vice-president of the Student Council, as our representative.

A. S. T. Party

The Alpha Sigma Tau's enjoyed an Easter party in their chapter room on Wednesday night, April 1, 1936. An Easter theme carried out the decorations and games. Delicious salad plates were served by Lucile Davis and Merwyn Gathright, and each member received an Easter favor.

Wednesday morning, after chapel exercises led by Vera Ebel, the Choral Club sang two selections for the student body, the Austrian National Anthem — "Glorious Things of Thee are Cpoken" and "The Rosary".

tutional.

Mr. Tucker Doyne served as critic judge for the debate. In his judgment the Farmville team won through the effectiveness of rebuttal due to a great deal of experience along this line. The two teams were well-matched and were rated equally high in effectiveness of argument, stage diplomacy and delivery, and training for the debate.

the competition during his radio program Sunday, January 5.

The competition, inaugurated by Cantor on that date, closed on Washington's Birthday, February 22. A tremendous response was elicited, with co-operation from many high schools and colleges throughout the country.

An invitation is being extended to Lewis by Cantor for him to visit New York City this coming week-end (April 11, 12) as the latter's guest.

to the great tradition of English poetry as Rupert Brooke does or W. H. Davies. There are poems in this volume (Summer Goes On) that will be recognized as among the most exquisite of pure lyricism.

And Theodore Maynard adds:

The lyrics really sing. The sonnets are firmly, delicately poised.

And Louis Untermeyer says:

The title poem projects not only a picture and a mood but communicates an unsuspected poignance. In this fragment of life the poet triumphs over the narrator, and the heart is torn by the sense of the richness of love and its swift mutability.

The public is cordially invited to hear Mr. Lee. No admission will be charged.

At last! Found! One thing that women agree on unanimously. Some one hundred women, in a survey of Los Angeles Junior colleges co-eds, agreed that a combination of an uncomplimentary pair of pants with a sport coat for a debonair sporting effect in men's dress styles is very desirable.

Wynn Makes Flying Tackle As Faculty Ties Farce Game

Can you feature Dr. Wynn making a flying tackle at Margaret Pollard and landing flat on his nose? Can you feature our "Lights out" girl Liz Huse, making a spectacular run of sixty-five yards after intercepting a forward pass, and then shooting a goal? Well, all this and more too happened at the farce basketball game between the faculty and the outstanding girls of our college.

Our own Addie, up to her clownish tricks, tried to pull a fast one by creeping through Dr. Wynn's legs and grabbing the ball. Dr. Jeff, though, our ubiquitus umpire, would have none of it and, sitting down in the middle of the floor, tooted lustily on his long tin horn. Miss Moran's free shot that followed fell short by not more than twenty feet. During the half Ruth Sears, the college water-girl, served spinach and lemons to the weary contestants. Dr. Simkins was literally worn out, but the real tragedy of the evening occurred when Miss Moran fell in a dead faint after making a goal. She was revived by a bucketful of H_2O and more spinach. Louise Walmsley lost twenty pounds chasing Mr. Holton up and down the court trying to grab the ball from his clutches.

The score, though, mercifully ended in a tie of 8-8, and if it had not we hate to think of the fight that would have ensued.

Musical Presented In Sing Saturday

The scene of Saturday night's Sing was laid in Miss Nancy Sellman's music store. S. T. C. wits were sorely taxed as some of our classmates enacted popular songs in pantomime. The program was a musical, not to mention a comical, "take-off" on popular songs.

Nancy Sellman, an ambitious music salesman, pressed the button which dramatized the latest songs for the benefit of five skeptical patrons, Pattie Bounds., Frances Gaskens, Margaret Thays, Charlotte Minton, and Beverly Sexton.

Before the audience could get over being "Lost" with Virginia Leonard, it was whirled "Round and Round" with the music and Nan Throckmorton.

Had there been any males in the audience, it would have been impossible for them to decide whether they preferred being in Virginia with Henrietta Ivers, that "Beautiful Lady in Blue", ,or sailing in Florida, gazing at the "Moon Over Miami" in company with Kitty Morrison.

"Dot" Lewis's voice certainly needs no breakin in, and obviously her rhythmic feet come in handy when it comes to "Breaking in a New Pair of Shoes".

Those Butterworth girls! Can you imagine S. T. C. without them? What with Betty's "Wahoong" and Army's "Love and Divining" could S. T. C. girls do when the movies are closed?

While Edith Hammock, the paramount sport, was "Living in a Gerat Big Way" Frances Steed and Frances Bryant were harmoniously collecting and "Putting All Their Eggs in One Basket". Judging from the appearance, some S. T. C. girls don't wait for the easter bunny.

The entire cast including Vera Ebel, who revived our tender memories of "One Night in Monte Carlo" is indebted to Margaret Critcher for the piano accompaniments. Gwen Bell's participants really reflected the credit due their original director.

Mursell, T. Tertius Noble, Reverend Daniel O'Sullivan, Milton C. Potter, Harold Rugg, Agnes Samuelson, John Smallman, Percy Rector Stephens, Florence B. Stratemeyer, Albert Stoessel, George D. Strayer, Edward L. Thorndike.

In addition to the musical demonstrations and educational contributions there were several special features provided: concerts by the New York Folk Festival Council, the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and Boston Symphony Orchestra; concerts by a chorus of 1800 male voices in Madison Square Garden; Beethoven's Ninth Symphony by the Julliard School Symphony Orchestra; a demonstration in Center Theatre of latest developments in the reproduction of light, sound and color by the laboratories of RCA Manufacturing Company and General Electric Company.

The Music Educators National Conference was organized in 1907 and is an organization compressed chiefly of teachers, supervisors and directors in music in schools, colleges, universities and conservatories. Membership, however is open to anyone interested in the purpose of the organization, to make music a living force in the life of the nation and every citizen. On this basis is founded the broad program of the organization's activities.

The German capital opens its Olympic season as early as the middle of May with the German Beethoven Festival which will last until the middle of June. This will be followed by festival performances through early July and will be succeeded by castle concerts and serenades. From July 15 to August 3 international dance festivals and competitions will be held, ending in the presentation of the winning groups in the House of German Sport on August 3.

In Washington last week for the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, Dr. Gregory G. Pincus, Harvard professor explained he had artificially induced mamalian life. He told how the researcher had extracted egg cells from a female rabbit and sperm cells from a male. In a test-tube he fertilized the ovum, then installed it in a third female rabbit. When she bore the little of rabbits they were in no wise related to her. Since the reproduction apparatus and processes in rabbits and men are essentially the same, the new discovery causes transcendental implications.

King Edward VIII announced that he will carry on his late father's revival of the old custom of personally giving on Maundy Thursday (April 9) Maundy Money to "deserving" poor to the number of the King's age. This rite was begun in 1363 by Edward III in commemoration of Jesus' washing his disciples' feet.

Many a Belgium family living near the German frontier took the first train and fled when Hitler ruptured the Treaty of Versailles by sending German soldiers to the Rhineland. Last week somhad returned home. They felt excited as they looked across the frontier and saw German soldiers standing guard for the first time since the Rhineland was demilitarized 17 years ago. What small Belgium wanted to know was whether Great Britain could be counted on in case of German onslaught.

Two ancient tombs, one believed by experts to be the earliest civilization of Egypt and the other containing the mummy of a princess of the fourth dynasty, have been discovered by excavators. The mummy was found lying like a bride in full regalia, with a gold diadem and two necklaces of golden beads and with golden-beaded anklets and sandals. The fingers of her left hand were encased in gold.

"Was it a necking party you attended?"

"I'll say it was! When it started the hostess said, 'Everybody chews his own partner'."

Students Attend I. R. C. Convention

The conference of the Virginia Association of International Relations Clubs proved both "stimulating" and "entertaining" according to the delegates sent from Pi Gamma Mu here.

On Friday, April 3 at Monroe Hall at Fredericksburg State Teachers College, Fredericksburg, the meeting opened with a welcome by Miss Stuart Jones, presidetn of the local club. Miss Olivia Wheeler, president of the state organization, presided. The address of the afternoon session was given by Dr. W. C. Johnston of George Washington University.

The location of Fredericksburg within fifty miles of Washington, D. C., enabled the association to secure a number of outstanding and well-versed speakers on subjects of international relations. Among these were Dr. Johnston; Dr. W. L. Kaiser, George Washington University; Miss Jeannette Rankin, National Council for Prevention of War; Mr. Brent Allinson, correspondent of the Washington Star; Mr. William A. Reed, Foreign Trade Adviser of the Pan-American Union; and Mr. Clark M. Eichelberger, Director of the League of Nations Association. Topics of addresses and discussions included international relations with Asia, Pan-American countries and European nations and the possibilities and prevention of war.

At the business sessions on Saturday officers for the coming year were elected. The president and treasurer will be chosen from the hostess club for next year, which as yet has not been decided upon. Mr. Minter, V. P. I., will serve as vice-president and Miss Frances Bass of Fredericksburg is the new secretary.

Among the social affairs arranged for the delegates were a dance in the gymnasium, a tea, a banquet, and a tour of historical Fredericksburg under military guidance.

Delegates from S. T. C. were Zaida Thomas, Evelyn Massey, Virginia Bean, Chic Dorich and Ann Galusha.

sophomore year as the assistant to the photographic manager of the Virginian and has served as photographic manager this year.

Carter Belle Munt, a new-comer to the Virginian staff, was chosen because of her outstanding ability in English as shown by her record.

Merwyn Gathright has been a member of the art staff of the annual for some time. She was the assistant art editor as a sophomore, and served as an art editor for the 1936 publication.

Ruth Montgomery, a sophomore, has been faithful in her duties as assistant business manager this year.

The position of circulation manager replaces that of advertising manager, covering the same work and in addition taking charge of annual sales. Virginia Leonard, who takes this position, has been typist of the Virginian for the past two years.

Student Committee Elects New Officers

The regular monthly meeting of the Student Standards Committee was held in the Council room at five o'clock, Thursday, April 2, 1936. By unanimous vote, Zaida Thomas was elected chairman of the committee and Jennie Belle Gilliam was elected secretary for the coming year.

The work on the point system was discussed, and the members decided to retain Dr. Jefferies, Doris Moore, and Hazel Smith as the committee in charge of that branch for the present time.

In regard to the two representatives from each class, the committee requests that the classes will send back at least one of their present representatives in order to avoid the confusion that would arise if all representatives were new to the committee.

After a brief discussion of the problems now before the committee, the meeting was adjourned.

Sigma Pi Rho Adds Chapter in Indiana

Ball State Teachers College at Muncie, Indiana has petitioned the Farmville chapter of Sigma Pi Rho for membership. The school belongs to the American Association of Teachers Colleges listed in class A. It also belongs to the North Central Association of Colleges and Universitiees and has three faculty members teaching Latin, one having the Ph. D. degree and two the Masters degree.

Seven undergraduates and three honorary members have given their signatures, thereby making application to the national chapter of Sigma Pi Rho.

There are at the present two other chapters of Sigma Pi Rho—one at Georgia State Teachers College for Women and the other at State Teachers College in West Virginia.

May Day Costumes And Dance Plans Progress Rapidly

Classes in Home Ec. and Gamma Psi Assist

Definite progress is being made on plans for this year's May Day. With the head committee hard at work, the final molding of the pageant began this week. Practices at Longwood will be early next week, so that participants will get the atmosphere of the Egyptian temple which is to be the background of the fete.

Miss Tupper, Dorthy Billings as chairman, and members of the Home Economics sewing class are acting as costume committee this year. Designs and colors have been chosen, and models are being made so that each girl in May Day will know how to make her costume. This committee is working as follows: Air, Mary Chenault; Water, Virginia Agee; Fire, Mary Virginia Putney; People, Isabel Plummer; Guards, Mable Murden and Anne Graham; Variations, Carolyn Alsop; Papageno and Tamino, Jennie Belle Gilliam. Bondage, India Martin; Sarastro and His Court, Carolyn Alsop; Scribes, Frances Kent, Queen of Night and Court, Dot Billings; May Court, Dot Billings and Jennie Belle Gilliam; Court Collars and head dress, Mrs. Burch.

Under the direction of Mrs. Fitzpatrick, special members of Orchesis have worked out and are teaching most of the dances. This work has covered a long period of time, and the result is a group of original dances of unusual feeling. Doris Moore is chairman of the dance committee and is teach-

Dr. Vlastos Brings Message to Students On Today's Problems

Dr. Gregory Vlastos, professor of philosophy at Queen's College, at Kingston, Ontario, Canada, made a profound impression on the students and faculty of S. T. C. during his two-day visit on the campus last week. Dr. Vlastos, of Greek and Scotch extraction and a native of Constantinople, spoke with conviction and showed a mastery for deep penetration of present day life porblems. The solutions were offered with a keen perceptive sense of the depth and intricacy of the situations which perplex the world today. Dr. Vlastos spoke with an attractive accent, a super-amazing vocabulary, and a delightful informality at the discussions he held while here.

Coming from Harvard, Princeton, and Randolph Macon Dr. Vlastos appeared at S. T. C. under the auspices of the World Fellowship Committee of the Y. W. C. A. whose chairman is Mary Elizabeth Minor.

A summary of the activities arranged for Dr. Vlastos includes.

S.T.C. Announces Festival Princess

Dr. Jarman has announced that Tac Waters, Onley, Virginia, will represent Farmville S. T. C. at the Apple Blossom Festival held annually at Winchester. Miss Caroline Larus, Richmond, is Queen Shenandoah the Thirteenth and will reign over the festivities.

No definite date has been set for the festival, but it is assumed that it will be held very soon, as the apple blossoms are in full bloom.

Tac will be accompanied on her trip by Mrs. Waters, Miss Florence H. Stubbs, Virginia Baker and Tib Simmerman. Her escort will be chosen from one of the schools near Winchester.

Phelps Is President of Alpha Phi Sigma During Coming Year

Alpha Phi Sigma, honor fraternity in scholarship has elected its officers for the coming years. Activities have been directed this term by Bonnie Lane, president, and the executive board under the supervision of Miss Draper, adviser.

Installation of officers will be held Tuesday, April 28, in the little gym. They will take office as follows:

President—Ruth Phelps
1st Vice-President—Lois Vassar
2nd Vice-President—Libby Roberts

Juniors Announce 1936-'37 Officers

Leonard Will Hold Vice-Presidency of Seniors

The Junior class elected its minor officers at a special meeting held Monday night, April 20. They were as follows: vice-president, Virginia Leonard; secretary, Lucile Moseley; treasurer, Virginia Baker; Student Council representatives, Minnie Smith and Polly Ware; Student Standards Committee representatives, Zaida Thomas and Jean Willis.

Virginia Leonard has always taken an important part in the class activities. She was Student Council representative last year; secretary of the House Council; and was recently elected president of Alpha Kappa Gamma. She was active in the class productions both her sophomore and junior years. Lucile Moseley was secretary of the class for the past year, and performed her duties so faithfully and well that she was unanimously elected for another term. Virginia Baker served as treasurer last year and was re-elected for the coming term. She directed the junior production and has been outstandingly successful in the offices she has un-

Debate Season Ends In Contest Between S. T. C. and Winthrop

Winthrop College debaters will arrive in Farmville Tuesday, April 28 for the second annual Winthrop-Farmville clash. Beginning at four o'clock, there will be two rounds of debates in the afternoon. That night, oratorical contests will be held at eight o'clock. Two contestants from each college will take part in the oratorical contest.

The tournament with Winthrop will close the debate season of 1936. This will be the last appearance of Margaret Pollard, Louise Francis and Agnes Bondurant in intercollegiate debating.

Farmville's relationship with Winthrop College, Rock, South Carolina, is unusually friendly perhaps, because of Dr. Walmsley's professorship there for several years. In addition, Winthrop has had three tournaments on her campus this year and at each one has entertained delegates from

Pranks Of College Students Show Nature Of Young Folks

Young folks and young ideas! Is there anything that can beat them? We who are young participate in these ideas when they are born and as they mature with heartfelt enthusiasm—we have the most glorious times! Those who are younger look upon our actions with goggling eyes, open mouths, and giggles—they can hardly wait until they, too, can be participants in such wonderful foolery! Those who are older look at us with concealed laughter in their eyes, and a little grimness at the corners of their mouths that usually comes from pent-up amusement—they shake their heads and wonder how we stand such a crazy, disordered regime of life, yet they look back upon the times when they were enjoying the very same things.

Our ideas, when they are born, are a rising sun; our minds seem as if they were suddenly and brightly illuminated by a huge electric bulb; our eyes brighten and we grin—sometimes to ourselves, sometimes so broadly that anyone could tell there is to be mischief!

Such things as water battles in the dining room; the making of pie-beds; the greasing of door knobs; the tying of sheets to door knobs in a long link so that none can leave their rooms or possibly get through the halls for the maze of white criss-crosses! Such things as piling trunks in front of doors; making deafening uproars in the stillness of the night when everybody else is peacefully abed; playing "Tarzan" when the handbook says all lights should be out!

Such things as playfully (yet painfully) pinching the person walking in front of you; innocently thrusting a foot in front of some hurried, busy-blind individual; doing spring dances on the campus with the grace of a dainty rhinoceros; putting jello in your room-mate's bed; posing for pictures in the most ridiculous (yet cute) manners; staying on the roof for hours and looking like

Leadership Group Recognizes Four In Student Body

Alpha Kappa Gamma Taps Students in Chapel

In the second tapping service held here Alpha Kappa Gamma national fraternity for leadership, recognized the outstanding qualities in four members of the junior class this morning at chapel. Claire Eastman and Chic Dortch were tapped in the chapel exercises. It was announced that Martha Hamlet and Victoria Gillette had also been elected to membership, but they were unable to be present for the service.

The girls thus honored are challenged to a deeper responsibility, for Alpha Kappa Gamma recognizes ability and seeks to foster it. The girls it selects must develop and grow under its guidance. As a part of the service Tac Waters, president of the organization, brought out the qualifications for membership.

Claire Eastman has recently been chosen by the student body as its vice-president. She has been prominent in her work in the various honor societies of which she is a member, Alpha Phi Sigma, Pi Gamma Mu, Beorc Eh Thorn and Kappa Delta Pi. She has been head of the property group of the Dramatic Club this year, has worked on the Rotunda staff for three years, and was junior class representative on the Council.

Chic Dortch has been a member of Kappa Delta Pi and Pi Gamma Mu this year, and was recently elected president of the latter organization. She is president of A. C. D. and is a member of the Dramatic Club.

Martha Hamlett has been treas-

Dramatic Club Has Amateur Contests Among High Schools

Ten high schools of Southside Virginia will participate in a dramatic contest of one-act plays sponsored by the Dramatic Club on April 24 and 25. This is a continuation of the project started by the club last year to promote interest and appreciation of drama and its production throughout the high schools of this part of the state.

Orange and Rice now hold the cups for the best performance last season among the larger and smaller schools respectively. These cups will be awarded again on the basis of such elements as selection of play, adaptation, characterization, costuming, and acting.

The participants have been invited to arrive in the early afternoon in time to run through their plays on our stage once before the final performance, and, for those who care to, to be taken on a tour of the campus and buildings or visit with our students.

The smaller schools are scheduled for Friday night, the larger one Saturday night. An admission of fifteen cents each performance will be charged not as profit to the Dramatic Club, but as a means of covering the expenses of transportation, lighting, make-up, etc., incurred by the contest itself.

Friday night:

New Council Officers Assume Duties April 21

The past Student Council in the person of Hazel Smith, former president, installed their successors in a service held Tuesday, April 21.

Hazel thanked students, faculty and administraton for their cooperation with the outgoing council. She then installed Bonnie Lane, incoming president. Bonnie spoke a few words to the student body, the heart of which was, "With the student body behind us, much can be done. Without them, little can be done". She proceeded to install, in turn, Claire Eastman, vice-president; Libby Morris, secretary; Marjorie Robinson, treasurer; Dorothy Buckland, campus league Chairman; Minnie Smith and Polly Ware, senior class representatives; Caroline Upshur and Josephine Quinn, junior class representa-

Sophomores Hold Official Elections

Virginia Agee is Vice-President of Class

On Tuesday, April 14th, at 7:00 the Sophomore class met to elect its minor officers. Virginia Agee carried the election for the class's new vice-president. Carter Belle Munt was reelected secretary and Lib Harris again is to be the class' treasurer. This will make their third year in holding these offices.

Student Sophomore Representatives to the Student Council and to the Student Standards Committee were elected at a call meeting on Monday night. Caroline Upshur and Josephine Quinn will be next year's Student Council representatives. Caroline will serve for the second time next year, Jo has been active in class work and in the Dramatic Club.

Virginia Agee was reelected to the Student Standards Committee. The other representatives, Jennie Belle Gilliam was chosen by the committee itself in its election to serve as secretary for next year.

Walker Leads Club For Coming Year

The Dramatic Club held its regular meeting Wednesday night, April 15, at 7.15 for the election of officers for next year.

Isabel Plummer was issued a bid to the club in recognition for her work on the costumes in "The Taming of the Shrew."

Margaret Pollard, the president, announced that there will be regular weekly meetings of each department from now on until the end of school. She also read a note from Miss Wheeler in which she thanked the girls for the lovely gift presented her the night of the play. Miss Wheeler congratulated the club on their cooperation and work on the play.

The following officers were elected for next year: President Fletcher Walker, Vice-president, Josephine Quinn; Secretary, Lelia Hill; Treasurer and Business Manager, Madeline McGlothlin; Assistant, Virginia Whitehead Smith; Room-Keeper, Jennie Rock; Head of Costuming, Isabel Plummer; Head of Make-up, Ma-

New Government

Now the time has come for the present members of the Student Council to prepare their work so that the new Council can continue their good work without delay. Some of these members will be girls serving again; others will be girls to whom the work is entirely new.

As we look back over the past year, we view many things that our Council has done, but how much more could they have accomplished had the student body cooperated more. Cooperation is one of the main fundamental bases for the success of any organization. No club, no business enterprise, nor even our national government can prosper if the members of it fail to do their share. We each have our part to do, however, small or large, in our national government; the same applies to any other organization in which we are the functioning part. If we are willing to work hand in hand with others to make each of those organizations a success, we should be eager to cooperate with our Student Council to make it as successful as any other. You condemn a person as not being a patriot when he shirks his duty to his country. Why don't you condemn those who fail in their duties to their Alma Mater? Let us all escape condemnation by working hand in hand with our new Council more than ever.

Grown out of this lack of cooperation on the part of the student body is the failure of us to regard our Honor Code more than something we signed when we were here. When our new Council comes into office, let us start anew by turning over our soiled page. We can show our appreciation of the girls who are members of the Council by this renewing of our pledge; thus we may bring our code up to the standards it should represent.

The girls we selected to represent us are a part of us. We have recognized their capabilities and willingness to fill the demands of their office. They remain our friends, anxious to help us in our problems.

By considering our Honor Code more seriously than before, by cooperating with our Council and thinking of its members as sixteen true friends we can assure ourselves and them that "new government" will meet with more success than ever. Come one and all, and let's make our Alma Mater proud of us.

Go To Church

Last Sunday was called "Go to Church Sunday", as if there were only one Sunday in the year on which church-goers should be seen. More than the usual crowd attended the services in the different churches with here and there an additional visitor or two.

All the churches in the town are well and comfortably equipped with plenty of room to seat the college girls according to their respective beliefs. Why is it that we attend services regularly when we're at home but get careless when we come to school? Is it because there are too many other interests to take up our time? No, this should never be so. With six other days in the week, certainly all the necessary things can be accomplished, without having to "put them off" until the Sabbath. However, this very thing is exactly what a lot of girls do. They get novels out of the library so as to have something to read on the one day of the week when there are no classes, or they have a theme paper to be written or a test to be studied. Many consider it a fine opportunity to get a good day's rest and sleep until late in the morning.

May Day

Once again the attention of students is given to May Day. But are the students giving more than just a thought that May Day is nearly here? It is one of the most spectacular events in our college year and is known around the countryside for miles. Whether it is to remain thus means that the students must be ever willing to give their time and energy to it.

Each year we are asked whether we want to have it again next year. And each time the student body votes in favor of it. Is it worth the time of those who create the dances, design the costumes, and work up the theme so few respond to the call for girls to participate? Everyone knows that the more who participate, the prettier it is bound to be, and yet so few seem to be very willing to do so.

Because so few have shown willingness this year, there is a danger of our not having it again next year. We do not want that to happen, for we do not want others to say that Farmville is not having May Day this year because the students are too lazy to take part. So let us promise to support May Day in a true S. T. C. spirit Even if we can not be in it now, we can certainly make a promise to do so, and can keep that promise. For what good is a promise we do not keep?

Let us all thank those people yho have worked this year to make May Day a success—namely Mrs. Fitzpatrick, the May Day committee, and those taking a part. Above all we should reproach ourselves for saying that enough will go out even if I don't or that I shall go out next time and then fail to do so. Let us drink a silent toast to the success of this year's May Day and to the continuance of it.

Anti-War Strike

In the belief that war is imminent, in the face of the record-breaking peace-time military appropriation passed in Washington last month, in the hope that a concerted, unwavering opposition by the youth of America will bring the government to a realization that no war undertaken by American imperialism can be a just or fruitful venture for the majority of American people, the American Student Union sent forth a call for a student strike against war.

On April 22 at eleven A. M. the students of one thousand colleges, universities, and high schools of America, joined by sympathetic youth in France, Spain, Belgium and Puerto Rico, staged anti-war actions ranging from programs to walk-outs on classes. Seventy-one prominent educators, including sixteen college presidents, have endorsed the demonstration in response to an appeal from the Union emphasizing the need for "joint action" by students, faculty and administration "to meet the danger of war". More than half a million American students participated.

It is hoped by the organization and its true supporters that at a time when American war preparations are being spurred on an incredible scale, united and unwavering opposition will leave its impression in the Capitol.

Alumnae News

At the meeting of the Emporia Junior Woman's Club held Thursday, April 9, Miss Jessie B. Watkins was elected president. She succeeds Mrs. Watts, the former Miss Margaret Vincent, who held the position last year.

Funeral services were held Sunday April 19 for M.s. J. Hill O'Bannon who died suddenly Friday morning, April 17, at her home in Wordville. Mrs. O'Bannon was the former Miss Rena Armstrong and attended the State Teachers College at Farmville. At the time of her death she was chairman of the Rappahannock County Red Cross and prominent in the D.A.R.

The Mastinsville Alumnae Chapter held a meeting and a picnic supper on April 8 at the home of a member. Plans were made for a tea to be given on May 7 at which the girls in the senior class of the high school will be guests.

The mariage of Miss Dana C. Tweedy of Concord Depot and Mr. Martin K. Evans of Lynchburg took place in Farmville, Friday, April 10. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George Henderlite. Mr. and Mrs. Evans will make their home in Lynchburg after a short bridal trip.

The marriage of Miss Pearl Elizabeth Melton of Alberene, and Mr. Robert H. Bingler was solernized Monday April 13, at the parsonage of the Hinton Avenue Methodist Church in Crozet. Rev. W. A. Orser performed the ceremony.

Miss Dorothy Woodson of Spout Springs became the bride of Mr. Leslie N. Martin of Appomattox Saturday morning April 17 at the Baptist parsonage in Appomattox. The Rev. W. C. Thompson officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Martin will make their home in Appomattox.

Mrs. James Harris Carter of Lynchburg announce the engagement of her daughter Leolu Harris to Mr. Molean Hunter also of Lynchburg. The marriage will take place June 20.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edward Murrell of Lynchburg announced the engagement of their daughter Blanch Howard to Mr. William Henry Jones of Norfolk. The wedding is scheduled for the coming summer.

Intercollegiate News

Students at Baker University have finally won a 42-year fight to permit school dances, banned since the university was founded. But the inaugural dance had to be called off. Because of lack of interest, advance sales didn't justify hiring an orchestra.

When Fred Lemmer, student at the University of Minnesota meets his English professor, Mr. Weaver, they both blush slightly. Over a period of many weeks, Mr. Lemmer has broken all records for arriving late to Mr. Weaver's first hour class. His alibis have varied: "My alarm clock is broken" or "There was a tarffic jam" or "My car busted down."

Finally Mr. Weaver snarled, "Next time you'll tell me your house burned down". Last week Mr. Lemmer was late again. During the night his house had burned down.

Professor William F. Hoffman of Boston University is sore about the attempts of some professors to eliminate American dialects from the English language. "Variety is the spice of speech", he said.

The average Columbia University senior, almost 21 years old and weighing 153 pounds, is slightly antipathetical to the New Deal, would rather win a Phi Beta Kappa key than an athletic award and would not fight in a war conducted outside the United States, a recent survey revealed.

Dr. Calvin Stone of Stanford University is well on his way to changing the whole century-old technique of love making and the gentle art of proposing.

This iconoclast proves that when a young man swears undying devotion, he should not clasp his hands over his heart, but should instead hold his head in his hands. The heart, says the doctor, hasn't anything to do with your emotion. What counts is the pituitary gland at the base of the skull. Although, he admits, the heart might get a "little kick" out of being in love, with a manifestation of increased blood action. But that's all.

The prof's mind is like a revolving door. Every time the door turns around there's another person coming out. Every time the prof's mind turns around there's another paper to write.

The still popular expression, "Oh Yeah?" is not as inconsequential as one might think, according to a speaker at Hunter College.

"It is tragic in its implications," he said, "It is eloquent of world weariness as the bitterest cry of the disillusioned from Ecclesiastes down to Dreiser and Lewis. It bristles with challenge."

And those of us who have to listen to it—we bristle too.

Among suitable objects for justifiable homicide, says Northwestern University co-eds, is the man who hums while dancing.

Radcliffe College women are going to be answering a lot of telephone calls soon—that is they will if the telephone directory stolen from Agassiz House gets into circulation among the Harvard boys they believe purloined it. The book containing the phone number and photographs of each of the students listed was missed soon after a group of Harvard students had visited their house.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

FLORENCE SANFORD

We cannot know Florence Sanford without adding a great deal to our own personalities. She is the typical college girl combining attractive appearance and personality with poise and dignity.

To look in Florence's dark brown eyes, and the smile on her face reveal the depth of her sincerity and the strength of her character. She has a thoughtful mind and high ideals. She has been a great asset to our school.

Florence entered Farmville as a sophomore, being a transfer from William and Mary College. She has always shown a wonderful spirit by working faithfully and cooperating with the school, the faculty, and the student body.

During her three years here, she has been chairman of Chapel Committee; she has worked constantly on the Rotunda and this year she was editor-in-chief.

She has been a member of and held office in the Cotillion Club, and the Pan-Hellenic Association. Alpha Kappa Gamma, a national sorority for leadership, recognized Florence Sanford's potentialities and abilities, and she was tapped her junior year. Florence is also a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority and she is in May Court this year.

Literary Column

If your interest was aroused in Emily Dickinson and her poetry when you heard Mr. Lawrence Lee's opinion of her works, you may be interested in knowing more about her.

There are in our library several books of her poetry and a book written by her niece entitled, "The Life and Letters of Emily Dickinson" by Martha Dickinson Bianchi. This book was written in the hope of presenting a true account of Emily Dickinson's life and character. The author should know about Emily Dickinson because she was Emily's neice, and her mother was the Sister Sue to whom Emily sent so many of her verses and to whom she showed her secret self.

Emily Dickinson had many friends, but in later life her books came first, perhaps. Her books and authors were a vital part of her happiness. The following poem expresses her need and love for books:

"He ate and drank the precious words,
His spirit grew robust;
He knew no more that he was poor,
Nor that his frame was dust.
He danced along the dingy days,
And this bequest of wings
Was but a book. What liberty
A loosened spirit brings!"

"David Copperfield" was published when Emily was twenty-one, and Dickens was always a favorite of her father's, so that many expressions from his stories became household words. "Donkeys, Davy" was often flung back over Emily's shoulder as she fled unwelcome visitors. The drollery of Dickens was congenial to her sense of the ludicrous, and "Barkis is willin' " was a message more than once sent to Sister Sue ,her brother's wife.

Longfellow, Tennyson, the Brownings, Socrates, Plato, Poe, and the Bible sifted through her conversation. "Winter" by Lowell enthralled her for days at a time she declared, and Shakespeare always and forever. Othello was her chosen villian, Macbeth was as familiar as her neighbors, and Lear driven in exile was as vivid as if occuring on the hills in front of her door.

Emily was a very charming letter-writer. Here is a note of thanks, written to Mrs. Samuel Bowles:

Dear Mrs. Bowles,—Since I have no sweet flowers to send you, I enclose my heart. A little one, sun-burnt, half-broken sometimes yet as close as the spaniel to its friends. Your flowers came from heaven to which, if I should ever go, I will pluck you palms.

You have often remembered me.

I have little dominion. Are they not wiser than I, who, with curious treasure, could requite your gift?

Angels fill the hand that loaded
Emily's.

Mr. Lee gave the following poem to illustrate Emily Dickinson's opinion of fame:

"I'm nobody! Who are you?
Are you nobody too?
Then there's a pair of us—don't tell!
They'd banish us, you know.
How dreary to be somebody!
How public like a frog
To tell your name the livelong day
To an admiring bog!"

The following poem was not mentioned by Mr. Lee, but in my opnion it is one of her best.

"We never know how high we are
Till we are called to rise;
And then, if we are true to plan,
Our statures touch the skies.
The heroism we recite
Would be a daily thing,
Did not ourselves the cubits warp
For fear to be a king."

Another poem read by Mr. Lee on Friday night was:

"The soul selects her own society,
Then shuts the door;
On her divine majority
Obtrude no more.
Unmoved, she notes the chariots pausing
At her low gate;
Unmoved, an emperor is kneeling
Upon her mat.
I've known her from an ample nation
Choose one;
Then close the valves of her attention
Like stone."

SOCIETY

Society Entertains For Poet-Lecturer

Beorc Eh Thorn entertained Mr. Lawrence Lee at a reception after the lecture Friday night in the Student Lounge. Cakes, candies, and punch were served with Bonnie Lane presiding at the punch bowl. Mr. H. White rendered several of his own compositions.

The guests who attended the reception besides Mr. Lee included members of S. T. C. and Hampden-Sydney faculty.

Freshman Commission Picnic

Members of the Freshman Commission went on a picnic at the Longwood Cabin Friday afternoon. Hot dogs, buns, and coco-colas were enjoyed by the group. Those attending were Nancy Gray, Selma West, Henrietta Ivers, Elizabeth Green, Dorothy Adkins, Doris Adkins, Sue Adams, Margaret Scott, Sarah Hayes, Kitty Brooks, Mary Jackson, Sarah Button, and Ann Dugger. They were accompanied by the freshman counsellor, Elizabeth Shipplett.

Sigma Sigma Sigma

Alpha chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma held its annual Founder's Day banquet out at Longwood, on Saturday night, April 18.

The color scheme of purple and white was carried out in the decorations, cocktail and salad course. Purple and white lilacs adorned the tables.

The guests included Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Mix, Grace Hudson from Alpha Epsilon chapter, Evelyn Carson from Sigma Phi chapter, and Mildred Sandison from Alpha Epsilon chapter who is on the staff of the N. E. A. Journal.

The alumnae who returned for the occasion were Betty May Brown, Alma Garlic, Peggy Newsom, Lois Williams, Bargimin Bohannon, and Mabel Scott.

High School Dance

The College High School seniors gave their senior dance on Saturday evening from nine o'clock until midnight in the S. T. C. gymnasium. The music was furnished by the popular Hampden-Sydney orchestra. Quite a number of S. T. C. girls, Hampden-Sydney boys, town people and out of town guests attended besides the High School seniors. The gymnasium was artistically decorated in red and white. At intermission, red and white balloons, gathered in the above center of the gymnasium floated about the dancing couples while the orchestra played a gay number.

The new officers took oath of office immediately after their elections. Dorothy who was installed by the out-going president, Mary Robeson, took charge of the meeting, and installed the other officers.

S. T. C. Girls Attend Easters at V. P. I.

Easter dances at V. P. ., with soothing melodies by Isham Jones and Mal Hallett, attracted many of our girls last week-end. The figure which was formed at Cotillion Club, was led by Mary Bowles. The other S. T. C. girls present at this set of dances were Claudia Harpen, Anne Johnson, Vera Ebel, Pattie Jeffreys, Frances and Emily Channel, Mary Robeson, Helen Wilkins, Frances Yester, and Jennie Belle Gilliam.

University of Virginia

Tripping the light fantastic toe to the tunes of Ozzie Nelson and Jan Garber at University of Virginia could be seen Kitty Fitzgerald, Ada Virginia Pollock, Mary Elizabeth Minor, Margaret Hurt, Virginia Kemp, Clara Nottingham, Anne Peple, Helen Fern Perdue and Jean Willis.

Washington and Lee

Other prom trotters of the past week-end were Berniece Jones, Frances Hudgins, and Virginia Doughty who were being entertained by the Washington and Lee boys.

Homeward Bound

It may be spring fever. It could be home sickness. Perhaps 'twas a boy friend or two. We dn't know exactly why but homeward bound last Friday and Saturday were Doris and Dot Atkins, Dot Bagby, Frances Bryant, Elsie Dodd, Martha Hamlett, Lois Jenkins, Nannie Mae Parker, Charlotte Rice, Ruth and Pela Reed, Lucy Smith, and Elizabeth Lee Turner.

Other Places

Scattering off to other points North, East, South and West for various and sundry reasons were Sue Turner, Elizabeth Walton, Grace Eubank, Tapelle Pruden, Mary Ethel Barnes, Rebecca Gillette, Louise Anthony, Mary Frances Adams, Betsy Blanton, Nancy Leigh Bland, Annie Leigh Bailey, Cassie Boswell, Ethel Burgess, Margaret Carrol, Janet Currin, Dorothy Deans, Frances Faris, Helen Green, Merwyn Gathright, Elizabeth Hines, Edith Hart, Anna Hayer, Harriet Hudgins, Jane Holland.

Book Review

SAWDUST CAESAR
by George Seldes

The personal history of Mussolini can be regarded, for the first time, as being a matter of intrinsic importance. It is upon this subject that George Seldes brings testimony; on the p.rsonal history of Mussolini this is by far the best documented denunciation that has appeared to date.

Seldes lays bare a record of personal venality and inglorious military service. With the tactical ingenuity of a campaign manager in an electoral conflict he brings to light those items in the history of Mussolini which are offensive to Catholics, to Masons to liberals, and to humanitarians. He resorts to the campaign device of quoting opponent against himself.

"Sawdust Caesar" tells the truth though not the whole truth, and it should be required reading for anyone who has ever said, "We need a Mussolini."

Medical Authorities Advance Remedies for Tuberculosis

A decade ago the word tuberculosis evoked in the mind of the average college student a vague, elusive, incomprehensive picture. One took it for granted that he was invulnerable.

But somehow if the word existed among our forebears it was spoken of in an undertone. It was the proverbial skeleton in the family cupboard.

A decade has brought a new view-point to this doleful narrative, for in the stark realism of the present we no longer evade this terrifying consuming monster that has been cutting off so many of the "choicest blooms" of youth.

Medical authorities agree and all statistics confirm that predominantly the majority of persons who become ill with tuberculosis are between the ages of fifteen to twenty-four years. We look into the sanitoriums of our country and there see the prevalence of tuberculosis among those of college age or those who were of college age when stricken.

The balance by which the body resists the invasion of tuberculosis is an extremely delicate one. The lives of the college students may be tipped by overwork, fatigue, lack of sleep, nervous strain, lack of exercise in the open air and poor food. In these years of economic upheaval when a greater number of students have had short rations and been harder pressed for funds we find additional reasons for grave concern.

If early danger signals of tuberculosis such as fatigue (the fatigue that hangs on), cough, flushing of the face, colds, hoarseness and flu(with subsequent failure to come back) were heeded, the disease quickly diagnosed and proper bed rest started without delay, 95 per cent of all patients would make complete and comparatively prompt economical cures. Advanced tuberculosis has symptoms such as bleeding from the lungs or hemmorrhage, cough with positive sputum, chest pains or pleurisy.

Considering the information we already have available every student should feel a responsibility in bringing about every step advocated in the program of the tuberculosis committee of the American Student Health Association in their particular college; if they do not have such a program in their school.

No greater service within the student body today can be dispensed through the student government, fraternities, and other campus organizations than to voice their plea for measures to control this disease. A disease of such magnitude that in the United States it takes sixth place in the mortality rate of the general population and first place in the mortality rate of young women between the ages of fifteen to twenty-five years. Vast inroads can be made on the disease; daring even to hope for its eventual and complete eradication.

Robinette Heads '36 Debate Club

On Wednesday night, April 18, the Debate Club elected the following officers for the coming year: President — Anthelia Robinette; Vice - President — Dudley Allen; Secretary—Lucile Rhodes; Treasurer—Nora Jones; Debate Counselor—Juanita Callis.

Each of these girls has served in some activity of the Club this year. Anthelia Robinette has been debating only one year, but in this time she has shown her ability for leadership.

Dr. Walmsley has served as faculty adviser to the Debate Club for two years and has guided its members through successful seasons.

Sport Slants

Hurray! Another lap of the race for the color cup is on. The crowd is swept to its feet with cheering, as first one and then another gains the lead.

Such a scene is predicted, as spectators will watch the class volley ball games of Thursday and Friday afternoons, to a finish.

Skill, accuracy, poise, and alertness are some of the traits to be exhibited. Come and suport your team, for every additional yell helps the ball over the net and breaks down the opponents' resistance.

Capable captains have been chosen for two teams—the sophomores selected Ruth Phelps, and the freshmen, Virginia Whitehead Smith. The juniors will select their captain soon, but the seniors will not have a team this year. "Number is too few" is the verdict, but those seniors coming out have shown fine sportsmanship by practicing after hearing the announcement. Give them a hand, girls!

Around the bend we see another tournament. In archery we may find the target a good object for our pent-up emotions. It meets all blows wih an unblinking "eye." Try for yourself and get the thrilling effect. Get in at least two practices a week and "shoot" yourself into the first position in Robin Hood's band.

blazing blisters when we finally do come indoors!

Little conversations that have no meaning whatsoever yet are so much a part of us that we'd die if we couldn't find someone to "bull" with! Eating unbalanced meals at unearthly hours with a devil-may-care attitude toward stomach-ache, indigestion, and other resulting ailments!

Silly ideas, crazy ideas, and not always wise ideas but do we think of that? most certainly not; if we did the whole thing would be spoiled before it ever began, and we wouldn't be able to make the youngsters gasp and take notice, or the older folks to wisely shake their heads and give us mildly disapproving, "do-I-know-you" looks!

Our ideas are born in the same way the wonderfully bright sun of ours rises—but they don't disappear in the manner of the setting sun, which leaves the world in a blanket of darkness! No, our idea is born, it lives, and when our amusement greediness is partially satisfied, it disappears, just as a bubble does—leaving us the feeling of accomplishing something (we usually don't know what) and leaving us happy and at peace with the entire world for a short time.

NOTICE: Due to an unavoidable delay in Richmond, pictures of the major officers have not been sent in to the office. They will be published in the coming issue of the Rotunda.

Rotunda Reverberations

Well, another week has rolled around. This week-end certainly didn't prove such a let down after the last, at any rate. Many gals tripped to all points out of Farmville. V. P. I. claimed a good part of us, as usual. Things were right promising here, too, from all reports. A little work, rest, and jolly play makes a well rounded future school teacher. Am I right?

To think about more serious things, you just don't know what you'll be missing if you leave school this week-end. The play contest Friday night will certainly be worth a few hours spent—.

Perhaps Hudgins could relate her fine experiences of the week-end. Working up a little fun for next summer, eh?

Mary B., did somebody say you were a "flatsy"? We just can't understand it. What's it all about?

Pattie, before you go away again you'd better plan your dates in a more systematic way. 'Twould be better, don't you think?

Shiplett was heard asking for some sticks of little wood. Wouldn't some little sticks of wood do?

Sue Adams says she is going to join a nunnery—'cause sense she ain't got none at all".

Henny stepped in a mud puddle at Longwood. A ditch was the result.

If you hear anyone else say "People have more fun than anybody, don't you think so?" just give them a gentle crack.

Mr. French tells this one on Dr. Simkins: It seems that the latter had his car break down in the deserts of Texas. As they couldn't find a horse small enough for him, he had to ride a jack-rabbit back to town!

tives; Kitty Roberts and Charlotte Minton, sophomore class representatives; and Dorothy Wise, ex-officio member, president of the Y. W. C. A.

Martha Hamlett and Frances Hudgins, as presidents of the House Council and Athletic Association respectively, will be installed upon their return to school.

Upon the conclusion of the installation, Dr. Jarman spoke to both old and new groups commending the former for its fine service and loyalty, and emphasizing the fact that the student body should cooperate with the new Council. He also expressed the hope that their problems would be few.

Mr. Tucker, Episcopal minister, lead the devotional services which preceded and followed the installation service.

Faculty Sing Causes Tremendous Uproar

Lost—the Faculty frown.

Found—a fact. The Faculty of S.T.C. isn't all English, French and math after all. Did you see Sing Saturday night? If so, 'nough said, but just in case you didn't, here goes! The Faculty had charge and amid applause and uproarous laughter they threw aside the "teacher's frown" and entered heartily into the process of presenting a family album. It was a novel idea, novelly developed. A peep into the past and bang! what hits us? Mrs. Watkins—the athlete of the gay nineties. Shh-h just between you and me and the printing press she was in an awful tickle but let's go on. The Misses London were indeed fragile and delicate ladies of antiquity. What was Miss Purdom, did you say? A scream if you ask me—so coy, so sweet, so just so she played her part to perfection. What you wanted to see tho' was Mr. Coyner—No, I won't tell on him but his own mother wouldn't have known him—cherubic, I should smile, to the nth degree. Miss Nichols—silent for once—was quite a charm sweetly arrayed in the decorous dress of the times.

There were others as good but by now you know what you missed if you weren't there and—well, anyhow you'll know where to be next time the faculty presents Sing.

ing the Archers Dance. She is also helping with other dances and with staging and has composed her dances for Bondage and Freedom. Many Alice Glass is in charge of the Air Dance in cooperation with Mary Robeson, who is teaching the Water Dance, thus forming the Air and Water Ritual. Mary Alice, as the character Papageno, has worked out her solo parts, and with Alice Grainger as Tamino is working on their duet dance. Dorothy McNamee has the difficult task of instructing sixty girls to take the part of people in the Land of Ar'et. Dorothy also has a character part, that of Sarastro, King of Ar'et. In this position she has a solo dance; an original composition. Crenshaw Jones is instructing the Guards of Night and is herself the character of Queen of Night. Mary Bowles, prominent in the Modern Dance Class, is in charge of the May Court dance, which is a ceremonial of the High Priestess and priestesses. Mary Robeson is the apex of May Day and the wheels really go round under her guidance.

Much enthusiasm is being shown by the girls taking part in the dances, and May Day promises to be a memorable one.

Girls Attend Church On Sunday Morning

Church bells chime appealingly. Within S.T.C. there is a mad scramble for hats, gloves, bags. The Sunday morning display is on. Voices—sleepy voices—resound up the halls. "Where's my white scarf?" "Do my shoes need polishing?" "Say, have you still got my gloves?" "Will you please hurry?" "Oh, I'm coming: don't be so impatient!" Doors bang. The rush of water in tubs for hurried baths makes clatter—making up for the lack of the usual singing.

A few sleepy heads poke out of rooms that have been undisturbed and demand the time of passing "scurriers". They disappear again and soon return to join the rushing mob. Doors begin to open and girls appear in their gala rigs. Their heels click down the halls. Slower ones have to practically run. Finally they are all out and on their way.

Some are in gay, flowered frocks with big hats. Others are young and unsophisticated in pure white. All kinds of girls mince down the side-walks. Their voices are reserved—their heads held high, and their bearings dignified. Every curl is just in place. Saucy hats repose carefully on newly-waved heads. Blues, browns, yellows, grays, reds—they are all represented in the colorful array! Fluffy ruffles, mannish shirts, perky bows, bright bouquets! The last church bells peal out. The brightening femininity vanishes into churches. As the last one disappear, the world is left somehow lacking, for it is a beautiful sight indeed, when S.T.C. goes to church on a spring morning!

Old Y. W. Officers Install Successors In Candle Service

Dorothy Wise Takes President's Oath of Office

The Y. W. C. A. Installation of officers and cabinet was an impressive candlelight service held April 23 in the large auditorium.

The old cabinet and their committee members walked down the aisle with the new cabinet, singing "Follow the Gleam". They formed a crescent around the blue triangular emblem of the Y. W. C. A. on the stage. Agnes Crockett, retiring head, installed the president - elect, Dorothy Wise. Each old officer and cabinet member passed the torch on by lighting the candle of her successor. The ceremony closed with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" and the repeating of the Y. W. C. A. motto. The two cabinets and the committee members left the auditorium singing "Follow the Gleam".

Besides the officers of the Y. W. C. A. who were elected by the student body recently, chairmen of the various committees were installed. These are as follows: Sing, Carter Belle Munt; Church Cooperation, Marian Pond; Publicity, Merwyn Gathright; Social, Livian Powell; Town Girls, Helen Glass; Membership and Alumnae, Dorothy Price; Service, Virginia Agee; Prayers, Margaret Carroll; Music, Virginia Ritchie.

A bushel of fun for nothing was the offer fulfilled at the class volley ball games last Thursday. Appropriate favors, sore throats, were passed out in abundance to the cheering spectators.

One found that among us we could boast of good losers as well as good winners, as the sophomore and junior classes went down in defeat with the freshmen victorious.

The freshmen seemed to catch the spirit of our athletics and poured out in such numbers that two teams were required, one to play the juniors and the other to play the sophomores.

Each set of opponents played two games apiece with the following scores: Freshmen 39, Sophomores 32; Juniors 22, Freshmen 32. The two freshman teams then played eahc other with the team which downed the Sophomores, victorious.

The line-ups were as follows:

Freshmen	Sophomore
Badger	Bailey, K.
Ball	Chappell, I.
Berryman	Eastham

Tupper and Jeter Attend Home Economics Meet at Radford April 24-25

A special conference of Home Economics teachers, from the four teacher's colleges, William and Mary and the state supervisors met in Radford April 24 and 25.

The group was the guest of Radford State Teachers' College and was delightfully entertained.

Misses Tupper and Jeter attended the conference.

Stubbs to Head Va. Social Service Assn.

Organization Elects First Woman President

Miss Florence Stubbs of our faculty was elected president of the Virginia Social Science Association on the opening day of its tenth annual meeting, held in Lychburg, April 24 and 25. Dr. G. D. Hancock of Washington and Lee University was named vice-president; Dr. R. H. Barker of the State Labor Department, secretary- treasurer; and the following executive committee was appointed: Dr. A. G. Taylor and Dr. T. S. Cox of William and Mary; Dr. O. J. Hale and Dr. R. R. Gouch of the University of Virginia; Miss Bertha Wailes of Sweet Briar; Miss Maude Woodfin of Westhampton.

Miss Stubbs' election is a well deserved honor, for she has been a vital force in the association in the past, serving as chairman of major committees and as a member of the executive committee. She is the first woman who has been president of the association, and the college is the first teachers college to furnish a president for the organization, though the membership includes the teachers in all the social sciences: econimics, history, law, political science, and sociology.

Another recognition of Miss Stubbs' contribution in this field is her charter membership in the Southern Sociological Society, which met recently in Atlanta.

Gilliam, Moore, Are Chairman of Chapel And Students' Day

Marie Moore, junior and Jennie Belle Gilliam, sophomore, were recently appointed chairman of Students' Day and Chairman of Chapel Committee, respectively, by the president of the student body. Both of these girls have shown outstanding ability in various fields throughout their college careers.

Marie's plans for the remainder of this year include only senior programs, and further plans will be carried out next year. The majority of the plans for the Chapel Committee will center around improvement of order and marching; these will go into effect next semester.

Boo Speake, Dudley Allen, and Dot Wise, ex-officio, hvae been selected to serve on the Students' Day Committee for next year. The following girls have been chosen to serve on the Chapel Committee: Virginia Agee, Nan Seward, Elsie Green, Marie Moore, Julia Anne Waldo, Isabelle Plummer, and Libby Morris.

"School of Air" Mail Reveals Educational Audience of All Ages

The most varied and widespread audience response in the history of the "American School of the Air" is revealed in a CBS mail survey completed in the final week of the educational series' sixth year on the WABC—Columbia network. Thousands of letters have been received from school children, educators and parents.

It was noted significantly that many written comments came from adults as well as from the youthful audience for which the curriculum is primarily intended. The season which ends Friday, May 1, will have totalled 125 broadcasts extending through the school year of 28 weeks. Subjects covered and correlated with work of schoolrooms of the nation included history, geography, music,

Honorary Society Chooses Officers

Kappa Delta Pi Elects Gillette As Head

Thursday night, April 23, Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary fraternity in education, elected its officers for the coming year. The following girls were elected to office: president, Victoria Gillette; vice-president, Lloyd Kelly; secretary, Bess McGlothlin; treasurer, Marguerite York; recorder, Elsie Cabell.

Victoria succeeds Doris Moore, who served well in the office of president for 1935-36. Victoria is one of the juniors who were initiated to Kappa Delta Pi in the fall, and she has been a very active member. Although Lloyd Kelley is not at present in school, she is planing to return next year. She has shown her ability in work on various committees. Each of the other new officers have been outstandingly active members of the organization.

Installation of the new officers will be held May 14.

Monogram Club Initiates Five Members Tuesday Night at Regular Meeting

The Monogram Club initiated five new members on Tuesday night, April 28. All these girls have successfully passed a list of requirements in athletics, stunts, and sportsmanship. They have been outstanding in their achievements in athletics, as is proved by their having won the honor of wearing the blue and white college monogram.

Those initiated are Agnes Bondurant, Bess McGlothlin, Katherine Irby, Martha Harrison, and Evelyn Mann.

College High And Appomattox Win

Clarksville, Worsham, Win Second Place

Cups rewarded in the dramatic tournaments sponsored by Dramatic Club on April 24 and 25 went to Appomattox High School on Friday night and to College High, Farmville on Saturday night. Second places were awarded to Worsham and Clarksville. The plays were judged on a basis of general interpretation by the cast, seelction of the play, and acting. Competition was keen between the contestants, many of whom were participants in the tournament last year.

The ten schools were divided according to size: the smaller ones including Prospect, Rice, Worsham, Curdsville, and Appomattox competed on Friday night; the others, College High, Orange, Crewe, C. H. Friend of South Boston, and Clarksville came on Saturday night.

As a result of the success of the contest, it will be made a definite part of the club's yearly program. This was the second occurance of the contest which is given in an effort to further appreciation of better drama, and to incite interest in its production amon gthe high schools of Southside Virginia. Miss Wheeler, director, has expressed the opinion that enlargement in the number of competing schools will be considered by the club for next year.

A. A. Will Install Officers April 29

Walmsley to Conduct Installation of Council

The Athletic Association Council will hold its installation services tonight, April 29, at 6:45. Louise Walmsley, the retiring president, will install the old council's successors.

New officials who will be installed were elected recently by the student body. They are Frances Hudgins, president; Kitty Roberts, vice-president; Virginia Carroll, secretary; Jennie Belle Gilliam, treasurer.

New managers of the various athletic squads have been appointed and will also be installed at the service. They are: Hockey, Mary Bowles; Basketball, Sue Eastham; Minro Sports, Mabel Burton; Baseball, Ruth Phelps; Volley-ball, Virginia Whitehead Smith; Field and Track, Elizabeth Berryman; Archery, Maxine Burks; Tennis, Elsie Cabell; La Crosse, Edna Bolick. These girls appointed by the president-elect, were chosen for their work in the various fields of the Athletic Association. Most of them have served on the A. A. Council before, and have proved their ability and stability.

With a most successful year behind it, the Athletic Association is looking forward to even better things for 1936-37. Under the able directorship of the Coach, Miss Iler, they should go far toward accomplishing this end.

College Choir Honors Dr. Jarman Friday at "Longwood" Dinner

Friday evening, April 24th, will long be a memorable one for those who attended the dinner given by the College Choir and the presentation of a painting of Dr. Jarman at Longwood. The purpose of the occasion was to honor the president of State Teachers College, Farmville, who for over thirty years has guided the destinies of the institution and under whose administration the college has grown to its present estate. And, if the response of the faculty is any indication of the esteem and affection in which Dr. Jarman is held, then both students and faculty are in accord in this regard.

Helen Boswell, president of the College Choir presented the portrait in behalf of that organization, and her address, summing up the qualities of Dr. Jarman, was one of the high lights of the occasion.

Gov. Trinkle in expressing his delight in having the opportunity of being present on such an auspicious occasion, stated "that this expression from the the College Choir was only in keeping with the State of Virginia, and that Dr. Jarman is not only loved by his students and faculty, but the feel-

Alumnae Association To Sponsor Benefit Bridge Party Friday

The local chapter of the Farmville Alumnae Association will sponsor a benefit bridge party in the Student Building Lounge at eight o'clock on Friday evening, May 1. The proceeds will be used for a student loan fund and to remove a small deficit in the treasury.

Mrs. John Cox, Mrs. Frank Nat Watkins and Miss Mary Nichols are serving as a committee on arrangements. For table reservations call Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Bondurant, or Mrs. Coyner. Prizes will be awarded at each table and refreshments will be served.

Potter to Reign May 2 As Queen Of 1936 May Day

Theme of Celebration Is from Mozart's "Magic Flute"

This year's annual May Day program will be held Saturday, May 2, in the amphitheatre at Longwood. The theme is from the Egyptian legend as told by Mozart in his opera "The Magic Flute". It has been adapted for our use and is called "The Golden Goddess."

Sarastro, King of Ar'et calls forth his court and subjects to choose from them a man strong and worthy enough to go and free the beautiful Princess Pamina from the wickedness of the underworld and the influence of her mother, the Queen of Night. Pamina is to be brought to Ar'et as the Golden Goddess, for she will bring the people light, joy and freedom. From among the contestants is chosen Prince Tamino and his ally, Papageno. They go to the Domain of Night, overcome the guardians of the domain, and charm the Queen of Night and her court. Thus Princess Pamina is released from bondage and is crowned the Golden Goddess by her high priestess in the temple of the sun. After this there is great rejoicing in the land of Ar'et for light, joy and freedom reign.

There are five parts to the program: Prologue—Bondage, The Land of Ar'et (in time of Darkness), The Domain of Night, The Land of Ar'et (with the coming of Light), and the Epilogue—Freedom. Lucy Potter as May Queen, takes the character part of the Golden Goddess and is crowned by her chief attendant, the High Priestess, who is played by Martha Nottingham.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick is directing the celebration, assisted by Miss Wheeler, Miss Tupper and Miss Bedford.

The chief committee chairmen are: General Chairman, Mary Robeson: Theme, Emma Bingham; Dance, Doris Moore; Music, Jeannette Jones; Costuming, Dorothy Billings.

Miss Stubbs Attends Meetings of Southern Sociological Society

Our charter member of the Southern Sociological Society, Miss Florence H. Stubbs, attended its first annual meeting in Atlanta, Georgia, April 17 and 18.

Headquarters of the meetings were at the Biltmore Hotel, where the banquet and luncheon were also held. Subjects for discussion at the various meetings covered a wide range of topics including Social Welfare and Public Policy, Race and Culture, Social Research in the South, Regional Studies and Planning, Teaching of Sociology, and Rural Life and Problems.

On Saturday afternoon the group was directed in a visit to the Atlanta Slum Clearance Projects, which are a center of interest to those who look to the capitol for the future welfare of the people.

The Southern Sociological Society is a comparatively new organization of sociologists of the south. Its membership includes men and women from ten states, representing such colleges as Vanderbilt University, Tulane University, University of Virginia, University of North Carolina, Clemson Agricultural College, University of Florida, Duke University, etc. Dr. Wilson Gee, University of Virginia, was elected president of the society at the meeting.

S. T. C. Citizenship

Our school life is often referred to as a real community life in itself. We like to think of our group as "one big happy family." Citizenship in school affairs is a favorite topic where "a few words" are necessary on occasion, and while the subject has been frequently stressed, it has not been overemphasized. It is true that we are citizens of a community, and as such we incur both the privileges and the duties which accompany the status.

Community-mindedness on the part of each member is essential to the best interests of all. One of the most extensive and inclusive ways of being a good citizen is t be an informed one. If we are not aware of what is taking place under our very eyes, we must attribute the defect to indifference or ignorance. There are girls at S. T. C. who do not know and seemingly do not care whether the organizations of the campus community succeed or fail in their activities. They do not subscribe to The Virginian; they do not attend open meetings of the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet; they cannot distinguish one honor society from other and entertain no aspirations for membership; they read The Rotunda hastily and carelessly. If one should mention the new college magazine to them the most response to be expected might be "Huh, what magazine?" In a hundred little ways they show themselves to be spiritual parasites at their college.

Reading a newspaper is perhaps the keenest way to improve one's interest in his community, so let us suggest that every student read The Rotunda carefully and thoughtfully as a citizen should read his paper with an eye for information, for new interests, and for molding opinions. The Rotunda is a publication of the students, by the students, and for the students. Let's begin tonight to "Wake up and Live."

A Part in School Life

Cooperation is a big word, but it counts as nothing unless the students exercise the spirit in every phase of college life, including study hour.

In our class games of basketball, tennis, volleyball, baseball, etc., each player knows that unless the others on the team cooperate no matter what she does the game will be lost. One person cannot cooperate alone. We have to have the spirit of mutual sharing in order to be able to get along with our teachers, friends, fellow schoolmates, and even our roommates. No one likes to room with a selfish, conceited, fussing girl who never does anything without first considering how much good it will be to her.

So it is with everything in life. This old world could not stand for long if there wasn't some kind of cooperation shown between the different nations. There would be continuous struggles, wars, etc. Peace would reign nowhere.

Realizing how important cooperation is and likewise the necessity for studying, surely, we can keep reasonably quiet for two and a half hours each night, especially when we've had a whole day for noise and discourse. Even though some girls have studied their lessons, if they only stop to think, they will not wish to disturb those who are studying. Busy signs are respected by thoughtful girls. Those who have radios would not turn them on, if girls understood how disturbing their blast may be.

Just a little more thoughtfulness is all that is needed. Then the true spirit of cooperation would come into being during those hours which have been put aside for the purpose of preparation for the ensuing day.

National Music Week

Music lovers throughout the entire country are looking forward to the National Music Week, May 3-9. This week of music is sponsored by the National Committee and by the Honorary Committee of Governors. The campaign, which is building upon the foundations of various musical organizations in cities, towns, counties, and states, is to place upon secure foundations the different assets of this great art and to promote its growth, which will enable everyone to recognize its value and to have a general musical culture.

Have the majority of us ever stopped to ask ourselves what kind of world we would be living in if there was no music of any type? If we had none, we would miss the birds that sing, the chirp of the crickets, as well as the beautiful melodies that the old masters gave us. We have been so accustomed to music that we can not conceive of what would be our great loss were it swept from us. Next week let us stop and pay tribute to those who have striven and do strive to give us what we so dearly love. And we, as future teachers, can silently pledge ourselves to support the musical movement in our state by aiding people to cultivate what talent they have and to make contributions to this great heritage of one of the finest of the arts.

In our state different clubs during the forthcoming week and years are sponsoring concerts by young artists who are willing to give up everything for art's sake. These young musicians would love more than anything in the world to increase the number of sixty-eight musicians in Virginia who have published compositions. We should eagerly encourage any movement in whatever community we are in which will aid in making Virginia a state rich in music.

The Danger of Plagarism

That the Missouri High School youth who was at first judged to have won the Eddie Cantor peace scholarship prize lost, because he copied a magazine article is old news. And though we are wont to pass over the item with a smile of sympathy for the youth, we might think seriously about the mistake he made.

In writing or in speaking, it is not considered good ethics to use the material of another without giving him due credit. This applies to compositions for classwork as well as for prizes. In the history of men of literary accomplishments, may be found most bitter wrangles that resulted from one writer's plagiarizing another.

While we are glad that Cantor has expressed the intention of seeing the ambitious boy through college, despite his mistake, we are glad that the error was discovered and that the scholarship prize was given where it was really merited.

Alumnae News

Farmville Alumnae

The annual business meeting of the local chapter of the Farmville Alumnae Association was held in the Lounge at 4:30 P. M. on Monday, April 27. Annual reports were heard, the arrangements for a benefit bridge party were discussed, a tea was planned, and the election of officers was held. For president Mrs. John Lancaster (Nora Garrett), for vice-president, Miss Jane Royall, for secretary, Miss Frances Lancaster, and for treasurer, Miss Alice Carter.

Lawson—Stanley

An announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Eleanor Flora Lawson of Appomattox to Mr. Watt H. Stanley. The ceremony was performed at Buckingham Courthouse Friday evening, April 17.

The couple left for a short bridal tour and on their return will make their home with the bride's mother in Appomattox.

McLemore—Weede

The engagement of Miss Katherine McLemore of Courtland to Mr. Joseph Davis Weede of Fordgee, Arkansas, was announced Saturday, April 25.

North Carolina Alumnae

Miss Henry and Miss Bedford were guests of honor at a recent meeting of the North Carolina alumnae chapters held in Winston-Salem. The meeting was a delightful social gathering at the home of Mrs. W. Nevyn Rankin, the former Ella Gates and the retiring president. The new president is Mrs. Harvey Templeton. About twenty former students attended and enjoyed current events and reminiscences of Farmville.

Greensboro Alumnae

Approximately all members of the Greensboro Alumnae chapter were present at a tea given by Mrs. William Lybrook, Jr., the president. Officers were elected at this meeting, Mrs. P. A. Shelburne becoming the head for the coming year.

Mrs. E. B. Cary

Mrs. Edmund B. Cary (Lelia Almond) died March 29 at her home at Massie's Corner, Virginia. She is a graduate of S. T. C., and is remembered with affection by many members of the faculty and the home department. The college extends sympathy to her sister, Annie Miller, and to her father.

World News

What may be considered the first step toward an Italian march on Addis Ababa was taken early Friday morning when an Eritrean column occupied without opposition Warra Hailu, about thirty-five miles south of Dessye on the Imperial Highway and about 125 Italian Air Force flew over Addis Ababa.

As yet, there has been no fighting, although two bombers of the Italian Air Force fleflw over Addis Ababa Friday morning apparently to learn the whereabouts of Emperor Haile Selassie. No one knows where he is or whether he is dead or alive.

With the scene illuminated by a brilliant April sun television outdoors was demonstrated Friday afternoon in a mile broadcast with members of the Camden, N. J., Fire Department as actors. The television's spectators could see the fire perfectly and even such things as billboards and budding trees showed up in the background.

World trade figures for 1935 show that Great Britain remained the world's biggest trader with 14 percent of the total and the United States was second with 11 percent.

Despite the Little Ententes' protests the Austrian Government has taken the first steps to put into effect the recent introduction of universal military service. She expects to enroll about 50,000 men during June who will be called to the colors, October 1.

Belgium stated last week that she intends to defend her soil but does not wish to become entangled in European controversies. She said that there was very little contact between Belgians and Germans and that Belgium was not in the slightest degree pro-German.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Lelia Sanford

Lelia Sanford, like her twin Florence came to S. T. C. from William and Mary College in 1933 a sophomore. Since that time she has won the hearts of everyone with whom she has come in contact, with her ever cheerful outlook and her humorous personality. Lelia's pronounced drawl and slow grin make everything she says seem even more witty than it is. Her great capacity for friendship as well as her willingness to work and her widely varied abilities have made her a real asset to the school and to her class. Surely there is not a girl at S. T. C. who has more friends and few with as many as Lelia has won for herself here.

Besides the contribution of herself and her personality to the school, Lelia has given in service and loyalty every minute she has been with us. She began with taking an active part in athletics, being a member of both hockey and basketball varsity squads and spending many an hour at the pool instructing as well as swimming. She was recognized for her proficiency in these fields by a bid to membership in the Monogram Club. She is a member of the Mathematic Club and Student Standards Committee, and has served on the Chapel Committee. Her chief work, however, has been on our annual, the Virginian. She first served as Business Manager; this year she is Editor-in-Chief.

She is a member of Cotillion Club and Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, and was elected to May Court in 1935.

Alpha Kappa Gamma recognized Lelia's outstanding ability and qualities of leadership last year.

In the opinion of the student body, there never has been nor never will be one who can take her place among us.

Open Forum

Dear Editor:

Some students are continually complaining about long assignments and no time in which to study them. They're probably the very girls who run around disturbing others. Why not try staying in the room a few nights just to see if those long assignments can't be studied in a shorter time? They can. All that is needed is quiet and a little concentration. While you are studying in your room, your friends can get her lesson in her room. If everyone would do this, there would be no further need for talk about cooperation, because there would be cooperation, and cooperation is the thing needed when study hour comes at S. T. C.

A Student

Dear Editor:

In behalf of the town girls, I wish to thank the Y. W. C. A. and Dr. Jarman for having the town girls' room renovated. Such an improvement for the comfort of the local girls makes them feel, too, as if S. T. C. is their second home.

A Town Girl.

Literary Column

The National Music Week Committee with the cooperation of all music lovers in the United States has planned for the observance of National Music Week from May 3-9. The slogan is to be "Strengthen our musical resources."

There are many ways of appreciating music. One way of seeing the value of music is to view its relation to poetry.

BUGLE SONG

Alfred Tennyson

The Bugle Song is a lyric from a longer work, The Princess. Of it Dawson says, "....is the nearest approach to the effect of fine music which language is able to produce."

"The splendour falls on castle walls
And snowy summits old in story:
The long light shakes across the lakes,
And the wild cataract leaps in glory.
Blow, bugle, blow! set the wild echoes flying:
Blow, bugle; answer echoes—dying, dying, dying.
O hark, O hear! how thin and clear,
And thinner, clearer, farther going!
O sweet and far from cliff and scar
The horns of Elfland faintly blowing-
Blow! let us hear the purple glens replying:
Blow, bugle; answer echoes—dying, dying, dying.
O love, they die in yon rich sky;
They faint on hill or field or river:
Our echoes roll from soul to soul,
And grow forever and forever.
Blow, bugle, blow! set the wild echoes flying,
And answer, echoes answer—dying, dying, dying.

Music lasts even after it is heard as is shown by these two quotations:

"The music in my heart I bore Long after it was heard no more."
—Wordsworth

"Music, when soft voices die,
Vibrate in the memory;"
—Sir Thomas Brown

This anonymous prose poem certainly tells us what music is:

I Am Music—

Servant and master am I; servant of those dead, and master of those living. Through me spirits immortal speak the message that makes the world weep, and laugh, and wonder, and worship.

I tell the story of love, the story of hate, the story that saves, and the story that damns. I am the incense upon which prayers float to heaven. I am the smoke which falls over the field of battle where men be dying with me on their lips.

I am close to the mariage altar, and when the grave opens I stand near by. I call the wanderer home, I rescue the soul from the depths, I open the lips of lovers, and through me the dead whisper to the living.

One I serve as I serve all; and the king I make my slave as easily as I subject his slave. I speak through the birds of the air, the insects of the field, the crash of waters on rock-ribbed shores, the sighing of wind in the trees, and I am even heard by the soul that knows me in the clatter of wheels on city streets.

I know no brother, yet all men are my brothers; I am the father of the best that is in them, and they are fathers of the best that is in me; I am of them, and they are of me. For I am the instrument of God".

—I Am Music.

The common ground between poetry and music is determined by the sound and rythm. Poetry is able, by its rythm, to mirror inner feeling—but not as exhaustively as music.

"And the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day
Shall fold their tents like the arabs,
And as silently steal away."

SOCIETY

Rule at May Day

Lucy Potter and Martha Nottingham, who will reign as Queen of May and Maid of Honor on May 2.

Pi Kappa Sigma

The pledge members of Pi Kappa Sigma entertained the old members of the sorority Wednesday evening, April 22, with a picnic supper held at the cabin at Longwood. Games were played and stunts put on by the new members.

Those attending were: Miss Olive T. Iler, Adviser, Miss Mary Diehl, Alumna, and both the old and new girls.

A. C. E. Banquet

The Association of Childhood Education held its annual banquet in the College Tea Room, Saturday night, April 25.

The speaker for the evening, Miss Macey Southall was introduced by the toast-mistress, Chic Dortch. Miss Southall is the professor of Early Elementary Education at George Peabody College and will be the new secretary-treasurer of the A.C.E. board. The theme of her talk was "You do not know what you do not know about what you can do until you do it."

Other guests present were Dr. Jarman, Mr. and Mrs. Holton and Dr. Wynne.

V. M. I. Dances

"There's Something About a Soldier" that appeals to S. T. C. girls. Last week-end it was the V. M. I. cadets that attracted the girls. With uniforms, true loves, allaying tunes by Jan Garber, and a beautiful moon, who wouldn't be thrilled? So with aching feet, eyes half closed and sad expressions Elsie Dodd, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Selma West, Frances Irving, Elizabeth George Wilson and Kathleen McCann, returned to school after a most perfect week-end.

N. C. State

"I'm a Tar-Heel Born and a Tar-Heel Bred" sang Julian Rainey as she left us to attend the Sigma Phi Epsilon house party at N. C. State.

Homeward

"Mid pleasures and palaces there's no place like home" thought some girls as they scurried home to their families. These homesick souls were Sue Mallory, Buck Pleasants, Virginia Hall, Doris Isbell, Dorothy Raper, Jane Saunders, Nannie Page Trent, Ruby Blanton, Mary Elizabeth Minor, Anne Peple, Martha Glenn, Davis, Dorothy Lewis, Frances Bryan, Cassie Boswell, Jacquelin Beal, Edna Bolick, Dorothy Buckland, Elizabeth Butler, Kitty Chappell, Doris Coates, Catherine Cox, Yetive Dawson, Frances Dickinson, Roberta Haskins, Clara Hailey, Virginia Hannah, Evelyn Howell, Elizabeth Huse, Pattie Jeffreys, Lois Jenkins, Elvira Ligon, Ruth Montgomery, Doris Mason, Cornelia Penn, Nannie Mae Parker, Livian Powell, Rose Puller, Nan Seward, Lucy Smith, Cassell Schools, Browney Shenton, Minnie Smith, Ruth Sears, Marjorie Wicks, Mary Ware and Elizabeth Tyree.

University of Richmond

"The Red and Blue Will Reign on High" whistled Sara Parker as she dashed down to the University of Richmond to attend the Pi Kappa Sigma dance there Saturday night.

Other Places

"It's Been So Long" was the excuse of the following students as they left their institution of learning to visit, shop, or just "play". They were Mildred Lohr, Mary Evelyn Beal, Elsie Adsit, Virginia Yagger, Clara Pinckard, Elizabeth Sutton, Virginia Scanlon, Nan Throckmorton, Sue Eastham, Grace Harris, Mary Allen Mims, Elizabeth Wilkinson, Fannie Mae Putney, Elizabeth Walton, Jane Branch, Peggy Young.

Fletcher Walker, Edna Harvey, Ethel Burgess, Blanche Lane, Erna Dickerson, Emily Dickerson J. an McConnoughy, Kitty Brooks, Catherine Maynard, Bessie Mitchell, Frances Thomas, Beverly Wilkinson, Elizabeth Morris, Copeland Johnson, Virginia Price, Elizabeth Hardy, Marion Hansbrough, Mary Frances Adams, Jane Burke, Mary Ethel Barnes, Murrell Bowman, Rebecca Biand, Anne Leigh Bailey, Irene Bailey, Helen Briggs, Dot Bagby, Virginia Bean, Becky Carter, Virgina Coleman, Edith Coffee, Grace Conyers, Mary Wilson Clark, Margaret Caroll, Alice Collings, Lucille Davis, June Dillon, Catherine Dix, Dorothy Deans, Rebecca Gillette, Winnie Frances Eubank, Elsie Green.

Merwyn Gathright, Susan Gresham, Gladys Hendrickson, Lula Hill, Ann Hardy, Elizabeth Harris, Pattie Jeffreys, Lucy Jeffries, Annie Jones, Florence Jeffrey, Jane Lybrook, Margaret Long, Charlotte Minton, India Martin, Evelyn Montgomery, Valla Nimmo, Marie Padgett, Lucy Potter, Margaret Pittard, Marion Pond, Nellie Pierpont, Virginia Pilcher, Paulne Pearson, Tapelle Pruden, Anthelia Robinette, Kitty Roberts, Charlotte Rice, Marjorie Robertson, Madeline Sessons, Inez Skyes, Mildred Slayton, Elizabeth Stone, Deane Saunders, Ruth Scott, Margaret Scott, Beverly Sexton, Henrietta Salisbury, Elizabeth Tindall, Elizabeth Trent, Mary L. Class Notes

Junior Class

At the regular Junior class meeting held last night Miss O. T. Iler was unanimously elected to serve the class for next year. All Juniors were urged to come out and support the green and white and make the baseball team. It was decided to hold Junior class Tag Day the Third Saturday in May.

Sophomore Class

At the regular Sophomore class meeting held last night the class decided to hold a party for seniors on Wednesday, May 6, in the Rec. Final arrangements and details were left to a committee.

Freshman Class

A roll call meeting of all freshmen was held in the "Rec", Tuesday night for the purpose of collecting dues. The class leaders to personally see that each member contributed his dues.

Eugenia and Carter Belle seem to be doing right well for themselves. And from all appearances Mary Jane and Ginny are getting along okey-dokey, too.

Book Review

LIFE IS FOR LIVING
By Kay Lipke

Reviewed by Livian Powell

The heroine of Kay Lipke's novel is a bundle of urges very attractiv ly packaged. She grew up on a California ranch in the custody of an aunt and uncle, her widowed father being an artist more interested in his models than his morals.

She rebelled when she was parked in a fashionable finishing school in the East, and threatened to become quite a problem on account of her thirst for life. We see the "thin oval of her face throbbing with the surge of youth running high within her," bitterness welling up within her "in a stinging flood," and her defiance like "a spark rising from safety of the fire in a wildly reckless spirit of rebellion, eager for flight into the outer world." Fortunately, while in this stage of ignition and inundation she met a blond giant with massive shoulders and a grand tan. It was then that Gail's eyebrows "shot up like startled elevators"

Sports

Off with the old game and on with the new! Spring brings numerous sports to our campus—tennis, baseball, archery, lacrosse, and field and track. Proportion your time wisely and give them all a try as "a variety is the spice of life" and each one likes his highly seasoned.

Lacrosse is a rising sport among us and we predict a great future for it here. We are all beginners and will enjoy each others blunders, learning to laugh with people and not at them. Lay aside your bashfulness and join us.

We offer you "the wide open spaces" packed with good wholesome pleasure. Come out and choose the fun for yourself.

'Love? No one can fal intelligently in love," declared the Professor-bachelor.

"But professor, who wants to be intelligent," said a bright young thing in his class of 35.

"Spring", said the professor, "is here, and class is dismissed."

Odors of Tea Room Tempt Hungry Girl

They come floating up every day except Sunday. They assault you in weak moments and tear down all of your resistance. They usually do their most venomous work around eleven-thirty or twelve o'clock in the morning—those savory, irrisistible, and yet villainous odors that waft up from the tea room.

You try to fool yourself by running past the tea room steps, but that seems to fail utterly—the odors follow you everywhere. Sometimes you sit in class and actually suffer—so delicious and appetizing does it smell. Sometimes you distinctly smell hot rolls: that's bad enough, but when you smell pie and chicken and buns! Oh, its absolute torment! Days you have failed to appear at breakfast are the worst. You positively die in agony if you have to force yourself by without yielding. (Most of the time you do yield). How happy yielding makes you!

You sit in class and try to concentrate. You even try to convince yourself you don't smell anything—but you do! You smell that ghost that haunts you—that too-delightful tea room. You begin to have day dreams. You picture mashed potatoes with thick, brown gravy and green peas. You know you smell coffee, and there is a faint suggestion of chocolate pie in the air. You squirm, you strain your ears to hear, but your brain registers smell and not hearing. You decide to yield! (You always do). You have no money, but your roommate does. So what? So you'll end your torture, join the crowd, and eat, drink, and be merry!

Any threat by this country to adopt a policy of trade embargoes in time of war, was pictured Friday night by Allen W. Dulles, New York attorney, as influencing the peace time trade of the United States disadvantageously and, perhaps, seriously affecting our economic relations with many of our best customer-relations.

Progressive Education Note of the Week: "On the back of the salary checks received by the faculty at the University of Illinois appear the following directions: "If endorsement is made by mark (x) it must be witnessed by two persons who can write, giving their place of residence."

Voters at Emory University who go to the polls will have a chance of voting not only for their first choice, but for their second and third as well. This practice was begun at Emory several years ago to be used when any one candidate failed to receive a majority.

According to the Alabama Plainsman: "The difference between an old-fashioned girl and a modern dame is expressed by the difference between "swoon" and "pass out".

The people in the hot country of India have a considerable weakness for titles, degrees and other forms of embellishment, related Dr. John Scudder in a lecture at Rutgers University.

To illustrate, Dr. Scudder told about receiving a calling card from a man in Calcutta. This man had been flunked out of his college. In the lower corner after the name there was printed, "Failed, B. A."

When people up at Macalester in St. Paul, ask Prof. William Augustus Cornell if he isn't the young man who teaches the course in marriage problems, the professor generally changes the subject hurriedly.

Mr. Cornell, you see, is a bachelor in his mid-thirties. Mr. Cornell is strong for matrimony—for other people.

Rotunda Reverberations

We wonder why the pretty, little, green plot on the top of the steepest hill in Farmville echos with gay laughter and smothered giggles on star-bright, moon-lit nights!

Who were the five girls who got spring in their bones a little early and slept out on the roof one night last week? They all caught dreadful colds; one of their number was laid up for the remainder of the week in the infirmary; and they walked for two days as if they'd slept on cinders—'magine that!!

How many have gotten warnings from that most honorable organization—Chi? Ask "Sweetsie" and Minnie all about it. We hear that a freshman was worried to death because she thought the warning that was meant for Helen Fern was for her! Let's watch this thing!!

"Matsey"—please don't go serious on us!—or maybe we can blame this spring atmosphere that puts such a flush in your cheeks and the twinkle in your eye when you're with that "college man".

Why do girls have such huge appetites? Mercy—you should see the tea-room hounds guzzle food—it's really a treat for sore eyes to watch them! They'd better watch their poundage, or else—

May Day Attracts Crowd of Thousand

Costumes Add Color to Dance Drama and Legend

A beautiful day, a beautiful queen, a colorful dance drama, and a large and appreciative audience made the annual May Day fete at Farmville State Teachers College one of the most unique in the history of the college.

At five o'clock Saturday, May 2, the amphitheatre at Longwood became an Egyptian court-yard with a sun-temple in the background. For an hour an audience of approximately a thousand watched the legend of "The Golden Goddess" enacted by a cast of one hundred college students. The story was adapted from Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" and carried the audience back to ancient Egypt where it saw a people bereft of light. But a great king gave them light; a lively contest, a journey into the Domain of Night, the freeing of a princess from bondage, the acceptance of the princess as Golden Goddess, and light comes to the land.

A beautiful and effective climax of the program was reached when Lucy Potter was crowned Golden Goddess by her high priestess, Martha Nottingham. In richly colored costumes of ancient Egypt a court of twenty priestesses hailed the goddess and danced the sacred ritual of the sun-god in her honor. The priestesses were: Kitty Roberts, Mary Bowles, Chic Dortch, Elinor Dunham, Vera Ebel, Grace Eubank, Margaret Farrar, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Anne Hardy, Bonnie Lane, Susan Lane, Madeline McGlothlin, Ruth Montgomery, Page Nottingham, Bonnie Powell, Nancy Pobst, Henrietta

Forefathers Appear In Political Drama

"They Could Not Sleep"

"They Could Not Sleep" does not refer to students at S. T. C., but to their forebearers; at least to those who can claim to have descended from such illustrious figures as George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall, Woodrow Wilson, and other prominent figures in history, who are troubled, it appears with insomnia and will appear before an S. T. C. audience on the evening of Friday, May 15, in the small auditorium.

Lest anyone believes the writer wrote this piece in her sleep, we must hasten to explain that it all comes about under the auspices of Pi Gamma Mu, a thoroughly respectable, and wide-awake organization on the campus. The caption "They Could Not Sleep" is the title of their annual project which will take form this year of a dramatic skit in which Franklin D. Roosevelt, perported by the problems of his office and by New Deal measures, calls on some of his somnambulating predecessors for advice. They come at his bidding and offer their advice, opinions, and suggestions in no uncertain terms.

S. T. C. students and faculty are invited to be present and hear Theodore Roosevelt tell Franklin D. what he thinks of him, and to see George Washington and Andrew Jackson practically turn over in their graves. It should be worth watching!

Copy of "Tributum" Receives Recognition From South America

The Colegio de Colocolla at Qito, Ecuador, has recognized the Latin publication "The Tributum" which Sigma Pi Rho and Sodalitas Latina published commemorating the 2000th anniversary of Horace. It was recognized by Aurelio Espiroso Polit, S. T. who sent the following request:

The Editor of Tributum
State Teachers College
Virginia.
Dear Sir:

I am greatly interested in the number of "Tributum" dedicated to Horace, and though I have no title to commend me to your generosity, I hope you will not find it impossible to grant me a copy which shall be carefully collected in our miscellanies Ianatiana.

Sincerely yours,
Aurelio Espiroso, S. T.

With this request, he sent two articles written in Spanish, one on Horace—El Bimilerario de Horace, and the other, El Edipo Rey de Sofocles, on Sophocles.

Appomattox Glee Club Presents Musical Program To Student in Chapel

In students' day chapel Wednesday, the sixth, Doris Coates led the devotional exercises, after which the Appomattox High School Glee Club, consisting of thirty-five voices under the direction of Miss Kay Franklin and accompanied at the piano by Miss Katherine Gills, rendered a musical program. This program, including also a piano solo by Miss M. R. Black, was in keeping with the National Music Week and was enjoyed by the student body.

Serial Dramatization Of "The Boy Edison" Honors His Memory

"The Boy Edison", a new serial dramatization of the youthful years of Thomas Alva Edison, will open on the WABC-Columbia network Friday, May 15, from 2:45 to 3:00 P. M. EDST. Presented under auspices of the Thomas Alva Edison Foundation as a memorial to the inventor, the program will be heard weekly through May, June, July and August.

The Edison Foundation arranged the broadcasts in cooperation with CBS as a part of a campaign to perpetuate the memory of Edison through gifts of scholarships to deserving boys throughout the country. One hundred outstanding American youths will be chosen from industries and schools each year for higher technical and scientific training.

After exhaustive tests, Jeoffrey Bryant has been chosen to play the role of Edison. Recently a star of "She Loves Me Not" and a prominent player in "Ceiling Zero," he was picked from 100 aspirants for the Edison impersonation. He will be supported by a group of stage and radio players.

The first episode of "The Boy Edison" picks the youth up at the age of 15 when he held the job of news "butcher" on a mixed train running out of Detroit. Between trips through the train with his newspapers and magazines, the boy occupied himself with the editing and printing of his "Weekly Herald" with its news picked up from telegraph operators along the route, and with experiments conducted in his "laboratory". This "laboratory", set up in a corner of the baggage car, ultimately proved his undoing. A too ambitious experiment expioded

S. T. C. Princess Attends Festival of Apple Blossoms

Tac Waters Goes To Winchester April 30

As a princess in the Apple Blossom Festival, Tac Waters left Farmville on Thursday, April 30, for Winchester. Tac drove to the fete accompanied by Miss Stubbs, "Tib" Simmerman, and Virginia Baker. Immediately upon arrival, Tac registered at Princess' Headquarters, the Southern Inn. At ten A. M. everyone assembled at the headquarters in costume for pictures to be taken. After this the rehearsal for the coronation was held at Handley stadium. On the same morning was the School Children's Parade, made up entirely of children of the schools of Frederick county. Early in the afternoon, all the princesses assembled again at headquarters in costume in readiness for the coronation. At three o'clock the actual crowning of Miss Cornelia Anne Larus took place, and she was proclaimed to all the world as Queen Shenandoah XIII. An arrival show at 4:30 took many of the visitors to Admiral Byrd Airport and others to a tea dance at the Golf Club. An impressive dedication of the Winchester City Flag was made at the City Hall in the late afternoon.

The night took on a more glamorous aspect with the reception of

Anti-War Strike Is Wide-Spread

American Students Hold Third Annual Demonstrations

New York—(ACP)—Five hundred thousand college and high school students left their classrooms last Wednesday to participate in the third annual anti-war demonstration. The demonstration was a "dress-rehearsal." American Student Union officials said, for the course to be followed in the event America ever declares another war.

Although no accurate figures were obtainable, with the number demonstrating estimated as high as 750,000 by some observers, attendance was obviously greatly in excess of the 350,000 predicted a few weeks ago by Joseph Lash, national secretary of the Student Union. The first strike, in 1934, brought out only 25,000 students. Last year it jumped to 175,000.

For the most part, the 1936 demonstrations were orderly, with

Self Analysis Will Indicate The Way Of Self-Improvement

Sometimes I get awfully tired of just being me. Of course I know there's really nothing I can do about myself, but I'd still like to make a few changes. I look around this campus and find some people who have what I'd like to have. If I could only take one thing from each of several people how near-perfect I'd be!

For instance, I'd choose to have pretty black hair like Ducky Davies and with it I'd pick Marjorie Wick's handsome orbs. I'd surely choose Sue Lane's figure plus a few of those dashing outfits she sports! With a mouth and nose as near like Frances Maxey's as possible, and skin like Mary Jane Pendleton's, what a lucky break I'd have. I'd want Mary Lynn Thomas' teeth and Lucy Potter's "beauty from within" and regality. Enough for appearance! I'm just making this dream me too enchanting!

I'd have a hard time deciding whether I'd want the pep, vim, and vigor of Carter Belle Munt or the sophistication of Margaret Farrar. I'd pick the likeable personality of "Tav" Waters, and the sweetness of Helen Fern Perdue. I'd want to giggle like Em Easley and to boast the real wit of Virginia Agee. Sometimes I'd like to have real fun being crazy like Ad-

S. T. C. Celebrates Nat. Music Week

Judge MacDonald Will Speak Here

Kappa Delta Pi Has Annual Spring Banquet

Judge Ross MacDonald, member of the State Board, will be guest speaker at the Kappa Delta Pi banquet on Friday, May 8.

The annual spring banquet of Kappa Delta Pi will be held at Longwood on Friday night. At this time the organization will have the pleasure of hearing Judge Ross M. MacDonald, Berryville, member of the State Board, speak on some subject of educational significance. As an honor society for education, it is fitting that the group have with them a personage whose activies in his field have brought her note throughout the state.

Jongleurs Give Play Auditorium May 12

The Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs will present in the S. T. C. auditorium, Tuesday night, May 12, "Captain Applejack," their spring production. The production has reached great success in both New York and London.

In the first act a group of desperate criminals lay their plans to steal the family treasure of the Applejohn's, which is unknown to Ambrose and has for nearly two hundred years ben in a secret cupboard in the wall. The second act is Ambrose' drama in which Captain Applejack, a notorious pirate captures a great treasure. The third act embraces Ambrose's attempts to prevent the desperadoes from getting the treasure. He at last outwits them and they flee, and he remains in possession of the jewels.

James Bullard, as Applejack, and Lawrence Wood as Madame Valeska, the arch-criminal, have the leading parts. Asa Watkins, Russel Fox, Frank Ripberger, Page Burton, Clarence Lacy, Bert Gartrell, D. M. White and Alvin Fahrner make up the rest of the cast.

Prize Will Be Given By Collegiate Digest For Movie Contest

Two important announcements of interest to students of S. T. C. were found in last week's issue of Collegiate Digest, The Rotunda's weekly rotogravure section.

In connection with an outstanding article on the "why" of collegiate motion pictures, the movie editor of Collegiate Digest is offering a prize of $10 for the best letter offering constructive criticism or defense of the typical collegiate motion pictures. This contest is open to both students and faculty members. A second prize of $5 is offered for the runner-up.

A beautiful sunset lake-scene photograph of full 8 by 10 inch size is offered free to all students or faculty members of S. T. C. who send 10 cents in stamps or coin to cover cost of wrapping and postage. This is truly an outstanding offer, for the original photograph offered to our readers is a beautiful piece of photography by Frederick Kasser II. one of the middle-west's outstanding young photographers. Requests should be addressed to Collegiate Digest, P. O. Box 472, Madison Wisconsin.

Mr. Stanley Franck Will Present Program

S. T. C. will observe National Music Week by a number of musical events during the period of May 3—9.

The Federated Music Clubs of America celebrate annually the first week in May as National Music Week. During this week special concerts are given and the attention of everyone is directed to the important place that music fills in he home, he school, the church and in community life in general. Among the outstanding events of the week at S. T. C. will be several short chapel programs sponsored by the college music department. They will present Misses Elizabeth Sieber and Elizabeth LeGrand, violinists, on Thursday morning. Dr. Jarman and the choir will sing on Friday.

On Saturday morning Mr. Stanley Franck, metropolitan singer, will appear in the S. T. C. auditorium. Mr. Franck will present one of his recent broadcast programs that was given over WRVA and the NBC network on April 29. The program will include such numbers as "She Never Told Her Love," Haydn; "Three for Jack", Squire; "An Open Secret," Woodman; "American Lullabye", Rich; "A Pastorale," Turner-Maley; and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," by Herbert.

The College Orchesetra will give a program of sacred music at the Methodist church at the evening service on Sunday night, May 10. Mr. Franck will also appear at this time.

Pi Kappa Delta Has Debate and Contest With Rival Students

There will be a dual debate between S. T. C. and Winthrop College, South Carolina on Thursday afternoon, May 7 at 4 o'clock. The debate will be held in the music room and small auditorium. The affirmative is supported by Agnes Bondurant and Margaret Pollard. Dudley Allen and Louise Francis uphold the negative for S. T. C. The discussion centers around the Pi Kappa Delta question concerning the powers of the Supreme Court.

On Thursday night at eight o'clock an oratorical contest will be held in the small auditorium between girls from Winthrop and S. T. C. Gertrude Levy and Marjorie Thompson will represent Farmville.

We remember that Dr. Walmsley was for several years a member of the Winthrop faculty. This should stimulate interest among our Student Body and make more friendly our relations with representatives from that college.

Training School Presents Historical Music Program In Chapel on Tuesday

The chapel exercises on Tuesday, April 28, included in addition to a short talk by Dr. Cooke, a varied musical program by the Training School's fifth and sixth grade pupils.

The program, planned and directed by Miss Purdom, Miss Carter, and Miss Sylvia Dunnavant, was a group of selections ably demonstrating what children can do with our historical American music. The first number was the Puritan's plea, "Come, Ye Thankful People, Come." A two-part Canon by Thomas Tallis featured the entire group with a real-

Mother's Day

On next Sunday we shall all turn our thoughts towards the ones who are the dearest to us, our Mothers. It may be that some of us can tell her how much we miss her at college, how much we think of her, and how great our love for her is. Others of us will be absent from home but will send some token of our unmeasurable love.

Mother's Day is one rich in sentiment and tender in meaning, and its observance is in a country which usually scoffs at sentiment. Or is it just a surface that we in this country assume in order to give the appearance of sneering at it while deep underneath we glorfy in love? Our observance of so great a day is a step to tell the world that we are not hard-boiled as they think. Yet, it has been comparatively recent that our country formally acknowledged a day set aside for those women who have gone through so much for us.

The custom of mother-worship comes to us from the ancient pagans. The earliest known record is that of Cybele, "The Great Mother of the Gadn," in Asia Minor. But the worship of her is said to have been centered around the power and majesty of motherhood more than its tender maternal instinct. In the early days of Christianity, the rites in honor of the "Mother of Gods" became those in honor of the church. And today we observe the second Sunday in May as the day belonging to our mothers, and as the time when we publicly acknowledge that we realize the suffering and the little things our mothers have done.

May Day

The first of May has always been a gala affair. The May Day festival goes back to the Roman festival to Flora, the goddess of flowers, which probably came in the first place from India. In England in the middle ages it was customary for everyone to go out at an early hour "to fetch the flowers fresh." The fairest maid of the village was crowned with flowers as "Queen of the May."

Thus we have our May Day, which has come to be one of the outstanding dates on our college calendar. As we watched the performance at Longwood, Saturday, we were glad that someone had started the custom of celebrating May Day, for it was an enjoyable and inspiring occasion. Old-timers say that this last celebration was one of the best that has been out since they were first started and were held in the field back of the gym. Truly it was an example of much planning, intensive training, and splendid cooperation. We wish to take this opportunity to compliment Mrs. Fitzpatrick, her advisers and helpers, and the nearly one hundred girls who participated, on their work of art. Congratulations!

European Situation

England has threatened and the League of Nations has proposed measures against Italy, but Mussolini has carried his war to a successful close. Haile Selassie has fled and Italian troops now ocupy Addis Ababa.

It seems that France backed down some time ago from any substantial support of England in applying sanctions. Steps in this direction did not guarantee sufficient security to France. England, however, continued her protests, for in Italy's invasion of African territory, she sees a threat to her own security in Egypt.

The way is clear now for the introduction of Italian population, policy, and civilization into the backward African country. The next step on Italy's part may be expansion into Egypt.

If Italy really makes this move, England is likely to have a great deal to say about it. She will not stand meekly by and see Mussolini gain as much territory as she herself now holds in Africa if there can be any help for it.

The next few years may bring about entirely new alliances between countries in Europe. England and France will continue friends only so long as their interests coincide, nor is England likely to make friendly advances toward Italy. With whom Germany will sympathize in the new European pattern is a question that will provoke many a guess. The whole situation begins to look like a repetition of 1913 and 1914.

Radio—Its Use

Radio is coming to hold a position of ever-increasing importance in our civilization. As means of entertainment, education, advertising and communication it is well in the foreground of our life. Can it be possible that we are abusing its advantages and are allowing it to become detrimental instead of the force it could be? In many a home as well as in our college dormitories the instrument is turned on "like a tap" and kept running all day long, though often unheard except as an annoying background to other things. Every imaginable type of program will be blared forth during the course of fourteen waking hours—from jazz to symphonies, from Hon. John Doe to President Roosevelt, from Walter Winchell to the Associated Press.

There is a danger in this continual outpouring of sound which is largely unheeded. We become accustomed to thinking, studying and working against an unassociated program which causes us constantly to put forth one-third more energy than is necessary under other conditions. We talk among ourselves against a perpetual din. We become wholly used to drowning out sounds with loud voices, talking while others are talking, and ignoring teachers and speakers as we ignore those whose voices are with us always—over the wireless.

To an intelligent listener the radio has untold possibilities. By selecting programs with care, for their intrinsic value, we may eliminate many of the senseless sounds which fill the air. By choosing times to listen to the radio as we choose times to read good books we will use those things to the best advantage without straining ourselves trying to do two things at once.

The radio can give us drama, news, education, limitless broadening influences, instead of strain and the cultivation of indifference, if we use it wisely.

"Radio is a great invention—but it must be used with care."

Rotunda Reverberations

Well folks, now that May Day is over we find calm written on the faces of our fair sex. In fact they've been so busy that that Spring thought hasn't been able to enter their pretty heads. But now—Watch out where you look gov. gals—they've got to make up for lost time. However, some of those girls who weren't in May Day have been playing a little game called "cut throat", and it's so nice to see two freshmen together, one pumping the other about her whereabouts the night before.

Why is it that although schools may come, and schools may go, H.-S. C. reigns supreme in the eyes of S. T. C.? The younger the girls the better these college lads like 'em.

Claudia Harper thinks her mother has moved from Newport News to Richmond for May 9th, but all the time we know there's a "Snag" somewhere.

A thought that hangs over each Cotillion girl is that eternal question, "Who am I going to have up for the dance?" This is the time that some H.-S. boys are going to suffer "cause that true-love from home just must come."

Where did a certain Soph. get those flowers she was wearing Sunday in church? She couldn't have gotten them at—Her dress was dark blue with matching accessories,—maybe you could tell us.

Someone mentioned the fact that Mr. Shannon was going to start charging seat rent in his drugstore—Could he be talking about you?

Two certain sophomores have acquired a picture on their dresser that seems to have freed the room of even the traces of a mouse—What a picture!

Then there's the poor "Annie Athlete" girl who got blisters on her hands playing tennis—And then even if someone wanted to hold her hand she'd be afraid he might pop 'em. Such a life!

Ye Olde Rounder of Hampden-Sydney seems to have been on the rampage last week in his worthy column. We just happened to see it! We raised our eyebrows when we saw reference to this column. We were amused. We choose to overlook it, for we refuse to stoop to viciousness. Incidentally we suspect he has a biased view—woman hater that he is!

Au revoir

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Hazel Smith

It is sad to think of the departure of one who has won such a prominent place in our hearts. We cannot help wondering if the cap left there will ever be filled again.

When we think of Hazel, we see a leader to whom we look for guidance and support. Like ourselves, Alpha Kappa Gamma saw her outstanding ability as a leader and tapped her in her junior year.

Hazel has served for four years on the Student Council. In her junior year, she served as secretary of this organization and became president her senior year. She was a member of the Rotunda Staff her freshman year and served on the Virginian Staff both her freshman and sophomore years.

She held a prominent position on the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet her junior year.

For the past two years Hazel has been a member of the Mardi Gras Court and this year was elected to the May Court. She is a member of and has held an office in the Cotillion Club, and is a member of Pi Kappa Sigma.

Hazel, it is with deep regret that we bid you farewell, and we wish you all the success and happiness in future life that you certainly deserve.

Intercollegiate News

Ohio State students spend an average of $1500 a month on pinball games, according to a survey made by the Ohio State Lantern. Sixteen machines were found in the immediate environs of the university, located in ten different place of business. Average weekly "take", Lantern reporters learned is $25.

Eight Alfred University professors have agreed to raise sideburns, whiskers, goatees, "and divers kindred tonsorial accoutrements" to give the university's centennial celebration, planned for this spring, the air of a century ago.

Dr. Robert Maunard Hutchins of the Univeristy of Chicago has been awarded the gold medal of the Holand Society of New York for "distinguished service" in the field of education.

Quoting the University of Maryland publication: "A scientist at Washington and Lee recently declared that extensive research (of what kind, he fails to add) has proved that the energy given off by a professor during an hour lecture is equivalent to the energy supplied by eating one-half a peanut."

The Detroit News suggests the following as a tentative opening for a novel on college life. "A small coupe drew up to the fraternity house, and eleven passengers alighted."

Says a professor in the College of New York: "An instructor is a fussy old maid of either sex."

The University of Pennsylvania had a "fault-finding day" recently. Everyone aired his pet gripes, but knockers claimed nothing was done about any of them.

Literary Column

The second Sunday in May is set aside for honoring the nation's mothers. This day consecrated to the memory of all mothers who are dead and to thought of those who are alive was suggested by the late ex-president Wilson.

It is a general custom to send some thoughtful remembrance to one's mother on this day.

Our poets have often written about mothers. These poems are some of the most famous:

Mothers

God, be kind to mothers
With cookie jars to fill,
And funny lullabies to sing
When dusk blows down the hill.
Who scrub small children's faces,
When early school bells ring,
And let a boy bring puppies home,
Or bugs, or anything.
God, be kind to mothers
When it's candle-time,
And children's rounded voices
Say prayers in ordered rhyme.
May there be special blessings
At night, when houses sleep,
On all the mothers everywhere
Who have child hearts to keep."

—Helen Welshimer

"Is not the young mother one of the sweetest sights which life shows Us?" —Thackeray

Mother O' Mine

"If I were hanged on the highest hill,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose love would follow me still,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine.
If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose tears would come down to me,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine.
If I were damned of body and soul
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!
I know whose prayers would make me whole,
Mother o' mine, O mother o' mine!

—Rudyard Kipling

"Oh, the love of a mother, love which none can forget!"
—Victor Hugo

Our Mother

"Hundreds of stars in the pretty sky,
Hundreds of shells on the shore together,
Hundreds of birds that go singing by,
Hundreds of bees in the sunny weather;
Hundreds of dewdrops to greet the dawn,
Hundreds of lambs in the purple clover,
Hundreds of butterflies on the lawn—
But only one mother the wide world over."

—Anonymous

"A mother is a mother still,
The holiest thing alive."
—Coleridge

Mothers—And Others

"Others weary of the noise
Mothers play with girls and boys.
Others scold because we fell,
Mothers "kiss and make it well".
Others work with patient will,
Mothers labor later still.
Others love us more or less,
Mothers love with steadiness.
Others pardon, hating yet,
Mothers pardon and forget.
Others keep the ancient score,
Mothers never shut the door.
Others grow incredulous
Mothers still believe in us.
Mothers throw their faith away,
Mothers pray, and pray, and pray."

—Amos R. Wells

Shudder note: Dean C. E. Edmondson of the University of Indiana has suggested that in the future all students there ought to be fingerprinted for identification purposes.

Dances and Festival Claim Week-enders

"Why in the world are you going away
When we're having such a swell May Day?"
I asked the girls who left S. T. C. Last week-end; and they said to me
"Oh there's Tom, Dick and Harry Mother, Dad and brother Larry, We wanted to see them oh so bad So why should we stay and be sad? Dance, parties, plays and a show Swellegant food, so off we go."
What else could I say?
So I turned away.
But not before taking their names and so
You'll find them all listed below.

Lucy Alston, Edna Bolick, Annie Leigh Bailey, Mrs. B. G. the Princesses by Queen Shenandoah Thirteenth and dance at the George Washington Hotel. The Apple Blossom ball took place at Jordan Springs, six miles northeast of Winchester, with music by Bud Cordori and his Pennsylvania Ramblers.

The pageant, "Dawn, a Pageant of Springtime," which had been relayed the preceding day on account of rain, was presented on Friday morning at Handley school auditorium. All the princesses were present at this pageant which was produced by the teachers and pupils of the Winchester schools. Just after this was over, the Queen and her court were taken to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hack for a reception and luncheon. Following this at 2 P. M. came the Grand Feature Parade—"The Trail of the Pink Petals." The costumes of the Princesses were made in shades of pink. The top was of shell pink taffeta, with ruffles of net starting at the waist and graduating oward the bottom ino coral. The hatler neck of the dress was covered by a short net jacket having puffed sleeves. Each princess wore a tiny bouquet of flowers low at the neck.

The festive activities ended for Queen Shenandoah XIII and her Court with the secind night of the Queen's Ball held at the George Washington Hotel and the Apple Blossom Ball at Jordan Springs.

Westhampton

Several girls danced at Westhampton Saturday night. They were Irene Taylor, Dorothy Bagby, Doris Isabell.

W. and L.

Bonnie Lane attended the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house party at Washington and Lee during the week-end.

Apple Blossom Festival

The Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester claimed Tac Waters who represented S. T. C. in the Queen's Court. Louise Borden, Mary Denny, Dot Robertson, Virginia Baker and Ellen Simmerman viewed the festivities.

Visitor

Miss Jeanne Nichols of Kankakee, Illinois, and her mother, Mrs. J. A. Nichols were week-end guests of Miss Nichols. Jeanne will be enrolled in the freshman class at S. T. C. next fall.

A. S. A. National Inspection

Miss Evelyn G. Bell, vicepresident of the National Alpha Sigma Alpha Council, inspected the local chapter last week-end. Friday night the sorority held a model initiation, after which a party was given by the pledges in honor of Miss Bell, in the chapter room. Among those present at the event were Miss Moran, adviser, Miss Iler, and the members of the chapter.

Saturday the old and new officers had private conferences with Miss Bell. Saturday night at 10 o'clock the sorority held a model business meeting. On Sunday Miss Bell was entertained with breakfast at Longwood.

Fashion Notes

And one was troubled with hips.
For her no mess-jackets, no pleated skirts, no dark blouses over light skirts, no bolero. For her, a suit so perfectly tailored that her hips melt away under a jacket that she leaves unbuttoned but never takes off. For her a dark blue princesse coat over a dress painted with small, undazzling circles or dots. A neat shirtmaker dress of dark blue and white herringbone silk-clasped with a dark leather belt, with the pleats firmly over the hips. Or a three-quarter coat with curious, square, folded shoulders that pay optical tricks of a kindly nature. For her, a plain black dress with a cowl that pulls out in back over a long bright red or bright green wool cape. And in the evening, a dark dress with a short-sleeved printed net jacket with a big bunch of light flowers at the bosom—a three-quarter coat of white—or a three-quarter coat of very heavy pink and purple reversible satin, swinging full and soft behind—

And one was a little too short to dare risk the bold plaids, the big-flowered prints that she would have loved. For her, the printed silk dresses with their little full bolero jackets—the dark blue wool mess jackets with their pleated skirts held up with patent-leather belts—the pencil-thin dark wool dress with its short jacket and chiffon sash bound around. For her all the little evanscent gray wool suits—the little dresses printed with tiny circle—and all the lovely little chiffon toques.

And one was definitely tall. A squash beret and shallow sailor-hat girl—destined by the gods for big, bold, pink, plaid jackets over plain skirts—for printed dresses with deep cape collars that cut from your height. For the tremendously full skirt of the chiffon dress—for glorious rain-washed prints—for huge flowered prints—and for the tall slim column of black crepe broken by a tunic.

And one had no liabilities at all, but she had no cash. She had put her all in three dresses to carry her through April, May, June, July. A short-sleeved coat of dark blue wool over a dark blue wool dress. A shirtmaker dress of a dark blue and white silk that looks like tweed, perfect under the above mentioned coat. A dark hat for mornings, a bright hat for afternoon. And for evening, a black paillette jacket—off again, on again over the most romantic black tulle dress in town.

Book Review

"BLOOD ON THE CURB"
By Joseph T. Shaw

The hero of this story of mystery and adventure is a young Italian-American who devotes his life to fighting those criminal organization which prey on Italians in this country. To that end Paul Cardine joins the police force of New York City, become a detective with the rank of lieutenant and is placed in command of a squad of young men of Italian birth or descent, who ably second his efforts to find the man at the head of what appears to be a consolidation of several hitherto independent gangs specializing in arson, bombings, kidnappings, murder, and other crimes.

How much of this book is based on the real exploits of a famous Italian-American detective and how much is pure fiction we are not qualified to say, but the tale of Paul Cardini and his assistants is packed with thrills, with a little romance thrown in for good measure.

Class Notes

Senior Class

At the senior class meeting held May 5 the class gift to the college was discussed. Several announcements concerning the invitations and assigning of Commencement seats were made, and plans for senior chapel to be held May 23 were completed.

Sophomore Class

The selection and adaptation of a new shape of class ring was the principle business at the regular sophomore class meeting last night. Final arrangements and plans were made for the senior-sophomore class party to be held on Thursday night in the Recreation Hall.

Freshman Class

The freshman volley ball team was entertained by the class at its regular meeting held in the Rec last night.

"Aren't you sorry you dno't play volley ball?" were the words of Miss Moran, classman, as the team was presented tiny may-baskets as favors. Suckers were passed around to the class members. Two skits, "When Bo Camp in the Window, Bill Went Out the Door" and "The Punctured Romance", were presented by talented sophomore class members.

Silly Symphonies

One extreme or else another
Evening gowns this spring must smother

Of froth, or hobble her in styles
Slender as a soda straw
Or even Mr. G. B. Shaw.

An Acute Housing Problem

A fifty-yard skirt on an evening dress
Is plenty of skirt you must confess;
It swirls and eddies about like foam,
But where will it hang when you get home?
Where will you stable a frock like that?
Tease from the charmer a private flat?
Hire a hanger or maybe rent
A Barnum and Bailey circus tent?

ly professional air. Then they swung gayly into "Yankee Doodle, a song sung by both American and British soldiers during the World War.

The girls sang several modern songs, and the boys brought a stirring program to a stirring close with The Flag Drill, having as a background Our Flag and the Statue of Liberty.

We hear—

Elsie Cabell bought a new hat early Monday morning!

There was a rip-roaring time at V. M. I. this past week-end in more ways than one!

Sue Waldo received a "sweet" gift from Dr. Jeffers and Mr. French!!

Susan Lane is really strutting her stuff! Go to it, Sue!!

Little Dot Tillett is making "time enough" with a certain Esquirish gentleman from H.-S.

Claudia Harper makes a swell substitute for Miss Jeter in the class that is studying the difficulties of married life!

May Day is going to be swell—let's all be there with the banners flying with gratitude to those hard-working gals for their loyalty and eagerness to make S. T. C.'s 1936 May Day a success!!

Au revoir!

"Bodo" had to put brown acid on her hands cause "Hoppy" has it on his face. Contagious maybe . . . huh?

The May Day Committee wishes to express its appreciation to Miss Tupper's sewing class, the girls who translated French costume instructions, Gamma Psi, and to the student body, faculty and friends who had any part in making May Day a success.

Sport Slants

There's music in the air led by one of our local Babe Ruths:
"The old world we're living in
Is mighty hard to beat;
You get a sting with every catch
But aren't those home-runs sweet?"

I'm sure you will want to join in on this song, if you came out for baseball every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday at four o'clock. There is a great thrill for the batter in the thought that she is master of the ball's fate. Will it go over the fence, through the swimming pool window, into the opponent's hand or is it only to get a fanning with the bat? Come out and test your mastery! Six practices are required for the class games to be played on the second Thursda or Friday in May.

Who is the happy student, who is she, that every girl in school would like to be? With a smudge on her nose, a sun-tanned back, and a smile on her face, she ambles into school. Visions of her wicked serve arise before she lays aside her racket. My, but she surely did lick that girl! Tired but victorious, one heads her sink above the onrush of water in the tub, "God's in his Heaven, all's right with the world". She has discovered a good formula for starting and ending a pleasant day—tennis.

Great high jumpers, javelin throwers, and runners, are discovered among us. Competition is needed to attain great records. Come out and help us, for in field and track not only one's individual abilities are tested but also one's cooperation.

We hear the bow strings twang on the athletic field all times of day. From the old saying, "Practice makes perfect", we presume that we will soon have archers that will rival William Tell's father.

We invite you to take a dip into the pleasure pool of our athletics. Sign up now, on the bulletin board, for the tennis tournament.

Three University of Georgia students called King Edward VIII the other day to tell him about an athletic contest. His Majesty wasn't at home, and the bill was $75.

The middle aged janitor in one of the halls at Princeton knows all about the Veterans of Future Wars now. For a joke, he wore one of the pins of the order. Then he went to a movie in New Brunswick, when he came out of the theatre whom should he encounter but a whole gang of tought looking ex-service men, members of the real VFW. For a time it was an interesting situation, but a passing taxi was the means of escape for the janitor.

Why I Never Joined a Sorority: I didn't want fraternity boys calling on me at night.

I had never danced with a man in my life and I didn't want to start.

I hated the thought of dormitory life and having to crawl over a lot of sisters to get to bed.

I didn't like the idea of rooming with one girl for a whole semester.

I don't look particularly well in sleeveless, low-cut gowns.

I'm a boy!

Perhaps the most energetic of statisticians attend the University of Wisconsin. Last month a self appointed authority declared that "following careful investigation" he had computed that the average female college student uses enough lipstick annually to paint a barn.

Last week a collegue made an even more startling announcement. A girl chews her gum approximately 93 times a minute, he said, while a cow chews her cud only 54 times a minute. During the average life of a stick of gum two and a half hours a girl's jaw moves through a distance of 860 feet; a man's through 1010 feet, and a cow's through 3,520 feet. The total for all students for a year is 16,800 miles, or over half-way around the world.

Brilliant and varied Egyptian costumes made a colorful display against the green and gray of the temple background. The frieze effects in both the dances and stage positions gave the atmosphere of Egypt as we know it from their art. We may quote a by-stander and say: "It was really the most beautiful and colorful May Day I've ever seen, and those who made it a success deserve a lot of credit." So, the May Day committee, headed by Mary Robeson, general chairman and Emma Bingham, theme chairman, with Mrs. Fitzpatrick, and other faculty advisers should receive a vote of thanks for making this year's May Day such a beautiful success.

Montana Girl Wins Pan-Hellenic Contest

A girl who has never been in a big city is the winner of the second annual essay contest of the Panhelenic House Association on the subject "Why I Should See New York." Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn, president of the association announces.

The first prize winner, who will receive a trip to New York this summer and who will be entertained for two weeks at the association's headquarters at the Beekman Tower Hotel, is Erma Young, a senior at Intermountain Union College, Great Falls, Montana. The Beekman Tower is also headquarters of the National Panhellenic fraternities.

Second and third prize winners in the contest in which there were more tha 700 entrants from more than 300 colleges and universities are: R. G. Terry, Jr., a senior at St. Lawrance University, Canton, New York. Ann Cottrell, sophomore, College of William and Mary, Richmond, Va.

The distinguished committee of writers who selected the prize winners included: Mary Colum, Fannie Hurst, H. V. Kaltenborn, Alice Duer Miller, Kenyon Nicholson, Lyman B. Stowe, Thomas Walfe, and Helen Worden.

Mrs. Hepburn reports that the judges considered all of the entries of such a high standard of attainment that they experienced difficulty in choosing the winners from the final 60. The choice was made on literary merits of the prize winning essay and its "real idea", in case of the second prize because of the soundness of the material and the fact that it definitely answered the title of the contest, and the third for its "fresh point of view."

According to Mrs. Hepburn, the essay contest has aroused so much interest in its first two years, that it is assured as a yearly event in the activities of the Panhellenic House Association. Plans already are going forward for the third annual contest, the title of which will be announced in the fall.

little interference from opposition groups. Three storm centers developed: The University of Kansas, Lawrence College, Appleton, Wisconsin, and Temple University at Philadelphia.

A tear-gas bomb was tossed into the midst of a group of 300 listening to a student speaker at Kansas, and a freefor-all followed. An attempt to break up the Temple meeting was made by a number of athletes, who advanced behind a barrage of rotten fruit and flour bags. There were no serious injuries, and the meeting was continued.

I am overcome by the good qualities I see around me. I'd like to be so different sometimes. I decide I'm very silly so I agree to make the best of this me of mine, acknowledge the short comings, and yet remain aware of how little and petty it is.

Police took a hand in the Lawrence College demonstration when students started to parade in the Appleton streets, in defiance of a police order. Night sticks were used, and two demonstrators had to visit the infirmary for repairs.

Biggest walk-out was New York, with 10,000 college students and 300 from high schools taking part. Twenty-three hundred demonstated at Cornell, 1500 at the University of Chicago, 300 at the University of Michigan, 1200 at Dartmouth and 1500 at Brown.

Winthrop – S. T. C. Hold Annual Clash

Local Students Win in Debates and Oratory

The annual S. T. C.-Winthrop clash, which took place on Thursday, May 7, was won by Farmville in both the debate and oratorical contests.

In the afternoon at four o'clock dual debates were held. The question discussed was the official Pi Kappa Delta question concerning the powers of the Supreme Court. Agnes Bondurant and Margaret Pollard of S. T. C., defending the affirmative of the question, debated with Sarah Weatherly and Elizabeth Haw of Winthrop College, who upheld the negative. While these two teams were debating in the music room, Lucretia Daniel and Virginia Walker of Winthrop, upholders of the affirmative, were debating the same question with Dudley Allen and Louise Francis of S. T. C., who upheld the negative. This debate was held in the small auditorium.

Dr. Allan of Hampden-Sydney acted as critic judge of the debate in which Farmville's affirmative team took part. Dr. Hart, also of Hampden-Sydney, served as critic Judge of the debate in which Farmville's negative team participated. Both judges rendered decisions in favor of S. T. C.

On Thursday evening at eight o'clock an oratorical contest between the two colleges was held in the small auditorium. Again S. T. C. was victorious with Gertrude

Stanley Franck Sings In Baritone Concert For Chapel Program

Mr. Stanley Franck late of New York City gave a concert in chapel on Saturday morning, May the 9th, that was a treat to all lovers of music. The appreciation of the audience was evidenced in their applause and Mr. Franck was very generous in his response.

Mr. Franck possesses a voice of beauty and purity of tone that is rich and full throughout the entire register. His diction was crystalline in its clarity and his interpretations very pleasing. Mr. Franck is a descendant of Caesar Franck, the famous organist and composer of the 19th century. He is an artist pupil of Maestro Oscar Siegel.

Assisting Mr. Franck were Misses Elizabeth Sieber and Elizabeth LeGrand who played a composition for two solo violins. Their tone was sympathetically blended and a brilliant climax followed by decrescendo passages and chords showed adequate technique.

Miss Peck Attends Ginter Park Meet

On Wednesday, May 6, Miss Peck attended the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of Ginter Park Woman's Club in Richmond. Miss Peck was a charter member of that organization when she was principal of the Ginter Park school.

The principle feature of the program was a series of reports of the progress of the organization, made by all its presidents since it was founded. Every president save one was present, Mrs. Garland Pollard being the only one who is deceased. After each report was made a song of the time in which the president giving the report served was sung. Singers and accompanists were excellent musicians from Richmond.

A. A. U. W. Organizes Branch in Farmville

The American Association of University Women was organized with a Farmville branch on Thursday, May 7. Members of the Farmville organization include S. T. C. faculty members and university women from Hampden-Sydney and Farmville.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. J. Crawford (Dr.), president; Mrs. Jo Smith, vice-president; Mrs. J. P. Wynne, secretary; Miss Mary D. Pierce, treasurer.

Baptist Students Have Spring Meet

B. S. U. Holds Meeting at Baptist Church Here

The Virginia Baptist Student Union held its Spring Retreat at the Farmville Baptist Church Saturday, May 9, from 10:00 A. M. until 3:30 P. M.

After the Virginia delegates had registered, Miss Blanche Lane, president of the Farmville B. S. U. welcomed the guests. Dr. Cecil V. Cook, pastor of the Farmville Baptist church, led the devotionals.

The morning session consisted of a discussion of the Ridgecrest Retreat at Ridgecrest, N. C., led by Miss Virginia Pollard of Harrisonburg State Teachers College. Miss Carolyn Walker of East Radford State Teachers College led the second subject of discussion on Summer Vacation and Life Investment. Between these discussions and lunch there was a short recess period at which time Farmville B.S.U. Council accompanied the delegates in visiting

"The Arrival of Kitty" Is Presented by F. H. S. Club

Kitty arrived in fine style before a large audience when the Farmville High School Dramatic Club presented "The Arrival of Kitty" Friday night. The setting of the fast-moving comedy was a country hotel in the Catskill Mountains. Mary C. Bynum was the leading lady, and T. W. Brooks was the handsome bell-hop who temporarily took over the management of the hotel. Others in the cast were Ben Hurt, Mary Grainger, Jeanne Allen, Robert Taylor, Luckin Bugg, and Marshall Fallwell. It was directed by Miss Nannie Crowder.

Judge MacDonald Attends Banquet Of Kappa Delta Pi

Juvenile Court Judge Speaks to Guest at Longwood

Judge Rose M. MacDonald, Juvenile Court Judge, addressed the members of Kappa Delta Pi and their guests at a banquet at Longwood on May 8 on the subject of "The New Philosophy."

Miss MacDonald talked to the group concerning the responsibilities and opportunities of the teaching profession. She spoke of the vistas of discovery, transformed character and moral exaltation which open up before youth as it starts out into the world. The truth that what we give to our profession must come from within—that we cannot give what we do not have—was brought out.

Miss MacDonald said: "America is faced with a larger number of vital problems than ever before has been presented to a nation." It is for us to find the solution to these problems, and in their solution make or break democracy.

She gave a warning that the new philosophy of pleasure and selfishness is in itself one of destruction. By listening to its teachings we tear down the standards of service and social and intellectual progress which have been so worthily set up for us by the work of our predecessors.

Miss MacDonald spent Friday night at S. T. C. before returning to her home in Berryville, Va.

Students Attend Y.W.C.A. Meeting Held in Colorado

Wise and Crockett Return Friday From Trip

Dorothy Wise and Agnes Crockett, incoming and outgoing presidents of the Y. W. C. A. respectively, returned Friday, May 9, from the fourteenth National Convention of the Young Woman's Christian Association of the United States, which was held at Colorado Springs, Colorado, from April 29 to May 5. The eighteen hundred who attended included interracial delegates, and 75 student delegates from every state in the union except New York.

Mrs. Harrie R. Chamberlin, president of the Young Woman's Christian Association of America, called the meeting to order. During the days of discussion, the main conclusion reached was that in the future the foremost project of every Y. W. C. A. will be religion. Some of the speakers were: Mr. Francis Henson, New York, N. Y.; Dr. William Orville Hendenhall, President, Whittier College, Whittier, California; Dr. Ben M. Cherrington, University of Denver, Denver, Colorado; Dr. Humphrey Lee, pastor Highland Park Methodist Church, Dallas, Texas; and Professor R. V. Smith., Department of Philosophy, Chicago University, Chicago, Illinois.

Saturday afternoon, May 2, was set aside for sight-seeing. The most popular places according to the choice of the delegates included Pike's Peak, Cave of the Winds, Shianne Canyon, and the Garden of the Gods.

An idea that met with favor was that the convention be held every three years instead of two.

Jongleurs Present Captain Applejack

H.-S.C. Dramatic Club Has Spring Play in Auditorium

The Hampden-Sydney dramatic club, known as the Jongleurs, presented its spring production, 'Captain Applejack" by Hackett, on May 12 in the S. T. C. auditorium.

This comedy, played by an all male cast under the supervision of Professors Bell and Ropp, is of an English setting and centers around the exciting discovery of hidden pirates' treasure in the ancient home of the Applejohns. Ambrose Applejohn, descendent of pirate "Captain Applejack", was successfully and most humorously portrayed by the already well known Jongleur, J. B. Bullard. He was supported in the leading feminine

Sophomores Entertain Sister Class In Night Club Style

In full evening attire and overcome with curiosity at the situation, the seniors arrived, escorted by equally dressed-up sophomores, to the final party their sister class would give them. Down the "rec" steps they piled and were greeted warmly by a dignified receiving line composed of Miss Jane Royall, Madeline McGlothlin, Virginia Agee, Carter Belle Munt, and Lib Harris. The "rec" was magically transformed into an up-to-date night club with tables scattered around and brilliant crepe paper decorations.

Guests were finally seated and the buzz of excitement resounded through the room. At the head table, the guests-of-honor, Miss Mary, Miss Bedford, and Miss Royall (all resplendedent in corsages of purple orchids(?)) were entertained by Carter Belle Munt. Suddenly the hubbub of voices calmed down as Virginia Agee, master of ceremonies, became the center of attention. Mary Jane Pendleton, chief electrician, effectively turned the spotlight on her as she announced each number of the spectacular floor show.

Cotillion Club Has Reser For Dances

Misses Jones, Pierce Tender Resignation

It is with deep regret the faculty and student body accept the resignations and retirement of Miss Mary D. Pierce and Miss Mary P. Jones from the faculty of Farmville State Teachers College.

In the faculty meeting on Thursday, May 7, a resolution of regret and good wishes was adopted by the Education Department and the entire faculty; it expresses the feeling of the school aptly, in these words:

"We realize that they have rendered excellent, devoted and untiring service to this college and to the cause of education in their constructive outlook, devoted spirit, kindly helpfulness to students, loyal cooperation with their colleagues, and vital interest in the life of the community."

Sodalitas Latina Has Election of Members Of Tributum Staff

At the regular meeting of the Latin Club held Thursday afternoon, May 7 at five o'clock the officers for the coming year were installed. After the installation, Mary Ellen Mims entertained those present by rendering two piano selections.

The members elected the new staff of the Tributum, a quarterly publication of the Latin Club. Those elected were: Editor-in-Chief, Katherine Milby; Assistant Editor-in-Chief, Sara Buchanan; Literary Editor, Sara Button; Business Manager, Edna Walden; Typist, Elizabeth Morris.

Each of these girls has shown interests and ability in the Latin Club, being active along different lines.

Miss Bedford Goes To Arts Convention

Miss Virginia Bedford recently attended the convention of the Eastern Arts Association, held in New York City.

The meeting was held for the advancement of art education in elementary and secondary schools, and the promotion of art ideas and ideals in all phases of teaching. The program consisted of talks by teachers and supervisors, actively engaged in teaching, who illustrated with the ideal examples of children's work. An interesting feature was a movie-talkie showing fine examples of art in everyday living from household furnishings to the modern train. This film is available to teachers and students of art. An additional feature was a lecture by a commercial printer explaining the use of color in

Supervisors Attend N.A.C.E. Convention

The National Association of Childhood Education Convention, held in New York City April 27 and 28 was attended by Misses Mix, Haines, and Penny of Farmville Training School. The meetings were of especial interest to them as supervisors in elementary education. Also, Miss Haines is the advisor of the local branch of the A. C. E.

The program of the convention was instructive as well as interesting. The mornings were devoted to various city schools, while the afternoons were given over to study classes.

Annual Spring Dances Will Be Held May 16

The Cotillion Club will hold its spring dances Saturday, May 16 in the big gymnasium. Harry Reser and his Cliquot Club Eskimos will play for the dansante from 4 to 6 p. m., and for the dance from 8:30 p. m. til midnight. Reser's orchestra has recently been touring the state, playing on Eastern Shore, in Danville and at other places nearby.

Martha Nottingham and Dave Rice will lead the figure, assisted by Grace Eubank, president of the club, and James Powell, Billy Wilkinson, treasurer, and Billy Waldo, and Florence Sanford, business manager, and Billy Lyne. Only the old members of Cotillion Club will participate in the figure.

Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Grace Eubank, Billy Wilkinson, Martha Nottingham, and Florence Sanford will receive the guests.

The chaperones will be Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham, Miss Mary White Cox, Mrs. J. H. Tabb, Mrs. J. E. Warren, Mrs. Hallie K. Laing, Miss Pauline Camper, and Dr. J. L. Jarman.

The decorations for the occasion will be furnished by Gamma Psi. Punch will be served in the Student Building Lounge at intermission, as is customary.

Students Appear In Dramatization

Statesmen of Old Criticize America of Today

The spirits of John Marshall, Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Jefferson and others of their race and clan have made it known through a series of intricate mediums that they will hold a public seance with F. D. R. in the large auditorium on Friday, May 15, at 8:000 P. M. "They Could Not Sleep" because they are so unsettled about the workings of the New Deal. Jefferson is shocked at the way the New Dealers are using other peoples' money; Andrew Jackson in his blustering bombastic style wants to know what they've done to the banks of the country; it all reminds Lincoln of one of his favorite stories, and Wilson gravely comments on the present neutrality policies.

The members of Pi Gamma Mu are grooming themselves to take parts as characteristically as possible. They searched oldpapers and documents until even the mannerisms of speech have been copied. The parts will be taken by girls well-known on the campus and if you want to hear a dignified senator become even more dignified as she takes her microphone in hand and begins: "My friends—," don't miss "They Could Not Sleep."

The Coming Election

This is the year for presidential election. The question uppermost in all our minds is who will be the next President of the United States. Since we're all sure Roosevelt will again be the nominee for the Democratic ticket, let's turn our thoughts to the Republican side. Who will be nominated to run for this party?

The big problem of the Republican party is the elimination of Hoover from the forefront. Leaders of the party know that he cannot be nominated, and they also know that his bid for the nomination could very well defeat the most favorable candidate. However, he is carrying on his own campaign. What will be the outcome?

The Massachusetts Republicans are voting for the friendly Kansas governor, Alf Landon. In Pennsylvania the name of William E. Borah, Idaho Senator, was the only one on the Republican ticket. Between them, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania will have 108 of the 1001 votes at the Republican convention in Cleveland on June 9. But it is doubtful that Borah will get many of the delegates from Pennsylvania or Landon all of those from Massachusetts. Refusing to be bound by last week's primaries, most of the 108 will enter the Cleveland public auditorium unpledged and open-minded.

Of course, we do not know what the few months between now and November will bring. Who will run on the Republican ticket? Who will be elected President? What will be the result? All these questions will have to remain unanswered until the people of the United States show their preference in the election. And, will they choose wisely? Time alone can tell.

Navy Bill Before Senate

After its victory in the House, the Navy Bill is awaiting the approval of the Senate. This much-talked-of bill is the largest of peace-time appropriations ever advocated in the history of the Navy, since the House claims we need a Navy "second to none." Some people are bitterly opposed to the bill, but with conditions such as they are in the world, as in Europe, Asia and Africa, only a large sum as the bill calls for will be adequate to provide for an efficient and up-to-date Navy. Whatever hope we have held for world peace and armament limitations has been dispelled. The peace pacts have amounted to nothing. What is left is exactly what faced the world before the Great War. Unless the United States and Great Britain can enter upon some agreement, authorities say, to stand together in time of emergency, our only safe course is to create and maintain a military force strong enough to defend us and to carry out the policies of our civil government. Whatever such a force might cost, we can see it will not be expensive in the long run, if we take the long view.

To Miss Mary Johnson

In the death of Miss Mary Johnston, noted Virginia authoress, Farmville State Teachers College mourns the loss of a beloved friend. The Virginia writer was known and loved through her books and also in person by many on the college campus.

When Miss Johnston visited our college last spring, she tied the bond of kindred feeling between herself and the college very closely. Longwood, the former home of General Joseph E. Johnston who was a kinsman of the author, remains as a link between Miss Johnston and our institution. She revered the memory of her soldier-kinsman. We likewise love and respect the Confederate General; equal with him in our affection, we shall always cherish respect and love for one who preserved in art the traditions of Virginia.

Our Magazine

With great anticipation we are looking forward to our literary maginze. It will come out between May 15 and 20. When it comes out, each of ous can say that we new have a college magazine.

Of course, we are going to support it by buying a copy. Each of us agreed to back it when the idea was first put before us. Come one, come all, and let us stand behind our promise.

We do not want to make this our first and last issue. In the fall the staff is planning to begin work on the second issue as soon as school opens. Each of us can work on a contribution during the spare hours this summer, when we have more time to devote to it. Ideas easily arise out of the good times of summer. We all will have some exciting experience we want to tell, and we can put that into story form. Our poets will find many an inspiration in the beauties of sunny skies and moonlit nights. The magazine will be, more than ever before, our own. Just because you are finishing school this year that does not mean that you are not to write for the magazine. It is just as much yours as it is ours.

Let us support the magazine not only by buying a copy of the forthcoming issue, but also by working on a contribution for the fall magazine.

Big Fish

"Big fish eat little fish" the proverb tells us. From the time of the Medes and Persians to the days of Italy and Ethiopia the maxim has proved itself to be a definite law in the make-up of human nature. No one will argue that one-half of society lives at the expense of the other half

In individuals as well as in nations and classes we see people rationalizing that "might makes right". The politician knows that the little man will make the feeblest outcry; therefore, the little man is most often the victim of his tactics.

Yet in spite of the fact that it is and always has been so, is there any necessity for maintaining that big fish will always gobble up the little fish? Why not change the appetite of the big fish and make them eat vegetables, even spinach! Human nature is not an unchangeable force. If only we will to change, we can. We can begin here on the campus by succeeding independently, not relying on the notes of a hard working student who is called "friend" around test time and passed in the hall without even a nod at other times. We can begin by a fairer division of labor in our organizations, not assigning the chairmanship of an important committee to some girl who, though already overworked, won't say "no". We can do away with many of the small impositions we have been proven to place on a long suffering roommate all year.

Alumnae News

Infantry Ball

The Richmond Light Infantry Blues celebrated their 147th anniversary on Saturday evening, May the ninth, with an anniversary ball held in the banquet hall of the Mosque in Richmond. The affair was opened by a grand march led by Governor and Mrs. Peery, followed by General and Mrs. S. Gardner Waller.

Elmore—Butterworth

The engagement of Miss Mildred Field Elmore of Petersburg to Mr. Abner Butterworth of Dinwiddie has recently been announced. The wedding will take place in the early summer.

Hite—Brown

Mr. Charles Edmund Loftes announced the engagement on May 9 of his daughter, Mrs. Grace Loftes Hite of Clarksville, to Mr. J. Frank Brown of Clarksville. The wedding will take place in the early summer.

Mr. Walter Payne

Mr. Walter Payne of Pamplin has recently been awarded a scholarship to a school of music for the summer. The recommendation was made by Mr. Strick of Farmville. Mr. Payne is now teaching in the Vera High School.

Agee—Miles

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Anne Agee of Lynchburg and Mr. Lenard Otis Miles of Evington was solemnized in Lynchburg April 28 at the Rivermont Avenue Baptist Church. After a northern trip Mr. and Mrs. Miles will make their home in Lynchburg.

Miss Etta Rose Bailey

Miss Etta Rose Bailey has been selected to serve on an important committee which is preparing to lay before the City School Board of Richmond an enlarged program for the development of the smaller children entering school for the first time.

Under the proposed plan the line between Kindergarten and the first grade would be broken, and children would be assigned to the care of one teacher for one or two years.

Intercollegiate News

Unimportant but interesting survey taken in three southern California colleges indicates that most students seem to believe soft melodic music at the elbow is conductive to study and concentration.

A minority thought not, citing the frequent interruptions by announcers who talk through their noses.

A majority of the professors think not, also, maintaining that radios cause laxity in studies, that concentration simply cannot be complete with music in the room.

On the sunny, leafy campus of Stanford University there is an air of expectancy, of uncertainty. What everyone is thinking of at the moment is how will David Lamson be received back at the school after his three years in prison?

The reception of the man who finally won acquittal after three trials for wife-murder interests the columnist of the Stanford Daily who writes, "it would be a glorious opportunity to prove sincerity or hypocrisy." Despite the reception, says the writer, Lamson "will be known as a Stanford man who has won a fight greater than most Stanford men ever have to face."

A Maryland freshman objected to doing outside reading because during the winter it was too cold on the porch.

One college paper has made the following suggestions for theme songs for examinations: Before the exam, "I wish I were Aladdin"; during the exam "Where Am I?" after the exam "Out in the cold Again".

When a co-ed was recently informed that three thousand seals were used to make fur coats last year, she replied: "Isn't it wonderful that they can train animals to do such work."

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

LOUISE WALMSLEY

It is with deep regret that we bid goodbye to Walmsley. There will be something lacking in the school next year without her cheery greeting and ever-ready smile.

During her four years at S. T. C., Walmsley has shown her leadership in many and varied fields. She has been very outstanding in athletics, being manager of tennis and president of the Athletic Association her senior year.

Walmsley has also been on the Student Standards Committee, the Town Girls' Committee of the Y. W. C. A., treasurer of the the junior class, a member of the Monogram Club, and an active member of Pi Gamma Mu, social science fraternity.

In her junior year her versatility and leadership were recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma, the national leadership fraternity.

She is also a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority and Cotillion Club.

Louise is known to all of us—she makes it so easy to become close friends with her. Her witty personality, good sportsmanship, and downright capacity make her most welcome wherever she appears. She is the kind of person you always enjoy being with, anytime, anywhere.

World News

Italy's column of black-shirted troops moved to Harrar Friday to complete the fascist conquest of Southern Ethiopia. Violent riots, looting, and fire preceded the occupation. The natives in the capital not only submitted to the fascist forces, but also aided in cleaning the city of wreckage.

In Rome, diplomats looked ahead to Saturday's sessions of the fascist grand council and the Italian cabinet at which Ethiopia's annexation to King Victor Emmanuel's kingdom will be proclaimed.

Haile Selassie, Ethiopia's beaten ruler reached sombre self-exile in Jerusalem while conflicting reports on the fate of his second city, Harrar, and tension in Europe over the status of his once sovereign empire prevailed.

The city of Peiping, China, is now in the most desperate financial straits since the days when Mongol conquerors swooped down from the North to set up their capital there. The decline of this once proud city began with the revolution of 1911, which overthrew the ruling Manchu dynasty. Removal of the national capital to Nanking was another blow.

Japan's military machine is gradually taking control of not only the vital military centers of China, but is also working into Chinese custom's revenues.

Mrs. Violet Van Der Elst, Britain's militant opponent of the death sentence has hired a fleet of ten airplanes and announced plans to deluge Strangeways goal at Manchester with 100,000 anti-capital punishment pamphlets during the execution of Dr. Buck Ruxton, "devil's beef tub" murderer.

Literary Column

The literary world is paying tribute to A. E. Housman, British poet and scholar, who died recently.

A. E. Housman wrote many scholarly articles and edited Juvenal, Manilius, and Lucan. He wrote only two volumes of poetry, "A Shropshire Lad" and "Last Poems".

Housman was professor of Latin at Cambridge University, and his poems occasionally show the influence of classicism. He wrote with simplicity and brevity. His style is so light and sure that a reader may at first miss the meaning and passion behind his poems. The subjects of his poems are often melancholy—the shortness of life, the cruelty of time, the frailty of beauty.

When I Was One-And-Twenty

When I was one-and-twenty
I heard a wise man say,
"Give crowns and pounds and guineas
But not your heart away;
Give pearls away and rubies
But keep your fancy free".
But I was one-and-twenty
No use to talk to me.
When I was one-and-twenty
I heard him say again,
"The heart out of the bosom
Was never given in vain;
'Tis paid with sighs a-plenty
And sold for endless rue".
And I am two-and-twenty,
And oh, 'tis true, 'tis true.

Oh, When I Was in Love With You

Oh, when I was in love with you,
Then I was clean and brave,
And miles around the wonder grew
How well did I behave.
And now the fancy passes by,
And nothing will remain,
And miles around they'll say that I
Am quite myself again.

Think No More, Lad

Think no more, lad; laugh, be jolly:
Why should men make haste to die?
Empty heads and tongues a-talking
Make the rough road easy walking,
And the feather pate of folly
Bears the falling sky.
Oh, 'tis jesting, dancing, drinking
Spins the heavy world around.
If your hearts were not so clever,
Oh, they would be young forever:
Think no more; 'tis only thinking
Lays lads underground.

With Rue My Heart Is Laden

With rue my heart is laden
For golden friends I had,
For many a rose-lipt maiden
And many a lightfoot lad.
By brooks too broad for leaping
The lightfoot boys are laid;
The rose-lipt girls are sleeping
In fields where roses fade.

Quotable Quotes

"The machine age has produced the subtle propagandist with his alien program of social discontent and world revolt directed against the principle of authority, against Christianity, against the Democratic ideal". Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice-president of Georgetown University, says writing on the wall is in a crude Russian hand.

"In England we would hold up our hands in horror at anything so childish, so undignified as the beauty contests so prevalent in American colleges." William E. Williams, secretary of the British Institute of adult education, holds up his hands in horror for a Drake Times Delphic reporter.

The cost of education should be higher, says Dr. William P. Few, president of Duke University, otherwise we build "a race of half-educated and sometimes half-respectable panhandlers, and at the worst ordinary vagabonds and even criminals."

"Higher education in the United States from 1920 to 1930 was a pretty sloppy kind of affair," according to Dr. Stephen Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, who ought to know.

SOCIETY

Mother's Day Sends Many Students Home

Topping the calendar of events for S. T. C. socialites this week-end were the V. P. I. Ring Dance, fraternity house-parties at Washington and Lee, and the Pi Kappa Alpha dance at the Richmond Hotel. A record breaking number of girls left school to be with their mothers on Mothers' Day.

Pi Kappa Alpha Dance

Dancing at the Pi Kappa Alpha Dance which was attended by active and alumni members of the fraternity from the five chapters in the state were Frances Britton, Kitty Roberts, Elsie Dodd, Vera Ebel, Marjorie Robertson and Ethel Burgess.

V. P. I. Ring Dance

Flashing "dear" favors, withered corsages and deep eye-circles, Mary Ethel Barnes, Marie Hale, Louise Cunningham, Jane Holland, Mary Elizabeth Marshburn and Frances Yester returned from a grand and glorious week-end at V. P. I.

W. and L. House Parties

"You and the night and the music"—combined to make the A. T. O. and Phi Kappa Sigma house parties at Washington and Lee seem a howling success to Elizabeth Butler, Marjorie Wicks, Betty Fagg, Nancy Seliman, Frances Hudgins and Chic Dortch.

Richmond Operas

Misses Grace Eubank and Grace Allen Pittard attended the operas in Richmond this week-end.

Hollins May Day

Ruth Sears spent the past week-end at Hollins College where she attended the May Day exercises held there Saturday.

Week-end Guests

Margaret Britton and Alma Butterworth were the week-end guests of Elizabeth Hardy at her home in Kenbridge.

Clara Nottingham accompanied Alpha Lee Garnett to her home in Richmond where they spent the week-end.

Mary Ellen Pate and Anna Crump Shifflett visited Mrs. T. W. Shifflett at Palmyra.

Nan Throckmorton spent the week-end with Mrs. J. H. Irby at Blackstone.

Student Council Picnic

Miss Mary White Cox entertained the old and new members of the student council and the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet at a picnic, on the lawn at Longwood, Monday afternoon.

Other guests were: Miss Camper, Miss Winnie Hinlyr, Miss Royal, and Mrs. Warren.

A delicious picnic supper was enjoyed on the lawn, after which games were played, and a story ready by Miss Royal.

JONGLEURS PRESENT "CAPTAIN APPLEJACK"

roles by Lawrence Wood as the not-too-clever villainess and by Frank Ripberger as Applejohn's charming ward. The other two feminine parts were remarkably well done by A. D. Watkins and Page Burton.

Other masculine roles were interestingly interpreted by Russell Fox as the villain, C. R. Lacy and Alvin Farhner as two crooks, E. H. Gartrell as the old family servant, Dave White as Johnny Jason, high pressure salesman, and several pirates.

The Chapel Committee wishes to announce that hereafter all Chapel excuses must be in by Saturday before the Tuesday on which notes come out. No excuses will be accepted later than that date. Four unexcused absences from Chapel automatically give one week's campus. Chapel excuses with no seat numbers and rows will not be accepted.

Three Organizations Hold Spring Banquet

Thirteen students of French, members of Beta Pi Theta and pledges for the coming year, together with Miss Smithey, Miss Draper and Miss Nickols met in the Tea Room for a banquet on Monday evening, May 11.

Jess Holland, president of the French Honor Society for 1936-37, acted as hostess to the guests opening the conversation in French.

The following girls who are candidates for membership were guests of the fraternity: Merial McAllister, Edith Hammock, Alice Grainger, Mary Elizabeth Minor, Madeline McGlothlin and Lois Vassar.

Kappa Delta Pi Banquet

The Beta Epsilon Chapter of Kappa Delta Pi gave a banquet at Longwood Friday night May 8, at 6:30.

The speaker of the evening, Judge Rose MacDonald was introduced by Dr. Jarman. Doris Moore acted as toastmistress. Miss MacDonald is Judge of the Juvenile Court of Clark County. The theme of her talk was "The New Philosophy."

Other guests present were Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary, Mrs. Holton, Mrs. Wynne and Miss Redd.

Class Notes

Senior Class

At the Senior Class meeting held last night the class song was practiced and Mrs. Watkins requested that the seniors notify her as soon as they secured a contract for a position next fall. Songs for Senior Song Day, to be held on May 23, were practiced and also songs for Senior Chapel to be held the following Saturday. Plans were made for Class Day Exercises.

Freshman Class

At the regular freshman class meeting held in the "rec" Tuesday night a short business session was held. Elsie Dodd read the report of the treasury. Marguerite Blackwell and Pattie Bounds were unanimously reelected to serve on the Student Standards Committee for next year. The class decided to hold a class picnic at Longwood, and a committee was appointed to make the arrangements for it. Vera Ebel and Jane Branch were elected chairmen of Rat Court for next fall.

College High School Seniors Hold Court Scene Wednesd'y

The senior class of College High School, under the instruction of Doris Coates, carried out a court scene on Wednesday, May 13, as one activity in their study of "our state and local governments."

Sophomores Entertain Sister Class in Night Club Style

lovely night club lady, singing two numbers in her melodious voice. Gi-Gi Yonce captivated all hearts with a song and dance number, proving herself decidedly more sophisticated than our Betty Butterworth who was, nevertheless, delightful with her baby "doings". Virginia Agee, Nancy Pobst, and Anne Johnson were a popular trio and thrilled the audience with their "Night and Day". That rhythm chorus from the sophomore production once more pleased its audience in full costume. Betty Fagg with her low-down voice and Gwen Bell with her twinkling toes were the freshman contribution. The whole audience was happy when Grace Eubank agreed to sing once more. It is generally agreed that she's no amateur.

During the show, the "rhythm gals" passed sandwiches, punch, and mints. When the show was over, lights snapped on, and everyone went into a dance. The tenthirty bell had rung long before, so the party soon broke up. Reluctantly, seniors and sophomores departed—pronouncing the party a grand success!

Book Review

Week-End Make Believe

By Yale Kenny

Modern advertising has discovered that the camera speaks louder than words, and fiction writers are now busily glorifying the commercial model. Out of the agency catalogue comes the heroines, all their measurements on record and all their charms in focus. Here is the story of Kay Borden, who usually posed by the hour, but found it more interesting to pose by the week-end on a strictly business basis. She agreed to pretend to be engaged to one of the guests at a house party. The amusing whys and the unexpected wherefores we leave to Mr. Kenny.

Spring Dance Frocks Portray Airy Models

Cotillion is practically here—much to everyone's excitement and happiness. It's our biggest, most swellegant affair, and for it, we must do ourselves "right". Cotillion means: the atmosphere—happy; the music—plenty good; the date—"true love" from home; the dress—the loveliest we've had this year. At Cotillion we'll probably see these following or variations of them—

White silk muclin printed with bright bouquets and tied at the waist and neck with extremely becoming girlish knots of velvet ribbons. Breezy organzas, flower-printed in rain-washed pastels, over bright organized slips.

Linens—especially in shamrock green—cut high in front, low in back, and belted with bright patent leather. Tunics—which are all the rage: slim skirts of crepe and flaring tunics of heavy shantung; tunics in bright flowered printed taffeta, flaring over clinging fine-pleated skirts.

Chiffon, yards of it—in beautiful pastels, gorgeous flowers—shirred skirts, gathered full in the back.

Laces — stiffly starched — in white and pastels. There are ruffles at the square-cut neckline that are beautiful with dainty pearls.

Nets and Tulles—they are "the" thing. Black, gray, brown, white and pastels; modest necklines, airy baloons topping long, tight sleeves; tucked bodices, and, last but not least, the yards and yards that swirl and eddy about the feet. Bits of ribbon—grograin or velvet—brighten waistlines, necklines and sleeves.

Won't it be lovely? In these gorgeous new creations, our girls will resemble flowers in the garden that the gym is to be.

our campus.

Lunch was served at 12:15 in the basement of the church. Everyone enjoyed the delicious meal and the songs which were led by Mr. Harry Philpott of Washington and Lee University.

Discussions of B. S. U. Installation Services led by Miss Camilla Cole of Averett College, The Fall Retreat on the Local Campus, Averett, and the 1936 State Convention, by Mr. Walter Lawton, Washington and Lee University, made up the afternoon session, which closed with B. S. U. Promotion Methods by Mr. Franck Chaffer, University of Virginia.

The colleges represented at the Retreat were Harrisonburg, East Radford, Fredericksburg and Farmville State Teachers Colleges, Averett, William and Mary, V. P. I., Oak Hill, Washington and Lee, Richmond and Virginia Universities.

One girl analyzing the college man describes his interests in the follow lists: 1. Himself; 2. himself; 3. himself; 4. athletics; 5. football; 6. making merry; 7. himself; 8. himself.

Hot Weather Brings Pleas for Iced Tea

All over the dining room we see signs of her—there seems to be at least one at every table—the iced tea addict. Although they differ greatly in height, weight, and coloring there is one unmistakable trait—all of this species are exercisers. And here again, be the exercise five mile (never less) hikes or three sets of good fast tennis, the symptoms are uniform—a flushed countenance, a certain fanatical gleam of the eye.

The exerciser comes into the dining room at a steady purposeful gait and seats herself at the table. Methodically she looks the table over with a "I will hope for the best" expression. "Well, I bet we have iced tea today," she says, looking at the other accupants of the table. The others play up to her childlike expectation; agreeing heartily that today is a simply perfect day for iced tea. Gratified, the addict sinks back into her chair and becomes silent.

Desperately the other girls' glances dart, first to the kitchen, from which the iced tea must come, then to the head table from which the signal to rise and give grace (which means that all hope must be abandoned) is given.

Slowly the minutes pass . . . tick, tock, tick, tock . . . No tea appears in pitchers clinking with cool ice . . . tick, tock . . . and the signal to rise reverberates through the dining room.

Fearfully the girls glance at the iced tea addict. She rises stiffly and mumbles through numb lips the blessing then sits down again.

Turning to one of the girls she says gallantly, a ghost of a smile playing around her lips, "If, it's not too much trouble, I'd like a cup of (she wipes her forehead with a bandana handkerchief) hot tea."

Sport Slants

This seems to be the time of year when every sport lover craves the great out of doors.

The athletic field and the tennis courts are occupied every afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock and from all appearances spring has done its duty.

At last the period of hibernation is over.

Baseball at present is a very popular game and all those interested in taking part in their class games we urge to get their required number of practices up—class games will be held Thursday 14 and Friday 15, and six practices are required to take part in class baseball games.

Lacrosse, one of our newer sports has been causing quite a lot of excitement and has afforded a great deal of enjoyment for all those going out for it.

If this game is unknown to you just remember that we are all learning—so come out and learn with us. Three practices are required in order to take part in the class games which will be the 20th.

Field and track are well under way and broad jumping, high jumping, shot put, etc., are just the cure for sore and aching muscles.

50 percent of the practices are required in order to take part in the class meet the 18th. Come out and support your class.

All those interested in learning the art of the bow and arrow come out for achery instruction on Friday afternoons. It's surprising how useful a bow and arrow can be at times. Watch the sport schedule for archery instruction and practice up during your vacant periods.

Tennis, tennis, tennis—

I'll meet you at the tennis court at 5:30 A. M.—Don't be late or we won't be able to get a court.

Can you imagine anything as surprising as seeing even some of our seniors walking down the hall with a tennis racquet in hand at 5:30 in the morning?

Just such things have been happening and we are wondering if they are trying to lose their excess weight or whether they are trying to work up an appetite—who knows? Maybe they are practicing up for the final tennis matches—

There will be a tennis trophy awarded to the winner of singles and there is an old saying "Practice makes perfect."

Question: Will green and white or red and white be on the color cup next year?

Answer—? (Only time will tell).

May Day Reappears In Take-off Sing

Sing Saturday night presented a take-off on May Day which caused a great roar from the student body. Lib Harris gave a modern conception of bondage with that popular song "Tormented" after which Claire Eastman, Dorothy Buckland and Libby Roberts, representing the people gave a very graceful dance. Margaret Fraley, attired in a pink bath-robe and pajamas, came gliding in to represent Domain of Night, which was followed by Virginia Doughty and Caroline Upshur's presentation of the fire and water ritual. Lelia Sanford's take off on Mary Alice Glass, the court jester, caused quite a bit of laughter which subsided when Mary Ellen Pate gave a representation of defense. Lelia proclaimed the coming of the Queen, Susan Gresham, who, attired in a gown of white broadcloth (perhaps snatched from someone's bed) and carrying her royal staff, the broom, took her seat on the throne and was crowned by the court jester with a beautiful golden lampshade which seemed to be slightly large but rested very well on Susan's nose. After the coronation came the dance of rejoicing by Betty Butterworth with that ever famous "Wa Hoo!" Dorothy Lewis gave a modern version of freedom by singing "Let Yourself Go" and then going into a fast tap which capped the climax and caused all the girls to leave the auditorium saying: "Wasn't that cute?"

Rotunda Reverberations

Wasn't last week-end good?—Most of us went home for Mother's Day—It sure was good being there, but I'm afraid some of those mothers' pocketbooks suffered . . . There's Will Scott with a new dress on today . . . And Valla Nimmo started back with a new hat . . . (What could have happened to it?) . . . Many more new evening dresses hang in the dear lassies' closets waiting to be worn Saturday night . . . And as for the fine "woman-hater" at H.-S. . . . Well, I believe if he were caught unaware with one of these girls in her new finery he'd cease to hate . . . but then hate is one form of jealousy . . .

Most of the girls who didn't go home went to the different schools for dances . . . Some of our girls didly with their "line" but others like "Chic" didn't do so well . . . After thinking she was right in the band her date merely said, "I'd like to have you up for finals but . . . I'm not going to be here" . . . Down tumbled all of "Chic's" plans . . . On the other hand Kitty Roberts seems to have done mighty fine by herself . . . wish we could say as much for Lucy P. . . the poor thing went to a dance after eating onions . . . did she do any good? . . . no.

The poor ole girls who have been skipping away for week-ends and asking every handsome boy to cotillion are now in a storm . . . "Do you have an extra boy bid?" . . . Poor Zell . . . then there are some who don't even have a date like poor Martha Glenn . . .

We hear that some of the H.-S. boys are forming a tree-sitting contest or should we say balcony climbing contest? . . . Soon they'll be sending military forces to help the girls enjoy the privacy of their own rooms . . .

Why must some girls be so gullible? . . . The poor little ones who believe they have talked a young gentleman against the terrible Vices of today . . . see their dreams crumbling down to earth with all those dances going on out there, and then the girl who runs after him until he is forced to stay seven miles out.

S. T. C. as a whole is interested in knowing . . . Why did Lib Harris receive a Mother's Day Card? . . . Why Grace Eubank didn't have a good time at Tantilla . . . Why Minnie Smith is in such a horrible humor . . . Why a certain whistle comes most every night under a certain girl's window . . . Why the boys of H.-S. are always in such a hilarious mood after one of their banquets . . . Why it is so necessary to go to Chapel . . .

The arrival of the German airship, Hindenberg, at Lakehurst, N. J., Saturday, completed her crossing from Fredrickshafen in sixty-three and one-half hours.

Winthrop-S. T. C. Debate Ends Season

Levy rated first and Marjorie Thompson second. Marjorie Thompson of Welch, West Virginia spoke of "Our Heritage". "It Can't Be Done" by Elizabeth Haw of Timberland, S. C. followed. Virginia Walker, Greenville, S. C. used as her subject "The New Pioneer." "Peace" furnished a topic for Gertrude Levy, New York City.

Honorable J. Taylor Thompson, Mr. Tucker Doyne, and the Rev. Mr. Gardner, all of Farmville, served as judges of the oratorical contest.

After the decisions were rendered the Debate Club members assisted by Mrs. Laine entertained the visiting debaters, the judges and the faculty members at a reception in the Lounge. Slyvia Somers, a member of the Debate Club sang "Bottom Ma Belle". To the enjoyment of all Mr. Doyne gave several of his own poems. Margaret Pollard, former president of the Debate Club, presented Dr. Walmsley a gift in appreciation of his valuable services as debate coach. In recognition of Margaret Pollard's services in Debate Club work, Anthelia Robinette, the new president of the club, presented her with a gift.

This contest marks the end of the appearance in debating of three of our seniors—Louise Francis, Margaret Pollard, and Agnes Bondurant. Margaret and Agnes have won the highest honor in Pi Kappa Delta, and are entitled to wear the diamond keys of that fraternity. Louise Francis and Dudley Allen have participated in and won the number of debates required for their diamond keys, but lack one year of intercollegiate debating to attain this honor. Louise came to S. T. C. as a Junior and in that time has shown her great ability and in forensic activities has upheld the fine record of S. T. C.

Winning both the debates and the oratorical contest brought a victorious close to the work of the Debate Club of S. T. C. for this season.

Parker Pen Dealers Enjoy Sales Increase

With the announcement of an 18 per cent increase in sales for the first quarter of 1936 over a similar period last year, officials of the Parker Pen Company are looking forward to an even greater sales improvement for the balance of the year. As evidenced by the number and size of new orders received, Parker Pen dealers are enjoying one of the most profitable years in the history of the company.

In commenting on the sharp improvement in first quarter sales, C. L. Frederick, Vice-President, said: "We believe there are a number of factors that are contributing to the success of the Parker line. An important one is the fact that about 50 million pens in people's pockets are obsoleted by Parker's new sacless Vacumatic Pen with its scientific "breather tube" and revolutionary diaphragm filler. This pen holds 102 per cent more ink than old-style pens without increase in size.

"Another reason is that there has developed a decided trend toward the purchase of useful and practical articles for Easter, Confirmation, Mother's Day, Graduation and other gift-saving occasions. And since gift purchases make up an important part of our business, this has had a stimulating effect.

"Then too, we believe that the Parker advertising that has appeared continuously for the past four years has done a double job. We know that it produced immediate sales results; now we feel that it has had an accumulative effect that is reflecting itself to our advantage. In other words, where our advertising has impressed thousands so that they went out and bought Parker Vacumatic Pens, it also impressed other thousands who were not ready to buy because of economic conditions. Now, with improved times, they have returned to the pen market and are buying the pen they've wanted for months or years."

art. A third lecture on the difference between color in light and in pigment was illustrated with a colored movie.

The participants in the convention had the opportunity to see exhibits on display. Among these were all phases of art in the New York public schools, the work of teaching high school commercial children from all over the world in finger painting and frescal (at Rockefeller Center), representative exhibits of selected art schools of the east, a modern museum featuring abstract art from 1910 to 1936—from cubism to constructionism, and a visit to the Design Laboratory of the Federal Art Project under WPA for students unable to attend any other art school. In the later project many talented students are having a rare privilege of association with well-known artists

CONGRATULATIONS TO VIRGINIAN STAFF

Volume XVI. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, MAY 20, 1936 No. 29

Staff Distributes 1936 Year Book To Student Body

Arrival of Virginian Brings Excitement to Campus

On Thursday, May 14, the 1936 Virginian made its appearance on our campus. The eagerly awaited yearbook was distributed to the largest number of subscribers in years.

The new Virginian is a complete innovation over anything we have ever had, and is a success in the eyes of the student body, as well as outsiders. The new arrangement of classes, organizations, and activities in exact chronological order rather than in the conventional order has been approved as more logical and more interesting.

Among the original features of the book are the pages of "class superlatives" and the new senior pictures and write-ups, which merit special mention as a step toward more complete democracy. It is observed with interest and appreciation that instead of pages of advertisements in the back of the book, ads are scattered among the snapshots, making many more attractive pictures to enjoy.

It is agreed that the Virginian staff under the leadership of Lelia Sanford has established a standard of excellence which will try succeeding staffs.

The new staff, under the guidance of Virginia Baker, has begun work on the plans for the 1937 annual. Miss Foster has been chosen as an adviser to replace Miss Jennings whose other duties forced her to resign recently.

Leadership Groups Meet In Carolina

Alpha Kappa Gamma Holds Spring Meeting

On Friday, May 15, the national officers and old and new heads of Alpha Kappa Gamma held the first annual spring meeting to make plans for the coming year, at Chapel Hill, N. C. National officers from the Joan Circle, included Miss Florence H. Stubbs, executive secretary, Miss Jane Royall, vice-president and Florence Sanford, editor of the Torchbearer, attended the meeting, accompanied by Tac Waters and Virginia Leonard as old and new presidents.

The meeting was held at Chapel Hill, the home of the new Alpha Kappa Gamma circle, the Athenians. They were in the midst of May Day activities, the first to be held at the University of North Carolina, and sponsored by the Athenian circle.

Plans for next year include those for the national convention. It will be held at Queens-Chicora College, Charlotte, N. C., November 13-15, 1936. The theme of the convention will be in the form of a problem which will be worked out in various ways by the circles. The problem is "Over-organization of Schools".

Miss Jane Royall, as vice-president, is working on an Alpha Kappa Gamma handbook which will be published some time during the coming summer.

Scholarship Lapses At WilliamsCollege

Student Exchange To Germany Is Dropped

(By Associated Collegiate Press)

Williamstown, Mass.— German students coming to this country with "certificates of political responsibility" are not wanted at Williams College, and the institution's system of exchange scholarships with Germany will be allowed to lapse in June.

German students rigidly committed to the principles of nazism cannot hope to gain much from a consideration of American political thought, said President Tyler Dennett in making the announcement.

"One of the indispensable conditions for study in an American college is an open mind," he asserted. "It seems unlikely that anyone who is officially committed to any political program to the point where he is not at liberty to change his mind as to the rightness or wrongness of a governmental system would profit by what an American college has to offer.

"It is hardly likely that anyone so handicapped would be benefitted here. We do not select our scholarship recipients in that way.

Woman's Club Sends Work for Criticism

The Woman's Club of El Dorado, Arkansas, has sent a group of original productions to this college to be judged and criticized. The English department has assumed the responsibility for choosing the winners. The compositions include adult poetry, adult short stories, and adult compositions. The prizes will be in the three groups respectively, while the poetry group will have a first and second prize, and honorable mention.

Harry Reser's Eskimos Play For Spring Cotillion Dances

Lights! Laughter! Gay voices! A blare of music! Shuffling feet! Swaying bodies! In other words, spring cotillion has arrived. Girls are wild. Cars drive up and are greeted by hysterical shouts and a mad dash of S. T. C. inmates. Alumnae stroll in and out of the hotel followed by the envious eyes of undergraduates. Telegrams, bringing sad news from people who can't come to disappointed girls, line the home office mantle.

Goats have at last returned to normal in dress and feelings. Miss Mary is stampeded with eager girls demanding permission to go in every direction. Green boxes with florists names on them arrive. Girls crowd around hopefully. The lucky ones pounce upon the boxes and eagerly investigate the fragrant contents. The phone peals out constantly. Maids are on the run, delivering messages and showing young men in.

The dansant is on. It is queer to be dancing in broad day-light. But it's fun! Some girls wear hats and gloves. Some ignore these encumbrances. Two or three are sweet in long dresses. All are displaying new models; all are exotic.

Those who do not have invitations to dine out are late arriving in the dining room. Appetites have disappeared. They eat what little they can manage in great gulps.

The grand ball is on. The gym is resplendent under a canopy of spider web with the spider himself in the center glaring on the innocent dancers below. The music is superb. Light are dim. It is hot, but no one cares. Martha Nottingham and Grace Eubank look gorgeous as they lead old members through the impressive figure. It is perfect, but even perfect things must end.

The crowd seems enormous on the steps. Each couple wonders if it will ever get out. With a little impatience on the part of those in authority, the boys don't linger long. At last it is all over. Feet hurt; dresses are crushed, but no one goes straight to bed. Lights burn far into the night as every little detail is gone over. Finally, all is said that can be said. Weary girls stumble to bed without removing makeup. How good the clean sheets feel! Sleep is a great blessing, but wasn't the dance swell—?

Journalism School AnnouncesPulitzer Winner at Banquet

"Honey in the Horn" By H. L. Davis Wins Prize

The Pulitzer Prize winners were anounced on May 4, at the annual alumni Dinner and Dance of the Columbia School of Journalism, or as it is better known, the Pulitzer Prize Dinner.

At the time the fiction award was given for "Honey in the Horn" by H. L. Davis.

H. L. Mencken says of "Honey in the Horn": "Beautifully written . . . of really extraordinary merit . . . begins to glow with joy on the very first page. The noble old quality of gusto here returns to the American novel its high voltage . . . He has little to learn from most of his contemporaries."

In a review of "Honey in the Horn" in THE SATURDAY REVIEW, Basil Davenport wrote: "It is no book to be read in haste, for it contains a world . . . a whole ruffian world of pioneers . . . the world of Oregon just before the railroads reached it."

The NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW says: "Honey in the literary horn! A kind of American

Watch for the sale of Foolscap. It will be distributed on Wednesday night, May 20, by Elsie Cabell, Evelyn Massey, and other members of the business staff of the Rotunda. You can't go wrong.

S. T. C. Professors Will Give Lectures For C. C. C. Group

Citizenship Problems Will Be Basis For Talks

Three professors of State Teachers College, Farmville, have been extended invitations to aid Mr. Farmer, educational adviser of CCC Camp at Crewe, Virginia, by presenting individual talks to the boys in camp.

Those professors who have been chosen for this work are Dr. Francis Simkins, who will speak on the "Problems of Citizenship" May 19; Mr. McCorkle, whose speech at the present is not completed, and Dr. George Jeffers, whose plans are indefinite because of his work on a commencement address to be delivered at Prospect.

Mr. Farmer feels that these talks, as well as his own lectures and plans, will impress upon the boys the need of an education to better citizenship, or will make them realize that each one has a definite place to fill in their community.

Red and White Wins With 22-10 Score In Baseball Game Thurs.

The Sophomore-Freshman baseball game was played off Thursday, May 14, and "Red and White" proved victorious with a final score of 22-10. The game was seven innings in length, and each team played hard and fast. Good sportsmanship seemed characteristic of each player, and the game was a fitting climax to the many days spent in practice.

The winning of this game scores one up for the Red and Whites, and the race is on for the color cup. Tennis, Archery, Lacrosse and Track are yet to come, so the rivalry is keen.

Mr. Coyner umpired the game Thursday, with Kathleen Ranson umpiring the bases. Miss Iler was official score keeper.

The line-ups for the game were as follows:

Freshman Team	Soph. Team
L. Marsh	E. Marsh
E. Conyers	I. Chappel
V. W. Smith	J. Callis

Sigma Pi Rho Bids Two New Members

Organization Chooses Milby President For '36-'37

Sigma Pi Rho, national honorary fraternity for Latin, has issued bids to Ruth Phelps and Libby Morris to become members of its organization. This honorary fraternity recognizes only students with junior standing or above in Latin, and high scholarship in that subject. It especially fosters interest in the classics.

These two girls were initiated on Wednesday night at the regular meeting in the Honor Room. After the initiation ceremony the group elected officers for the following year. Those elected were as follows: Katherine Milby, president; Libby Morris, vice-president; Sara Buchanan, secretary; and Ruth Phelps, treasurer.

Sigma Pi Rho, and Sodalitas Latina, the Latin Club, have taken as their project for the coming year the stimulating of interest in classics throughout this college, and the cooperating of the Latin department with the other department groups. This project will be put on in the form of programs and plays taken directly from, or based on, the classics.

Membership to Sodalitas Latina is open not only to students of Latin, but to anyone who has classical interests.

Straw-Vote Shows Collegiate Attitude

Pi Kappa Delta Has Delegates Vote at Convention

At the Pi Kappa Delta convention, held in Houston, Texas, last month, a straw vote was taken on subjects of national interest as well as collegiate customs. Some of the most interesting of the results of the voting were those relating to the national problems. The vote was 159 to 74 against the proposal that Congress be given the power to over-ride by a two-thirds vote decisions of the Supreme Court declaring acts of Congress unconstitutional. The vote was 176 to 39 that the unconstitutionality of the New Deal merely indicates that the constitution should be amended to provide for amending of that document with greater facility, rather than that the Roosevelt administration has deliberately attempted to "place the Supreme Court in a bad light."

159 as contrasted with 62 favored the philosophy of government underlying the activities of the Roosevelt administration, but out of the group 85 declared their intention of voting the Republican ticket, as against 125 who favored the Democratic ticket. In choosing which of the aspirants for the Republican nomination they thought

Jeffers and Pollard Address High School

Two personages of Farmville S. T. C. have been honored by being chosen to address the graduates of high schools in the state, to. Dr. Jeffers and Margaret Pollard.

Dr. Jeffers has been asked to give the Commencement address at the Prospect High School this month.

Margaret Pollard has been selected to appear on the program at Amelia High School Commencement. She is a graduate of that high school herself.

Appomattox High Has Dr. Jarman For Finals Talk

College Orchestra Plays Selections For Exercises

On Monday night, May 18, Dr. J. L. Jarman delivered the Commencement address at the Appomattox Agricultural High School graduation exercises. At that time the Farmville S. T. C. Orchestra played several selections.

Dr. Jarman's address to the graduating class was on the subject of "Good Citizenship" in rural communities, in town, in city, and in the state. He pointed to the illustrious heritage that the present generation has from the founders of our glorious state, and urged that it be upheld and built upon.

The College orchestra played our Alma Mater; the Largo from Xerxes, by Handel; Selections from the Merry Widow, Lehr; The Old Clock; and March in D., Bach.

On Thursday afternoon the orchestra will play for the alumnae tea to be held at the college.

Is One Day Enough?

With considerably less lavish adornment than we bestow on the Fourth of July, Music Week, and any of our numerous other holidays, we set aside one day, May 18, of each year, call it Good Will Day, and consider then we may well turn to other matters with the feeling of a task completed when we have mentioned it in the class room or have perhaps gone so far as to present a program about it.

Yet we have seen the sordid drama of international conflict as it is being written anew by diplomacy and dictated by business. We know that the great problem of war and peace involves publicity and education whereby the will to peace may be aroused in all nations. We know that there must be "disarmament of the mind," and this is only possible through reliable information about the real significance of war and efforts toward international understanding and fellow feeling.

Only one day in the year do we mark on our calendars as Good Will Day; but if we could go forth as students—as teachers—hearing always a great bugle sounding, not taps, but the cry for a new type of education that will bring genuine internationalism; then we might write, 'Good Will Toward Men," across our entire calendars, across our age!

On Being Late

"Better late than never" runs the old adage, but there are many who disagree. "Punctuality is a virtue to be sought after, and impromptness a vice to be abhored" might express the views of a large group of persons who wince when a meeting or class is in full session, and the habitual laggard opens a creaky door, and stumbles to her seat dropping her notebook as she does so, knocking a book off her neighbors chair and causing general confusion, while the patient professor resignedly picks up his record book and marks her present. By that time the class has recovered, five or six minutes have been lost, and the trend of thought has to be begun all over again.

Tardiness is merely a habit. There are some students who are always in their places on time, and others who make it a practice to come late. It's just as easy to be on time as to be late—trite, but true. Five minutes will usually make up the difference. Five minutes can change the hurrying, ruffled lagging student into a serene, poised one.

Isn't the time worth the peace of mind which your promptness will bring to you and to those who must associate with you?

Whether everyone knows it or not there is a ruling at S. T. C. to the effect that three class tardies count as one unexcused absence. Most of our genial faculty do not enforce this rule, but if they did, it might be the means of encouraging habits of punctuality that their students would later be thankful to have attained. Should those of us who have Puritan ancestors ask for the enforcement of this rule?

The Truth Shall Make You Free?

To teach or not to teach the facts about communism, fascism, and socialism in the public schools is a debatable question with a large number of Americans. In fact, a recent poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates that 62 per cent of the citizens voting favor such instruction while 38 per cent oppose it. It is also true that under the laws of the District of Columbia each teacher before receiving her monthly salary, must declare that she has not taught or advocated "communism, in or out of the classroom, since the last pay day."

It is difficult for the college student to imagine a classroom where the revealing facts in certain subjects is omitted because of fear of "Red" instigation. The citizen of the college community in most cases has lost a provincial attitude and rather believes in knowing the truth that the truth might make him free.

However the fact that 38 per cent of the people in the United States still believes that keeping the 'ugly" truth under cover will prevent the masses from following evil doctrines indicates that as future teachers, we must guard against tactless presentation of the truth. There are times when teachers who wish to eat their bread and butter cannot afford to call a "spade a spade." But that is no reason why the teacher cannot enlighten children by tactful explanation of the truths of governments other than our own that exist in the world.

Modern Highways

In pioneer days there were few roads, and those were very narrow. There was no necessity for width, because the only means of transportation was either walking, riding horseback, or bumping along in carts and wagons. Trees grew up to the edge of the roads, and wild vines, hanging down, hid the curves from view.

Today there is a need for more roads and better roads. No longer will the narrow one of colonial times suffice. With the inventions of cars and buses there has to be a widening of the existing roads and those new ones have to be made wide from the beginning. Especially is there a need for the clearance of vines and shrubs from the curves. If they're allowed to grow and hide comers from view, this too may be a cause for accidents.

One has only to drive through the different states of the Union to know what some of the winding macadam, brick, and other hard-surfaced roads will not do for the fast traffic of today. In Pennsylvania, especially, one sees the need for better roads, since some of the state roads were designed for thirty-mile-an-hour traffic.

It is time for each state to turn its thoughts to the roads within it, and to the safety of the people who travel the roads.

Open Forum

Dear Editor:

Why do we have to clap every time we are served a new dessert or something else we like? Not only do we all clap, but we also yell and make noises in various ways. This is not at all necessary. Who do you would do that in your own home? Who would act in such a manner when the guest of another? The idea would not occur to any of you under those circumstances. Why should it here in school? School is our home for nine months, and we should keep that in mind.

Not only is there an excess of noises on the day we have surprises but also it is at practically every meal. Only on those days when over half of the students are not at the meal is our dining-hall quiet enough for each of us to enjoy our meal. Those of us there at that time are thankful we have been able to eat one meal in peace. It seems at that time of the day everyone forgets that she is a young lady. All decide to talk as loudly as possible, even decide to yell and scream.

We, as future teachers, will be called upon to keep the lunch room. Then we shall realize, if we haven't before, how the din keeps us from enjoying the meal. How can we expect students to do as we did not do in college, and still be provoked when they don't do right? We then must realize that we are their idols, and that if we act one way that they feel as if they can also. Can we set examples that should be followed if we still retain those habits we acquired in college? Bad habits when once formed are very hard to change.

From now on let each of us turn over a new leaf and promise not to make any unnecessary noises in the dining-room. Let us all observe the rules of the games as we would in tennis or golf. We can all give silent thanks or thank those who give us the delightful surprises individually.

Rotunda Reverberations

Boy! wern't the dances good? Did you notice how everybody behaved so well? Even the faculty seemed to enjoy it. And the orchestra was of the finest. Our fair damsels really looked swell. Did you fail to recognize some of the "goats" at the dance? After these days of going without makeup even the ugliest duckling looked like a blushing bride. But though, with all the fine dresses and beautiful posies we should have improved.

Us poor women have an awful time . . . Poor Carter Belle had to change dresses two minutes before the dance . . . Virginia Leonard's date left for home immediately after the dance. Consequently no Sunday dinner for Virginia . . . Why must Kitty Fitz hate baseballs so? . . . Sue Mallory thought she was going to a lovely dinner party but—she didn't . . . Martha surely can't think what's wrong with her . . . men just won't fall . . . And there's "Tib" Simmerman whose eyes watered during the entire dance.

Kitty Roberts has gone out for tennis in a big way—Why? . . . But nothing can compare with Julia Anne Waldo singing "Rabbit, My Rabbit" and Bess McGlothlin fixing the upholstery for her best beau's car—wonder if she does that for all the boys?

What are we going to do in June? This is a favorite topic of conversation among the girls . . . There's Tom, Dick, and Harry at home but—they all have new girls. Almost wish we weren't going home . . . Here's a letter like some of us would like to write:

Dearest Beloved,

In my heart a war is approaching. You must decide between us or death will play a prominent part in my college life. You must choose now! So that love can take its course. I hope to see you in June. You must wear a white rose the ninth if you have decided in my favor.

Hope to see you at the station—

Congratulations to the officers of Cotillion, the faculty, Gamma Psi and the Student body for making it possible to have such a lovely dance.

SENIOR PERSONALITIES

Elizabeth Walton

Congeniality, a keen sense of humor, and unsurpassable intellect radiate from the personality of the versatile "Toot" Walton. Her friendly manner and her willingness to share her store of knowledge have helped many a trembling student the day before a test. "Toot's" coach classes really are grand.

When "Toot" entered Farmville she began to work and has faithfully done so her four years here. She has worked on the Rotunda staff as both feature editor and proof reader. As a Junior she served the Virginian as literary editor. She has also been a member of the Dramatic Club, Granddaughter's Club, Chapel Committee, and Le Cercle Francais.

For two years she served on the Membership Alumnae Committee of the Y. W. C. A. In her Senior year she became secretary of that organization.

"Toot" is not only a member of Pi Gamma Mu, Kappa Delta Pi, Beta Pi Theta and Alpha Phi Sigma, but she has also held offices in these organizations, being president of Alpha Phi Sigma her junior year. In her senior year her leadership ability was recognized and she was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma.

It will seem strange next year not to be able to come in contact with one whose wit and good humor have made life here at Farmville so enjoyable.

Intercollegiate News

Martha's the name in case you are looking for one of the officers of students organizations at Pennsylvania College for Women. Four girls named Martha won out in the recent elections of next year's campus leaders: Martha Netting, Martha Bright, Martha Jane Gerwig and Martha Potter.

We've just been hearing about the young collegian in the University of California at Los Angeles. He bought a very expensive make of automobile. In four months he had paid out a big bill in repair expenses. That made him angry. He did this: on the side of the beautiful car he painted the words "This is the last 'blank' car I will ever buy. In four months it has cost me $300 in repairs". Then he proceeded to drive it slowly thru the business district and particularly in front of the "blank" agency. It was only a matter of hours before the agency bought the car back from him and took over all the repair bills.

A picture is worth a thousand words, and the real article itself is worth a thousand pictures, believes young Horace Sainsbury, member of a speech class at the University of Washington. The class was to prepare speeches explaining how various mechanical gadgets worked. Horace was to explain a corn popper. He did. He produced his electric popper, plugged in the wire, popped some corn, buttered it and served it to the class. They understood perfectly.

Monkeys are not socialists, but rugged individualists, says a University of Missouri psychologist. We are not quite sure what this proves.

Literary Column

Modern poetry of today has taken many trends—many variations—in rhyme, scheme, theme and expression. Robert P. Tristian Coffin's "Strange Holiness", the recent Pulitzer Prize winner heads the list. A poem from this group follows. Its title is "The Pheasant".

A pheasant cock sprang into view.
A living jewel, up he flew.
His wings laid hold on empty space,
Storm bulged his eyeballs out with grace.
He was a hymn from tail to beak
With not a tender note or meek
Then the gun let out its thunder.
The bird descended struck with wonder.
He ran a little, then, amazed,
Settled with his head upraised.
The fierceness flowed out of his eyes
And left them meek and large and wise.
Gentleness relaxed his head.
He lay in jewelled feathers, dead.

Other modern poems of miscellaneous types are popular today. Among them are: Cinquains

Fate Defied

As it were tissue of silver
I'll wear, O fate, thy grey,
And go mistily radiant, clad
Like the moon.

Night Winds

The old
Old winds that blew
When chaoc was, what do
They tell the clattered trees that I Should weep?

The Warning

Just now,
Out of the strange
Still dusk—as strange, as still—
A white moth flew—Why am I grown
So cold?

—Adelaide Crapsey

The Day Before April

The day before April
Alone, alone,
I walked in the woods
And sat on a stone.
I sat on a broad stone
And sang to the birds.
The tune was God's making
But I made the words.

—Mary Carolyn Davies

Idealist

Brother Tree:
Why do you reach and reach?
Do you dream some day to touch the sky?
Brother Stream:
Why do you run and run?
Do you dream some day to fill the sea?
Brother Bird:
Why do you sing and sing?
Do you dream—
Young Man:
Why do you talk and talk and talk?

—Alfred Kreymborg

You

Deep in the heart of me,
Nothing but You!
See through the art of me—
Deep in the heart of me
Find the best part of me,
Changeless and true.
Deep in the heart of me,
Nothing but You!

—Ruth Guthrie Harding

Little Things

There's nothing very beautiful and nothing very gay
About the rush of faces in the town by day,
But a light tan cow in a pale
green mead,
That is very beautiful, beautiful
indeed . . .
And the soft March wind and the low March mist
Are better than kisses in a dark street kissed . . .
The fragrance of the forest when it wakes at dawn,
The fragrance of a trim green
village lawn,
The hearing of the murmur of the rain at play—
These things are beautiful, beautiful as day!
And I shan't stand waiting for love or scorn
When the feast is laid for a day
new-born—
Oh, better let the litle things I loved when little
Return when the heart finds the great things brittle;
And better is a temple made of bark and throng
Than a tall stone temple that may stand too long.

—Orrick Johns

SOCIETY

S. T. C. Damsels Trip Off Hither and Yon

With oh! such lovely weather,
The S. T. C. girls got together
And planned to go so many places
That all over the state appeared their faces.
So now let's read and see
If their trips appeal to you and me.

St. Margaret's May Day

Nancy Sellman spent the past week-end in Richmond. Saturday she motored to St. Margaret's School to attend the May Day exercises at which her sister Rosalie was crowned May queen.

V. M. I. Hop

Is it the man, the uniform, the school or the dances that seem to attract Elsie Dodd to V. M. I., where she spent the past week-end and attended the First Class Hop?

W. & L. Houseparty

It there's not one girl at Washington and Lee from S. T. C., it's another. This week-end it was Jane Burke and Nan Throckmorton, who attended the Delta Tau Delta house party.

Severn Dances

After attending dances at most of the Virginia colleges, Elizabeth Butler decided to find out what those at New Jersey were like and so she went to Severn.

Homeward

With no particular excuse except to 'play' many of the S. T. C. girls scattered off to their homes in various spots. They were Jacqueline Beale, Ruth James, Cornelia Penn, Pauline Pearson Virginia Jarman, Evelyn Hastings, Eleanor Wood, Elizabeth Tindall, Virginia Simmons, Nannie Mae Parker, Ruby Blanton, Evelyn Holmes, Edith Hart, Mildred Lohr, Virginia Yager, Agnes Powell, Agnes Crockett, Annie Louise Jones, Edith Coffey, Margaret Drake, Thulia Park, Ann Hardy, Blanche Lane, Martha Hamlett, Lucy Smith, Elizabeth Conner, Eloise Williams, Elsie Cabell, Marguerite Byrd, Frances Thomas, Mary Elizabeth Minor.

Other Places

The girls who went to different towns for different reasons are: Kitty Chappell, Cecile Hyde, Rebecca Mayes, Louise Foster, Frances Faris, Cassie Boswell, Doris and Dot Adkins, Juanita Callis, Jesse Van Hook, Virginia Boyd, Inez Chappell, Mary Rives Black, Mary Harper, Adelaide Dressler, Louise Borden, Louise Eubank, Sue Adams, Lenoir Hubbard, Frances Hurt, Mary Evelyn Beale, Elsie Adsit, Eleanor Shackleton, Gladys Hendrickson, Louise Partridge, Janice Hart, Rachel Moseley, Virginia Tissue, Janet Curran, Edna Bolick, Elizabeth Wilkinson, Nancy Woodward, Margaret Via, Elizabeth Trent, Louise Turnes, Kathleen Twyford, Mildred Sydnor, Anthelia Robinette, Marjorie Robertson, Fannie Putney, Virginia Price, Margaret Pittard, Bessie Hart Powell, Anne McCready, India Martin, Elise Marshburn, Copeland Johnson, Lois Jenkins, Virginia Harvey, Virginia Hannah, Mary Hale, Frances Gaskins, Martha Gwaltney, Margaret Ferguson, Jane Dillon and Frances Collie.

Monogram Picnic

The old members of the Monogram Club entertained the new members with a picnic at Longwood Tuesday, May 19. The Monogram Club members left from the Rotunda at 4:30 and returned from Longwood at 7:00, after having spent a pleasant evening in feasting and playing games at the Athletic Association cabin.

Fifteen members of the club attended. Miss Iler, to whom the club owes much, made the occasion complete.

After the girls had eaten plentifully of hot dogs, apples, coca colas, popsicles, pickle and marshmallows, they met for a short business session.

Virginia Staff Banquet

The annual banquet of the Virginian Staff was held in the College Tea Room Tuesday night, May 19. The theme was carried out in the place cards which were tiny cameras with the pictures of each member in the lens. Characteristic gifts were given to the members, and farewell presents to the retiring officers.

Both old and new staffs were present, and Mr. and Mrs. McCorkle, Miss Lucille Jennings and Miss Nancy Foster.

After the banquet the old staff had a bon-fire to destroy all the data accumulated during the past year.

School Groups Give Banquets and Picnics

The society of Pi Gamma Mu gave an informal banquet at the college tea room May 14 at six o'clock.

Chic Dortch, the mistress of ceremonies introduced the program entitled "Cross Questions for members of Pi Gamma Mu."

The colors were attractively carried out in the favors which were bouquets of white and blue flowers. The candies were also white and blue.

The guests present were Mrs. Holton and Mrs. Walmsley.

Sigma Sigma Sigma Supper

Lucy Shields entertained the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority Friday, May 15 with a buffet supper. The supper was served in the garden of her home on High Street. Those present were the active members and pledges, and the following alumnae: Mrs. John Harwood, Mrs. Walter Putney, Mrs. William Dunnington, and Mrs. Broomfield.

Alpha Sigma Tau Party

Alpha Sigma Tau sorority entertained at Longwood Monday afternoon, May 18 with a picnic for its graduating members and to commemorate the first anniversary of its installation on the campus. Zeta Tau, which was the local sorority, became affiliated with the A. E. S. last May 18, 1935.

Clues were given the seniors, who had to hunt for their gifts, given by Miss Bedford and by the chapter. After this a delightful picnic plate was served on the lawn, with a huge cake with one candle upon it.

Among those preesnt were Miss Virginia Bedford, adviser and faculty member, Miss Mary Nichols, faculty member, Misses Jane Main and Mildred Chandler, alumnae, and the active members.

Gamma Psi Banquet

The regular spring banquet of Gamma Psi, the Art Fraternity, was held in the College Tea Room Tuesday night, May 12. The colors, purple and green, were carried out with candles and iris. The theme, Trees, was represented with miniature wooden trees as place cards and the toasts to the different members were the parts of the tree, as root, trunk, sap, and flowers.

Those attending the banquet were Miss Virginia Bedford, faculty adviser, Miss Mary Deihl, alumna, and the active members.

Miss Mary's Dinners

Miss Mary White Cox is giving a series of dinners in the Student Building lounge for the students from various parts of the state. Miss Jane Royall assists her in the entertainments.

On Tuesday night, May 12, girls from the following counties were entertained: Dinwiddie, Greenville, Rockingham, Page, Warren, Fauquier, Fairfax, Clarke, Arlington and Prince Edward.

After the meal, Virginia Leonard and Betty Butterworth entertained by singing popular songs. Edith Kaylor gave a reading.

The guests included Mrs. Watkins and Dr. Simkins.

The following girls assisted in the serving: Mary Denny, Kitty Roberts, Eugenia Jolly, Isabel Plummer, Elizabeth Harris, Nan Seward, Mary Phipps and Lucille Cover.

Wednesday night, May 13, Brunswick, Appomattox, Fluvanna, Cumberland, Buckingham, Mecklenburg and Lunenburg girls enjoyed supper in the lounge.

They were delightfully entertained with songs by Buck Pleasants and a reading by Gertrude Levy.

The guests were Miss Stubbs and Miss Mary Clay Hiner.

Elizabeth Hardy, Virginia Bean, Nancy Wall, Ruth Montgomery, Helen Boswell, Chic Dortch, Mary Harvey, Jane Burke and Anne Kelly helped serve.

Tuesday night, May 19, the girls from Goochland, Henrico, Amelia, Chesterfield, Nottoway and Maryland were honored.

Miss Peck, Dr. Jarman, Miss Purdom and Miss Camper were guests at the dinner.

The entertainment consisted of violin selections by Miss Purdom and Elizabeth Sieber, and songs by Dr. Jarman.

The girls who served were Louise Gathright, Martha Glenn Davis, Marjorie Robertson, Alice Nelson, Vera Ebel, Henrietta Salsbury, and Mary Elizabeth Wood.

Time Passes Slowly While Basking in Sun

Who among us has not wished that she possessed the power to hold time motionless; to stop for a moment the inexhorable passing of hours—weeks, months? What is the answer? Einstein ties up time with the great spaces of the universe. I, though his little theory may have its point, disagree Time is related to the roof and the sun (and certain exposed portions of one's anatomy).

If you do not immediately agree with my theory, then you have not lain panting on the roof with a noonday sun beating spitefully into you.

It all begins when you decide to get a fashionable tan. Then the preparations—ripping up the bed to secure blanket and pillow, slipping from your dress to bathing suit, winding the watch carefully! Thus loaded you struggle up the steps and out to the roof. Carefully you arrange your blanket in order to get the direct rays of the sun, and then, with a whack of the pillow and a sigh of content, you settle down for a comfortable half-hour of ultra violet ray absorbtion.

Time passes on. Rocks seem literally to rise from the roof to stick into you through the blankets. Clawing at them avails little. They are firmly embedded in asphalt. The sun which had seemed so healthfully friendly, glares down at you until you glance frenziedly at your watch fearing sunstroke from a too long exposure. You have lain there four minutes, the watch frankly states. You pick up the watch and hold it to your ear (it has evidently stopped). But no—the watch ticks merrily and industriously on. Lying down determindly, you endure the broiling sun, the smoke pouring dirtily from the smoke stacks for what seems endless ages. Then able to bear it no longer you pick up the watch—ten minutes have gone by. Getting up you put your shoes on and savagely head for the nearest tub, determined to be lily white all summer rather than suffer the agonies of time suspended again.

Anthony Adverse, with a group of characters that could be found nowhere else under the sun."

"The Thought and Character of William James" by Ralph Barton Peery received the biography award. Ralph Barton Perry, a professor of philosophy at Harvard University, was a pupil and friend of William James. Mr. Perry has collected the hitherto unpublished writings of William James and has published a two-volume biography which is indispensable for the student of American philosophical thought.

Andrew C. McLaughlin received the history award for his book, "A Constitutional History of the United States." Professor emeritus of history of the University of Chicago, Mr. McLaughlin is the greatest living authority on American constitutional history.

The drama award was given to "Idiot's Delight" by Robert Sherwood. Mr. Sherwood gives the following requirements for a successful dramatist: "to be able to write a play for performance in a theatre a man must be sensitive, imaginative, naive, gullible, passionate; he must be something of an embicile, something of a poet, something of a damn fool."

Robert Garland in the New York World-Telegram writes: "with bitterness in his heart, with mockery in his pen, Mr. Sherwood has turned out as bizarre a theatre piece as you have seen. You could not pigeon hole it, even if you tried. But whatever manner of make-believe it may or may not be, it causes you to shake with laughter and with fear, to remain around and cry out 'Bravo!' at the end . . . 'Idiot's Delight' is the American theatre at its pinnacle."

The poetry award went to "Strang Holiness" by Robert F. Tristian Coffin. "Intimate understanding of country things and feeling for country folk and customs mark this new volumn of poems by Mr. Coffin. The poe sees bird and beast and insect with the eyes of a mystic; even the homeliest matter has a nimbus of universal light upon it. These are stirring poems, rich in tender awareness of beauty."

Alpha Phi Sigma Picnic

The members of Alpha Phi Sigma had a jolly time at their picnic Tuesday afternoon. After walking out to Longwood through a little drizzle they were divided into two groups who put their heads together to see which could tell the biggest story. Margaret Pollard came out on top with her inimitable mountain take-off. After charades, food was the order of the day, and all the girls piled into the cabin to enjoy hot dogs, marshmallows and all those other choice morsels which make a picnic complete. When everyone was sufficiently stuffed, they all trooped back to S. T. C. with their memories of a merry time.

A statement from the Reich Ministry of Education to the effect that all young German students going abroad would be given a special training in propagandizing was one of the factors in the decision, Dr. Dennett said.

Bryn Mawr Fete Is England In May

Theresa Helburn Has Part of Queen Elizabeth

By Alice Grainger

Bryn Mawr College celebrated May Day on Friday and Saturday, May 8 and 9, in such a way that the onlooker felt as if he had been transported to the 17th century England, with Queen Elizabeth and her court and all the simple country folk who, unable to suppress their joy at having "goode Queen Bess" view their simple ceremonies and plays, burst spontaneously into dancing.

The festival opened promptly at a quarter to three with the preliminaries of a procession in which were all the characters which were to take part in the ceremonies. Queen Elizabeth herself, carried upon a throne of tapestry, gold and ostrich plumes by six of her courtiers, preceded her court. The college May Queen took the part of Maid Marian and rode a beautiful white horse. She was accompanied by Robin Hood, also on horse back. At their heels came the rest of the characters of the May Day, all bent upon frolicking and merrymaking.

The climax of the procession was reached with the entrance of the eighteen foot flower-bedecked maypole, drawn by four great white oxen, imported from Vermont for the occasion.

At the end of the procession Queen Elizabeth mounted her throne to vie with the dancing on the green and the crowning of the May Queen. The dancing was done at four smaller maypoles, one at each corner of the green, while the more dignified of the characters took part in the merry-making in spirit. Following the dancing the players dispersed to take their parts in performing "Old Wives Tale", "Robin Hood", "A Midsummer Night's Dream", "The Mask or the Flowers", and the "Play of St. George and the Dragon" at different parts of the campus. Others became strolling players, carrying their properties on their backs or in a wagon, and wandered about the campus giving "Grammer Gurton's Needle", "The Deluge" and "The Creation" in real medieval style. Tumblers, jugglers, Morris Dancers, and other players entertained crowds all afternoon on the green. Each play was given three times so as to enable the crowds to see all of them. Also included in the program was tea in the beautiful Deanery Gardens at which time bells, especially imported from England, were played.

Most prominent features of the entire performance were the authenticity, the traditional and historical accuracy which with the plays were performed and the costumes were made; the absolute precision with which all the dancing and plays were performed.

The entire performance showed years of training. The fete is given only one every four years, given only once every four years, before it is to be staged. Each of the 700 to 800 girls is given a part and expected to cooperate in every way possible. From the performance given this year, one knows that each girl did her part.

The part of Queen Elizabeth, taken each year by some prominent Bryn Mawr alumna, this year became acted by Theresa Helburn, Theatre Guild executive, was complete to the flaming hair and haughty manner of the real queen.

The entire May Day was almost professional and, with the real oxen, the real maypole, the deer, the sheep, the great Dane, the falcons, the donkeys, a pair of fighting cocks, and damations, the horses, the atmosphere of the college building with their gray stone and medieval architecture, brought the 17th century festival day into modern times.

Spring Sports Keep Athletes "Running" In Color Cup Race

Bang! goes the gun, and they are off toward the coveted goal—the color cup. People hold their breath in expectation, for the race will be a close one.

This week marks the finals in a large part of our athletic world.

In our field and track practices we find girls who rival Hercules in strength as they hurl the javelin and shot put "through the air with the greatest of ease." We have high jumpers who put the poor cow, who jumped over the moon in the shade, as they float over great heights to the tune of: "It's the pep born in us!"

Our runners are so fleet of foot, they hardly seem to touch the ground. They are streaks of lightning personified. Our broad jumpers appear to possess the famous magic shoes of "Jack the Giant Killer," as they launch forth into space.

Our miniature Olympics are not the only happenings of the week. Although we can boast no Sherwood forest as a background, we are having an archery tournament. We feel sure we have marksmen who can split an arrow asunder at a reasonable distance.

LaCrosse color games are also to be played. Strange sights may be seen on the field. Much to our amusement the other day, one of our near-sighted players forgetting she wasn't playing football, threw aside her stick, and made a flying tackle at what she supposed to be her opponents' feet. There was a yelp! Imagine her embarrassment when she found herself embarrassing one of the campus mascots—a dirty scared little dog. However, all of our players aren't as absent-minded as this, for we have many tricky players for both sides.

"United we stand, divided we fall" is a motto to be kept before us, for a true victory is the united efforts of a class.

As a crystal gazer I see the color cup on the mantle in the Rotunda. Some one approaches with a ribbon—the color is obscured. The vision is gone—I see no more—time will tell!

Straw Vote Shows Collegiate Attitude

would make the best president, the votes ran this way: Borah, 105; Landon, 77; Hoover, 24, Vandenberg, 11; Knox, 7; and Wadsworth, 1.

On the subjects of war and peace the following results of the straw-vote were revealed:

1. Do you believe that an army "second to none" will insure the peace of the United States?—yes, 34; no, 244.

2. Is the present armaments program of the United States justifiable?—yes, 132; no, 15.

3. Are you willing to bear arms on foreign soil?—yes, 38; no, 228.

4. Is Germany justified in her Rhineland policy?—yes, 159; no, 83.

As to collegiate activities, it was found that 79 of the delegates to the convention were working their way through school, while 199 were partially doing so. 184 against 68 felt that there is not a decline in interest in intercollegiate athletics as judged by their campus. To the question "Is there more or less drinking among college students, in your judgment, since the repeal of the 18th amendment?" 140 answered more; 112 answered "no change;" and 18 answered "less."

Farmville Alumna Directs Prize Club

Central High Group Wins Two First Places

Showing a splendid spirit of enthusiasm the Glee Club of Central High under the direction of Miss Louise Hyde, Farmville alumna, brought honor to the school on Friday night, April 17, when it won two first places out of three in the county choral contest which was held at Covington. Covington High, took the other first place, with Central High running a close second.

The Central High Glee Club made a most favorable impression as it was the only chorus entered which wore vestments. Miss Hyde has received numerous congratulations on the fine apearance and splendid singing of the club.

The contest was divided into three individual groups. Central High entered all three groups, winning first places group one and group three. Numbers presented by the Glee Club were: Group I: "A Merry Life" and "O, Danny Boy"; Group II: "Trees", and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life"; Group III: "Shortenin' Bread" and "Country Gardens".

College Presents Boston Musicians

Fiedler Will Conduct Varied Program of Ensemble

The College anounces a return performance of the Boston Simfonietta as the first program in its new artist series on September 30th, in the college auditorium at eight o'clock.

It has been the privilege of the college to present the Simfonietta several times before; the enthusiasm and appreciation of the entire community has made it possible for another program to be arranged. This ensemble of prominent members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was organized ten years ago under the leadership of its present conductor, Mr. Arthur Fiedler. The Simfonietta has appeared with conspicious success in many towns and cities.

Varied Program

The program to be presented here is varied and of a selection that will appeal to those who understand and love music:

Overture to "Barber of Seville" —Rossini

Symphony No. I in C major—opus 21 ..... Beethoven

I Adagio Motto Allegro con brio

II Andante Cantabile con moto

III Minuetto

IV Adagio, Allegro Motto e vinace

Intermission

Symphonic poem "Finlandia" —Sibelius

Two Anhades ..... Lalo

Air on G string .... Bach-Wilheling

Divertisement for Chamber Orchestra ..... Ibert

Two Thousand See Opening at Shannon's

Pennants waved madly! Perspiring boys ran hurriedly to and fro bearing trays of sandwiches as excited spectators watched the opening of not the football season, but the new and bigger Shannon's.

Beautifully decorated and furnished with the most modern fountain equipment, it yet retains the friendly informal atmosphere which made Shannon's of old a "hangout" for the college crowd.

Shannon's opening Thursday, September 2, at three o'clock was attended during the afternoon by more than two thousand people The large Victrola furnished a musical background as drinks and ice cream cones were given away at the fountain and stylishly uniformed waiters went from booth to booth offering all kinds of cakes, cracker sandwiches and small bags of potato chips.

The women of the town received powder puffs for souvenirs while upon the college students were bestowed S. T. C. and H.-S. C. pennants by which to remember the occasion.

Flowers as congratulations from business associates furnished a festive note to an occasion enjoyed by all.

Twenty-three Girls Transfer to S. T. C.

Students Representi'g Sixteen Colleges Register

Among the new students for the 1936-37 session at Farmville S. T. C. are twenty-three transfers from various Virginia colleges as well as those outside the state. They are

Local Business Men Finance New Theatre Opening in November

Dr. L. D. Whitaker and a group of local busines men plan to open a new theatre in Farmville the latter part of November. Now under construction, the building will contain trans-luxe theatre equipment in which the operating room is behind the screen, the picture being shown through the screen. This type of picture has been in use several years in larger cities, but is the first of its kind to be built in Virginia. The building will be air-conditioned, which means all air entering the theatre will be filtered and will contain the proper amount of humidity. The new theatre, tentatively named Lee, will seat approximately 500 people and its cost will exceed $30,000.

The advantage of another theatre in Farmville will be that the owners may bring to their public the product of every major producing company in picture entertainment.

Honor Fraternity Announces Oct. 17 For Circus Date

Classes Begin Work On Stunts and Booths

The annual S. T. C. Circus is scheduled to occur October 17, in the big gymnasium. Alpha Kappa Gamma, sponsor of the affair, has announced Mary Bowles as the chairman for 1936.

In two and half weeks the circus carnival, which is the annual fall "tops" occasion, will be with us. Mary Bowles, chairman, is deep in plans, and chairmen for the various phases have been appointed.

Each class is beginning work on its stunt, their leaders having been appointed at class meetings Tuesday.

Booths have been selected by the various classes and organizations, and plans for them are being made.

Nominations for the circus queen will be held at class meetings October 6. Each class is entitled to nominate one member of its group for the honor. On Wednesday, October 7, voting will be carried on at the table in the hall, at the rate of one cent per vote.

The S. T. C. circus is a gala affair combining booths and freaks with a tent show, "wild" animals and clown acts. A grand parade culminates with the presentation of the queen and her court.

President's Message To New Students

Just a word to freshmen and other new students to say we welcome you to our college with its many opportunities. Most of you are new to college life, and to make the transition from school to college or from home to college requires a little time for adjustment. It is surprising how quickly the adjustments are made. That is because of youth. Put your regular work first, and start with the determination to do your best with it. Then find an opportunity to develop your special talents, for you have different talents. Identify yourself with one of the extra-curricular activities in line with your particular gift or talent. Wholehearted participation in at least one of the many student activities on the campus will give added zest to your regular work and will do much to develop your personality. Remember that you are among friends. Everyone here—students, faculty, administration—is eager to help you find your place in our college life.

Library Announces Varied Collection Of "Best-Sellers"

New Cabinets And Cards Improve Service

In the annual order of new books which has been received by the library there are fifty novels, "best-sellers", which will be placed on the rental shelf. These valuable additions to the already strong collections of novels and reference works strengthen the rapidly increasing collection and fill a felt need. Besides the acquisition of books the library has been engaged in improving its cataloguing and service.

The card catalogue has been expanded by the addition of two new cabinets. There are other guides to aid students in finding books. The lettering of the backs of the books has been continued, which should facilitate the work at the circulation desk.

Among the best-sellers which have come are "Private Duty", Faith Baldwin"; "The A. B. C. Murders," Agatha Christie; "Faster Faster", E. M. Delafield; "Mystery Flowers," Grace L. Hill; "Life is for Living," Kay Lipke; "Five Little Heiresses," Alice D. Miller; "Gone with the Wind", Margaret Mitchell; "Sparkenbroke," Charles

We welcome back to her accustomed place Miss Mary Elizabeth Swift, our gracious and exceedingly competent assistant librarian. The library is further fortunate in being able to retain the valuable services of Miss Carmen Clark, who so acceptably filled Miss Swift's place during the latter's year of leave.

Rotunda Staff Holds Publication Try-outs For New Members

Try-outs for places on the Rotunda staff will begin Wednesday, Sept. 30 at a meeting to be held in the publication office at 7:30. Try-outs will continue over a period of a month, or four issues of the paper, before selections will be made of staff members.

Those students old and new, who are interesteted in newspaper work are requested to come to the publication office in the Student Building at 7:30 tonight. Assignments of articles for the following issue will be made at that time. At the end of the month those who show ability, interest, and cooperation will be given a permanent place on the staff.

The various phases of work on the Rotunda include straight news, society, sports, editorials, departments, business, and typing.

Allen and Eastham Will Fill Vacancies For New Session

Officers Are Chosen At Meetings Monday

Vacancies in the A. A. and House Councils were filled by special appointment on Monday, September 28.

Sue Eastham was appointed vice-president of the Athletic Association while Dudley Allen was chosen vice-president of the House Council.

The precedent has been set in former years that the council select officers in emergencies. Kitty Roberts elected vice-president of the A. A. last spring, did not return to school this fall. To fill the vacancy, the A. A. Council met Monday night and appointed Sue Eastman, former manager of basketball and member of the varsity basket ball squad last season.

It is customary for the House Council to choose its vice-president at the first meeting in the fall. Dudley Allen, president of Pi Kappa Delta, was thus selected.

Y. W. Has Reception For New Students In Gym on Friday

Homesickness was forgotten for the time by freshmen as the annual big sister-little sister reception was held in the S. T. C. gym last Friday night.

After much confusion in primping and meeting big sisters, the freshmen entered the Student Building Lounge and were presented to the receiving line, which included members of the faculty, and administration and Y. W. Cabinet officers.

They were then led into the gym where a most astounding noise could be heard. This turned out to be the sophiomore class band led by Frances Bryant, which entertained the audience with their special arrangement of Knock, Knock, Dinah, and Hold that Tiger. Instruments ranged from jazz horns to rattles. Livian Powell, chairman of the program, introduced Betty Fagg and Virginia Leonard. Each of them sang several selections.

Oh's and Ah's were heard in the gym as stunning gowns which will be seen on our campus this fall and winter were displayed by the beautiful models.

Those modeling were Nancy Sellman, Carter Belle Munt, Annie Leigh Bailey, Susan Lane, Virginia Doughty, Virginia Agee, Kitty Fitzgerald, Elsie Cabell, Virginia Carroll, Lucille Moseley, Miriam Ficklen, Bernice Jones, Annie W. Holden, Frances Maxey and Kathleen McCann.

S.T.C. Enrollment Is Eight Hundred

Students Matriculate From Varied Localities

Reports are being circulated giving a false estimate of the increased enrollment at S. T. C. for the fall session. The student body is larger, but not to the extent rumor has it.

Last year there were seven hundred and twenty-two students enrolled for the fall quarter. As compared to the seven hundred and seventy already in school for this session, there is an increase of about fifty students. There are a number of students registered who have not arrived to begin their work. They are expected to come within the quarter which will put the total enrollment at about eight hundred students.

Eighty-three Counties

In this present group, eighty-three counties are represented, twelve states and two foreign countries. Fumi Wahayama, a Japanese student from Tokyo, is taking the home economics course. Margaret Jung, daughter of missionaries in Korea where she has spent a greater part of her life, is a sophomore this year.

Jane Royall, Miss Farmville S. T C. at the Tobacco Festival.

Miss Jane Royall Is S. T. C. Princess

Eight Students Are In Festival Court

Miss Jane Royall as Miss Farmville S. T. C. represented State Teachers College, Farmville, as a princess in the 1936 Tobacco Festival held in South Boston September 17-18. Attendents at the coronation of Miss Eve Mark-Wardlow as queen of the Tobacco Festival included besides Miss Jane Royall eight members of the student body. These were Frances Bryan, Miss Crewe Chronicle; Jane Burke, Miss Appomattox; Susan Lane, Miss Alta Vista; Minnie Smith, Miss South Hill; Kathryn Fitzgerald, Miss Chatham; Elizabeth Harris, Miss South Boston; Elizabeth Hardy, Miss Lunenburg County, and Katherine Dunnington, Miss Farmville.

Attired in gowns representing the various ages connected with the history of tobacco, the princesses attended the queen in the parade and pageant.

At the final ball on Friday, September 18, the queen and her attendants accompanied by their escorts led the grand march. Music for the occasion was furnished by Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians.

New Students Sign For Apprenticeship In Dramatic Groups

As the initial meeting of this school year, the Dramatic Club met on Monday night, September 28. The primary business was the introduction of the club to the freshmen who wish to become apprentices during the fall quarter.

Fletcher Walker, president, greeted the assembly and welcomed the new girls. Members of the executive board were introduced and asked to state briefly the work in their various departments such as staging, make-up, acting, costuming, etc.

Miss Wheeler, adviser and director, talked to the group on the purposes, ideals, and program of the Dramatic Club.

Having thus received an idea of the life of the club, new girls signed as fall apprentices in the department in which they wish to commence their club relation.

Announcement was made that work on the fall presentation will

Orientation Tour Initiates Classes

Freshmen Commence Group Meetings Tuesday

A tour of places of campus note, concluded by a hike to Longwood, marked the opening of this session's orientation classes for the freshmen and new girls. On Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock orientation leaders met their classes for this purpose.

Leaving from the Rotunda, the girls were shown such places of interest and activity as the library, Student Building, council rooms, the statues of Joan d'Arc, athletic field, and the laundry. The tour ended in the outdoor amphitheatre at Longwood where Bonnie Lane, president of the student body, gave an inspirational talk on the honor code as it is understood and carried on in Farmville S. T. C.

Orientation Classes

On Tuesday night the classes began. They will be held each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evening from 7:00 to 7:30 for two weeks. The purpose of these classes is to familiarize new girls with rules, regulations, and activities of the college.

The classes are compulsory for all freshmen and other new girls. Those students who cut will have to attend special classes of the same type. At the end of the two weeks an examination on the handbook will be given. A re-examination will be given in case of any failures.

Group Leaders

Claire Eastman, vice-president of the student body is in charge of orientation classes, and the following girls will conduct them: Libby Morris, Polly Ware, Minnie Smith, Marjorie Robertson, Dorothy Buckland, Carolyn Upshur, Josephine Quinn, Madeline Mc-Glothlin, Mary Bowles, Elizabeth Booth, Carter Belle Munt, Zaida Thomas, Margaret Carroll, Elizabeth Shiplett, Chic Dortch, Charlotte Rice, Virginia Acworth, Virginia Bean, Marie Moore, Jean Willis, Victoria Gillette, Sara Hayes, Charlotte Minton, Kitty Roberts, Sue Mallory and Marian Pond.

Y. W. C. A.

As we entered the portals of our Alma Mater on the first day of school we at once realized that the Y. W. C. A. plays a very important part here. There were girls who were glad enough to aid us in finding the different places we wanted to find, to help us in every way possible. These girls represented the true spirit of this worthy organization—that of service and of cooperation.

Our Y. W. C. A. begins its college year with its desire to promote a spirit of friendliness among all college students. Ours would be a poor school indeed if this spirit were lacking. We are proud to have a college so rich in this characteristic; for it is thus that people know our college. It is truly a college in which everyone does everything possible to make it a place to be loved by everyone who attends.

It is to the Y. W. C. A. that we look to aid us in the development of a Christian character and attitude. This is the primary reason for its existence on campuses over-organized and activity-minded. Being a voluntary religious movement, it is one in which we are able to look at life in its entirety. Religion is the basic principle on which we build a Christian character and attitude because it is the fruition of one's highest regards toward this world and toward one's fellowmen. Religion goes further than science which tests the facts of life for us; it gives us glimpses of insight into the real values of life, and the dynamic to conserve those values. With these two aids we can develop the desired character and attitudes that will aid us when we go forth in the world as teachers or in any other chosen porfession.

To the Y. W. C. A. we also look for leadership in aiding us in knowing everyone. It is not just for a few, but it is for each and everyone. Each of us has her part to do, a part of a great whole. Through it we learn that all must work together to build a beautiful world in order for us to be truly rich and creative in our own lives. It is through this important organization that we find out how to live better with our fellowmen. We need a directing source that will aid us in carrying out the philosophy of finding and sharing life together.

Let us here at Farmville thank the Y. W. C. A. for presenting as an attainable goal those worthwhile qualities of a Christian life. Without this wonderful organization our college life would have a vacancy that could not be filled by any other one.

Common Sense

As a result of the efforts of the student council and the student body for several years, we begin a school term with a total absence of any kind of a smoking restriction. The rest of the story is in our own hands.

As sensible adults, we realize that smoking on the streets, in the halls, the parlors and on the campus is not the type of conduct expected from us, and we have been pledged not to thus abuse our privilege.

We are gratified at the improved relations between mmebers of the student government and other students of the college. We feel that a major revoltuion has taken place in which our Honor Code has been assured of the high place it should hold in our esteem. With each of us entering into the full spirit of it, we shall prove that we are right in requesting this change.

Welcome, New Girls

We find it hard to realize that about half the student body is composed of new girls, whom we wish to welcome, and orientate as rapidly as possible.

The S. T. C. spirit must flow in double quantities to supply the demand, but we find inspiration aplenty. We want, above all, for each one to be filled to overflowing with the enthusiasm, pep, and love that abounds in our S. T. C. We want you to get into the heart of things, working and playing as hard as we do and getting as much out of it.

There are so many different talents that not one should fail to find the place she is looking for. Be on the look-out for the announcements that concern the particular thing which you are most interested.

Be it music, dramatics, athletics, literary work, or any of the innumerable things, the opportunity will be brought to your attention soon. Don't let the first chance slip, for it is the best.

We are anticipating fresh talent, new ideas, undaunted interest; and we hope that no disappointment is in store for us. We welocme you wholeheartedly and extend the invitation to join us in all we do.

Tendencies

The tendency of the modern college girl is to let things drift. It is so easy to let work slide until tomorrow, or to let opportunities wait until next week, or to disregard the pleasures of others for pleasures of self. The girls whose intentions are good but whose intentions never materialize is always among us. What is your type? Does duty rule you, or does that conscienceless part of you triumph? The beginning of a year is the time to use that extra spurt of energy which everyone withholds until some definite need arises. The time of need has come! Let us then follow Carlyle in his lines: "Do the duty that lies neaerst thee which thou knowest to be a duty! The second duty will ready become clearer."

Religion and Freedom

WE rightly boast of freedom of religion as a very rich inheritance of the past, but freedom of religion does not mean freedom from religion. Liberty conscience must never be confused with liberty from conscience. We can never expect the right of man to be respected where the rights of God are disregarded. As one looks back across the history of our Nation and of all nations, one quickly discovers that leadership has always come from the ranks of those who keep their faces toward the stars and give their hearts to God.

World News

It was just two months ago that part of the Spanish army in Morocco revolted and the unrest that had been sweeping Spain flared into insurrection. Since then Spaniard has been killing Spaniard.

Spain was only one of the sore spots, though the worst, last week in Europe. In the center of the Continent, Adolph Hitler, reviewing his troops and followers, continued to thunder against Moscow, communism and all things non-Facist.

On Friday, Geneva, which has been neglected by Europe's statesmen in recent months became the diplomatic center of the continent's hopes and fears: the Council of the League opened its ninety-third session. For the first time since January 1935, much to the relief of worried diplomats, the Italio-Ethiopian dispute was not on the Council's agenda. Their eyes were glued on the European continent and the problems which poison its atmosphere all the way from Madrid to Moscow.

The state of Maine, voting on its local ticket just fifty days before it and the rest of the nation vote on the national ticket, gave an indication which Republicans interpreted as meaning stormy weather for the Democrats, fair weather for themselves.

If the results of this voting worried President Roosevelt, he did not show it. As to his forecast of the result of the November election, he said he would write it down and lock it up until after the third days of that month.

Early last Wednesday morning, inhabitants of the desolate Alftanis coast of Western Greenland, poking through wreckage which had been tossed ashore during the night, discovered a life-belt bearing the name "Pourquoi Pois" (Why Not?) Also they found the inert figure of a man who after being nursed back to consciousness identified himself as Gouidac, quartermaster of the French polar ship. He told of the loss of the ship and his fears that there were no other survivors which proved well grounded.

With squeeze and corruption greatly reduced, China's government controlled merchant marine is earning profits for the first time in years. Government leaders were so encouraged by the announcement that the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company had netted $1,000,000 during the past year that they began to plan construction of twenty-six ships in an effort to wrest control of China's coastal and inland navigation from British and Japanese.

Intercollegiate

According to the rules of the University of Carolina, made in 1807 any student in woman's attire would be suspended or expelled. It is also forbidden to play cards, lie or to insult a student. And, believe it or not you can't even keep a mule on the campus.

Be careful, don't shout "Rat" or "Fresh" at a first year student or you will be expelled. Don't use tobacco on the campus, and above all be sure to get permission from the president before going to the theatre. The rules aren't enforced.

Northwestern University students must hand their picturess in with themes so the professor will know the work he's grading. And they say good looking girls photograph poorly.

The world of conversationalists is divided into two classes: those who listen to what the other person has to say, and those who use the interval to plan their next remark.

There is no legitimate actor who can resist the powerful lure of the movies. It isn't the money that fetches him. It isn't the great publicity. It is simply this: the movies enable an actor to look at himself.—George Jean Nathan.

A Colorado University student caught drinking is forced to attend Sunday school every Sunday during the remainder of his college career there. We would think 'twould drive him to drink.

A freshman in a eastern college got on a street car and asked the motorman where Happy Jesus boulevard was. It took the motorman some time to realize that he meant Gaylord's avenue.

Man isn't so smart. Thousands of years before he began to have afternoon headaches from trying to think, the turtle had a streamlined body, turret top, retractable landing gear, and a portable home.

Man dwells inside, not outside the earth says Prof. P. Emilio Amlco-Roxas of Beunos Aires, who maintains the globe is a hollow sphere.

Harry I. Klingler president and general manager of the Pontiac Motor Co., gives the following advice to those who wish to succeed either in college or later life:

"Learn to get along with people"

"Learn to exhibit more patience than any other man you know."

"Learn to respect other men's ideas and opinions."

"Learn to think problems thru to the end."

"Learn to put yourself in the other fellow's place."

"Be democratic."

"Be loyal."

"WORK."

Rotunda Reverberations

Well girls—here we are right back here at ole S. T. C., and somehow I guess all of us old girls are glad to be back, and we hope that the freshmen will soon feel at home.

Wasn't that reception quite the berries Friday night? With all our finery we did look awfully nice. Snap dragons to Livian Powell for arranging the orchestra, fashion show, and getting our song birds to sing. Weren't they good looking clothes displayed? We were sorta shaky and a little warm with all our winter clothes on.

Have you heard? We are going to be getting up right scared in the middle of the night—not until it gets cold though. Fire drills, yes, fire drills, and won't we look grand—hair rolled up, cold cream on our faces, and pajamas or nighties on. Oh sure if H.-S. could see them I'm afraid all of us would feel like old maids for the next nine months.

Just to recall old things to your memory—there's Carter Belle Munt still going with Fred. Elizabeth Smith acquiring new curves—Kitty Fitz by hook or crook with a K. A. ring. Virginia Leonard with a proposal hanging in mid-air—Kitty Jamison with the love bug again. And Sue Mallory did well by herself this summer—just to see that new birthday present she's got out of a fine young man.

These freshmen are beating your time, upper classmen. There's little Sara Keesee with a mighty fine voice as well as a pretty pair of brown eyes—and what's more, she's got a H.-S. freshman on her trail, and Micoo Snead, with a hero who came prancing up on his steed Sunday night. These forty or more girls from Eastern Shore are doing up S. T. C. too. Word to the wise is sufficient, Rats, that moon might be pretty but don't get down in the dumps looking at it. Just think it's over him as well as yourself and maybe he's writing to you right now. Remember there weren't enough H.-S. men to go around before you got here.

Tomorrow morning if you wake up and find your bed and floor wet don't be surprised. It's just one of those things that happen, and if there's a peculiar odor afterwards only glance toward the floor and you'll find that the wax has disappeared. That's life for you my children—life. Good bye now until next week.

In small proportions we just beauties see;
And in short measures life may perfect be.
—Ben Jonson

One inch of joy surmounts of grief a span,
Because to laugh is proper to the man.

Recipe For Happiness

Combine four parts of Contentment, two parts of Joy and one of Pleasure. But these ingredients must be grown in one's own garden. Sometimes, not often, they may be obtained of a Good Friend. When so procured, a fair return must be made, else Happiness spoils and becomes trouble.

Sometimes Discontent and Ambition have been combined in a desire to obtain Happiness, and Fame or Wealth have resulted, but persons who have tasted these say that they are inferior substitutes.
—Margherita Osborne

Everyone is seeking happiness. That seems to be the chief desire—Happiness. There are different ways to gain it and true Happiness can only be gained by each individual in his own way.

Our authors have written often about this chief desire in life. Each one wrote down his method or ideas about Happiness.

Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
Home-keeping hearts are happiest.

S. T. C. Week-enders Go Hither and Yon

It looked like S. T. C. girls were up to their old tricks when they left school last week-end after being here only a few days. Football —enough to make any girls leave school, attracted many.

V. M. I.-S. C.

Elsie Dodd and Vera Ebel slipped up to Lexington and cheered for Andy Trzaciak as he made his sensational hundred yard run for V. M. I. in their game with South Carolina, Saturday.

H. S. C.-U. of Va. Game

Where Hampden-Sydney goes, S. T. C. goes. This past week-end it was Charlottesville where the Tigers opened their football season playing the University of Virginia. Over on Sydney's side Mary Bowles, Carter Belle Munt, Chic Dortch, and Margaret Britton, were seen and quite easily heard. During the half we ran into Dot Tillett, Ruth James, Jane Burke, and Ann Hardy sipping cokes in the Cavalier section.

Homeward

There's always a score of girls who must go home to see families, boy friends, and first cousins. Homeward bound were Bernice Copley, Virginia Sue Tuck, Rosalie Perkins, Martha Glenn Davis, Edna Church, Fannie Mae Putney, Elizabeth Wilkinson, Nan Seward, Beth Barnard Sue Eastham Sue Mallory, Perle Panton, Lucy Smith, Louise Faulconer, Virginia Kite, Patty Jeffreys and Jacqueline Ruth.

Visiting

Some girls didn't sem to have a long enough vacation so they spent last week-end visiting. They were Irene Parker, Martha Meade Hardaway, Vivian Womack, Fletcher Walker, Dorothy Henderson, Annie Watson Holden, Margaret Price, Pauline Pearson, Cassie Boswell, Elizabeth Baylow, Caroline Willis, Merwyn Gathright, Mildred Harvey, Margaret Jennings, Evelyn Severale, Kitty Jamison, Virginina Price, Florence Jeffrey and Lucille Cover.

SPORT SLANTS

Freshmen, freshmen, we invite you
To use your energy like the old girls do.
Come out for our sports.
Come out for our games.
Learn just how we keep our good name.
Ray, Ray, Rah, Rah, S. T. C.

"In order to work well, we must be able to play well."

In beginning a new year, the A. A. starts off first by inviting all the freshmen and old girls to come out and support their class and school colors. It is always the aim of every class to have the best teams in every sport, and to try to win all class games in order that their class colors may adorn the color cup.

The color cup is a trophy that wears the colors of the classes that have won the most games in every sport. The cup is on display in the Rotunda, so that the winners will be able to go by and say, "Those are our colors on the color cup, and we are going to keep them there." The rivalry between the colors red and white, and green and white, is always keen. The freshmen and juniors are red and whites, and sophomores and seniors are green and whites; so prepare for the fight of your lives. The color cup must have a color next year. What color will it be?

To all the freshmen who are interested in sports, whether they have taken part in that particular sport before or not, there is an invitation. Come out and learn with the rest.

There are practices every afternoon, and a great many of the girls are in the beginner stages. Each person has to have a number of required practices in order to take part in class games, and in order to try out for varsity teams. Points are given for every class and varsity team a person makes. These points are added together toward winning a school jacket. Come out, freshmen, and old girls, too, and support your class and varsity squads. Even though this may be rivalry between the classes, we unite in working for the same purpose eventually. That purpose is to carry the name of Farmville S. T. C. to the highest peaks of success and victory. The schedule for sports is:

Day	Time	Sport
Mon.	4:00 to 5:30	Archery
Tues.	4:00 to 5:30	Hockey
Wed.	4:00 to 5:30	Basketball
Thurs.	4:00 to 5:30	Hockey
Fri.	4:00 to 5:30	Tennis

Parker Pen Company Offers College Rings With Official Seals

How come the swanky new college rings with the official seal and everything, being disported of late by the gals on the Farmville campus? Our Inquiring Reporter (who keeps up on such things by always having ear to the ground) reports as follows after due investigation

The official college rings are blossoming out all over the campus for the simple reason that The Parker Pen Company is offering one to each student at the unheard of low price of 25c and the top from a carton of their new quick-drying ink, Parker Quink. The ring is a certified $2 value and, if you have been paying attention in Math class, you can readily figure out that you can save $1.75 by taking advantage of Parker's offer.

We predict that official school rings, like the automobile, are here to stay.

Any retailer selling Parker Quink can tell you what size you need. We're getting ours today

With the Pen That Students Rate Highest

BY ACTUAL VOTE

Invented by a College Professor to Bring You Higher Grades

A college professor noticed that poor grades are often due not to brains running low but to pens running dry!

So he worked out an utterly different and basically better pen principle—and Geo. S. Parker engineered it to perfection.

Thus came the revolutionary Parker sacless Vacumatic that has superseded every old-style pen—both sac-type and sacless.

Recently the student editors of 30 college papers asked 4,699 of their readers, "Which make of pen do you own? Which pen do you prefer?"

To both questions more students answered "Parker," than any other two makes of pens COMBINED!

One reason is that the Vacumatic ink supply is EVER-VISIBLE, the ENTIRE length of the barrel. It isn't merely last-drop visibility—doesn't merely show when your pen is empty. It shows days ahead WHEN IT'S RUNNING LOW, so it can't run dry against your will.

The Vacumatic's working parts are sealed in the top WHERE INK CAN NEVER TOUCH THEM—can never decompose them. That's why this miracle pen is GUARANTEED mechanically perfect.

And the Parker Vacumatic has no rubber ink sac or lever filler—hence has room for 102% more ink without increase in size!

Its luminous, laminated Pearl style has won every pen Beauty Contest by 2 to 1. Go and see it today at any good store selling pens. The Parker Pen Co., Janesville, Wis.

Circus Chairmen Plan for Festivity To Be Held Oct. 17

Committee Chairmen Are Engaged in Activities

BOOTHS BY CLASS

Will Scott Will Be Ringmaster of Affair

Plans for the 1936 circus, to be held October 17, proceed apace as Mary Bowles, chairman, directs the activities of classes and organizations.

Chairmen for the various committees are Dot Wise and Elizabeth Shiplett, decorations; Claire Eastman, floors; Martha Hamlet, animals; Chic Dortch, coronation; Virginia Leonard and Virginia Bean, stunts; Virginia Baker, business; Bonnie Lane, publicity; and Victoria Gillette, booth.

Stunt Chairmen

Booths are being planned by the Y. W. C. A., Student Council, and each of the classes. For the latter, those in charge are Selma West, sophomore class; Eleanor Dodson, junior class; and Evelyn Howell, senior class. Added attractions will be side shows, bingo booths, and trained "animals".

Will Scott, Ringmaster

The main show will be under the directorship of Will Scott, Ringmaster. Class stunts are in the hands of Gwen Bell, sophomore; Libby Roberts, junior; and Lucille Moseley, senior. The grand march concluding with the coronation of S. T. C.'s Circus Queen will be the finale of the entertainment.

Digest Features New Presentation

Brings Pictorial News of the Campus to Readers

With last issue of The Rotunda, students of S. T. C., again began reading Collegiate Digest. The Rotunda's picture magazine, regularly each week.

Featuring a new style of editorial presentation, Collegiate Digest this year wil bring to our readers complete pictorial news of events of interest and importance on the nation's campuses, gathered for its editors by more than 300 regular correspondents and the ace photographers of the world's leading newspaper agencies.

Picture News

Discarding the formal and stilted style of picture presentation, Collegiate Digest wil present picture news of important and unusual developments in education, science, extra-curricular activities, sports, faculty and student projects, and the hundreds of other activities that make up the college community. And the stories concerning the events pictured will be concise and complete, leaving no doubt in the mind of the reader as to their actual interest and importance.

Photo Features

In addition to the regular newspictures, Collegiate Digest will present many photo features in every issue, picture presentations that take the reader behind the scenes to give him a complete photographic record of the work of particular individuals and groups and trace the meaning and significance of unusual and important events through the unfailing eye of the news camera.

In addition, Collegiate Digest

Date of Cotillion Set for Halloween

That the annual fall dance of Cotillion Club will be held on October 31, Halloween night, was the decision of the members at the meeting held Wednesday, October 1. Conflicts with conventions, dances at other colleges, etc., hastened the date.

On orchestra committee under the chairmanship of Ruth Montgomery, business manager, with Elizabeth Smith, president, as an automatic member, was appointed. Those serving on the committee are Page Nottingham, Kitty Jamison, and Livian Powell.

Decorations for the dance will be furnished by Gamma Psi, as is customary with the help of Cotillion Goats. Election of old girls to membership in Cotillion will be held next week.

Moore Is Elected New Property Head

At the regular meeting of the Dramatic Club Wednesday night Marie Moore was unanimously elected to take charge of the property group for the coming year. Elizabeth Booth formerly held the position, but was forced to resign because of her heavy schedule this year.

After the meeting the members signed up to work in the various departments for the quarter.

NOTE

Try outs for Rotunda staff will meet at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the publication office.

Classes Announce Nominees Chosen For Circus Queen

Walker, Harris, Easley and Lybrook Are Nominees

At the class meetings October 6 nominations for Circus Queen were made.

Molly Fletcher Walker was chosen from the senior class. The juniors elected Lib Harris; sophomores, Em Easley; and freshmen, Johnnie Lybrook. Fletcher Walker is president of the Dramatic Club and active in various fields of college life. Em Easley is Rat Court Chairman and is a member of the Rotunda staff. Lib Harris has been a class officer for three years and was on the Production committee last year. The freshman candidate, Johnnie Lybrook, is also a nominee for class president.

The Circus Queen is chosen for such qualities as sportingness, jollity and good spirits. The standards of gayety and peppy personality have been followed in the past in electing the ruler of the fete.

Election for Circus Queen will be held this week at the table in the hall. Voting is done by the penny-a-vote system, each girl getting as many votes as she has pennies.

The girl elected as queen will preside over circus activities after her coronation. The coronation scene will be the grand finale of the Big-Tent Show, early in the evening.

Zaida Thomas Elected New Vice-President of Beorc Eh Thorn

Zaida Thomas was elected vice-president of Beorc Eh Thorn at a meeting on Thursday, October 1. She fills the vacancy left by Alice Grainger, who is attending the University of Virginia this year.

Announcement was made of the reorganization of Beorc Eh Thorn at the summer session. Plans for the year were discussed.

Extension of Northwestern University's Evanston campus a half mile into Lake Michigan is being planned by that institution's authorities.

6. Have name written clearly and large on front and back tied with string.
7. Meet in front of rotunda before lunch and dinner.
8. Do not preecde upper classmen in doors.
9. Remember to be reverent ion chapel and quiet in the dining halls.

Then there will be certain days set aside such as Fishing Day. Special rules have been given for these days.

Rats must on Monday:

1. Draw circle around left eye.
2. Black two front teeth.
3. Have hair caught on top with rubber band.
4. Wear gloves.
5. Wear galoshes or rubbers.
6. Carry fishing pole.
7. Be able to tell a fish story.

Tuesday will be called Backwards Day. On this day rats must:

1. Walk backwards.
2. Wear dress backwards.
3. Sign off backwards.
4. Have hair combed forward.
5. Wear hat backwards.
6. Wear lipstick over eye brows.
7. Wear black around mouth.
8. Wear high heeled shoes.
9. Carry books behind you.

Wednesday is Music Day. Rats must:

1. Sing everything said to tune of Onward Farmville.
2. Carry a musical instrument.
3. Write music on forehead.
4. Carry some kind of music.
5. Flit around.

From these rules, it looks as if the Freshmen will have an enjoyable week. But there won't be any debate about the Sophomores enjoying it. We know.

Author Of Renown Speaks At S. T. C.

"Don't Be Selfish" Says Dr. Jarman

Student Body Holds Call Meeting For Talk

At a called meeting of the Student Body on Thursday, October 1, Dr. Jarman addressed the students on rules and regulations to be observed.

He stated, "The first thing to learn as a student in college is to think in terms of a group."

Regulations Are Necessary

"Regulations are necessary because of the largeness of the group. These regulations are made by yourselves and formed by students by experience in the past and future. Some are fundamentals like the Constitution and are therefore unchangeable. Then there are minor regulations, too, which the girls forget through carelessness and lack of pride.

"We should not be selfish," he continued to say, "but should learn to think in terms of others. There is nothing sweeter than a fine, refined, unselfish, sensible girl—one who is not slovenly."

Consideration Urged

He urged the girls not to drive tacks or nails into the newly painted walls, and to remember the great expense to which the school has been put to give us attractive living quarters.

He went on to say the time had come when he felt he should mention the subject of smoking—"for the simple reason that the regulation has not been carried out. Smoking does not add anything to the charm of a woman or girl—that is a man's viewpoint and most every man's viewpoint.

"I can't say there is anything unhealthy about it, but it certainly is not conductive to better health. It is expensive too."

He reminded the students of the fact that many superintendents will not employ a teacher if they know that she smokes.

"The most desirable community

Boston Sinfonietta Plays for Lyceum Fiedler is Director

On Wednesday evening September 30th the Boston Sinfonietta furnished enjoyment as the first of the Artists Series for this year. The ensemble is composed of prominent members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and is conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

In addition to the program as printed, selected encores were rendered. These included "Minuet For Strings" by Balzoul, "Mosquito Dance", and "Hungarian Rapsody no. 6" by Brahms.

Arthur Fiedler, Conductor

Mr. Fiedler, who has received the honorary M. A. degree from Tuffs College, has established for himself a high reputation as a conductor and musician of the first order. While a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, he has been active as violin, viola, organ, piano, and celestra player. As founder and conductor of the Boston Sinfonietta, Mr. Fiedler has contributed much to the musical world.

Statement of Dr. Koussevitzky

In regard to this group of outstanding musicions, Dr. Koussevitzky, the noted conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra wrote "It will give many people the opportunity to hear fine music finely performed."

John Erskine Will Appear in S. T. C. Auditorium

LECTURE IS EVENT

Beorc Eh Thorn To Bring Novelist to Students

John Erskine will speak at the College Auditorium here next Tuesday evening, October 13, under the auspices of the English Honor society, Beorc Eh Thorn. The lecture bids fair to prove the most notable literary event of the session, for the author of "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" and several other recent best sellers is also a noted poet, musician, scholar, literary critic, and teacher. He stands out among American literary figures today as an entertaining and challenging lecturer.

"Merry Gentleman" Says Hurst

"Here is a nimble intellect of quick and graceful gesture," says Fannie Hurst, "a mind both logical and star struck", "a merry gentleman, a lusty laughter, a devastator of ladies' clubs." "The Moral Obligation to Be Intelligent", the title of one of his early essays, would express the man if one might add the words 'and To Be Delightful'."

Professor of English

As Dr. Erskine was for many years professor of English at Amherst and at Columbia, he knows college students. "Bachelor of Arts", his novel of college life shows that. And his many portraits of ladies like Helen, Penelope, Bathsheba, and Eve show that he understands women and how to divert them. Several of his plays have won success on the stage and in the movies, his latest having had its first night in New York this week. He is also a painter of ability and a fine musician, and plays on the concert stage with national symphony orchestras.

Dr. Erskine comes to Farmville from Roanoke College where he speaks Tuesday morning on the last lap of a southern lecture tour.

Committee Appoints Jean Willis Chmn. For Point System

At the Student Standards Committee meeting held Thursday afternoon, October 1, a new committee was appointed to work on the point system, with Jean Willis as chairman. Jean will be assisted by Pattie Bounds, sophomore representative on the Student Standards Committee, and by one of the freshman representatives. The representatives from the freshman class will be elected as soon as their class is organized.

The point system committee plans to hand a list of all girls carrying the maximum number of points to the heads of all organizations. The heads will refrain from placing these girls on important committees, insuring that they will not carry too heavy a burden. This step will enable students to belong to organizations of their choice without making their extra-curricula activities take too much of their time.

At the Student Standards meeting last spring several changes were made in the counting of various offices and memberships. The president of the Dramatic Club now carries with it five instead of three points, while membership in that club counts only one.

COURTESY

The idea of courtesy in public is not original, but it does seem one which has not occurred to some of us—has not occurred or for some reason has made a much smaller impression than it should have.

Life rushes on at a mad pace through the busy thoroughfares of the world; and if we are going to rush with it, as youth seems bound to do, there is at least a great deal we can do to make living easier, as well as more pleasant for all concerned.

There is the courtesy of youth to old age; there is the courtesy of man to the feminine element; there is the courtesy of the road, and so many others we have heard of all our lives and which most of us are prompt to accede to. It is a rare thing that one would see today a young man or girl show an old lady disrespect, or dash by leaving her to pick up the object she had dropped. It is yet the customary thing to see a young man opening the doors for the lady with him or near him, or engaged otherwise in some service for her, and few instances of her refusing his assistance. Everywhere motorists are stopping to help a fellow traveler in distress.

What then is the need of mentioning this matter of courtesy? Well, if we pick up grandma's book or find her glasses and then yell at mother, "Is breakfast ready?", proceed to school, chewing our gum in defiance of the poor teacher, talking while she endeavors to give instructions, and finally at the sound of a bell, jump up and crowd out the door, have we conducted ourselves to the best advantage?

Because there are three or four of us walking down the street together, does that give us the right to block the sidewalk for a single individual coming up from town? If we are in a rush or are busy talking and laughing going through the halls, are we excused or do we help the congestion by jostling everyone with whom we come in contact?

Do we ever stop to think how greatly little habits and mannerisms of ours may be annoying someone who has to be close to us? If we keep our eyes on the general comfort and welfare of everyone else present we couldn't help making life a little happier for everybody.

And still we haven't mentioned the endless instances where our fineness of being distinguishes us in the turmoil of today. Those little matters of remembering that promptness is a little more than courtesy (it is a duty), and that the middle of a symphonic number isn't time for us to giggle, and that no matter how bored we may be standing outside, the offeratory solo in a service just isn't the time for us and our dates to string into church.

THE HOUSE COUNCIL

At this time of the year our attention is directed upon those girls who try to promote quiet on the various halls. It is not because they would rather for people to stop talking, yelling, and playing, but they realize the necessity for quietness on the halls in order that we can study. To certain ones—a very, very few—this might not be necessary. The majority of us have to study and can not unless it is quiet and peaceful about us. It is not a pleasure for these girls to have to ask us to calm down, nor is it a pleasure for us to be told that we are making too much noise.

These are the girls we are most conscious of every night. They are the ones who cooperate in doing all possible to promote good citizenship—a very valuable quality for the well-rounded personality. They show us that all duties pleasant or unpleasant can be done in such a way that we do not mind being told a few "don'ts". Their faithful performances of their daily duties help to encourage us to do these necessary things when they should be done, with some regularity about the matter. The idea of service is predominant with them.

The House Council can not do everything alone. They must have the cooperation of the entire Student Body. It is up to us to refrain from yelling on the halls and from tuning our radios so very loud. If we do this it is easy for us to study in those hours set aside for that purpose and to play in the time allotted for that. If we do as these girls would like to have us do, we will find that we can go to sleep when we are supposed to. We can thank them later on when we realize how much better we feel, know our lessons, and can play, for the best use of our time. So a little cooperation on our part with those who do their part to make our life here more pleasant will aid our gaining a better idea of giving up something in return for something else.

COOPERATION

Since the beginning of time when humanity has tried to build a well-ordered civilization out of the chaos of disorder, man has looked to man for support; the strong have protected the weak, morally, mentally, and physically. Community and city life have progressed through the integration of men's activities for each other. Thus, it becomes necessary that we, who live and work together in our own community—the college—can live more beautifully and harmoniously if we become imbued with the spirit of helpful cooperation.

Though they seem trivial on first thought, the ways in which we may help to make this the well-ordered institution, are many.

Observance of the Post Office regulations getting to meals and chapel on time, refraining from breaking rules, which years of experience have proved to be effective, are among the many ways they we may be helpful. Let us remember that a kind word, a willingness to comply with what is good for the whole, cannot help bringing good returns!

The decrepit old car rolled up to the toll bridge.

"Fifty cents," called out the gate-man.

"Sold," replied the driver.

World News

General Francisco Franco has been designated as dictator of Spain. General Miguel Cabanellas, until now head of the junta, presided over the ceremony. This formality of handing over the direction of the junta to the 43-year old general took barely ten minutes. The new dictator, who gained a captaincy at 20 and a generalship at 30 ended his acceptance speech by saying: "You have authorized me to take full charge, and I shall do so or die in the attempt, relying upon the junta at my side to help me arrive at a noble and united Spain under one flag—a Spanish Spain."

Virtually repudiating the post-war Treaty of St. Germain, Austria has called 8,000 youths aged 21 to the colors for a period of compulsory military service. Well-informed sources explained that the measure had been wasted, because "it is impossible to allow Austrian youth further to be subjected to Nazi influences without doing something about it." In the event of severe protests from neighboring countries, it was said, Austria would allow the matter to go before an international court expecting a favorable verdict.

Isolation for the first time in pure form of the specific substances known as antibodies, that provide immunity against disease is reported today in Science, official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. It has not been possible previously to obtain the immunity-producing antibodies, but Chinese scientists report having in pure form a protein substance from the serum used in the treatment of pneumonia.

The New Deal tonight hailed the completion of the first full year since 1881 without a single national bank failure, it was reported by the office of J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency.

Reports say that 30 Madrid government sympathizers have barricaded themselves in a seminary of Toledo and have withstood insurgent attacks since the city's surrender Sunday. Two officers were killed in a vain dash and after that neither side dared to venture into an open courtyard to retrieve bodies lying there.

For the first time since the present Chino-Japanese crisis arose, more than a week ago, the Chinese population of the Chapei, North Suchuan, and Hangkem districts of Shanghai are showing signs of panic. It is almost a stampede. Every block is crowded with rickshas, wheel-barrows and other conveyances. Another incident expected by both sides, would result in making the entire Hangkow district a closed area under Japanese control.

Rotunda Reverberations

Goodness! did you girls participate in the fashion parade Sunday morning? There were some beautiful clothes on display—skinny girls, fat girls—and of course a couple of Venuses wearing something new. Aren't we glad that it didn't rain?

Poor freshmen, time is drawing nigh when for three whole days you must act like those sophomores, want you to. There'll be carrying of laundry bags, making up of beds and doing a lot of things that you never thought a college girl would be called upon to do. ("Oh! me if I'd just settled down and helped mother cook and sew!")

Our girls have been doing queer things lately, there's our fair lassie, a sophomore to be more exact, who thought she'd play cute and sign her name at a certain place as "Miss Sally Dietrich". You'd better watch your step, lady, people know you aren't Marlene Dietrich's sister—another thing these people who go off for a week-end and come back raving about having a tete a tete with a famous movie actor had better get their story straight next time—guess we all wish we could have seen him though—so rave on Miss Smithfield. Peers Nan Throckmorton must be in love. In the picture, "I've Lived My Life" never have I seen so many tears shed; love is a peculiar thing so they say. Wasn't Lucy P. our fine teacher Saturday night stuffed and everything but after being knocked down by those dogs Monday morning I'm afraid her dignity must have been upset.

Did you have a good time at the Junior-Freshman party? It must have been a huge succes from all the noise heard above—baby costumes—suckers and everything. Those were mighty fine costumes, too. Helen Bell and Martha McCorkle were quite the thing, and Ducky Davies and Margaret Williams were the "cutest" ones.

Cotillion is going to be soon so get you a male girls, and stick with him. There are too many good looking freshmen around this year, don't even trust your sister—that spirit of give and take just can't be used at his time. It's always more taking than giving.

By the way the riots in the "Tiger" about our S. T. C. girls having a fraternity pin, sounded rather catty to us. Do they think that every girl wants a week-end bag full of pins? Just because you boys like 'em and leave 'em is no sign that we use the same system.

Warning—pull the shades down when studying. That moon puts other thoughts besides historical ones into your mind.

Intercollegiate

Every year college deans pop the routine question to their undergraduates: "Why did you come to college?" Traditionally the answers match the questions in triteness. But last year one University of Arizona co-ed unexpectly confided: "I came to be went with—but I ain't yet."

"College Loves"

Freshmen: 1 Himself; 2 Chewing gum; 3 Red Caps.
Sophomore: 1 Hot Dogs; 2 Bluffing; 3 Himself.
Junior: 1 Knowledge (?); 2 Flattery; 3 Himself.
Senior: 1 Himself; 2 Himself; 3 Himself.

Chances of employment this June are four times better than they were a year ago, Columbia authorities report.

"The average woman has a vocabulary of only eight hundred words," it is a small stock, but think of the turnover.

The Daily Maroon, official organ of the University of Chicago, recently conducted a pool on the proposition, "Do you approve of kissing on the first date?"

Of the two hundred students interviewed, 96 answered no, 60 yes, and 44 reported themselves undecided.

Dr. D. F. Votaw, professor of educational psychology at Southwestern State Teachers College, is of the opinion that pretty girls are more intelligent than homely ones—yes most professors' grades run that way too, they tell us.

A freshman at the University of California last week signed up for 34 courses with many conflicts. When informed that he could not be in six classes at once, he offered this classic:

"But really I didn't intend to go to all of them."

Referred to all who believe that faculty members are an inhuman lot: The dean at Gettysburg college, on leaving a college dance this summer, found his car occupied by a couple interested only in love's young dream. Tipping his hat he took his wife and walked home.

Anthropological measurements University of Kansas freshmen compared with those of a selected list of other schools recently revealed that these men were taller, about the same in weight, and less in girth of chest.

Literary Column

John Erskine was born in New York City on October 5, 1879. He was educated at Columbia Grammar School and Columbia University. He received his A. B. degree in 1900, his M. A. in 1901 and in 1903 he received his Ph.D. degree. He has also received many honorary degrees.

He began his teaching career at Amherst College where he taught for six years. Then he returned to Columbia University where he was professor of English until recently.

John Erskine is known in many countries as a brilliant American writer and as a leading literary critic. Besides being a poet and essayist of note, he has edited a series of compilations of literary classics, and as a fictionist has explored a new field by modernizing old legends, making the characters speak and act like sophisticated people of the present time, as in "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" (1925) and "Galahad, Enough of His Life to Explain His Reputation" (1926). These two books became extremely popular in Europe as well as in America.

Dr. Erkine's verse is thought-provoking, scholarly, and fashioned with technical skill. Three volumes of his verse are: "Actaeon and Other Poems" (1906), "Collected Poems" (1922), and "Sonata and Other Poems" (1925).

During the World War Erskine was chairman of the army educational committee of the A. E. F. and eductional director of the A. E. F. University at Beaune, France. At the end of his service he was made a Chevalier of the Legion D'Honneur and received a Distinguished Service Medal. He was also made a citizen of Beaune.

He has many high literary connections, belonging to: The Modern Language Association of America, Silvermine Guild of Artists, the Poetry Society of America, president in 1922, two honorary fraternities, American Council of Learned Societies, National Institute of Arts and Letters, and many other honorary organizations.

Since Dr. Erskine is an authority on contemporary literature he is a much sought speaker. His lectures are very enjoyable, being of a charming and intimate style which is very like his popularly known books.

In our library are the following works of fiction by Dr. Erskine: "Adam and Eve", "Bachelor of Arts", "Galahad", "The Private Life of Helen of Troy", and "Solomon, My Son!" There are also several non-fiction books and many of these he has edited.

Some other works by Dr. Erskine are: "The Elizabethan Lyric" (1903) "Leading American Novelists" (1910) "Hearts Enduring", a one-act play (produced 1914, published 1920); "The Shadowed Hour" (1917); "The Kinds of Poetry" (1920); and "The Enchanted Garden" (1925).

Among books which he has edited are "Selections from the Faerie Queen" (1910); "Palgrave's Golden Treasury," with William Trent (1912); "Contemporary War Poems" (1914); "Ladcadio Hearns Interpretations of Literature," 2 vols. (1916) and "Cambridge History of American Literature," 3 vols. (1917-19) with William P. Trent and others.

Class Notes

SENIOR

At the senior class meeting Tuesday, October 6, Mary Bowles, the president presided. It was announced that the seniors had use of the kitchen on White House Hall every Friday night.

A committee of four was appointed to formulate plans for the senior dance scheduled December 5. A similar committee was appointed to be in charge of the circus stunt.

The president read a letter from Tac Waters, last year's senior class president, wishing "the happiest year ever".

Nominations for senior chaperons were made. Those elected will be announced later.

Marjorie Thompson was elected parliamentarian of the Sophomore class at a meeting held Tuesday night in the Rec.

Jenny Carroll asked that anyone who could swim or dive try out for the water carnival.

S. T. C. Girls Week-end

There were no particular college dances to attract S. T. C. girls this week-end but they all thought up different excuses and scurried away anyhow.

Mary Joyner Cox spent the week-end in Orange as the guest of Will Scott.

Sue Eastham visited Marion Hansbrough in Salem for several days.

Visit in Richmond

Many S. T. C. girls were seen in Richmond the past week-end. Some of them were shopping, some were at dances, while others lost their money and voices playing at the Virginia State Fair. Students seen in the capital city were Perle Panton, Rose Marie Hunter, Ruth James, Ruth Rives, Lois Powell, Vera Ebel, Elsie Dodd, Caroline Willis, Mary Frances Simpson, Louise Borden, Kitty Fitzgerald, Virginia Leonard, Jean Willis, Ann Hardy, Catherine Morrison, Estelle Thelma Smith Ruby Persons, Ann Billups, Dorothy Wise, May Bates, Harriette Vaden, Irene Parker and Marguerite Costello.

To Other Colleges

Bonnalynn Avery returned to her old school, William and Mary.

Kathleen McCann visited at Randolph-Macon in Lynchburg.

Dorothy Robertson returned to her home in Lynchburg this week and had as her guest Mary Denny.

At Annapolis

Uniforms, buttons, a football game and a hop attracted Marjorie Wicks to Annapolis where she spent a grand and glorious week-end with the sailor boys.

Dorothy Rudder returned to school Sunday after spending the past week-end in Brookneal with her parents, and having as her guest Mary Wanda Porterfield.

A. A. Weiner Roast

On Saturday afternoon, October 3, the Athletic Association entertained all the new girls with a weiner roast at the log cabin. After supper the group sat around a camp fire and sang college songs.

In Wedding

Elizabeth Burke was maid of honor in the Garrett-Caldwell wedding which took place in the Smyrna church. She wore a ruby toned taffeta gown and carried a bouquet of autumn coolred roses and snapdragons. Caroline Gwathney and Eugenia Redes were among the guests present.

Sigma Supper

Nan Seward, Jennie Bell Gilliam and Mary Bowles entertained the Sigma Sigma Sigma Sorority at supper hike at Longwood Sunday, October 4. After walking out to Longwood, the girls cooked weinies around the open fireplace. Those present included the active members of the chapter.

Juniors Entertain Freshmen at Kid Party in Gymnasium

On Thursday night, October 1, the gym was the scene of a rejuvenating event — everyone had changed into a kid again for the party given by the juniors to entertain the freshmen.

Every type of kid was represented. The Dionne quintuplets were there, causing their nurse much trouble by their pranks. The mischievous country lad, the fisher boy, and many other frisky kids had a frolicking time sucking lolly pops, eating apples, and playing such juvenile games as Follow the Leader, Farmer's in the Dell, and Cracking the Whip.

The Grand March, in which everyone was in such high glee that he had to skip and run, was formed so that the cutest and most original costumes might be selected.

Ducky Davies and Margaret Williams received the prize, a doll baby, for the cutest couple. The prize for the most original couple was won by Martha McCorkle and Helen Bell.

After the judging, everyone formed a circle to see the floor show. Betty Butterworth and Lib Harris showed 'em when they did their song and dance combination. Such thrilling crooners as Elsie Green and Virginia Agee held the crowd with heart sighs. A tap dance by Gwen Bell won favorable applause.

Virginia Agee soon had everyone thinking of a gay mountain-

Various Parts of Country Attract Faculty Members

If the vacations of all of our Faculty were rolled into one big vacation which was given to one person to take, it would take in almost all the interesting places and sights in this old country of ours. All the lovely trips couldn't be described, but we may say briefly how various faculty members vacationed.

Miss Virginia Bedford of the Art Department visited her home in Columbia, Missouri. While at her home she took in the high spots of Texas, including the Centennial .

Miss Waters of the Geography Department drove to Colorado to visit her sister. From there she drove to Texas, and, during the latter part of the summer, she went to New York.

Mr. Charlie French of the Science Department spent the greater portion of his vacation contacting prospective students. The last two weeks of his vacation were spent fishing on the Chesapeake Bay.

Miss Carrie B. Taliaferro of the Math Department kept house all summer, taking a trip to Birmingham, Pennsylvania late in the season.

Miss Barlow of the Physical Education Department attended a camp in Tennessee. Later she visited her home in Beverly, West Virginia.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick of the Physical Education Department studied in the Academy of Allied Arts in New York for three weeks under Doris Humphrey and Charles Weidman. The rest of her vacation was spent in New England.

Miss Draper of the French Department spent three weeks studying in the Modern Language Institute at William and Mary, and later she studied at Columbia for six weeks. She concluded her summer, camping at Chimney Rock, North Carolina.

Dr. Jeffers of the Biology Department visited his home in Newfoundland.

Miss Purdom of the Music Department spent some time in Montreat, Virginia, later journeying to her home in South Georgia.

Mr. Coyner of the Education Department visited in El Dorado, Arkansas this summer.

Miss Craddock of the Fine Arts Department studied at Columbia and spent the remainder of the summer at Richmond, Virginia.

Miss Nichols and Miss Hiner of the English Department flew to New York and studied the six phases of contemporary literature at Columbia University. These six phases were under Dr. Edman, Professor of Philosophy; Mr. Archibald MacLuck, Professor of Poetry and assistant editor of the Forum; Mr. Allen Tate, Professor of Poetry; Mr. Carl Van Doren, Professor of Novel; and Mr. Joseph Wood Krutch, Professor of Criticism and DDrama and dramatic critic for the Nation. In addition to these courses Miss Hiner studied Child Literature and Miss Nichols studied Comparative Literature.

Miss Moran of the Geography Department visited in Boston, New York and Washington.

Miss London of the Math Department, with her sister visited in Ocean City, N. J., for a week. After leaving Ocean City they made a two weeks tour of the New England States by the Mohawk Trail to Troy, N. Y., and from there by the Hudson River.

Miss Jeter of the Home Economics Department visited in Asheville, N. C.

Miss Florence Stubbs of the Sociology Department, studied at the University of Chicago, a few weeks, and drove back through the New England States.

Haase-Dodl

The marriage of Miss Marie Margaret Dodl, daughter of Mr. Julius Christopher Dodl of Farmville, to Rev. Roland Ernst Haase, past of St. John's and St. Paul's vangelical Lutheran churches of Farmville and Meherrin, and the Lutheran Missions of Amelia, Cumberland and Nottoway, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Haase of Richmond, Virginia, has been announced.

The ceremony was solemnized on Tuesday evening, September 29, in Bethelemy Lutheran Church in Richmond, with the pastor, the Rev. Oscar Adelbert Saver, officiating.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dodl of Forest Hill Avenue, after which the couple left for a trip north.

They will be at home in Farmville after October 15.

Burgess-Shepherd

A wedding of interest throughout Virginia was solemnized on Monday, September 28 in Washington, D. C., when Miss Georgia Mae Shepherd of Buckingham C. H. became the bride of Robert Carrington Burgess, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Burgess of Charlottesville.

The bride has been a member of the Dillwyn High School faculty

SPORT SLANTS

Hockey: Rain, rain, rain!! We wondered last week if it would ever stop. But once again it looks like "old man sun" will shine. Hockey practices were compelled to be postponed, much to our regrets, but we think that our substitute, the gym, for a hockey field, really did wonders for the less experienced players. They learned all of those things about hockey that we just have to know in order to play well. The girls were taught how to hold the sticks, dribble, stop balls, and also the different positions and line-ups. So they will be all ready to really start practicing next week. All those interested in this outstanding sport, come out and practice. Remember real competition between colors will soon begin, and the freshmen don't want to wear their rat caps till Christmas—but the sophomores really do want them to. The only thing we can do is wait—and practice.

Tennis: All girls, new and old interested in tennis please come out every Friday afternoon and practice. Elsie Cabell, manager of tennis, has planned a singles tournament, and every one is invited to take part. After all we have to have a tennis team sooner or later, and there is no better time than the present to find out who our "tennis champs" are.

Archery: Maxine Burke invites all girls to come out for archery. Maxine really knows how to be "cupid", or at least she can handle the bow and arrow and make it hit the right spot. Archery practice will begin next week, and so please come out. The art of using bow and arrow may prove helpful freshmen, so you had better come out.

Basketball: Basketball practices have already started, and the freshmen are really "tops." So far, there have been ten freshmen to every upper classman. We wonder if the freshmen are composing all class teams. Upper classmen, you had better come out and practice, or the freshmen will have no competition. The practices, have been to review us in those things we find hardest to perfect, such as passes, chest throws, and being able to "get off the floor" as Miss Iler says.

County Fair Thrills Farmville Students

Dust flying—men crying out, "Just one dime, folks. Step right up. A prize every time, you can't miss!"—Children hanging onto their mamas' weeping and wailing for a Mickey Mouse—girls shrieking and clutching at each other as they were whirled around in breath-taking speed on the whip and caterpillar. Yes, you guessed right. It's the Farmville fair and the students of S. T. C. entered into everything with such a gay and festive spirit that its exhilaration was catching.

The main exhibit boasted a prize lot of chickens and booths contributed by Farmville enterprises, such as the Red Cross Booth sponsored by the Southside Hospital. In the Home Demonstration Department luscious apples and other fruits and vegetables were arranged in a tempting display.

Miss Nichol's niece, Jeanne, was the lucky winner of the Chevrolet car given away. Congratulations, Jeanne!

By the way, if you've wondered about the surplus supply of little snapshots, bearing a strange resemblance to passport photographs, floating around, they're a result of the fair also. "Four Photographs in Four Minutes—one dime only!" The booth bearing this sign was one of the most popular there.

And now we come to the main midway where the shouting, clamor, confusion, and dust were doubled three-fold, and mingling with everything was the tempting odor of frying onions and hot-dogs sizzling on the griddle. Such titles as "International Congress of Living Oddities", "Mila and his Trunkfull of Mysteries," "Dare-devil Daniel—Sensational Death Defying Aerial Attraction," and "Chocolate Minstrel Show" adorned the various side shows which encircled the whip, the ferris wheel, and caterpillar which were affording most of the thrills.

And if you haven't had your fortune told, you simply don't know what you've missed. Besides, in your defenseless position, you have to listen to everyone else tell about her marriage in thirteen months to the tall dark man and the little boy she's going to have, without being able to shout them down with the prediction of your own future.

All in all, the girls returned to school with an allowance greatly depleted, but agreeing unanimously that a grand time was had by all.

Cats Are Prowling For Frightened Rats

Calling all cats!! Conference girls! It won't be long now, and what are the sophomores doing? Why, to be sure, they're licking their whiskers and baiting their traps. Look out rats!!

A certain day not long ago a certain sophomore traversed a certain hall and met a certain rat. The designated sophomore spoke; the rat didn't. What did the sophomore do? If you weren't the rat you probably feel all right. If you were wait and see!

When an ordinary rat sees a cat coming it scurries in its hole, and the cat sits and waits for it to come out. The longer the cat has to wait the madder it gets.

Take a tip, rats, and don't keep the sophomores waiting. If you enter into the spirit of things down here at S. T. C., we'll love you; but flat tires and horses are equally disliked. Be your best self, meet us halfway and you'll stand the test and find rat week the most fun ever!

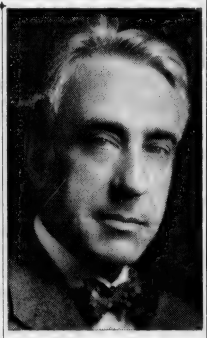
Dr. Erskine Speaks On Literary Topic

"Arts In Education" Is Subject of Address

HISTORY OF ARTS

Lecturer Is Musician As Demonstrated at Program

On Tuesday evening, October 13, Beorc Eh Thorn presented John Erskine—poet, lecturer, novelist, musician—in a lecture of literary interest. Dr. Erskine stands out among American literary figures today as an entertaining and challenging lecturer. After a welcome in behalf of the English Honor Society by Dorothy Price, the speaker was introduced by Professor James M. Grainger, head of the English department.



"Fine Arts in Education"

As his subject, Dr. Erskine chose "Fine Arts in Education", though he did not limit his talk to the scope for which he first set it. His lecture included a great many aspects of life, his philosophy, and his experiences. He began with the suggestion that American so-called fine arts, because we have attempted to preserve phases of the Greeks, Romans and the Medieval Age, are a contradiction of ideas. The word 'culture' is distasteful to Dr. Erskine, for he prefers that toward which it reaches.

History of Arts

In various sketches Dr. Erskine, in his subtle humor, traced education and the place of fine arts in the curricula of Greece, Rome and the Medieval Age. For instance, he told, the Roman peo-

Honor Group Bids Fourteen Students

Walmsley and Holton Talk at Meeting Tuesday

As a result of the meeting of Pi Gamma Mu, national honorary fraternity in Social Science, on last Tuesday night, fourteen juniors and seniors were asked to become members. Those girls who have shown themselves outstanding in the Social Science field, and having the required number of hours, who received bids from the organization were: Elizabeth Carroll, Martha Glenn Davis, Victoria Gillette, Kathryn Jamison, Louise Lewis, Bess McGlothlin, Elise McMillion, Norvell Montague, Marion Pond, Ruth Phelps, Marjorie Robertson, Dorothy Spenser, Mary Harrison Vaughan and Marguerite York.

Membership in Pi Gamma Mu is open to those juniors and seniors having twenty semester hours in Social Science, including History, Government, Sociology, Economics, Geography, and various courses in Education. The average grade must be above B plus on the subjects in the Social Science group, and nearer B than C on other subjects. A girl is also selected on the basis of having an interest in the Social Science field, and a desire to promote that interest.

Dr. Walmsley and Mr. Holton, members of the program committee, contributed to the meeting by talking to the group on the political platforms of the present political campaign for the election of the President of the United States.

Debate Group Sets Program for Year

Club Invites Colleges To Open Forum In November

A tentative program of forensic activties for this year was mapped out at a special meeting of the Debate Club on Thursday night, October the eighth. The question for debate this year is the national Pi Kappa Delta question, Resolved, that Congress should be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry.

S. T. C. teams engaged in thirty-two debates last year. They attended a Strawberry Leaf Conference at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, S. C., in the fall and were there again to the South Atlantic Forensic Tournament in March. On December the third, a team will go to Winthrop to the Strawberry Leaf Conference.

The club plans an open forum discussion on the national question early in November. The following colleges will be invited to join the discussion: Hampden - Sydney, Westhampton, Randolph-Macon, Men's College, and Duke University.

From the girls trying out for the Debate Club this year, Pattie Bounds, a sophomore, was elected to membership. There will be another set of try-outs within the next few weeks. The question for the new girls this time will be: Resolved that all electric utilities should be government owned and operated.

Margaret Pollard, who was president of the club last year, and a

Editor Announces Subscription Drive

Annual Staff Starts "Virginia Week" Tuesday

Tuesday, October 13, marks the beginning of "Virginian Week", Virginia Baker, editor, announces. On that day each member of the annual staff will wear a ribbon marked "Virginian". Anyone wishing to subscribe to the annual may do so by contacting one of the staff members, or at the table in the hall on Thursday morning.

Plans for the 1937 Virginian are well under way. The photographer was on campus taking individual pictures last week. He will return in a few weeks to take group pictures of organizations, class officers, etc. As usual, details about the annual will be kept secret until its publication in the spring.

Subscriptions for the Virginian are on sale now. To have an annual ordered the sum of one dollar, at least, must be paid in advance. Members of the staff have the subscription blanks.

Freshmen Choose Powell President

Minor Officers Also Elected By Class of '40

At a meeting of the Freshman class in the auditorium Wednesday, October 7, Jane Powell, of Hampton, Virginia, was elected president. Greeted on all sides with cheers and applauses, she said "I'm so shocked. I hope I won't disappoint you. We shall try to make ours the best Freshman class the school has ever had."

Nominations were made for the other offices. They were vice-president, Isabelle Williamson, Phillippa Schlabohm, Martha Sykes, and Ann Scott; for secretary, Rachel Trent, Ada Sanford, Sutie Dunton, Nancy Fontaine, and Harriet Vaden; for treasurer, Johnnie Lybrook, Helen Jefers, Harriet Vaden, Margaret Black, Dot Eades, and Nancy Moss; for class representatives to Student Government, Ester Beebe, Elizabeth Kent, Eloise Whitney, Nancy Taylor, Isabelle Williamson, Hazelwood Burbank, Ann Moore, and Marion Harden.

At the meeting held on Thursday night, Martha Sykes, Roanoke was chosen vice-president, Harriet Vaden, Richmond, secretary; Dot Eades, Roanoke, treasurer. Ann Moore and Ester Beebe will be the two representatives to Student Government.

At a third call-meeting the representatives to the Student Standards committee, Ann Billups and Sarah Kesee, were selected.

Rats Furnish Entertainment As Sophomores Hold Sway

Congratluations, Rats! Your work was nobly done. If, when brought before a stern and austere Judge and an equaly mercenary jury you are not condemned to hang or yet be laid some meaner fate, oh be consoled, most wretched ones in the knowledge that to observe the rulings of your order you did your best.

Let it be remembered that for three full terrible days you did bequeath your individuality to a common cause, did robe yourselves in the garment of the lowly rat, become in many cases chambermaids — mere chattels — and served the sophomores with splendor worthy of a higher calling.

Let it never be said that the honorable sophomores did lack entertainment in that period so memorable to students of State Teachers' College in Farmville.

In conclusion, lowly rats and granting of course that you survive the terrors of that ghostly court convention of the fourteenth night of the tenth month in the year nineteen-hundred thirty six A. D. let us wish for you as well earned reward a year of great accomplishment and many joys at S. T. C.

S. T. C. Circus Animals

Mary Lib Slater, animal trainer, with two of her pets.

Circus Promises Excitement With Animals, Freaks, Fun

Say, are you going to the circus? You are?. Well, you ought to be glad because that's the entertainment hit of the year. Oh, everybody loves the circus! Its the most exciting thing you've ever seen. You'll laugh yourself hoarse and eat yourself sick. There'll be hot dogs and peanuts and drinks and Hampden-Sydney boys! Won't that be fun? Real boys! And all the freshmen are coming because they'll be off campus. Glory!

You'll love the animals. They're such queer looking things. It's rumored that they'll talk this year. Course now you never can tell about rumors, but you can expect 'most anything at an S. T. C. circus. Some say there's a jeep this year and a goon, too! Can you believe it?

The class acts always surprise you. You never know what to expect. The juniors have been doing some sort of singing, but what that means is beyond this person's comprehension. Last year there were some swell performance, and they say they're better this year, but that remains to be seen. You know, the acts have been really under cover this year. Everybody's been mighty quiet. That's always an interesting sign!

Can you imagine who'll be queen this year? You'll be surprised when you find out. You always are in spite of how you always claim you won't let yourself be. She's always veiled at first; and then she throws back the veil, and presto! you're surprised. Then the crowd will go wild, and you'll go on and follow it like a good sheep.

After the acts are over, you begin the eating. You'll want your fortune told and to see the freaks. You won't want to miss a thing. In fact you'll die if you have to miss one thing! Then you'll dance and you'll love it—what with all Hampden-Sydney here. The only bad thing is that twelve o'clock will roll around too fast and you'll sigh, because it was all so perfectly swell and because it's over.

F. Wakayama Gives Sketch of Home Life To Students at Sing

Fumi Wakayama, one of our students, gave a sketch of her home life in Japan, at the regular Sing hour, in the college auditorium Saturday night.

"When I was in Japan, I was very anxious to come to America. Now I am enjoying being here in this beautiful country, and I want to tell you about my home life."

Fumi told of the members of her family—three brothers and four sisters all of whom attend schools except her youngest brother. He father is very much interested in growing flowers, spends much of his time caring for the garden. Her brothers and sisters wear western clothes, as do the children of America, but her mother reverts to the Japanese style of dress, and wears the Japanese kimono.

After describing the members of her family, and telling of what they do, Fumi described her home. She stated that her home is very much like the American home on the outside, but that it is very different inside. There is one American, or western room, however, where there are tables, chairs, a piano and a radio, perhaps; but they take off their shoes when entering the house.

"In the Japanese room there are soft mats on the floor and sliding-doors everywhere, some made of wood, and some made of paper," she continued.

Fumi then sketched a customary day of Japanese life:

"At this time of the year we get up about 6:00 o'clock and fold the quilts on which we sleep, and

The Y. W. C. A. held its first open cabinet meeting in the Y. W. Lounge on Wednesday, October 7. A full report of the Student Conference held in June at Blue Ridge, N. C., was given.

The annual conference of students who represent all the colleges in the Southern Region is a highlight in the Y. W. C. A. year. Last summer the conference was unusually large, with over five hundred delegates attending.

English Honor Group Announces Members Elected Last Week

Beorc Eh Thorn, English Honor Society, has announced its new members. Students who come up to standards of excellency in the field of English, and who have a definite contribution to make to a group have been invited to membership in the organization.

The following girls have accepted the invitation of Beorc Eh Thorn: Evelyn Beale, Pattie Bounds, Dorothy Buckland, Doris Miller, Norvell Montague, Alice Nelson, Virginia Yager, Janice Bland, Elizabeth Prince, Kathleen Sawyer, David Terry, Edna Walden, Elizabeth Tyree, and Margaret Black.

"Mary the Third" Will be Presented By Dramatic Club

S. T. C. and H.-S. C. Students Compose Cast

WHEELER DIRECTS

Fall Production Is Racheal Crothers' Play

Ultra-moderness characterizes the production which will open the season of the Dramatic Club. "Mary the Third" by Racheal Crothers will be staged on November 20 by the combined talent of the Hampden-Sydney and State Teachers College Clubs. It will be given under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler, known in amateur theatrical circles through out the state for the finesse of her presentations.

Casting Nearly Complete

Casting has been in progress for several days, being practically complete at the present time. However, anouncement of the result will not be made known until a later date.

Crothers' Plays Success

Racheal Crothers has for a number of years been one of America's foremost playwrights. The average reader and theatregoer is acquainted with several of her dramas, "Let Us Be Gay" and "When Ladies Meet" being two of the best known. Miss Crothers writes from an interestingly modern viewpoint without considering it necessary to commit blasphemy against all cultural and moral standards. One author writes of her: "Miss Crothers has had the happy faculty of growing with the times."

"Mary the Third" received most favorable attention on the New York stage, running for several years there after its premier showing in 1923. It follows the recent trend for "Cavalcade" type of action, the first two generations being subordinated into a prologue for the third.

Honor Fraternity Hears Wynn Talk

Kappa Delta Pi Bids Twenty-three Girls

The Farmville State Teacher's College Chapter of Kappa Delta Pi held its first meeting of the year last Thursday. Dr. Wynn, counselor for the fraternity made an interesting talk on the summer school session of the Kappa Delta Pi.

During the meeting it was decided that a letter should be sent to the alumnae of the society, so that if they found any teaching vacancies, they might notify the fraternity, which would in turn notify the employment board. This letter was read before those present. The society is working on a practical program to carry out throughout the year to orientate freshmen and new girls as to which curriculum is suited for what they want and as to the possibility in the state of getting a job in that field.

Education Week, which is to start on October 9 throughout the United States, was discussed. Miss Carter gave a talk about what Education Week really is to the society.

The final business of the society was to vote on the girls to be given bids for outstanding work and exceptional grades in the field of education.

THE A. A.

As we begin our school year we hear announcements made by the Athletic Association of the games and sports scheduled for practices each day. Some girls immediately become interested in taking an active part in the athletic life of the college. Others never seem to realize that they belong to the Athletic Association. The A. A. includes every girl in school. Its purpose is to "stimulate interest in the right types of athletics for recreation and social benefit; to promote general efficiency; to appeal to the many instead of the few; to create wider friendships; and to develop the highest type of sportsmanship that can be put into the life of a girl as a citizen."

All sports or athletics are beneficial and with so many to choose from, surely each of us may find the type that appeals to us. The A. A. includes a variety of sports so that there is some form of athletics to suit every girl whether she be interested in tennis, swimming, hockey, golf or what not. However busy we may be, we will always be able to find time to devote at least an hour a day to some phase of athletics that will be not only recreation for us, but will aid us in developing good sportsmanship, and making new friends. Too, we will be supporting our school and class colors. Every girl wishes to be a well-rounded individual, and no field offers her as much chance to develop her body, mind, and character as athletics.

THE SPANISH SUITUATION

The loyalist forces in Spain must either stop the forces now, or their defeat will merely be a matter of time. Latest reports from the front, even though they indicate that chances of a government victory are not hopeless, certainly cannot be termed good.

The loyalists have at least one asset, they have not enjoyed heretofore, and that is that they have at least achieved unity of command and a much improved discipline in the ranks. Bands of soldiers had roamed about the country without concern for the movements of the other fighting men, and there had also been no directing head of the government's armies. Now these things have been remedied, and the morale of the defenders has been materially improved.

"Since a better-integrated plan of campaign has been devised by the government and impromptu excursions by perepatetic groups of soldiers have been reduced to a minimum, it is still possible that Madrid will not fall." The Spanish government threw away its best chance of victory when it drove back the rebels early in the war from the Guadarramo Mountains and failed to follow them up. It lost another important opportunity when it allowed the rebels to capture Toledo.

"Today the loyalists stand face to face with disaster." The rebel advance must be halted. However, chances of a rebel victory are better than chances of a loyalists one, although a loyalist triumph is not impossible.

PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

The time is drawing near for the close of the presidential campaign. All of us are interested in this election, for we know that the time has come for us to begin to take part in elections.

Of the two major parties' candidates we are perhaps the more familiar with Franklin Delona Roosevelt. Time and again we have heard his pleasant voice over the radio and have seen his flashing, winning smile in pictures. His voice is full of gayiess, is eased with confidence, and at times has a touch of bravado. Backed with family traditions this man fought against the entrenched control of politics by Tammany Hall. He is filled with the idea of doing what he believes to be the solution of the many problems that confront him. He is always willing to accept the advice of those around him and quickly acts upon the best of it. Is this the man you wish to be your President for the coming four years?

In contrast Alfred Landon does not make such an excellent appearance. His friends say that there is a quality of ease and friendliness prominent in his voice when he is engaged in private conversation. but the American public finds that lacking when it listens to him over the radio. With his quiet, unspectacular modesty he grew up in a country where each was the person he made himself. He, like his opponent, worked against controlled politics. Always ready to receive advice, he is slow to act in comparison with the other candidate. He also wishes to do what is best for the country. Is this man to be our President?

Both of these men have platforms similar. The former's platform would give the Federal government the right to decide how to adjust industrial, social, and economical conditions; the latter believes that an individual state or group of states is capable of dealing with such matters. Both agree with difference as to where the power should be that the liassez-faire policy should be dropped to a certain degree.

Then too, American public sentiment will not allow any one man to gain too much power. It also goads the opposite of a headstrong executive. We are inclined to worry too much about what will happen if anyone goes to extremes. Our ways of public expression will prevent a President from getting out of line or remaining out too long.

It is not a question of party principles. It is a choice between two temperaments. This is what faces us. Which shall it be?

A survey at the U. of Maryland showed that sororities with the lowest scholastic averages were well above the frats boasting the highest marks.

World News

Last week, while dedicating some new German roads, Hitler excited quite a bit of opposition by saying, "There may be countries that can afford democracy. Perhaps if we had four or five million square kilometers of colonies, if we had surplus grain, coal and raw materials such as copper, tin and zinc and if oil were just flowing out of our soil as elsewhere, then perhaps we could also afford democracy." His remarks were a mild reiteration of his oft-expressed desire for expansion to the east.

Japan has for the second time presented the Chinese Government with sweeping demands, described by Tokyo as "mild general principles" which would when put into effect iron out the differences between the two nations.

Evidences are accumulating that the Popular Front government of France is due for a heavy battle. This does not mean that Premier Blum has lost any of his personal strength or that those opposed to the devaluation of the franc will try to oust him. It is supposed that the relatively large vote against the measure reflected a political omen of opposition to the governmental affairs for the past five years.

The normal friendly relations between the United States and Soviet Russia was strained by an attack made against Secretary Morgenthau. The writers took care not to attack the American Government but confined themselves to ridiculing Morgenthau as an individual by saying that he was untruthful and finally stating that his attempted rescue of the English pound was a pre-election stunt.

With the help of the biggest expeditionary force that has left British shores since the World War, Great Britain set to work in earnest this week on the task of pacifying Palestine. Already the Arabs can feel the pressure of overwhelming military force ruthlessly applied. But with all the blood and bullets in the little country, one can see a re-emergence of the constructive British policy that has proved its worth in more than one crisis in the past quarter of a century.

Intercollegiate

Each year about this time feature writers seize the opportunity of displaying to their readers the stupidity which freshmen are alleged to exhibit in writing their psychological tests. Astonishing answers—probably highly colored by over-energetic scribes—are always revealed. This list of freshman fantasies, however, has some authenticity. With due apologies:

A bladder is a spongy paper to absorb ink.

A tambourine is a very small, sweet orange.

A corps is an oration in commemoration of the character of a dead person.

A taboret is a dine and dance place.

A turtle is a body which has polarity and the property of strongly attracting iron.

"Today's undergraduate is alert, sophisticated, in-on-the-know, intelligent, clever, cynical, sure. He is not burdened with a sense of humor, he entertains self-pity, he thinks the world owes him a living he is understandably apprehensive, he is tempted to drop his piece of meat for what he sees reflected in the water. He is not inclined to properly evaluate the country in which he has played no pioneering part. He does not believe in Santa Claus." Fannie Hurst pans the undergraduate.

The whole Wofford College football squad was jailed temporarily at Martinsville, Virginia, because one of the members tried to swipe a "no-parking" sign as a souvenir.

Rotunda Reverberations

The circus isn't until Saturday—but did you ever see such horrible looking girls around any school? I'm sure if they were put in a freak booth they wouldn't have to worry about claiming first prize. Even the president of the freshman class must act as the rest of the lowly rats. Your time will come though. If your "heart throbs" could see you now I'm not so sure but that they'd be on their way. (I'm told they don't like nature in the raw.) That little saying of Miss Foster's would prove to be quite true, "to let your beau know that you have no others on the string and he still comes around is most always known as true love." And so if you, freshmen are in this fix, you'd better wire him to stay at home week-ends.

Richmond was the place to go this past week-end. Uniforms and more uniforms and if you didn't get one, you were bad off. Even with Richmond so popular, Newport News was swinging high in some girls minds. But that bunch really put it on. Women never spoil trips, so I am told. (All right Fanny.)

Why don't freshmen look at the seniors the next time they go to chapel and stop making remarks as: "How are you going to dress for rat week?" or "Won't we look funny next week?" After four years of studying and you're still mistaken for a freshman, I guess

WALT WHITMAN

The Poet of Free Verse

"The song is to the singer, and comes back most to him;
The teaching is to the teacher, and comes back most to him;
The murder is to the murderer, and comes back most to him."

Today Walt Whitman is read and appreciated, but only scorn and condemnation were his during his lifetime. Tolerance was not then as common as it is today.

He was born in Long Island, New York. Poets seem to live to an old age: Whitman, born on May 31, 1819, died in 1892.

Whitman was a school teacher, printer, newspaper editor, a nurse in the Civil War, and took a lively interest in public affairs. His health was impaired by his service as a nurse in the Civil War, resulting in his becoming partly paralyzed in 1873. His last years were spent in want in Camden, New Jersey.

The best-liked of all Whitman's poems is "O Captain! My Captain" (yet it is not representative of his writing.) This poem has become the funeral dirge for Abraham Lincoln.

The characteristics of his poetry are: free verse, absence of meter and rhyme, and "the daring expression of an idea as daring". "Leaves of Grass" is his best known collection and others are "Drum Taps" and "Sands at Seventy". All are typical of his uncommon mode of expression, a mode which is sometimes mistakenly termed rough but which is merely uncommon.

Whitman was a true lover of democracy, despising weakness of spirit and sham of any kind. These qualities are shown in his poetry.

O Captain! My Captain!

O Captain! My Captain! Our fearful trip is done,
The ship has weathered every rock, the prize we sought is won,
The port is near, the bells I hear, the people all exulting,
While follow eyes the steady keel, the vessel grim and daring;
But, O heart! heart! heart!
O the bleeding drops of red,
Where on the deck my captain lies,
Fallen cold and dead.
O Captain! My Captain! rise up and hear the bells;
Rise up—for you the flag is flung —for you the bugle trills,
For you bouquets and ribboned wreathes—for you the shores a-crowding,
For you they call, the swaying mass, their eager faces turning;
Hear Captain! dear father!
This arm beneath your head!
It is some dream that on the deck
You've fallen cold and dead.
My Captain did not answer, his lips are pale and still,
My father does not feel my arm, he has no pulse nor will,

THE LIBRARIAN - - - - - - - - - - By Jacqueline Johnson

Note: The reviews are excerpts from the Book Review Digest.

Gone With The Wind—Margaret Mitchell. This is a long first novel about the Civil War and its aftermath in Georgia. The heroine is Scarlett O'Hara, a selfish, wilful girl of sixteen at the opening of the story, a woman of twenty-eight at the end. For sheer story value this is said to be one of the finest civil war epics of all times. It is a book written with great narrative vigor and with characters created with animation. Miss Mitchell's book gives the impression that it was written by one who had really been through the war, was personally affected by the events and battles, but yet had kept some perspective about people and happenings.

Excerpts from the autobiographical sketch of Margaret Mitchell: "I was born in Atlanta and have lived here all my life. I was educated at the Atlantic Public Schools and at Washington Seminary. I hoped to study medicine, but while I was at Smith College my mother died and I had to come home to keep house. I chose the Civil War period to write about, because I was raised on it. In fact I heard everything except that the Confederates lost the war. When I was ten years old, it was a violent shock to learn that General Lee had been licked.

"If the novel has a theme, the theme is survival. What was it that made some of our people able to come through a War, a Reconstruction, and a complete wrecking of the social and economic system? I don't know. I only know that the survivors took to call the quality 'gumption'. So I wrote about the people who had gumption and the people who didn't."

Listen For a Lonely Drum—Carmer Carl Lamson. In this book the author of "Stars Fell on Alabama" has described the social life and customs of his native New York. Wandering from Buffalo to upstate New York, he listened to folk tales, scandal, tales of religious passion, and tall stories. By most of the critics this book is acclaimed to be better than "Stars Fell on Alabama", because in that book he was writing of a mode of life of which he was an outsider while here he is "ploughing a furrow he knows by birthright." It has the same casual artfulness of narrative and is alive from beginning to end.

Give Me One Summer—Mr. Emlile Loring. There is always apt to be an element of mystery in any novel by Mr. Loring. In this, however, the mystery assumes more important proportions than in earlier books. There is never a dull moment in the novel, making light, amusing reading.

Gunnar's Daughter—Segrid Undset. This powerful, superbly written tale of the North in the Middle Ages belongs with Kristin Lavransdatter. It is in these Mediaeval romances that her art, many critics believe, is at its greatest and certainly few books in our time have won so many admirers.

The story is steeped in the atmosphere of the sages and recreates a bygone age as completely as did Mrs. Undset's other and more famous historical romance. It is so simple in style, so strong and primitive in the emotions it arouses, and yet so poetic that the reader often feels that he is listening to a mediaeval bard, telling of heroic life of men and women who lived only yesterday.

List of some of the new books to be found in the library:" Hearts That Understand", Louise Harrison McCraw; "Around The World in Eleven Years", Patience, Richard and John Abbe; "The Longest Years," Sigrid Undset; "Without Armour", James Hilton; "Mary Peters", Mary Ellen Chase; "Folded Hills", Stewart Edwards; "The Curates Wife", E. H. White; "Mr. Strong", Carroll John Day; "Floating Peril", E. Phillips Oppenheim.

Music and Football Attract S. T. C. Girls

Over two hundred girls left school the past week-end. There were far too many to mention here individually. Some attended weddings; several were seen at dances, and others were just home-sick.

The Great Waltz

Top hats, white ties, tails, ermines, velvets and satins flashed at the Mosque in Richmond where society members thronged to see "The Great Waltz". This musical extravaganza attracted Nan Throckmorton, Minnie Smith, Katheryn Fitzgerald, Jeanne Nichols, and Lib Harris.

Football

Football games seemed to be the center of interest. As usual some girls went out to Death Valley and backed Hampden-Sydney's eleven.

With maroon and gold colors flying and a uniform by the arm many S. T. C. girls supported the tech's team to a 14-0 triumph over William and Mary. These were Ann Ellis, Eurelia Ellis, Bernice Jones, Mary Virginia Walker, Mable Burton, Doris Adkins, Edna Bolick, Evelyn Howell, Frances Bryant, Elizabeth Butler, Charlotte Doggett, Cassie Boswell, Page Nottingham, and Mariette Vaden.

Julia Raney attended the University of North Carolina's dances and a football game at Chapel Hill the past week-end.

Susan Lane and Pattie Bounds were outstanding at Annapolis where they attended a hop and the game with University of Virginia.

Zell Hopkins motored to Dawes, West Virginia, to see the Washington and Lee and University of West Virginia game.

Visiting

Martha Gwaltney visited Lois Jenkins at Powhatan.

Ruby Parson had as her guest Estelle Thelma Smith at Stoney Creek.

Francis Irving, accompanied by Georgia Strinfellow as her guest for the week-end, visited her home in Culpeper.

Senior Class

Senior Chaperons were elected by that class on Tuesday, October 13. Those elected are as follows: Virginia Baker, Virginia Bean, Mary Bowles, Margaret Carroll, Sue Mallory, Marie Moore Lucile Moseley, Virginia Leonard, Zaida Thomas and Jean Willis.

Virginia Leonard announced to the class that beginning after class meeting the annual staff was conducting a subscription drive. The class which buys the most subscriptions to the annual in the next two weeks will be awarded a prize of two dollars.

Tickets for the Circus are on sale. The girl who sells the most tickets in each class will get a free ticket into the Circus. The girl who sells the most tickets in school will receive a ticket into the Circus which will include all side-shows, also.

Elizabeth Shiplett volunteered to take charge of the senior mail boxes. She will anounce to the class their arrangement at the next meeting.

Senior Installation will be held Monday night, October 19. Every senior was urged to have her cap and gown by that date.

Choral Club Notes

It was anounced by Mr. Strick that the Choral Club had more talent from the freshman class than in previous years, at the meeting held Monday, October 12. The new members seem enthusiastic and the year promises to be a successful one for that organization.

At the meeting the president, Ruth Phelps, presented Mr. Strick with a birthday gift, which is customary with the club.

A committee of four was appointed to keep the Choral Club room in order, and a similar committee was appointed to plan a program for entertainment of the new members.

A notice at the University of Illinois: "A wildlife club for students—graduate and undergraduates will be organized." Hm!

Beorc Eh Thorn Has Reception for Erskine

On Tuesday evening, after the lecture, the Beorc Eh Thorn entertained at a reception for Dr. John Erskine. The reception was held in the Lounge of Student Building. Besides the members of Beorc Eh Thorn, faculty members, and members of the Administration, guests were present.

The receiving line was composed of Dorothy Price, president of the society, Dr. Erskine, Miss Mary White Cox, Dr. Jarman, Mr. J. M. Grainger and other members of the faculty.

Baptist Young People Enjoy Church Social

The B. S. U. entertained a very enthusiastic gathering of Baptist young people at the church on Tuesday, October 8.

The young people were welcomed at the door and given slips of paper on which to write their names. Many new and interesting games were introduced to the group which showed its satisfaction in the continual merriment.

The guests were treated to hot tea, sandwiches, cakes and candy.

Eubank-May

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. May of Forest have announced the marriage of their daughter, Viola Elizabeth to Russell Eubank of Blue Ridge, which was celebrated in May at their home. The bride has taught in Bedford county schools for the past several years.

Miss Marion Forbes

Miss Marion Forbes, daughter of the late P. A. and Mrs. Helen M. Forbes of Buckingham died in July after a long illness. She was formerly connected with the Woman's College of Richmond, and the Collegiate School for Girls in Richmond.

She is survived by four brothers, A. C. Forbes of Glassboro, N. J.; A. P. Forbes of Richmond; T. P. Forbes of Lynchburg and B. B. Forbes of Norfolk.

Miss Emma Feagans

Miss Emma Feagans, 24, daughter of Mrs. John William Feagans of Forest Road, Lynchburg, died at Virginia Hospital after an illness of two weeks.

Besides her mother, she is survived by the following brothers and sisters: Elmore Feagans of Beckley, W. Va.; Robert, William, Eva, Nellie, Vera, and Mary Feagans, all of Lynchburg.

Sing Given Saturday on Country Schools

Laugh! Laugh! Everyone is still laughing over the ludicrous interpretation of the country school program as presented at Sing, on Saturday night. As "school marm" Lucille Mosley opened the session by having the loca talent display their ability in various fields.

Singing: those tunes that made you wonder why fate had sent you to Farmville.

Dancing: That made your feet just itch for a pepy orchestra.

Music: That reminded one of those carefree days of summer. And monologues to keep you laughing. Add to this the antics of the ypical 'school kids" and you have a fair idea of last week's Sing.

Over a million students entered institutions of higher learning this fall. Thirty-three of each hundred of the 1936 high school graduates are now college freshmen.

Selinsgrove, Pa.—Susquehanna University's football players have gone on a strike for higher wages because the time taken by practice caused their employers to reduce their wages.

Demands of the university to reimburse the students for their losses were met with flat denials from the unversity's president because of conference rulings against paying athletes.

Picture-Making Brings Forth Pageant of College Beauties

Big girls, little girls, brunette girls, blond girls, redheads, rushing in a steady stream toward the Rotunda . . . new curls and twists with the smell of waving fluid floating over all . . . Dresses that may dip in front or droop at the sides but have a becoming neckline . . . Mascara, eyeshadow, penciled eyebrows, careful makeup in spite of the un-romantic daylight hours . . . Excited freshmen practicing smiles, frowns, and "what have you" in the mirror for hours . . . Upper classmen wondering whether to look wise, sophisticated, or cute . . . Seniors clutching towels, and wishing they had the neck and shoulders of Myrna Loy . . . The time of all this helter-skelter? Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday. Setting? The second floor of the center of our college life. The result? Ah, wait 'til you see our Annual!

Dr. Jarman Charms Students With His Singing at Chapel

Students day chapel was observed on Wednesday, October 7th. Dot Wise, president of the Y. W. C. A., led the devotionals.

Dr. Jarman charmed everyone, old and new alike, with his singing. He sang Tommy Lad, In the Garden of Tomorrow, and Keep on Hoping.

Freshman Narrates Campus Impression

I guess I'm pretty smart because I'm not one bit homesick. There aren't many freshmen who can say, 'Course now, I do sort of miss Mom and all the good food, but I just grin and bear it. This is a good place. I like it, but I sort of wish some things were different.

Up here they don't believe in sleeping at all. They yell all night long and they're awake at dawn. Bells ring so much. They scare me to death early in the morning. I always think it's the fire bell back home and expect to hear Pop rush out. That sort of gives me a queer feeling, but I'm not really homesick.

Farmville girls get so excited over things. Back home we take things easy-like. What is this thing called "Shannon's" anyhow? It certainly has stirred up my curiosity Nobody'll tell me anything about it, and I'm scared to ask much. And another thing, why do girls rush around whistling and yelling at something called "Herman" when I know perfectly well there's nothing there? Some people have a funny sense of humor.

As for the Hampden-Sydney boys, well all I've seen of them was standing on a street corner or barging out of a white store. Some of 'em wear the queerest little hats too. I don't think they're very cute in those.

At night I wish most of all for home. I remember all sorts of things. I would miss the cows more, but there's one up here called "Moo-Moo" that keeps me from doing that. Girls go wild over her That puzzles me, too, because after all cows aren't so peculiar.

I think it's queer the way these girls fuss about teaching. Now I want to teach. Didn't the new school teacher rope in Thomas Jones within two months back at home? Home's so quiet. This pace is so loud. Mom wrote me all about my puppy. He's real too. Aw gee, he's so cute and fat—but I'm not homesick. I'd just kind of like to see things back home. But this is a good place. We have ice cream twice a week.

Cambridge, Mass.—A "Court of Wisdom" that would meet each year to coordinate the intelligence of man into a unified "world mind" is now being considered by world scientists after the successful Conference of Arts and Sciences held here to celebrate the tercentary anniversary of the founding of Harvard College.

The world can only be assured of a continuance of Western civilization only through the advice and guidance of the world intellectual leaders, acting as a permanent body and organized along the lines of the Harvard conference, the leaders of the movement claim.

They believe that the impetus provided this year by Harvard should not be allowed to die out, for they believe that the time has come for leaders to pool their collective wisdom in the interest of increasing the health, wealth and happiness of mankind.

our compliments should go to S. T. C. for keeping girls young.

There are still some fair ones who don't realize they're away from mother's apron strings. Virginia Tilman read a letter three times before she realized that the boy was proposing in a round about way. Why are some people born that way? And then there's that story of the lower classman tripping to S. T. C. with her boy friend's picture, and on visiting an old girl's room she finds much to her surprise a picture just like hers. Hard luck. I'm betting on the winning side, be it red head or blond.

Come the cool of the evening! When we can study in comfort. Also for that circus. You know there are going to be some rare sights, so bring your money, true loves, mothers and dads, above all, your money. Support your class—and if the odor of onions doesn't drive you away, I'm sure you'll enjoy it.

Students Choose Outstanding Girls

Virginian Will Reveal Eight Selected In Spring

The Virginian staff conducted the annual voting for the eight most outstanding S. T. C. students today. Results of the ballotting will be known when the book comes out next spring.

Sixteen girls were selected by a committee composed of representatives from the major organizations and faculty members. Of the sixteen on the ballot, students selected the eight they considered most outstanding in every way. Those nominated included Virginia Bean, Virginia Baker, Mary Bowles, Elsie Cabell, Chic Dortch, Claire Eastman, Victoria Gillette, Martha Hamlet, Frances Hudgins, Bonnie Lone, Virginia Leonard, Madeline McGlothlin, Libby Morris, Mary Lib Slater, Mary Harrison Vaughan and Dorothy Wise.

My Interview With John Erskine

By Mary Harrison Vaughan

Dr. Erskine is one of the most charming and natural people I've ever met. It is seldom that such lovable qualities are found in so great a person. He seemed perfectly willing to let interested persons in on the secret of his finding the true joy of living.

When Dr. Erskine writes, it is usually between the hours of twelve A. M. and two. Only then can he find the quiet and peace necessary for his work. He never reads what he has written until his work is complete, because he desires to keep one trend of though running through the entire piece of literature. When he has finished what he began, he rereads and makes corrections. Before he undertakes to write a word, he knows the plot of what he will write and usually the last line.

Dr. Erskine travels only part of the year. The rest of his life he spends in his New York home. There he lives his life as he sees fit. He believes he has always done only what he likes. He believes in putting aside unpleasant duties, from which little pleasure or benefit can be derived, for the big things in life that really bring happiness to the individual.

Some of the happiest moments of his life have been spent in reading. He uses his leisure moments reading, and he advises all college students to find time for a few minutes of good literature a day. He once advised a bunch of college boys to "go to the library because they had legs and the library didn't." He says he'll always advise neglecting other work for reading.

To himself, Dr. Erskine is a lazy person. He claims he is that by nature and presents the fact that he does only what will bring him pleasure as a proof. He doesn't even write if he is sleepy. He lives leisurely and completely.

Mornings for Dr. Erskins are spent in practicing his music or in seeing various friends. He always learns his music by reading it in bed before he tries it on the piano. He says most musicians do that. At night this versatile man attends shows, lectures and plays. Later, in the quiet of the earliest morning hours, he finds time to pick up his pen and give to the world some of its finest contemporary literature. In his writing his calm, clever and wholly delightful self is revealed, but the man himself is more interesting than any of his works.

Celebration Begins At Lynchburg, Va.

Lynchburg, Oct. 12 (Special)—Student from all Virginia Colleges and universities are expected to come here for Lynchburg Sesqui-Centennial dances to be given the nights of October 15 and 16, Mosby G. Perrow, Jr., dance committee chairman, has announced.

College Girls Attend

The dances, which will be feature events of the week-long celebration, are being planned especially as an attraction to students, Mr. Perrow said. Permission has been secured from officials of Sweet Briar and Randolph-Macon Woman's colleges for the girls to attend. With Lynchburg's dancing set and young women from all sections of Virginia present for the celebration, the dance should rival the South's most outstanding social function.

Jack Denny Will Play

Music for the balls will be furnished by Jack Denny and his internationally famous dance band, Mr. Perrow announced. Denny will come to Lynchburg direct from New York where he has been playing at the French Casino and earlier at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The Thursday night dance will be a Colonial Ball. Dancers will be gowned in clothes of the colonial period and all the glory and glamour of the old south will reign. To furnish a natural setting for the elaborate function a Lynchburg architect has been employed to decorate spacious City armory.

Presiding over the dance will be Queen Lynchburg and Miss Columbia who will be selected from forty Lynchburg beauties. In the queen's court will be twelve Lynchburg girls while Miss Columbia wil have as her attendants, 48 girls representing each State in the Union.

The Friday night dance will be the final large event of the celebration. Preceeding it will be the last showing of the historic pageant, which has a cast of more than a thousand persons, and a mammoth parade.

SPORT SLANTS

Basketball: Have you noticed the gym on Wednesday afternoons? If you haven't you should take a look, for it is most as crowded as it would be if we were having a "Duke Dance"—and the colors—I'll say, there's blue, red, black and white. In fact most every color is represented, even to the latest thing—"Sue Eastman" in "London tan". The practices are going along swell, and have you heard the freshmen comment? "Why Miss Iler is the grandest coach in the world"—and, "Oh, isn't she so much better than the coach we had in high schools?" Really—we will have to give Miss Iler the honors, because she's just swell, and the freshmen surely are learning. Please all upper classmen and new girls come out and support your class teams.

Hockey: The Athletic field is truly a busy place, especially on Tuesdays and Thursdays—hockey practices were taken up mostly with the technique of the game, such as holding the stick, dribbling and positions and line-ups. The old girls as well as the new were out taking an active part—with Bernice Jones, Elizabeth Smith, Katherine Irby, Mary Bowles and Mary Virginia Walker, and if the seniors find time to come out—well—the rest of the classes can too. The Juniors and Seniors are really stepping out—and there's no need for comment about the freshmen. But just remember that we will soon be playing the games off.

Croquet: "Oh, won't you come over, and tramp down the clover, and play croquet with me!"

Joan Court has been the scene of some real croquet playing, and it really is great fun. Just ask "Miriam Ficklin"—she seems to be most interested, and she really does play well. There's no excuse for not taking the "well known exercise," so come on out.

Tennis: Elsie Cabell is really distressed— "If it doesn't rain,—the courts are being worked on," and so on it goes. But whatever it be, "tennis must go on." Thus, we find Elsie, the noble one, down in the gym on Friday afternoons, and you've no idea how much it helps to just "brush up" on those weak points. "Be a sport" and play tennis.

Freshm'n Commission Elects Hope Minter Chairman For Session

Hope Minter was elected chairman of the newly-organized freshman commission at a meeting of that group Monday night. Other officers elected were secretary, Marjorie Nimmo; and treasurer, Nancy Taylor. Ruth Montgomery, freshman councilor, presided over the meeting.

Other members of the commission are Betty Hardy, Marie Eason, Jean Watts, Macon Raine, Jane Baldwin, Shirley Andrews, Lulu Windham, Eloise Whitley and Phil Schlobohm. Jane Powell, president of the freshman class is an ex-officio member.

The commission acts as a connecting link between the Y. W., the Student Government, and the classes. Meetings are held every Thursday night at seven o'clock in the Y. W. lounge.

N. Y. A. Executive Announces Increase In Students' Work

Jobs in private employment for 2,065 young people between the ages of 16 and 25 were secured during August through the efforts of the Junior Employment Service of the National Youth Administration, it was announced today by Dr. Mary H. S Hayes, NYA Director of Guidance and Placement, in her monthly report to Deputy Executive Director Richard R. Brown.

The August figure brings to 8,-510 the cumulative total of such placements secured since the inception of this phase of the Youth Program six months ago.

At the same time, Dr. Hayes stated that the number of Junior Employment offices had been increased from 25 to 31 during the month.

Marion Pond spoke of the Seminars and Association Groups. These were centers of discussion concerning current topics and problems common to each campus.

Virginia Agee told of the sports and the competitive games and the wonderful spirit of fun that prevailed at Blue Ridge.

Other delegates from S. T. C. to the conference were Mary Elizabeth Minor, Ruth Montgomery and Dorothy Wise.

Erskine Speaks Here On Fine Arts

ple preferred to become wealthy patrons of the arts rather than to actively participate in them. However, Milton was the first to attempt to persuade us that a 'subject' may truly become an 'art' only if it is taught as such through active participation and use of it.

According to Dr. Erskine, as long as subjects are taught from the appreciative standpoint only they never become a part of the person learning them. They remain apart from his life, and he never 'lives' them.

At the conclusion of his lecture Dr. Erskine was persuaded to render several piano selections, including the F Sharp Minor Nocturne by Chopin; A Carol (Medieval Song), the accompaniment of which he used to play for his father to sing; and Polonaise by Chopin.

They almost had to use a pulmotor on Don Watson, Pomona College sophomore, who tried to guzzle six malteds in 20 minutes. At fifth down and three-fourths to go, the malted halted Watson.

then we clear the room. About an hour later we have breakfast in the dining room, where we sit on the cushions around the low table. We eat rice three times a day as you eat bread. Besides rice, we have Japanese soup, pickles, fish and hot tea. And then we all go to school by street car.

"By four o'clock we all come back home. After taking afternoon tea, and resting, we help to sweep and dust the rooms. At six o'clock, again we gather together in the dining room. While we eat we talk about the lessons which we learn at each of our schools, and many other things, too.

"After dinner some of us go to the study room; some keep on talking; and some play the piano."

Fumi then told of the Sunday School in Japan. She said that there were about one hundred and fifty children who attend the Sunday School where her brothers and sisters go, and that the children love the Sunday School very much.

In conclusion, she said, "Many people in Japan do not know God, but I hope some day they will become Christians through these small children."

We Asked One Question of 200 Men and Women "Which Pen is Your Choice for Style and Beauty?" And 2 to 1 Selected Parker's Laminated Pearl*

—The useless Vacumatic with Ever-Visible Ink Supply and 102% More Ink Capacity than Old Style — GUARANTEED Mechanically Perfect

Yes, other things being equal, style-minded people would choose the Parker Vacumatic for beauty alone! But other things, too, including performance, make this revolutionary invention the national favorite by a still bigger margin—by 9 to 4.

One important difference—its ink supply is ever visible—the ENTIRE length of the barrel. Thus it shows days ahead WHEN IT'S RUNNING LOW.

Another great difference is the patented Parker filler. There's no other like it. It requires no sliding piston immersed in ink—its working parts are sealed in the top WHERE INK CAN NEVER TOUCH THEM—can never decompose them.

The Parker point is Scratch-proof—precious Platinum combined with solid Gold.

Every student needs this miracle writer that doesn't "let you down" by running dry in classes or exams.

Go and see this luminous, laminated Pearl Beauty at any good store selling pens. The Parker Pen Co., Janesville, Wis.

Two Queens Rule As S. T. C. Revels At Annual Circus

Lybrook and Harris Are Crowned "Queen"

JR. STUNT WINS

Parade and Booths Amuse Crowd in Gym

After the class stunts and a noisy parade, Elizabeth Harris and Johnny Lybrook were crowned joint queens of the 1936 S. T. C. circus Saturday night in the gym. After the coronation, the circus flung wide its gates to the crowd and invited the visitors to eat, drink, and be merry.

Junior Stunt Wins

The Junior Class won the prize for the best class stunt with a chorus singing typical songs of various periods. As they sang, girls representing the periods of the songs strolled out. The seniors got honorable mention with their "Martins and the Coys", a typical mountain feud to the tune of a song by Elsie Cabel. The sophomores stunt depicted a scene outside a circus side show with Vera Ebel as barker, insisting that all go in and see the freaks. As she urged, the inmates of the tent stepped out and made themselves completely irresistible to the mob of visitors. Immediately, Elsie Dodd was swamped in her ticket box. The freshmen took the crowd with them to a presidential convention where noise and confusion reigned. Many movie celebrities were present. The candidate was elected unanimously and his noble speech of acceptance was heard by many admirers.

Coronation of Queen

After a parade around the gym, the circus folk settled down to await the crowning of the queen. The crowd went wild when Lio Harris and Johnny Lybrook were crowned queens by Will Scott, as Em Easley and Fletcher Walker attended them. In honor of their majesties, the queens, some rare and all but human animals performed in a skit.

When the circus acts were over, the crowd poured down in the gym for pink lemonade, hot dogs, bingo, and other games. Barkers yelled, inviting the crowd in. A victrola made dancers happy and

Honor Fraternity Bids 23 Students

Juniors and Seniors With "B" Average Eligible

Last week, Kappa Delta Pi, National honorary fraternity in Education asked twenty-three juniors and seniors to become members. These girls that have shown outstanding work in the field of education were: Dudley Allen, Caroline Alsop, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Madeline McGlothlin, Ruth Phelps, Mary Virginia Putney, Deane Saunders, Nan Seward, Gay Stiffen, Zaida Thomas, Dorothy Turner, Lois Vassar, Edna Bolick, Inez Chappell, Erna Dickerson, Edith Hammack, Katherine Jamison, Muriel McAllister, Norvell Montague, Elizabeth Morris, Dorothy Price, Elizabeth Roberts and Mary Harrison Vaughan.

Membership in Kappa Delta Pi is confined to juniors and seniors who have an average of B on all subjects except floor work in gym. Also those students must have a required number of hours in education.

Dr. Jarman Holds Senior Installation For Class of 1937

Rev. A. C. Tucker Leads Invocation Service

One hundred and three girls knelt before Dr. Jarman to receive their senior caps on Monday, October 19. The installation service was held in the large auditorium in the presence of over half the student body. The Reverend A. C. Tucker conducted the Invocation. Dr. Jarman addressed the group.

This occasion marked the formal acknowledgement of one of the largest senior classes ever at S. T. C. The class holds the distinction of having made the highest average on intelligence tests of any class in the history of the college.

Dr. Jarman congratulated the class on having reached the climax of its college career. He told the seniors that great things were expected of them by both students and faculty of the school, in their academic record and in the achievement of poise and dignity. Dr. Jarman made the statement that he thought the modern senior had more of the latter qualities than the seniors of the past, both because of their experiences before reaching college and their opportunities here. He wished the class a happy and successful year.

Accompanied by their "little sisters" members of the class of '37 marched down the aisle and up onto the stage to be acknowledged. At the conclusion of the service the new senior class marched out of the auditorium to the strains of Alma Mater for the first time in its history.

V. I. P. A. Convention Faces Postponement W. and M. Announces

Williamsburg, Va., Oct. 14—The tenth annual convention of the Virginia Inter-Collegiate Press Association, scheduled to be held at William and Mary College during the latter part of October, has been postponed until February, according to William F. Thomas, president of the association and chairman of the convention committee.

Postponement was caused by the unforeseen high enrollment at William and Mary this session. After conferring with college administrative officers, Thomas said that there was no way the delegates, estimated at 200, could be taken care of at the present time, but that by February an arrangement can be affected to hold the convention in Williamsburg.

Despite the delay the convention committee of Greta Grason, Donald Maguire, Mae Fielder, Robert Simpson, and Nita Ligon is continuing its preparation for the meeting. The program will include round-table discussions on newspapers, yearbooks, literary magazines, handbooks and a session for business managers. Outstanding figures in the journalistic world are being contacted in an effort to provide speeches. The annual contest of publications holding membership in the V. I. P. A. will be held at the convention.

The Royal Virginians Will Play Here Again For Cotillion Dance

"The Royal Virginians" have been secured by Ruth Montgomery, orchestra committee chairman of the Cotillion Club, to play for the fall dance, October 31.

This orchestra is from the University of Virginia, and it is composed of twelve men.

Jennings Lectures To Rotunda Staff

Style of Writing Is Emphasized in Talk

On Wednesday night, October 7, at the regular meeting of the Rotunda staff Miss Jennings addressed the staff on the important leads in a news story, action story, and the formula for an editorial.

Miss Jennings expressed her regret at not being able to have a journalism class. There is no place on the schedule for a class, although many girls are interested in this line of work.

"Know what dead line is, and take it seriously and get articles in promptly" was Miss Jennings' first advice. Then she talked on the appearance of a newspaper and the leads in a news story. A news story consists of descending action, first, the climax, secondary action, and then details. In a news story one should use short words, which clearly express what the writer wants to say. In digging out a lead one asks the following questions, who, what when, where and why?" A noun clause puts over decision for establishing opinion or decision." Here Miss Jennings illustrated her facts with example. An action story is one that requires short sentences

Chairman Announces Campus League and Duties of Committee

At the Student Body meeting Monday night, October 19, Dorothy Buckland, chairman of the Campus League, introduced the members of her committee to the students, and stated the platform of the League. The committee includes members from each of the classes, who alternate in enforcing the rules of the Campus League. The list of girls includes Libby Roberts, Mary Elizabeth Badger, Elizabeth Lee Tyree, Nan Throckmorton, Margaret Thorpe, Elizabeth Booth, Gwen Bell, Elizabeth Burke, and Pattie Bounds.

The chairman, in stating a new rule of the Campus League, requested that girls not having dates refrain from using the main entrance at the Rotunda on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday nights to avoid congestion and confusion there. If this request is followed, the girls having dates will be called in their rooms. She reminded the student body that dating on the campus, and sitting on the campus wall and Student Building steps were violations of the rules of the committee. She also asked that we refrain from hanging clothes where they can be seen, and that we turn off all unnecessary lights.

Magazine Will Go To Press in Nov.

Staff Asks Students To Contribute Articles

The Farmville Quarterly Review, S. T. C.'s literary magazine, under the editorship of Mary Harrison Vaughan, will go to press early in November. Those who wish to contribute to the publication have been urged to do so in the near future.

The 1936 fall issue of the magazine will be the second volume of that organ. In the spring of 1936 the premier copy was published and every copy sold immediately.

The demand for such a publication in school has been great. It gives opportunity for those interested in writing of any kind—poetry, stories, sketches, book reviews, or essays—to see what they can do. The literary talent at S. T. C. seemed to require the publishing of a magazine. It is hoped by the editorial board that their faith will be justified.

The Quarterly Review is edited yb a board consisting of four editors, whose chairman is Mary Harrison Vaughan. The faculty advisory board is composed of Miss Jennings, Miss Camper, Mr. Mcorkle and Dr. Walmsley.

Cotillion Club Elects Girls to Membership Under New Method

Under a new system of voting, twenty girls were elected to Cotillion membership at the meeting held October 20 in the small auditorium.

At the meeting last week each member of the club nominated five girls for membership. A list of ninety-six names was compiled from this list and mimeographed. Each Cotillion member was given a sheet upon which to vote. The ruling was made last spring that the club vote upon a set number to be taken in at each election. The number was only twenty this fall because of an already large enrollment of present members.

Those girls who received bids to the club are: Doris Adkins, Dorothy Adkins, Mary Elizabeth Badger, Elsie Cabel, Virginia Carrol, Elsie Dodd, Frances Gaskins, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Ann Hardy, Lloyd Kelly, Bess McGlothlin, Madeline McGlothlin, Margaret Pittard, Dorothy Price, Ruth Sears, Nancy Selman, Anna Crump Shiflett, Dibbs Tyree, Caroline Willis, and Sydney Yonce.

The new members will be permitted to have a date at the fall Cotillion dance, although they will not be initiated into the organiza-

Trembling Freshmen Endure Relentless Sophomore Court

It was a dark and dreary night. Trembling freshmen and excited upper classmen quickly filled the large auditorium. A loud clapping and stomping of feet preceded the opening of the curtain. Suddenly darkness flooded the auditorium. Before us tombstones gleamed in an eerie light. A bony skeleton perched in one corner. Eight silent white draped figures slipped into view to the tune of a weird death march and took their places in a circle.

"Fumi Wakayama", shrieked one of the judges, and our Japanese friend was called upon to sing.

Thus began the annual performance put on by the "rats" under the direction of the Sophomores. One by one the lowly freshmen groped their way to the stage. Songs were sung, speeches were made, something called dancing was performed, white feet were drawn down the aisle and washed up with a toothbrush. The president of the suffering class gave the platform of her class, punctuated by "boos". When one girl attempted to roll a match across the stage with her nose for a second time, the disturbance which was the result, was quieted down with the flashing on of the lights, and the show went on.

Before the curtain fell the following girls were named the good sports of the "rat" period: Jacqueline Adams, Hope Minter, Ada Sanford, Sarah Keesee, Beverly Baptist, Nancy Taylor, Olivia Stevenson, Selma Berry, "Butterfly" Breckinridge, Virginia Polley and Clotilde Jarman.

Agee Leads Cast Of "Third Mary"

Virginia Agee, who will play the leading role in "The Third Mary."

Johnson and Wicker Are Given Roles In Support

CAST IS COMPLETE

Fall Play Has Rich Comedy Element

Production of "The Third Mary" starring Virginia Agee will be a bright spot on this quarter's calendar, being scheduled for release on Nov. 20. Virginia is following up her reputation as a comedy actress established in "A Night in August" and "Taming of the Shrew", for in the play now in rehearsal she is an amusing head-strong young girl trying to prove that the conventional world is all wrong in its conception of love and marriage.

Johnson and Wicker

Opposite Virginia in masculine roles are Jim Johnston and Tivis Wicker, lending a great deal to the cast, not only by way of good looks but also by acting. Both boys are new on our stage and are showing ability under the direction of Miss Wheeler.

New Faces in Cast

S. T. C. and H.-S. C. play-goers will recognize Bill Willis as an old friend, this being his third consecutive year in the productions of the combined clubs. Nan Throckmorton, Clara Nottingham, Alpha Lee Garnett and Webb Surratt are numbered among the cast members already known at both colleges. Frances Hutcheson, Tommy Mason, Vernon Benedict, and Bill Waldrep will face the lights for their first appearance on our stage.

"The Third Mary" is rich in comedy, cleverly revealing the tempestuous ideas and arguments of modern youth on those two profound problems—love and marriage. Three generations of beautiful, desirable women disclose their tactics in handling men, tactics which differ but slightly fundamentally but widely in the execution.

Cast members are as follows: Mary first, Clara Nottingham; Mary second, Nan Throckmorton;

College Students Will Hold Election

Poll For President Will Be Taken In Nov.

That the students of S. T. C. will conduct their own election for president of the United States was announced by Bonnie Lane, president of the student body, at their meeting, Monday, October 19.

On the Monday before the Tuesday in November when the national election will be held the students will cast their ballots at the table in the hall. According to law, voters must be registered approximately a month before the election day. Qualifications for registration are payment of poll tax, application in legible handwriting, and the satisfactory answering of any question asked by the board of registration. On Tuesday, October 20, the citizens of the college registered according to party affiliation at party booths. Printed matter stating principles and platforms of the various parties were on display, as well as pictures of the respective candidates.

As the majority of the students will not have the privilege of casting a lawful ballot this fall, the college poll will enable them to express their views on the subject of such great national interest.

Freshman Classman Is Virginia Bedford

Miss Virginia Bedford, of the art department, was elected freshman classman at the meeting of that class on Tuesday, October 20. Jane Powell, president of the newly organized class, presided at the meeting.

Miss Bedford is an experienced "classman", as she served in that capacity with the class of 1936 for four years. Under her guidance the class plans a successful year.

By the election of their classman, who will remain with them throughout the four years of their

A. C. P. Convention Will Meet on October 29

Four students of S. T. C. will represent the Farmville publications at the Association Collegiate Press Convention. The convention will be held October 29, 30, and 31 at the Brown Hotel in Louisville, Kentucky.

Virginia Baker, editor and Mary Lib Slater, business manager, will represent the "Virginian" at the meetings. Virginia Bean, editor, and Elsie Cabell, business manager, will attend from the Rotunda staff. They will leave on Wednesday, October 28, returning Monday, November 1.

The meetings scheduled for the delegates include such topics as "Effective Use of Cuts and the College Newspaper Morgue", "What's New in Newspaper Editing and Writing", "Newspaper Typography and Make-up", "Better Sports Coverage", and others.

The Louisville News Courier has planned a luncheon and trip through their press offices. The University of Louisville, host, will entertain at a banquet and dance.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

Since its beginning the Democratic party has been the champion of states rights. During the years before the War Between the States, that question was the origin of all its party policies. Today we have come to associate this not with the states rights theory but with the power of control in the hands of the federal government. Is that because the party believes that the country can progress better with a central control or because the majority of people exist first for their country, then for their state?

The Democratic party holds as self-evident that the three years of Democratic leadership has put our nation on the road to recovery. That the three years' recovery in all the basic values of life has been brought about by the Federal government's humanizing its policies is another truth that the party holds to. They also say that in the twelve years preceding the three past years that the government failed to meet certain obligations to its citizens as the protection of the family and home, the establishment of a democracy of opportunity for all people and the aiding of all those who have met with disaster.

It is natural for a party to consider first the protection of the family and the home. Today the problem is becoming more and more acute. In the past three years the Federal government has done much along this line. The Democratic party promises to continue this legislation if re-elected. This party plans to continue its war on kidnappers, bandits, and those who attempt to defraud the public. The better housing plan will be continued in order to finish providing homes for those who are forced to live in unhealthy and slum conditions because of economic conditions. The Social Security Act is just the foundation for providing for a better standard of living. Of these things this party promises to do as much as possible to keep in step with the ever increasing capacity of America in raising its standards of living.

The party promises to work for the establishment of a democracy of opportunity. They begin with the idea of keeping the youth in school longer so that he might better adapt himself for life. Thus many who might not have the opportunity to go to college now can because of the federal government's aid. Three years of leadership have aided the business men who before were crying for any kind of help. The farmer has received as much of the sympathy of this administration as has the laborer. The farmer, the worker, the business man, and the youth have turned to walk again on the road of better times through the assistance of present administration. The Democratic party promises to continue this part of its platform.

Because they believe unemployment to be a national problem, the party will continue to maintain that maximum employment at adequate wages is one of the first objectives of an economic security program. It is the duty of the government to provide work when business concerns fail to do so.

The party advocates a clarifying amendment if problems of child labor, working conditions, unfair business practices, and other measures to safeguard economic security can not be solved by legislation within the Constitution. The party does not want to take away any privilege given by it. It wants to make laws that will aid in the maintenance of these privileges.

The Democratic party contends that the present administration has stopped deflation, restored values, and enabled business to continue with confidence. It wishes to continue with permanently sound currency, as ours is the soundest in the world. It wants to reduce national expenditure and promises to do so as the cost of relief decreases.

The Democratic Party remains steadfast in its opposition to war. The party says that it will continue to observe true neutrality, to be prepared to resist aggression against ourselves, and to work for peace. It will continue to foster foreign trade, a lower tariff between nations, and the stabilization of foreign currency so that our country may prosper with the world.

The liberalism of the Democratic platform might at first seem too radical. However, it shows that this party is anxious for America to move onward. Its liberalistic views of a federal government working for the country as a whole is only a step towards progress. This is what the Democratic party places before the American public—a progressive platform.

TO BEORC EH THORN

Time and time again noted persons have been brought to us. We always enjoy these persons and look forward to seeing them at another time.

To Beorc Eh Thorn due credit is to be given. This organization, though young in years, has already taken a place equal to any other honor society. It has been caught by the flame of desire—desire to bring before the student body persons who will live ever in the memory of each student.

We are proud to say that Beorc Eh Thorn presented to us John Erskine. This organization has given many an opportunity that they might not have had otherwise. It is true that there are those of us who will have that pleasure again and again. But whenever we see him, we shall look back with pleasure upon the time he stood upon our own stage and spoke for us, personally.

To Beorc Eh Thorn we give our thanks for bringing John Erskine here. We learn from him as well as from others that to teach students to appreciate alone is not enough. We must also aid them in reasoning out things for themselves and in discovering why things happened as they did. As we work on in life we can make this possible if we keep Erskine's idea of education and teaching, "the art of education," before us.

We offer appreciation to Beorc Eh Thorn for presenting this famous author to our student body. With much pleasure we are looking to the next program of the honor society.

World News

At the meeting of the international committee for non-intervention in Spain, in London the British Foreign Office was turned into a verbal free-for-all. Russia charged Italy and Germany with violating the non-intervention act by delivering military supplies to Spanish insurgents, and further stated that if violation continued she would consider herself free from any obligation of the pact. Delegates of Germany and Italy relieved themselves of a lot of steam but refused to recognize the charges.

The long-awaited conference between Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and Ambassador Shigern Kawagoe, Tokyo's envoy to China, took place last Thursday in Shanghai. The discussion and its results were kept secret but a break-down of relations between the two countries, strained by recent anti-Japanese terrorism, had at least been averted, it said.

Last week-end the police of Paris, like those of London, had to control a dangerous situation provoked by demonstrating Fascists. This week-end in another part of France—Alsace-Lorraine—the authorities face another troublesome situation provoked by demonstrating Communists. They have announced numerous meetings in various parts of Alsace-Lorraine.

Where the democratic nations—Great Britain, United States, and France—led, Fascist Italy was forced to follow. In a series of decrees submitted by Premier Mussolini to his Cabinet and promptly ratified, the lira was devalued to conform with the devalued dollar and franc. The four currencies thus returned to the approximate relationship which existed among them before Great Britain astonished the world by departing from gold five years ago.

Cardinal Paulli, Papal Secretary of State and highest ranking Catholic official ever to visit the United States, arrived in New York last Thursday from Naples. A tall, striking figure in his ecclesiastical robes, the prelate evaded all questions on the purpose of his visit here; he was merely on vacation, he said. Rumor had preceded him that he would look into the activities of Father Coughlin.

New York begins its preparation for the next Worlds' Fair, opening April 30, 1939 on the 150th anniversary of George Washington's first inauguration. The theme of the fair will be 'Building The World of Tomorrow."

Salute to J. Bull. The retort was furnished by an instructor of a western school to the Englishman's boast, "The sun never sets on British soil." The professor said, "Even the good Lord himself wouldn't trust an Englishman in the dark."

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

In this column, which we hope to make permanent, we will strive to bring news of everything to everybody. We hope this means of condensed information will meet with your approval and prove beneficial as well as amusing to you.

The country, in general, is stirred-up over the approaching presidential election. The two major candidates are both splendid men and the records of both would be an asset to anyone. President Roosevelt has already ended his campaign tour—his last speech having been delivered in Albany, N. Y. Governor Alf Landon plans to close his campaign with an address in Chicago on October 31. Much uproar has been in progress all through the summer months, but the best—or—worst is yet to come!

In the world of sports there has been a great deal happening. Foot ball being the seasonal sport, no doubt, everyone is interested in the pigskin game. Richmond trimmed Emory and Henry 20-6, while Duke trounced Georgia Tech with a 19-6 victory. Kentucky won easily from W. & L. 39-7. Maryland defeated the University of Virginia 21-0, while V. M. I. took a beating from Columbia, 38-0. Hampden-Sydney scored a 14-6 victory over Swarthmore.

Then there is such inter-national news as King Edward VIII of England stating that his title and position will not affect his decision if he makes up his mind definitely to marry Mrs. Wallie Simpson—an American social-butterfly. The European continent is black with rebellion war clouds: both Hitler and Mussolini are mixed up knee-deep in the latest gloomy development which deals with the weakened Locarno five-power treaty and which, in turn, has practically made the League of Nations look like a farce. The present uproar all began with the Italians' war in Ethiopia, and Germany's rearming the demilitarized Rhineland last March as well as the Spanish Revolution.

All feminine hearts hold a warm spot for styles. And we notice that tweed and fur and buttons make an excellent combination—that sweaters and skirts and substantial, good-looking shoes and snap-brimmed hats are very good—that grays and greens, wines and browns are the principal colors—that flared, short skirts, widened shoulders, patch pockets, strapped shoes, and feathered hats go into the smartness elegance, and practicality of chic winter wardrobes.

"Time and tide bring all things"—and so, adieu until next week!

Little Algy rises to say: "Blessed is the man who, having nothing to say, abstains from giving wordy evidence of the fact.

Drama:

A Treasury of the Theatre—An anthology of great plays from Aeschylus to Eugene O'Neil—edited by Burns Mantle and John Gassner.

In order to satisfy the demands of drama lovers, who have for many years wanted a single volume which would contain the best plays of all times and all countries, the publishers of "A Treasury of the Theatre" consulted libraries throughout the country and so created this one volume anthology that ranges from O'Neil back to Aeschylus.

It contains thirty-four plays—plays from modern America and ancient Japan, plays from post-war Europe and Elizabethan drama, from Eighteenth century France and pre-revolutionary Russia, from Biblical Palestine, India, Norway, Ireland and classic Greece.

Besides a general editorial preface, there is a special introduction by the editors for each individual play.

It begins, broadly speaking, with the later realists and ends with the earlier poets of the theatre. Mantle and Gassner say they have striven more frequently for entertainment than for instruction, because they believed an anthology of the theatre could be assembled which would be neither pompously academic nor narrowly confined to a single theme or epoch.

"A History of the American Drama from the Civil War to the Present Day", Arthur Hobson Quinn.

In this survey of our native drama from the beginning of modern play writing to the present day, the author has painted a picture of the drama, pointing out the prevailing tendencies and types of the period and indicating the relative merits of the dramatists. He has set the plays against the background of the stage and explained dramatic conditions in the terms of the American theatre.

"The Play's the Thing"—Millet and Bertley.

For the student who wishes to extend his understanding and appreciation of plays in a delightful and interesting manner, this anthology is ideal. The authors of this volume have taken into consideration undergraduate taste, and while no play has been selected simply because students enjoy it, whenever they had to choose between several equally representative and and effective plays, they have selected the one which has the greatest appeal for undergraduates.

It includes plays of tragedy, comedy, force and melodrama ranging from Sophocles to Strong.

Farmville Graduate Does D. A. R. Work

Miss Sarah Dinwiddie, principal of Mitchell's High School and graduate of Farmville State Teachers College and Mrs. Charles Jones, regent of D. A. R. chapter in Culpeper, Virginia, will direct a program of historical pilgimages in Culpeper throughout the fall months.

These pilgrimages are under the auspices of the Culpeper Minute Men chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and in conjunction with the history teachers of the Culpeper county schools. They have been worked out for the purpose of teaching important local and unwritten history to the youth of the county.

School buses will be used to transport groups of students, and short talks will be given at main points on the itinerary.

Important sites will include Colonial landmarks, those of the Revolutionary period, and the battleground in the War Between the States cenetring around Cedar Mountain and Brandy Station, where the largest cavalry fight of the four-year war took place.

THE BEAUTY SCHOOL

By Helena Rubinstein
Read Beauty In Your Hands

Pale hands, pink tipped may be all they ever were beside the Shalimar, the beau ideal of every girl, the admiration of every man; but on the campus brown hands, white hands, large hands, small hands, long narrow hands with tapering fingers and square efficient hands with perfectly ordinary fingers—all are equally desirable. The only essentials for the modern beautiful hand are softness, smoothness, good grooming.

Don't—even if you're thinking of doing so—congratulate yourself too soon on these "snap" requirements. Softness, smoothness and good grooming are not attributes of every hand in these days of hard water, wintry weather, chemistry, zoology and botany lab. In fact if you want to have beautiful hands despite ALL, you'll have to give them careful attention.

Remember, first of all, that it's not the housewife only who gets her hands in hot water a dozen times a day. You, too, in the interests of cleanliness, are constantly washing your hands. To avoid consequent dryness, chapping, flaky skin and roughness that comes from washing the hands and exposure to cold, you should use a good hand lotion after each washing. Massage it in carefully, starting at the finger tips and working down over the wrists half way to the elbow. Never forget the wrists—they are the no-mans land between the sleeves and gloves and undergo all the storms of washing and weather. Now wring your hands hard. This will quicken circulation and help parched skin to absorb the cream.

At night, before retiring I recommend a thorough cleansing with beauty grains, the pore deep wash that refines skin texture. This should be followed with a liberal application of the hand lotion, which softens and soothes. Leave the hand lotion on over night—wear loose cotton gloves over the lotion at night for the best and quickest results—and you'll be astounded at the improvement in your hands.

If all this seems like a good deal of trouble, just remember that your hands are almost as much in the public eye as your face, that beautiful hands are as much of a beauty asset now as they were in the days of the Victorian poets. Ten minutes a day is not too much to spend on them!

Class Notes

At the Sophomore class meeting, Tuesday night, plans were made for the presentation of freshmen rat caps. The freshmen will receive their caps Wednesday night in the gym. It was decided that both freshmen and sophomores should wear their class colors for the occasion.

Sarah Hayes, president, announced that Marie Hoge had been appointed to keep the class scrapbook in Lucy Austin's place.

Rotunda Reverberations

Peace—Oh—Perfect Peace—At last its come for a week anyhow—and I'm positive that everybody is glad of our chance to settle down to some real studying. The circus was good though and we make our bow to Miss Royall and the other girls that helped to make the circus such a success.

Poor freshmen have an awful time—there's one who dressed for rat week before leaving her home after a week-end visit and her roommate didn't even recognize her when she popped into the room—Ada Sanford's most embarassing moment might have happened to anyone, an only suggestion is to "be sure your door is locked before retiring"—(and you know what door we mean).

The Seniors are feeling quite big now—just think we are real ones at last, installed and everything. Why was Charlotte Rice so anxious for it? Do you suppose it was because she was afraid she wasn't one or what? (You can't fool us). Minnie Smith (another dignified senior) slept through a very interesting lecture not long ago. Was she bored or was her mind on a certain, Tom, Dick or Harry?

Can you answer these questoins for us? If you can you are better than we are.

1. Why does Jenny Carroll become deathly sick at the thought of onions?
2. Tell me! Which side will Mary Lib and Elsie fight for, the Martin's or the McCoy's?
3. Why was Ann Moore so excited about a certain visitor Sunday?
4. Why does Dot Price refer to a certain person as "Wee Willie?"
5. How did Clotilde Jarman get to look so much like Marlene Dietrich?
6. Did Virginia Reed Turner receive that looked-for birthday letter?

Aftermath Of S.T.C. Circus Presents Desolate Spectacle

There in the Gym, in utter desolation—like some ancient city pavilioned in the splendor of memories—the remains of the Circus stood. As we took one last look over the scene of the gala event, this sight met our eyes: a paper-littered floor, crepe paper decorations torn from their places and empty coca-cola bottles (grim reminders of the battle that was waged to obtain hot dogs, sandwiches and drinks.)

The cabins from which the ferocious Martins and the McCoys issued to fight their famous feud stood as silent witnesses to the terrible deed.

The improvised microphone through which Eliza Wise announced the noisy and very typical political convention stared in silence at the platform which in haughty aloofness was contemplating its good fortune. For upon it had stood the chorus whose tantalizing tunes had been judged the prize-winner of the night.

I imagined that the "waters" in the fish pond lapped against its sides and wondered where all of its ambitious inhabitants had gone. They did not know that the spirit of the circus had given the fishers unusuallly good luck.

The grains of corn with which the exciting game of "Bingo" was played, lay scattered over the floor as if they might have been chicken-feed for the odd-looking fowls brought out in the Sophomore stunt.

Over there, in a corner, stood the Roulette Wheel resting from its vigorous work of the night. Although it might have been dizzy from too much going around, it seemed contented that it had made so many "brave adventurers of Monte Carlo" happy.

The counter, over which the expert "barkers" had boasted the merits of pink lemonade and fudge, was bare, only the paper cups, candy wrappers, and a few crumbs vouched for their goodness.

The mysterious air which had surrounded the tent of the fortune-teller and from which the prophet of future events seemed to have drawn her uncanny power, had been lifted and only the remains of frayed crepe paper curtain was there to cover the entrance to that place of enchantment.

A fearful glance toward the tent, from which had come those breath-taking, heart-gripping animals, the jeep, the pink elephant, Mickey and Minnie Mouse, and the towering giraffe, revealed that there was no cause for further alarm for not one had remained to break the stillness of that desolate place.

(Flash! It has been decided that the jeep was not so much gifted with a "fourth dimensional" mind as it was with the keen "key-hole" eyesight of Walter Winchell—judging from some of its answers).

Thus letting our minds go back over the various stunts and features of the gala affair, we heartily pronounced it a success and went to bed to chatter about it far into the night.

Sincerity
Simplicity
Sympathy
Serenity —Emily Post

Overheard: "When a man first comes to college as a freshman, he thinks a senior is the greatest thing in the world. Four years later he thinks the same thing." We are inclined to question the first part (only) of that statement. Freshmen are green, but not that green.

It was Robert Ripley who, a few years ago, startled us with the fact that Albert Einstein had once failed in mathematics. Now an unknown correspondent tells this peculiar story, strangely parallel.

William McKee, freshman at North Dakota, certainly goes in for extremes. Recently he had his poem, "Prisoners of Alcatraz", published in the current issue of "Prairie Wings", a North Dakota poetry journal. A few days later, he failed in the English placement test.

7. Did a visiting to-be-married girl put ideas into Eugenia Jolly's head?
8. Did Carter Belle turn red at the circus?
9. Will Frankie Bryan have a certain man from Richmond down for a dance soon?
10. How do you like the H.-S. freshmen?

Now there are some girls who are getting awfully excited about those coming dances at H.-S. Lucky is no word for it but every person has his day—now it's your time to shine—(shine little glow-worm.)

Kansas City, Mo.—John C. Moffit, local film critic and screen writer, who collaborated with Sinclair Lewis on the dramatization of "It Can't Happen Here," which the WPA Federal Theatre Project will present simultaneously in 19 cities on October 27, will have two original plays on WPA stage this fall.

Mr. Moffit's "Roaring Girl," being filmed for Paramount, will be presented by the WPA Federal Theatre in New York. Another play will be presented in Los Angeles. It has a regilious theme.

All-America Board Awards Parker Pens

New York, Oct. 14 — The All-America Board of Football today announced that the Parker Vacumatic Pen has been selected as a special award to be given each week for the 9 weeks of the current football season to the ten outstanding college players in America. Each Parker pen awarded will be inscribed with the words "All-America Rating" and will be accompanied by a "Card of Merit."

From the 90 players receiving this trophy pen, the All-America Board will select the All-America Team of 1936.

The present All-America Board of Football is composed of Christy Walsh, sports editor and syndicate writer, and the following famous coaches: Glenn S. "Pop" Warner, Temple; Howard Jones, Southern California; Elmer Layden, Notre Dame; and Frank Thomas, Alabama.

The Board was organized after the death of the late Walter Camp in 1924. Since that time, its selections have been universally accepted as official by coaches, sports editors and the football public.

"Virginian" Contest Won by Freshmen

The freshman class is the winner of the Virginian subscription contest, says the annual staff. The contest closed at class meetings on Tuesday, October 20.

For the past week the Virginian staff has conducted a subscription contest among the classes, offering a prize in money for the class ordering the most annuals during that period. The freshmen won by a big majority.

On Friday of this week the Virginian photographer will return to the campus to take group pictures of organizations. The staff has requested the cooperation of the student body so that all the pictures may be completed in the four days he will be here. The majority will be pleased as nearly as possible in scheduling the pictures. It has also been requested that students wear plain dark sweaters and skirts rather than light colors or plaids, to add to the effectiveness of the groups.

Philadelphia Pa.—The local marionette unit of the WPA Federal Theatre Project this week gave the premiere performance of "Dr Faustus," a modernized version of the noted work, at the Plays and Players. Lorin J. Howard, state director, introduced the prsecentation and offered cooperation of the WPA project to "all charitable groups at any time."

New York, N. Y.—The WPA Federal Theatre Project in New York smashed all preopening attendance records when it was announced ten days before the four local openings of "It Can't Happen Here," that 45,125 tickets have been sold in advance.

This tremendous advance sale insures the New York productions of "It Can't Happen Here" of at least a twelve weeks' run.

San Francisco, Cal.—The marionette unit of the WPA Federal Theatre Project here will open a Southern tour at Farragut Hall, Vallejo, on October 24. Fourteen manipulators and technicians will be in the touring company.

Another marionette unit will present "The Wikado" in San Francisco on November 2.

Great Neck, L. I.—The WPA Federal Theatre Project of Long Island presented "The Old Maid", Pulitzer Prize play of 1935, this week at the Great Neck High School. The performance was sponsored by the Great Neck Post No. 160, American Legion.

Boston, Mass.—The WPA Federal Theatre Project here inaugurated this week a series of Saturday morning popular priced marionette performances at the Repertory Theatre with "Gulliver's Travels" as the first offering.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Cleveland Bronner, state director for the Teaching of Theatre Technique unit of the WPA Federal Theatre Project, announced this week that one of his own players, "Souls of Men", will be offered in Bridgeport this season.

SPORT SLANTS

Archery: Well, well! At last the bows and arrows are here, and from all appearances "Robin Hood" and "Cupid" have come to life. Such skill as you have never seen before. Maxine Burke really "knows her stuff" about "that certain art" called archery. Come on out and give it a try. Maybe the practice with the bow and arrow will help you "hit the spot" next time. They say it takes practice to make perfect, and "perfection is our aim."

Basketball: With practices only on Wednesday afternoons, it seems that everyone could find time to "use a little of that stored up energy." Remember exercising helps you loose that excess weight, and basketball is really the "perfect exercise." At the present we are learning the real fundamentals of the game, and it really is fun, as well as being most helpful in our "body development," "gracefulness," etc. We prescribe "a round of basketball to help round up those irregular curves." Try it and see for yourself!

Hockey: Did you see the All-English hockey game? "Well we didn't either!" There was a bunch of disappointed girls when they awoke Friday morning to be greeted by the "pitter, patter of rain." Of all the days to rain it would have to be on Friday. Oh! well, better luck next time. The hockey practices have been going along smoothly, and you should notice how everyone is improving. Why even Jennie Carroll and Selma West are noticing the change in "their playing." (They have formed a two-girl hockey team, and what a team!) All those who had never played the wonderful game before, just can't be pulled away from the field. They are willing to play any position at any time. "Such a spirit of sportmanship as we've never seen before!"

Hikes: Girls you had better prepare yourself for some long hikes, for they are on the way. They were started off by a five-mile hike Saturday. And there are "better and bigger" ones to come.

Ping Pong: We hear that the ping-pong table in the "Rec" has been getting a lot of attention. And isn't it fun to win a game of ping-pong from that "he-man football player?" I'll say.

Important: Remember that class games will be starting soon, and a certain number of practices are required in order to play in class games. So come on out and support your team.

Tennis: All the girls who signed up for the single tournament had better start practicing, or the more fortunate ones that have classes in the game will prove to be a great deal of competition. Practices are scheduled for every Friday afternoon.

Costumed Swimmers Will Present Carnival

The Water Carnival will be held at the swimming pool on Thursday night, October 22 at 8:00 o'clock. Louise Walmsley has charge of the carnival and each class has a representative to work with her.

The entire carnival will be costumed and the following stunts are planned:

Freshmen—Mr. Whale's School of Fish.

Sophomores—Form Swimming

Juniors—Hawaiian Scene.

Seniors—The Princess Learns to Swim.

New York City—(ACP)—Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of LaFayette College, thinks that sportsmanship should be substituted for the present "mud-slinging" of political campaigns.

Addressing the closing session of the nineteenth annual convention of the New York State District of Kiwanis International, Dr. Lewis said:

"The mud-slinging, personal attacks, and vituperation now being promoted by certain political campaign leaders is a disgrace, and their under-handed and moronic propoganda is an insult to the intelligence of the American public. Until we put political contests on higher planes, we will find it difficult to persuade men of the finest type to become candidates for office."

Some of the students at the University of Kentucky go to great lengths for an education. Imagine covering 11,800 miles just to go to school? From China? India? No, they only live about 30 odd miles from the campus, but they commute daily. One of the fellows figures that he burns approximately 785 gallons of gas during the school year, which amounts to—let's see—maybe you better figure it out for yourself.

You've heard it a hundred times if not more, but here it is again in its new fall-model guise: "Boy Bites Beast!"

It all happened near the state training school of Red Wing, Minnesota—this dramatization of the Methuselaic "man-bite-dog" gag.

Ray Billy gave rookie Journalism instructors the latest version when he tried to capture a libertyloving weasel. As all good weasels will do in similar circumstances, this one wrapped its mouth around Billy's right hand. When the "fugfang" showed mule tendencies, refusing to be pried loose, Billy hit him hard with his strong teeth until the animal passed out.

Journalism doffs its hat to you, sir!

Most important of Miss Jennings' talk was her formula for an editorial. "First, state the fact or circumstance with which the editorial is to deal. Second, state the opinion that is to be established concerning the facts or circumstances. Third, state the reasons for your opinion." Miss Jennings referred the staff to a library book, "Feature Writing." She hoped that each member would make it her duty to read this book.

Dramatic Club Holds Meeting Wednesday

The Dramatic Club met in the auditorium, Wednesday, October 14, at 7:30. The president, Molly Fletcher Walker, asked that all girls, old members and apprentices alike, sit with their own groups in order that the attendance may be more easily checked. Madeline McGlothlin urged all girls to pay their dues before Thanksgiving. Old girls should pay directly to Madeline McGlothlin, while the apprentices should pay their dues to their respective group leaders.

Clark Directs Guild For Actors' Benefit

Closer cooperation between America's leading dramatists and the non-professional play producing groups throughout the country is assured as a result of the establishment of the Dramatists' Play Service, Inc., by members of the Dramatists' Guild of the Authors' League of America.

The Play Service will be housed in the offices of the Guild at 9 East 38th Street, New York City. Mr. Barrett H. Clark, author of numerous books on the theatre, and for nearly twenty years editor-in-chief for Samuel French, has been selected as executive director.

In addition to handling the non-professional acting rights of plays professionally produced on Broadway, the Play Service will distribute and lease the amateur rights of plays of every sort written by Guild members for the use of schools, colleges, Little and Community theatres, churches and similar groups, and in some instances publish plays in book or pamphlet form. It will also provide information in regard to plays outside its own fast-growing list.

"Which Pen is Your Choice for Style and Beauty?"

And 2 to 1 Selected Parker's Laminated Pearl*

—The sacless Vacumatic with Ever-Visible Ink Supply and 102% More Ink Capacity than Old Style — GUARANTEED Mechanically Perfect

Yes, other things being equal, style-minded people would choose the Parker Vacumatic for beauty alone! But other things, too, including performance, make this revolutionary invention the national favorite by a still bigger margin—by 9 to 4.

One important difference—its ink supply is ever visible—the ENTIRE length of the barrel. Thus it shows days ahead WHEN IT'S RUNNING LOW.

Another great difference is the patented Parker filler. There's no other like it. It requires no sliding piston immersed in ink—its working parts are sealed in the top WHERE INK CAN NEVER TOUCH THEM—can never decompose them.

The Parker point is Scratch-proof —precious Platinum combined with solid Gold.

Every student needs this miracle writer that doesn't "let you down" by running dry in classes or exams.

MISS McGRAW
AT LYCEUM

VOL. XVI. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1936 No. 4

Noted Pianist Will Appear In Lyceum

Program Will Range From Mozart To Scriabin

SKLARESKI PUPIL

Pianist Has Gained International Fame

Helen McGraw, young American musician of considerable recognition in this country and Europe, will be heard in a concert of piano music at State Teachers College Friday evening, October 30 at 8 p. m.

Miss McGraw's program ranging from Mozart to Scriabin is representative of both her varied repertoire and her intensive musical understanding. Although her interpretation of the classics has won her wide attention, her preferences lie with compositions in the modern manner. High lighted on her program will be the Scriabin Sonata Fantasie, Opus 19.

Her concert will offer an opportunity to enjoy distinctive modern music played by a distinctive American musician.

For an artist so young, Miss McGraw's training and attainments are noteworthy. As a pupil of Alexander Sklareskski, noted Russian pianist-teacher, at the Peabody Conservatory of Music, Baltimore, Maryland, Miss McGraw received in 1930 the Artists Diploma, the highest degree given at that school. She first gained nation-wide attention during the same year when, competing with musicians from all over the country, she won the Walter W. Naumburg Foundation Music Contest. This entitled her to a debut in New York's Town Hall, a debut which was well received by New York critics. Her career later carried her to Paris where, as a pupil of Alfred Cortot, famous French exponent of Chopin, she studied at L'Ecole Normale de Musique. While abroad she was heard in Paris, London and other cities of England and the Continent, and President Installs Freshmen IntoY.W.

Candle Service Ends With Songs on Campus

On Thursday night, October 22, the freshman installation service was held in the large auditorium. Dorothy Wise, president of the Y. W. C. A. led the devotional. The Reverend Hollingsworth conducted the invocation.

This occasion was one of the most impressive that has been held this year. The auditorium was dark, except for light from a few candles. Each student was given a candle as she entered the auditorium. After a prayer had been given, the president lighted her candle and passed it to light the candle of the girl next to her. One small gift caused all the candles in the room to be lighted.

Dorothy stressed the importance of the Y. W. C. A., a voluntary religious movement. She said that the association could not be a success unless it had the spirit and interest of each of its members. Her quotation, "Not every man can be a star in the Heaven. But everyone can be a Light in the Home", was fitting for the occasion. After the candles had been lighted the new members of the Y. W. C. A. marched out on the campus by two's, joined hands forming a big circle, and sang, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds."

Debate Club Holds Open Forum Here

Conference Will Be At Winthrop College

The Open Forum, which the Debate Club is sponsoring, will be held on Friday, November the thirteenth, in the small auditorium. The discussion will center around the national Pi Kappa Delta question: Resolved that Congress Be Empowered to Fix Maximum Hours and Minimum Wages for Industry. Representatives from five outstanding colleges will participate. These colleges are: Duke University, Hampden-Sydney, Westhampton, and Randolph-Macon Men's College. The purpose of this open forum is to encourage and to stimulate interest in forensic activities on the campus.

Four debaters from S. T. C. will go to Winthrop College in Rock Hill, South Carolina for the Strawberry Leaf Conference to be held on December the third to the fifth. Dr. Walmsley will select new girls interested in forensics for this trip in order to give them experience and training for the South Atlantic Forensic Tournament to be held in March. Representatives from S. T. C. attend-

Student Council Has Honor Code Service For New Girls Here

Tuesday and Wednesday nights, October 20 and 21, the freshman class signed the Honor Code. The ceremony was performed before the student government in their cabinet room. The freshmen were dressed in white and went four-at-a-time into the room.

The signing of the Honor Code marks the most important and most serious step of their college life. It means that 297 new girls have pledged themselves to honest living and fair play during their years at S. T. C.

Faculty Members Hear Lady Astor Speak at Service

Unveiling of Statue Honors Virginia Woman

The members of the faculty who attended the Lila Meade Valentine Memorial program in the old Hall of the House of Delegates in Richmond on October 22, were: Miss Florence H. Stubbs, Miss Pauline Camper, and Miss Willie London.

Lady Nancy Astor, famous Virginia-born member of the British Parliament, delivered the principal address at the unveiling of the bas-relief of the late Mrs. Valentine, famous Virginia educator, social welfare leader and champion of full equality for women.

In her crisp, vivacious British manner she spoke in detail of the current social security and labor legislation problems, profoundly defending the working man in his fight for the eight-hour working day for women, unemployment insurance, and minimum wages.

She praised the present government in America. Encouraging the friendliness of the British and the American governments, she said, "When the time comes to fight for freedom again, I cannot see the battle being won unless the British Empire and the United States stand side by side."

Although many years of fame and power have intervened since Lady Astor lived in Virginia, she spoke fondly of her native state saying, "I have always been and always will be a Virginian."

Sophomores Present Caps To Freshmen On Thursday Night

Thursday night at eight o'clock that class commonly known as "Rats" was recognized officially by the high and mighty sophomores as freshmen by an impressive ceremony in which the freshmen were crowned with their rat caps.

Each sophomore flanked by two freshmen marched down the steps into the gym where they formed a figure "S". The freshmen then, kneeling, were crowned, while the sophomores sang a clever little song in tribute to their good sportsmanship. Then the freshmen rose and all marched out of the gym singing "Onward Farmville." Out on the campus all joined together, trials and tribulations of rat week forgotten, singing together Farmville songs.

Colleges Conduct Poll for President of United States

S. T. C. Students Will Cast Ballots N ov. 2

On Monday, November 2, the S. T. C. poll for president of the United States will be conducted at the table in the hall. All students who registered for voting will be permitted to cast their ballots for the candidate of their choice at this time.

All over the country college students are preparing themselves to participate to the extent that they can in the coming election. Heated campaigns with well-informed speakers are being carried on in many of the colleges of this state and others. As only a small percent of college students are of legal age to cast an official ballot, they are being given the opportunity to express their opinions on the subject of such importance to them in their own schools.

The polls at Princeton and Harvard have resulted in a slight majority for Landon, although the Daily Princetonian endorsed Roosevelt highly. The Republicans at Princeton were so incensed at the Daily Princetonians endorsement that they founded a newspaper of their own. At Harvard the lead for Landon was only a 21 vote lead, to the amazement of the student body. Such a small majority for the Republicans in that college is unprecedented. Calvin Coolidge's own university polled a majority for Roosevelt. Mary Baldwin College recently voted 185 for Roosevelt and 112 for Landon.

Barrow Supervises WPA Nursery Plan In Training School

Under the supervision of Mrs. Fay Barrow, a group of about thirty-five women has been observing the nursery school activities at the campus training school during the past week.

The group is working under the nursery school program of the W. P. A. with the ultimate purpose of learning or obtaining new ideas in running the nursery school. Miss Cowles is the head of the Nursery School program in Virginia, and the women comprising the group here are from various parts of the state.

The group has been entertained with lectures by Miss Mix and others interested in the educational program.

Unnoticed Observer Takes In Sing With Real Appreciation

There was an unobserved observer at "Sing" last Saturday night. She has played long and has played loud, but never before had she lived so much in her past songs as while watching "Sing". Our guest is noted for her musical talent.

Girls, remember, whatever you do, "say it with song" not "flowers."

The guest hummed "Alone" as Miss Boudoir appeared, clutching faithfully her friend, Fido and Mr. Jack Rabbit.

Her tune changed to "Lights Out"' and "I Don't Love You Anymore" during the scenes of improper and proper Saturday nights, with a sprinkling of "You'd Better Watch Out", as Miss Mary, impersonated by "Lib" Harris, reproved such shocking conduct. There was a whisper through the crowd, "Hubbard and Harvey seem to know the works in that act, eh? Practice, I guess."

Our visitor began getting a little livelier to the tune of "Scotland's Burning", when Margaret Carroll appeared as Miss Fire Drill, half asleep and not knowing what it was all about.

Forgetting herself entirely, our genius yelled "Wahoo" as Miss Sports came on the scene, getting in her tennis practice.

Boom, bang! Mary B as Miss Popularity carrying an armful of letters! A whiff of "I'll Sit Right Down and Write Myself a Letter" came from our friend.

The "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi", Frances Maxie ,appeared as Miss Fraternity, while Miss Exams brought back the old familiar tune "I'm Headed for the Last Round-Up".

When Miss North, "Chic" Dortch, came in giving everyone the cold shoulder, our visitor could say nothing her keys chattered so, but when Miss South

Outstanding Seniors And Juniors Are Tapped

LEONARD LEADS

Purpose of Alpha Kappa Gamma Is Told

Four outstanding students of the college were tapped by the Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma on Tuesday, October 27, at the chapel hour. Zaida Thomas and Mary Lib Slater, seniors and Elizabeth Morris and Madeline McGlothlin, juniors, were recognized for qualities of leadership and service at the tapping service of the national honorary fraternity for leadership.

The service was conducted by Virginia Leonard, president of the circle. Dr. Jarman read the Alpha Kappa Gamma scripture, the twelfth chapter of Romans. Virginia told of the foundation of Alpha Kappa Gamma at S. T. C. in 1925 and of its history since. She gave the purposes of the organization, stressing service and cooperation. She described the qualities of leadership in Joan of Arc which caused that saint to be chosen as the ideal for the circle here and concluded with the words: "Such leaders have been found among you."

Zaida Thomas is now serving as the Chairman of the Students Standards Committee, after being elected class representative for three years. She was the editor of the handbook now in use. Last year she served as assistant business manager of the Farmville Quarterly Review. After being a hall president, Zaida was elected secretary of the House Council in 1936. She was a member of the Y. W. C. A. World Fellowship Committee her junior year, and for two years has conducted orientation classes. Scholastically Zaida has proven herself a leader. She is vice-president of eBorc Eh

Apprentices Will Give One-Act Play

"Sauce for Goslings" Is Selection of Group

The apprentices of the Acting Group of the Dramatic Club, under the direction of Marjorie Thompson, presented a one-act play, "Sauce for the Goslings", at a regular meeting of the club on Wednesday, October 21, in the large auditorium.

As the curtain opened a refined mother and father are found contending with modern slang in their daughter and son, who are anxiously awaiting the arrival of a famous football hero of Stanford University. Before the arrival of the guests, grandmother, father and mother decied on a plan to rid the children of the terrible usage of slang into which they have fallen. The grandmother becomes as coquetish as any maid, the father becomes the boring reteller of college experiences, while to the mother goes the laurels for her choice slang expressions.

The children are horrified at this mockery of themselves in their parents when they are laboring to impress their guest. They become "fed up" with being murderers of the English language and resolve to do away with slang. The daughter receives the longed for bid to the Stanford dances, in the fade-out, while her mother is asked to chaperone.

At the conclusion of the play Miss Wheeler gave a constructive criticism of the acting, costuming, lighting, and staging, and of the selection of the play itself.

Louise Starr Speaks To S. T. C. Students On College Problems

At Prayers on Wednesday night October 21, Miss Louise Starr of the University of Georgia was guest speaker. She is visiting various colleges in capacity of traveling secretary for the Episcopal Union, and Farmville feels quite fortunate in having so delightful a speaker on its campus.

Miss Starr's charmingly informal manner of speaking and her broad aspects on every phase of life are bound to meet with every college student's approval. Because she is, in spirit, a college girl herself, it is with understanding that she places the students' problems before them with suggestions for their solving. The theme of her talk on Wednesday

Freshmen Conquer In Water Carnival

Pool Is Gay Scene As Classes Give Stunts

Mr. Whale's School of Fish, presented by the Freshmen, won first place in the water carnival Thursday night. Sophomore Olympics stood second in the contest.

On one side of the swimming pool girls were packed like sardines waiting for the water carnival to begin. The pool was very clear and pretty. Suddenly the lights changed to a softer hue and a spot light searched across the water.

Major Bowes' Amateur Hour was exhibited by the Junior class. Will Scott, impersonating the Major, announced for the Hour over Station H2O. Among the performances and the Amateurs were Isabelle Plummer who swam a distance under the water; Sue Eastman got the gong with a pretended dive into the water; Norvelle Montague made a beautiful surface dive. Other acts were offered by "excited" amateurs during the hour.

The Princess Learns to Swim was given by the Senior Class. The King, Fletcher Walker, with his count came into view. The princess, Chic Dortch, had several

ALPHA KAPPA GAMMA

Once again the national honorary fraternity for leadership, Alpha Kappa Gamma, has chosen from among us students whose service and leadership have been so noteworthy as to deem them worthy of the honor.

The organization, which was founded at S. T. C. in 1925, has a two-fold purpose in selecting girls for membership. Like Omicron Delta Kappa, the brother fraternity of leadership for men, it recognizes the outstanding student by conferring upon her or him the honor of becoming a member. But, far deeper than the recognition alone does its purpose lie. By banding together the leaders of the campus, the coordinating influence of the organization is made manifest in many and varied ways. Problems that arise through the overlapping and conflicting of the purposes of the various groups on campus are discussed and liquidated through the efforts of Alpha Kappa Gamma. By working together in a solid group the leaders of the campus activities are enabled to reach a far wider range of students and give opportunities to many who would otherwise be overlooked.

To this group of students and the work in this circle we owe much of the spirit which is being developed in the student body of cooperation, unselfish service, and accomplishment. They have a large part in making things "behind the scenes" run smoothly. The part Alpha Kappa Gamma plays in making the student body a unified, purposeful group is recognized and appreciated by those who benefit by it.

REPUBLICAN PARTY

The Republican Party today stands for what might be called a literal translation of the Constitution. It opposes steps on the part of the government to take over what the individual states might control. It wishes to preserve the American System, that of free enterprise, private competition, and equality of opportunity.

Believing that unemployment will not cease until it is absorbed by industry and agriculture, this party plans to remove restrictions on production and hampering regulations on business. It stands against the government entering into competition with industry. It promises to do whatever it can to restore jobs to those without them. Until unemployment is gone, the party promises to continue relief; but it will return the responsibility for its administration to non-political local agencies. Federal public works will be continued on their merits and apart from the administration of relief. The party pledges a prompt determination of the facts concerning relief and unemployment.

Believing that the welfare of labor rests upon increased production and the prevention of exploitation, the party says that it will protect the right of labor to organize and to work through representatives of its own choice without any outside interference. It will work to abolish sweat shops and child labor, to protect women with respect to maximum hours, minimum wages, and working conditions. This, it believes, can be done within the constitution as it now stands.

The Republican party proposes to treat the farm problem as an economic and social problem. It has its paramount object as the protecting and fostering of the family type of farm, a tradition of American life. It will promote policies which will bring about an adjustment of agriculture to meet the needs of domestic and foreign markets. It promises to protect the farmer against the importation of all farm products that will depress American prices.

In regard to the tariff the Republican party is against putting on the tariff list all products not grown or produced in commercial quantities here. It guarantees protection to all home products. This party favors the principle of the flexible tariff as against the present reciprocal trade agreement.

The Republican party favors federal regulation, within the constitution, of the marketing of securities and interstate activities of public utilities. But it considers that the authority to do such should be in the hands of an independent tribunal that acts in accordance with certain principles.

It favors a balanced budget as the first requisite to a sound and stable currency which is to be preserved at all times. It will cooperate with other nations toward the stabilization of currencies. However, the party will not do this until other countries have stabilized their money to justify such action.

This party will do all in its power to promote and maintain peace. However, it opposes any steps that will lead to the making of alliances to insure peace. It favors arbitration as the means of settling disputes. While it favors adequate means of national defense, it will work in cooperation with other nations for the limitation of armaments.

The Republican party in assuming the obligations and duties imposed upon the government by modern conditions presents a conventional platform. It is a conventional platform in contrast with the very progressing one of its leading opponent. Still, with it taken all in all it, too, is progressive.

FOR something like years, in the pursuance of duty, we have listened to speeches. Three or four, in all that time, were worth listening to. The others might have boiled down to the following bromides: "It is, indeed, a pleasure, to be with you this evening . . . I am not unmindful . . . I am reminded of the story of the Scotsman . . . I make this statement without fear of successful contradiction . . . The future fate of America lies in the sanctity of the home . . . Our mothers, God bless them! . . . Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln . . . Our great President . . . The money barons of Wall Street . . . I am willing to put my case before the people . . . One more word and I am done (that word taking 38 minutes longer) . . . I thank you."—Arkansas City Traveler.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

While Benito Mussolini extended an olive branch in his upraised, clinched fist and made known his wish for peace to the nations of the world, Dictator Adolf Hitler announced a definite agreement toward the formation of an Italo-German Fascist front to stand against the rest of Europe. The joint statement was a declaration of Nazi-Fascist friendships and determination of the two nations to consider each others wishes before moving any pawns on the European chess-board. More concrete evidence of understanding between the two nations was the simultaneous announcement in Rome and Berlin that Germany had recognized Ethiopia as Italian and acknowledged existence of the new Italian empire.

And while we're in Europe we might as well consider the Spanish Revolution. The Fascist army is alarmingly near Madrid and is frightening loyal citizens with air bombardments. Although Madrid is considered quite safe from attack through the Guadarrama Mountains, a quarter of a million civilians were mobilized for defense of the capital.

In our own country, politicians are becoming hotter and hotter around the collar. Although Roosevelt has gained a few votes through relief workers, the Literary Digest poll shows that Landon is creeping upward farther and farther. It's going to be a close fight, all right—and very interesting.

The tears and anguish of defeat—smiles of victory—factors present in all stadiums all over the country. Dwelling on our own state (and thereabouts) we see that Duke was defeated by Tennessee 15-13, while V. M. I. trounced over Richmond 20-0. W. & L. gave Virginia a couple of heavy pushes and won 13-0, while V. P. I. bowed to North Carolina State 13-0. The University of Delaware scored a surprise 19-6 victory over Randolph-Macon.

Football is an uncertain and fickle jade! The two Southern Conference Rose Bowl hopes—Duke and Carolina—are gone with the wind. Mighty Pitt bowed to Duquesne and was eliminated and Notre Dame, in turn, bowed to Pitt and lost its chance.

We have a mild form of Riff-Raff here in our school—and this is directed in the general direction of freshmen. There seems to be a devil-may-care attitude towards things upper-classmen, out of love and reverence, hold near and dear. We refer particularly to the Y. W. C. A. Installation of Freshmen on Thursday night. Boisterousness, giggles, and rude conduct are indeed out of place at such ceremonies!

With the long looked-for Fall Cotillion practically here, shall we take a peek at the gay fashions for night festivities? Glamorous fashions—daring as a nautch dancer's copious, swirling skirt—richly magnificent as a coronation robe—vivaciously gay as a debutante's first party! The sculptured, fluid grace of a Greek statue—gleaming flame, gold and rhinestones as sparkling as your

The conduct course now being offered at the University of West Virginia is not intended to teach self-control. It has been designed to show students the "hows" of studying, making a budget, and spending leisure time.

The registrar at the University proved statistically that students with the thinnest wallets get the most "A's" when two state legislators complained that the $3 "flunking fee" is a hardship on poor students.

Journalism students at the University of Wisconsin go professional before they graduate—especially those enrolled in the feature writing course. With a record of 85 articles sold during the past school year—equivalent to $1,500 in returns—these writers have eclipsed former "tops" of 50 in one year. In 1929 students received checks of $100 and more, but now checks average $10 to $15.

Miami University is operating on a lean budget these days as the result of Governor Martin L. Davey's veto of appropriations amounting to $76,900 for items necessary for the efficient function of the school. Miami has no funds for library books, supplies, general equipment, repairs, and wages for the student assistants and ground workers.

Indiana University students drink the cleanest milk in that state, says Dr. Clarence E. May, of the chemistry department, who tests milk from each of the 31 Bloomington dairies each month.

Six years a devil! That isn't the title of a book. It's just a segment-sentence description of the kind of life Mary Ann Wynkoop, freshman at Indiana University, has been living for the last half-dozen years. Before coming to college, she did all kinds of odd jobs around the office of the Lebanon, Indiana, Daily Reporter, where her father serves as city editor.

Even though she is the first coed to enroll in the linotype operating class(conducted in the printing shop of the university press) Miss Wynkoop is right at home, for she has been a "printer's devil" ever since she was 12 years old.

World News

The British Government, recovering from its summer quiescence turned its attention last week to the question of defense. In a speech at Sheffield, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, referring to the recently adopted policy of rearmament, said:

"This strengthening of our forces will not be used to accompany our diplomatic proposals with threats. That is not our method. Its usefulness still lies in this—that Europe may be convinced that we are strong enough to play our part to keep peace and that violent forces can be met with firm resistance.

Over last week-end a violent typhoon lashed the Philippines, bringing death to 700 islanders, leaving hundreds of others unaccounted for in the wake of disastrous floods, and isolating whole districts. Throughout the week fresh tropical disturbances swept

Literary Column

One of the poems that Nancy Byrd Turner read for us last year when she was here was "Black Cat." This being the season when black cats and witches and other evil things are so abundant let us take warning from this poem.

Black Cat

Don't never cross a road what a black cat cross—
'T ain't nothin' but sorrow, 't ain't nothin' but loss.
Brindle cat, spotted cat dem's all right;
Safety in a yaller cat, blessin' in a white!
But de black cat ructious, wid a bristle in his tail,
He fotchin' for the Debble, and he better not fail.
De black cat travel wid his belly in de dus;
He gwine whar he gwine, and he gwine kase he mus'.
Black cat, black cat—when he cross yo' track,
No matter whar you gwine,
To a dippin' or a dyin',
No matter whar you hurryin',
To a marryin' or a buryin'—
You better turn back!

The superstitious tradition regarding Hallowe'en is that it is the night of all others when supernatural influences prevail; when spirits of the invisible and visible world are abroad, for on this mystic evening it was believed that the human spirit was enabled to detach itself from the body and wander through the realms of space. In England and Scotland it is especially selected as the time for trying spells and divinations in love affairs.

In Germany there is a similar superstition concerning "Walpurgis Night"—the night preceding the first of May. On this night, the German peasants believe that there is a witch festival, or gathering of evil spirits, on the summit of the Braken in the Hartz Mountains, and the malign influence of this convocation was believed to be felt all over the surrounding country. It was an old custom, and still observed in some places, to light great bonfires of straw or brush on that night, to drive away the spirits of darkness. There is much similarity between "Walpurgis Night" and our Hallowe'en.

Disappointment

Disappointment is a witch,
Cold,
Bleak,
Ugly,
Leaving black despair
Behind her.
She comes
To drive away the sunshine
With her huge, black broom,
But she is quickly chased away
By the little elf, Hope.

By Jessamine Clarkson

I don't know how to tell it—
but ef such a thing could be
As the angels wantin' boardin' and they'd call around on me—
I'd want to 'commodate 'em—all the whole—indurin' flock—
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodders in the shock.

Biographies

Note: Reviews are excerpts taken from the Book Review Digest.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning—Letters to Her Sister (1846-1859): This book contains a collection of 107 hitherto unpublished letters from Elizabeth Barrett Browning to her sister Henrietta, the first written from Pisa a month after the Barretts had arrived there on their wedding journey. These letters are filled with her happiness in her marriage, with her friends, her occupations, and her small son, Pennini. These letters reveal a very human "E. B. B.", very like the character one had guessed behind her poetry. The same rather breathless style, the same wild ardours, and enthusiasms, and the same blinding and contemptuous antipathies.

The Life and Times of King George V. Edited by Sir Phillip Gibbs. (With over 500 photographs.): King George secured for himself an unforgettable niche in the history of the world. It is fitting that his life should be commemorated, and this book is a dignified and gracious tribute. Treated in popular style and under the brilliant editorship of Sir Phillip Gibbs, it is a volume that must achieve a pre-eminence among others of its kind.

Kate Chase—Dominant Daughter by Mary Merwin Phelps: Kate Chase, a beautiful, imperious, young woman, upon her entrance into official society in 1861, at once assumed leadership as queen of Washington. This dramatic chronicle of human life is both faithful biography and stimulating romance.

President Tujillo—His Work and the Dominican Republic, by Lawrence de Besault: An account of his career and the accomplishments and development of the Dominican Republic under his leadership from 1930 to 1936.

Good Soldier—General William Booth, Vol. 1 & 2, by St. John Ervine.

Southern Sketches—Edited by Dr. J. D. Eggleston, President of Hampden-Sydney College. Consists of sketches of southern men not hitherto written up.

Tennyson—Aspects of his lift, character and poetry, by Harold Nicholson.

Count Leo Tolstoy—A New Portrait by his contemporary and critic, the late Dr. E. J. Dillon.

Woodrow Wilson by Reid. Edith Reid's biography differs from most written about Woodrow Wilson since she writes as his intimate friend from outside the world of politics.

Kagawa—by William Axling. This volume is the first biography of this colorful personality available for English readers.

Fair Damsels Trip To College Dances

Frank Gerard's Duke Band Plays For Set

The syncopated rhythm of Frank Gerard and his Duke University orchestra, the lovely gowns, and an abundance of "stags", caused everyone to indulge in rapturous "ohs" and "ahs" at the mere mention of the Pan-Hellenic dances at Hampden-Sydney, Friday and Saturday nights. The H.-S. C. colors of garnet and gray were effective in the floor decorations. Those S. T. C. girls and their dates who attended the dances were:

Sue Adams, Bill Spencer; Virginia Allen, Frank Ripberger; Nan Armistead, Kenny Taylor; Annie Leigh Bailey, Jack Temple; Evelyn Bailey, Lewis Richards; Jane Baldwin, Jack Dodge; Esther Beebe, Garratt Gooch; Mary Bowles, W. Episcopal Picnic Held For College Groups

The S. T. C. girls and the H.-S C. boys were given a picnic, on Thursday, October 22, at Longwood by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Episcopal church. Leaving the Rotunda at 4:30, the girls walked to Longwood where they had supper. The group had as honor guest, Miss Louise Starr of the University of Georgia, who has been visiting here for several days.

Miss Cox Entertains for Fumi Wakayama

On Wednesday night, October 21, Miss Mary White Cox entertained in the senior lounge with an informal party for Fumi Wakayama. Fumi gave a very interesting talk about the school she attended in Japan and brought several interesting Japanese articles for the guests to see. Miss Winnie Hiner, Mrs. Shelton, Jane Royall, and the orientation leaders attended. A delicious salad plate was served.

Pi Kappa Sigma

On Wednesday evening, Dr. J. E. Walmsley spoke to the Pi Kappa Sigma sorority on parliamentary law. After the talk an open discussion was held at which time punch was served.

Football Beckons Girls to Richmond

Football tops the social calendar for S. T. C. again this week. The most popular game seemed to be between V. M. I. and University of Richmond. If we had looked closely at the crowd in the Richmond stadium Saturday we would have seen Frances Gaskins, Ann Scott, Elkanah Simpson, Elsie Dodd, Lucille Moseley, Adelaide Dressler, Mildred Hobel, Elsie Cabel, Elizabeth Burke, Alpha Lee Garnett, Caroline Gwaltney, Kathleen McCann, Katherine Fitzgerald and Mary Frances Adams. The entire V. M. I. cadet corps was present at the game and added much color with their uniforms and formations during the half. After the game the girls donned their silks and satins and tripped the light fantastic toe. Some danced at the University of Richmond openings to music of Joe Burke and others followed the uniforms to the Hotel John Marshall for the V. M. I. dance.

More football games! Betty Fagg and Sydney Yonce cheered the Roanoke eleven to victory over William and Mary at Williamsburg.

Philippa Scholbahm attended the Springfield College-Army football game and hop afterwards at West Point.

University of Virginia football game with Washington and Lee—dances and a dansant—Red Nichols and his pennies—Hallowe'en decorations—And so we have University of Virginia opening dances. Among the girls from S. T. C. seen were Margaret Eckford, Alice Burroughs and Rose Moore.

In Wedding

Mary Harrison Vaughan was an attendant in the Turnbul-Rutledge wedding at Saint John's Episcopal church in Boydton. She was dressed in gold velvet, wore a juliet cap of pearls and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

Attend Conference

Representatives from S. T. C. at the Episcopal conference in Hopewell were Nancy Gregory, Norvell Montague and Frances Alvis.

To Washington

Betty Moss, Rose Allen Higginbotham, Marjorie Thompson and Grace Waring motored to Washington Friday and spent several days there.

Attends Reunion

Martha Bailey attended the Kappa Delta Phi sorority reunion at Blackstone College where she was the guest of her sister for the week-end.

Just Visiting

Annabel Shescott, Isabel Williamson, Violet Cross and Katherine Cross visited at Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg the past week-end.

Marjorie Nimmo was the guest for the past week-end of Elizabeth Wilkerson at her home in Lawrenceville.

Katherine Morrison went to Williamsburg with Katherine Maynard to visit her for several days.

Harriette Vaden had as her guest at home for the past week-end Nancy Taylor.

of the State Vocational department held a three day conference at the college this week. The purpose of the conference was to discuss basic assumptions for a program for home economics teachers.

Pedagogic Sororities Issue Nine Fall Bids

Following a week of rushing the following girls accepted bids from five of the sororities on campus:

Sigma Sigma Sigma

Army Butterworth, DeWitt, Va.; Ann Dugger, Farmville, Va.; Mary Hubard, Fayetteville, W. Va.; and Caroline Willis, Fredericksburg, Va.

Alpha Sigma Alpha

Elizabeth Rawlings, Bird's Nest, Va., and Gracie Allen Pittard, Clarksvile, Va.

Gamma Theta

Frances Hutcheson, Lexington, Va.

Mu Omega

Julia May Rainey, Goldsboro, N. C.

Alpha Sigma Tau

Agnes Thompson, South Hill, Va.

Gamma Theta Picnic

The Gamma Theta Sorority had a get together picnic Thursday, October 15, in the cabin at Longwood from five to eight o'clock. After a delicious feast terminating with a marshmallow toasting they sat around an open fire and sang songs.

Freshman Commission Picnic

A weiner roast was given by the old freshman commission for the new freshman commission members at the Longwood cabin, on Thursday, October 22. The girls left at 5:30 in the school truck. After enjoying weiners, coca-colas, pickles, potato chips, and buns, they rode back singing.

Rotunda Reverberations

Keep smilin' seems to have been the Virginian's pet phrase last week—in fact, some were giving that tooth paste smile in their sleep —it looked grand with hair curlers and cold cream—but alas! When Friday night came some of these smiles the other week were in vain—but even a photographer can't put what isn't there. (So don't take it out on the Virginian Staff).

H.-S. seems to have outdone itself with their dances last week-end. A rushier dance has never been known to exist out there—must be the freshmen 'cause some of the boys were fooled with their dates—one gallant Kappa Sigma in one of his weak moments asked a freshman from S. T. C. to go—she even forgot how to spell his name and in the meantime he had forgotten what she looked like—I'll bet he won't forget again.

You might have had quite a wonderful time at H.-S. but I tell you there's one girl who was more excited than any of you and also who did more good than you did. Virginia Leonard is now sporting a sparkler—and it's real too. Congratulations! And may we all do as well.

Cotillion is Saturday—and you'd better watch your step freshmen and new girls—if a girl asks you to dance with her date—do it—and if you don't like him tell her he's wonderful—in fact too, too divine. You might be sorry in days to come if you don't. I do hope that you don't see somebody else with a dress on like yours—nothing is more heartbreaking—and on top of that the boy that you are trying to make time with (girls do try to make time with boys you know) might accidentally think you're somebody else. We want this to be a nice dance so look your best and get your beau (or maybe he's somebody else's beau you're taking for them) to act his best. I'm told there's a floor committee that will gently lead him to the door otherwise.

Hallowe'en is almost here—do hope there'll be no ghost this year (or sleep walkers). Maybe you'll get a box of candy. (Some people still do). Flowers might be better this year however. Eh, Miss Van Astor Built? Be good 'cause the goblins will get you if you don't watch out.

Ask Victoria Gillette how it feels to be lonely, unloved, unappreciated and even more—

Leadership Group Honors Four Girls

Thorn, after being its historian one year; she is treasurer of Pi Gamma Mu, and a member of Kappa Delta Pi. Recently she was elected a senior chaperon. In the social world, she is a member of the Cotillion Club, the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority and was a member of the May Court for two years.

Mary Lib Slater has been outstanding in the field of athletics, as well as in a business way. Besides being a cheer leader all four years, she has been manager of Lacrosse and manager of Mixed Sports in the Athletic Association. She was also a member of the class basketball team in 1936. She serves on the Social Committee of the Y. W. C. A. this year. Mary Lib is a member of Beorc Eh Thorn and El Circulo Espanol, showing scholastic attainments and interests. She was a reporter on the Rotunda staff in 1935, and was assistant advertising manager of the Virginian that year also. This year she is the business manager of the annual. She is a member of the Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority and the Cotillion Club.

Elizabeth Morris has served on the Student Day Committee, Sing Committee and the Chapel Committee in the Y. W. C. A. She was a member of the Freshman Commission and was elected Campus League Chairman her sophomore year. She served on the Student Standards Committee that year also. Her work on the Rotunda staff, beginning her freshman year, was of the quality to make her news editor the following two years. Her scholastic rating is unusually high, as she is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Alpha Phi Sigma, Sigma Pi Rho, Beorc Eh Thorn, and is president of the Latin Club this year. She was elected secretary of the Student Council last spring. She is a member of the Dramatic Club, Cotillion Club and the Mu Omega sorority.

Madeline McGlothlin is the president of her class for the second term this year. Besides in the class her chief activities have been in the Dramatic Club where she has served on the Executive Board for three years. She has been in two of the spring plays for that organization. She has also served on the Rotunda staff for three years. In athletics, Madeiene was a member of the Varsity Hockey Squad her first two years and was assistant volleyball manager one year. She is a member of Alpha Phi Sigma, Kappa Delta Pi, Beorc Eh Thorn and the French Club. This year she was an orientation leader. She is a member of the Cotillion Club and was in the May Court last year.

narrow escapes from nearly drowning to be rescued and taught to swim by Mary Bowles, a court jester. The act received a great deal of applause from the audience.

The act that won the contest was Mr. Whale's School of Fish. It was an original imitation of a school class in which pupils, of course, were fish. Ann Billups, the professor, after having recitations in the form of water stunts, announced recess. All the pupils dressed either as fish, frogs or mermaids jumped into the water and imitated a group of frolicsome children. Margaret Eckford gave a beautiful succession of sommersaults in the water. Dot Nochren with several other girls exhibited some fine diving stunts.

A tattoo faintly heard out of the distance served to make the scene change to one of weirdness as two girls carrying red lights slowly danced to the end of the pool and stood there together. Folowing them on either side of the pool came a line of girls each having a representative name written on cardboard. Elsie Dodd announced each performance as it was presented by the girl. Margaret Britton gave a swan dive, Frances Brian gave a jack knife dive. The entire group performed a team formation on each side of the pool and swam at intervals toward the ones on the other side and each side met in the center. This was an unusual and artistic act.

After all four of the acts were completed, representatives from each class formed artistic patterns in the pool, each carrying a lighted candle as she swam. Bright lights shined again to show a crowd that was thoroughly excited over the results of one of the finest water carnivals in years.

Class Notes

Freshman Class

Because of the absence of the president, Jane Powell, Martha Sykes took charge of the regular meeting of the Freshman Class Tuesday night at 7 o'clock. Miss Bedford, newly elected classman, talked to the class urging them all to cooperate in all their work. It was decided that the officers should appoint a parliamentarian to see that the meetings and elections were held in the proper manner.

Students Publish Election Magazine

Data On Presidential Campaign Released On Campus

Simultaneously on 750 college and university campuses in every section of the country, there was released on Monday, October 26, a student published "Primer for Democracy" as a special election issue of "The National Student Mirror."

Frankly declaring that its purpose was to get college students "fighting mad at the rot, cant, hypocrisy in government and in politics," the editors have procured the cooperation of President Roosevelt, Governor Landon, Norman Thomas and Congressman Lemke in what observers call the most ambitious and constructive venture ever undertaken by student editors.

Called a "Primer for Democracy" the magazine also carries notable contributions by twenty-nine outstanding and nationally known leaders of American industry, labor, agriculture and education. They present their views of the issue confronting the country today and also "put under the microscope" several of the worst elements of "the mess which students today will soon inherit."

The National Student Federation—publishers of the "Mirror"—are taking this dramatic step to link up student interest with national affairs as the first major activity of the Federation under the administration of Arthur Northwood, Jr., its new president.

Most conspicuous among the non-political contributors to this "Primer" edition of the "Mirror" are Charles W. Taussig, chairman of the advisory committee of the National Youth Administration; Herbert Agar, author of "Land of the Free" and "We, the People", and member of the editorial staff of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Adolph A. Berle, Jr., City Chamberlain of New York City; Paul Clifford Yates, former White House correspondent; Robert Horton, a Scripps-Howard Washington correspondent; Morris Ernst, counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union; and Sumner Welles, assistant secretary of State.

To procure simultaneous release on 750 college campuses, the Federation is using the facilties of university and college bookstores. Copies of the magazine are therefore available here on Monday at the bookstore.

ed the Strawberry Leaf Conference last year and won high honors there. A Strawberry Leaf Society was chartered here last year to serve as a link between the Debate Club and Pi Kappa Delta. This society is not yet fully organized. After this trip in December, however, the executive board of the Debate Club plans to have this society do a definite work in promoting forensic activities at this college. Two practice debates will be held with Hampden-Sydney before this trip to Rock Hill in December.

At the meeting of the Debate Club on last Wednesday night a program discussion of the question of Congress regulating the hours and wages for industry was held. Lillian Anderson and Anthelia Robinette upheld the affirmative side of the question, and Marjorie Thompson and Pattie Bounds supported the negative. Dr. Walmsley gave constructive criticism and outlined the three angles from which the question should be considered. After a program debate to be held Wednesday night, Dr. Walmsley will select the team to represent this college at the Strawberry Leaf Conference.

Noted Artist Will Appear In Lyceum

returned to this cuntry with the well-earned laurels of a finished artist.

Since her return Miss McGraw has been concertizing extensively in the United States. She has appeared as soloist with several symphony orchestras. She is especially well-known in the southern states and makes her home at Washington, D. C. One of her most recent concert tours was in Alabama, where she gave a series of 24 concerts in not only the larger cities, but many university towns and county seats. She was particularly glad to have an opportunity to take her music into the smaller communities, because there, as she says, American listeners are eager for good music and can hear it "in the flesh" only too seldom.

SPORT SLANTS

Basketball

Basketball: Basketball practices have at last settled down to serious work. On every Wednesday afternoon there are two practices; one at 4:00 o'clock for everyone, and one at 5:00 o'clock for all those interested in trying out for forwards. Everyone is invited to attend both practices. At last the gym has become the "ole meeting place." We are beginning to realize what "great fun" it is to play basketball. Why even Kitty Fitzgerald has become a basketball enthusiast! Come on our and help win the color cup!

Hockey

Hockey: Have you heard the latest? Why even Bonnie Lane is out for hockey, and she really "knows her stuff" about the "Ye old Hockey Game." There just seems to be something unusual and so exciting about that game. The girls that had never played the game until this year just can't be pulled away from the field. And Jennie Belle Gilliam and Vera Ebel are almost as excited about the game as some of the freshmen. Improvement has really been noticeable, and we believe, we really have some professional hockey players. "Seeing is believing"—so come on our and see for yourself.

Archery

Archery: On Monday afternoon there were about 15 girls out trying their skill with the bow and arrow. It was really a wonderful occasion, with all new equipment, and girls that were eager and ready to learn. We warn you, to be careful when strolling around the athletic field on Monday afternoons, or you will be punctured with an arrow! Worse luck!

Monogram Club Tests

Monogram Club Tests: Friday afternoon was set aside for all girls interested to take their Monogram Tests. In one corner of the gym a target was set up, and in the other balanced beams, high jump rods, and relay marks, and Marguerite York patiently watched over to see that they were all done correctly. Come on out and make your points toward the Monogram Club.

Hikes

Hikes: Girls are really going out for the great outdoor activity, "Walking." Saturday afternoon a five mile hike caused a great deal of excitement—and the girls all left from the Rotunda to start off a series of five-mile hikes.

Officers Present New Constitution To Home Ec. Club

At the last meeting of the Home Economics Club, Isabelle Plummer, president, Jennie Belle Gilliam, vice-president, and Will Scott, secretary-treasurer, presented the new constitution of the club. Several of the new features of the constitution are that new girls must have a "C" average in order to qualify for the club. Heretofore everyone who took home economics was eligible for the club. Also an initiation ceremony will be held for the first time this year. It was decided upon that dues will be twenty-five cents per quarter as they formerly were. Also a fine of ten cents will be charged for every meeting missed. At present, this new constitution has not been presented to Miss Jeter and Miss Tupper, but it is thought that they will approve it.

over the Pacific between Guam, Southern Japan, and the Northern Phillippines. Shipping wallowed heavily through the storms and the transpacific airline schedules suffered delays.

Chancellor Adolf Hitler, who seldom entertains, played host at his Bavarian chalet yesterday to Count Galeozzo Ciano, Italy's Foreign Minister. Out of that meeting came a united Fascist front that may profoundly affect the future of Europe. Their understanding touches on several points: League of Nations, a trade dictatorial powers over all Germany, a common Fascist campaign against bolshevism; and Rome and Berlin prepared to recognize the Rebels should Madrid fall. The first product of the new Italo-German anuity was the formal recognition by the Reich yesterday of Italy's hold on Ethiopia.

"There will be only one ultimate authority in all economic questions—Party Comrade Governing". So declared the Vollischer Beobackter, official Nazi paper, last week when Colonel General Hermann Goering, Minister of Aviation, Prime Minister of Prussia was appointed commissar with dictotorial powers over all German economic life. He was entrusted particularly with supervision of the four-year plan to make Germany economically self-sufficient, which Hitler announced at the recent Nuremberg Congress.

British aviation industry is on a Rolls Royce basis, the German aviation industry on a Ford basis. The comparison is sufficient explanation of Britain's difficulties in her effort to match Germany's military air strength. In London it was reported that the government disparing of getting fast production at home is planning to import planes from the United States. In buying from the U. S., Britain is doing something impossible for Germany, who lacks the gold.

The Japanese Army leaders as well as the civilians are all obsessed with the fear that Soviet Russia has concluded a secret agreement with China. "When both are ready", they say, "Russia and China will join in an attack upon Manchukuo and Japan." They continue with "Russia's war-like preparations in regions adjacent to Manchukuo are now about finished. We are awaiting her next move."

Glee Club Director Plays for Students In Chapel Wednesday

Mr. Hugh White, director of the Glee Club at Hampden-Sydney College, appeared before the student body last Wednesday morning as pianist and played several numbers that were much appreciated. Two of these numbers were compositions by Mr. White, one of them built around a Chinese theme, and the other, which had recently been composed, was left to the student body to form its own impressions as to its form and style.

was that every one should go to God for a little while each day with the problems, not only large, which are vital to her. God is interested in each small desire of the human heart, but it is much more important that a person say, "God, let me help you," than to be always imploring Him for aid. It is surprising, says Miss Starr, what a secure feeling one has after having a moment alone with God early in the morning.

Good reading, which is conductive to good, clear thinking, is strongly upheld by Miss Starr. She recommends Lloyd Douglas' newest book, "White Banners", "The Hidden Years" by John Oxenham, and "The Girls' Everyday Book" especially, for such books as these, one must needs develop a clean and wholesome spirit.

escort's repartee. As for wraps—charm, grace and formality all wrapped up and coming from a Renaissance painting. Reincarnations of Dante's Beatrice in an untrimmed wrap with shirred sleeves—the dashing de Medici in a hooded, billowing cape lined with red—or a modern siren with white lapin fur framing the face. Don't they sound intriguing? They are intriguing—watch for them!

Then there are such things as this taking place. Tokio, with a population of 6,000,000, eats 16,000 horses a year. The "meat" incidentally, is sold as cooked beef. A young Spanish miss, aged twelve, proudly made known that she had shot down five Fascists. The young gentleman, who one year ago was born in an inky-black well, has never had one day's illness, learned to walk before reaching the age of nine-months and has eight teeth.

Louisville, Ky.—Special — John B. Kennedy, famed NBC commentator and former associate editor of Collier's magazine, will give the main address at the nation's largest gathering of college journalists when he speaks before the delegates to the Associated Collegiate Press convention, October 31, it was announced here today.

Mr. Kennedy, an outstanding editor and writer of the day, will speak to the group on "Current Events and the College Student".

In addition to the address by Mr. Kennedy, the convention contains many of the famed newspapermen and magazine writers of the United States. Included in this list are: Herbert Agar, Pulitzer prize winner and associate editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal; George Brandenburg, Chicago correspondent of Editor & Publisher; Mark Etheridge, general manager of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Thos. F. Barnhart, author of "Weekly Newspaper Management" and professor of journalism at the University of Minnesota; Paul B. Nelson, editor of Scholastic Editor, and many others well known in the field of professional and collegiate journalism.

Outstanding among the convention convocations will be the special panel discussion at which representatives of the professional press, the universities, and the reading public will tell what they would do "If I Were a College Editor."

Virginia Bean and Elsie Cabell will represent the Rotunda staff at the convention, while Virginia Baker and Mary Lib Slater are being sent from the Virginia staff.

Columbia Teachers Committee Reports On Students' Rights

On April 22, 1936, Park Beck, president of the Student Council of Columbia Teachers College, submitted a report which had been drawn up by the Committee on Students' Rights. This report was adopted by the Middle Atlantic Conference of the NSFA and by the Cabinet and Executive Committee with recommendations that the report be submitted to the Annual Congress at Dallas for approval. Meanwhile a certain opposition to the report grew until it included important elements in the NSFA, culminating in a counter report drawn up by the John Marshall College of Law Committee of Students' Rights, submitted by T. James Tumulty, James Egan, and J. Edward Phelan, Faculty Consultant. Important to students is the basis on which their rights are founded. In the following reports, that basis is carefully considered from two different angles.

Report of the Columbia Teachers Committee on Students' Rights:

The Committee is convinced that rights are not inherent in the nature of things, but are acquired through the struggle of those who feel the need for such rights. Certain rights for which students may advantageously struggle at the present time are:

(1) The right of students to disagree with their teachers concerning the conclusions to be drawn from such evidence as is presented by teachers in class, without suffering any penalty for such disagreements;

(2) the right of students to present such evidence as they may care to present in class with a similar measure of impunity;

(3) the right of students to participate freely in class discussions;

(4) the right of students to a voice in the determination of the curriculum;

(5) the right of students to representation at faculty meetings at which interests of students in general are under consideratoin;

(6) the right of students to a hearing before the administration;

(7) the right of students to discuss the institution and its personnel without penalty;

(8) the right of a student to be tried by a jury of fellow students, in case of disciplinary charges by the faculty or administration;

(9) the right of students to organize and to petition;

(10) the right of students, as individuals, to associate themselves with minority or other groups;

(11) the right of students who are of legal age to live their lives outside of the school free from faculty supervision, restricted only by such regulations as are imposed upon all citizens by the civil authorities.

Charles Weidman Will Appear Here In Dance Program

Limon and Bockman Assist Artist In Studies

DANCER IS UNIQUE

Composer Will Give Techniques And Dances

Charles Weidman, brilliant American dancer, with Jose Limon and George Bockman will appear in the S. T. C. auditorium on Monday, November 9, in a program of the modern dance.

This type of program is not unknown to the college for Ted Shawen and Doris Humphreys have each appeared here in recent years. Based on past experience, this year's presentation will undoubtedly be an outstanding Lyceum program of the year.

Charles Weidman was born an artist, and throughout boyhood changed from one to another of several outlets of artistic expression, including caricature and architecture. However, when he was twelve years old he changed for the last time, this time to the art in which he has become brilliantly individual and great. When seventeen he substituted for an injured dancer, and was a success. From this beginning he has risen to the topmost ranks, and it is said of him that "there has been nobody in the dance before him to pattern after, and certainly nobody even remotely like him in the dance today." In composing and in performing his superb comedy, perhaps with a touch of satire, he is supreme.

In his program here he will first give us an interesting demonstration of dance technique, including body mechanics, technique for

Callis Represents S. T. C. In Forum

Dr. Walmsley Picks Teams to Attend Conference

Juanita Callis will represent Farmville in the open forum to be held here on Friday, November 13. The discussion will center around Congress being empowered to regulate maximum hours and minimum wages for industry. Juanita will give the historical background of the question, and representatives from Duke University, Randolph-Macon Men's College, Hampden-Sydney, and Westhampton will dicuss the question negatively and affirmatively.

At the Debate Club meeting on Wednesday night, Dr. Walmsley chose the teams to go to Winthrop College for the Strawberry Leaf Conference to be held on December 3 through 5. Marjorie Thompson and Lillian Anderson will make up the affirmative team and Lucille Rhodes and Pattie Bounds will uphold the negative. These

Cotillion Climaxes Activities Of Fall Quarter With Gayety

The air is filled with a hush, a hush denoting expectancy and a promise of excitement. Voices take on an eager note and faces bright smiles and eyes. Feet become more hurried and clothes more elaborate. The whole school is somehow different.

It is the day. The long-awaited occasion is here. Cars swarm in front of S. T. C. As occupants step from them, they are greeted with wild shouts of recognition and a mad rush of feet in their direction. Old girls are back. They are swamped with delighted upper classmen to the utter bewilderment of freshmen.

The tea room is full and dining room the scene of confusion. Shannons is overwhelmed as everybody greets everybody else inside her friendly doors. Girls ride nonchantly by the school and glance in her direction only to bestow glances of superiority on their fellow students.

Some girls have that glow that indicates the one and only is here. Some are merely in a healthy state of being glad to see their dates. Some are rather unconcerned since their dates are neighbors from the Hill and constant visitors.

Old girls and dates dangle out of the hotel windows and shout merrily to the girls below. Some of the luckier girls find themselves inside the forbidden doors with special permission. The home office is the scene of a complete storm of telegrams, specials, tele-

Roosevelt Landslides Election As Solid South Falls In Line; S.T.C. Goes Democrat 400-90

Students Take Part In Reelection of President

62% CAST BALLOTS

Glass For Senate Is Decision of Group

Franklin Delano Roosevelt is the students' choice, according to the results cited in the polling conducted at S. T. C., Farmville, on November 2. Of the 490 votes cast, 400 were for Roosevelt, while 89 girls voted for Landon. One vote was cast for Thomas. The overwhelming majority recorded for Roosevelt represents over half the student body in itself.

A total of 409 votes were cast in the student election Monday which is 62 per cent of the student body (778) and 87 percent of those who registered. 62 per cent of a group is unusually high for an election, and shows the interest of Farmville students in the national polling. Most of the college polls have been registering about 33 per cent.

The Associated Collegiate Press has been conducting a straw vote among the institutions of higher learning throughout the nation. Their balloting amassed 12,284 votes for Roosevelt as against 10,769 for Landon. Of the 36 schools represented Roosevelt carried 22 to Landon's 16.

Among the colleges besides Farmville who favored Roosevelt are New York University, Eveleth Junior College, Creighton University, Temple University, University of Kentucky, De Pau University Northwestern, St. Benedicts, Muhlenberg College, Evansville College, Louisiana State, Catawba, V. P. I., Wake Forest, High Point College, Ohio State and University of Wisconsin.

Agee and Johnson Lead "Mary Third"

Wheeler Directs Cast For Comedy Production

Virginia Agee and Jim Johnson will play the leading roles in "Mary the Third", the annual fall play which wil be presented on November 20. The production is the combined efforts of the S. T. C. and H.-S. C. Dramatic Clubs, under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler, S. T. C. dramatic coach.

Virginia Agee has attained a reputatin as a comedy actress in plays given in the Farmville auditorium heretofore. She promises to be even better in her role as the third Mary. As an amusing, head-strong, modern girl, trying to prove that the conventional world of her Mother's age is all wrong in its conception of love and marriage, Virginia is excellently cast.

Jim Johnson, as Lynn, Mary's handsome young lover, is new to our stage. He is showing outstanding ability under the direction of Miss Wheeler, and there is every indication that he will not prove disappointing in the role.

The play, a satirical comedy of modern social life, was written by Rachel Crothers,

Gamma Psi Initiates Three S. T. C. Girls Of Artistic Talent

Margaret Sheffey, Mildred Gentry and Frances Smith were designated by Gamma Psi as eligible to that organization on Tuesday, October 27. Their initiation took place on the following Tuesday night, November 3. The membership, formerly numbering seventeen, was increased to twenty.

Gamma Psi is an art club composed of those pupils in school who are especially interested in art and show marked ability in that direction. The formal qualifications for membership are three in number, namely: an interest in art as an avocation or a profession, scholarship in general school work, and outstanding ability in art in this school or in other schools from which they may have come to S. T. C.

One of the new members, Margaret Sheffey, is a transfer from William and Mary and from Marion College.

Electoral College Gives 384 Votes to Roosevelt

VA. IS NEW DEAL

Senate and Congress Are Democratic From State

According to the incomplete returns which have been reported to this time, Roosevelt is assured of a landslide victory over Landon and other candidates for the Presidency of the United States. In the Times-Dispatch tabulation of electoral votes at midnight on Tuesday there were 384 for Roosevelt and 16 for Landon. 131 are still in doubt. Only 266 votes are needed to elect the President.

The solid South, following tradition, is definitely Democratic, piling up a majority for the former President in Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Florida, Kentucky, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Virginia.

The State of Virginia gave Roosevelt an overwhelming majority yesterday by voting 189,157 for him as contrasted with 75,386 for Landon. At the rate it is going, the polls will disclose an all-time high record in voting this year.

Senator Glass and all nine of the Democratic candidates for Congress were victorious.

With only 266 electoral votes need to elect, Roosevelt is conceded 384 from the 29 states where the New Deal has the advantage. The South itself furnished 146 electoral votes. Landon's home state of Kansas has been up to this time showing a light advantage for Roosevelt, but the results there are still considered doubtful.

S. T. C. Graduates Secure Positions

Eighty-Five Percent Of June's Class Is Working

Of the eighty-five graduates of the class of '36 eighty-five percent secured positions or are in other work. The Placement Bureau has been a great help in securing these positions. The superintendent of the school writes to the bureau for teachers, and the bureau gives a list of teachers with their accomplishments. The Placement Bureau will be of assistance to graduates this year.

There are only sixteen girls of last year's class who are at home. They are Annie Louise Briggs, Alice Collins, Winfred Goodman, Susan Gresham, Dartha and Martha Harrison, Elizabeth Hart, Ellen Mason, Claudine O'Brien, Virginia Payne, Mary Lee Powell, Kathleen Ranson, Mrs. Nora B. Rawlingson, Edith Sanford, Clyde Tuck, and Jane Covert is spending the winter in Norfolk.

Izell Houck has perhaps the most unusual position of any member of the class. She is traveling companion to an explorer and his wife.

The following girls with work other than teaching are Florence Sanford, social service work under auspices of Tri Sigma Sorority; Ellen Zimmerman, social service work at William and Mary Ex-

DID WE GROW UP?

Once more there has come a time when no longer can the hymn number be heard; when Dr. Jarman finds himself shouting above the tumult; when chapel has ceased, for many, to hold that meaning which gives it its purpose.

There are several ways of looking upon the chapel hour, each of which should appeal to any reasoning adult. Of first consideration is the fact that the chapel period has been set aside as a few minutes of worship and reverence which should not be violated. Although there are some to whom this makes no appeal, the majority of students wish to preserve the spirit of devotion to which they have been trained.

Another, more matter-of-fact, view is that of adult conduct. We as professional students are expected to have a certain amount of dignity and poise which will enable us to carry off any situation which we may find ourselves. To the disinterested as well as to the interested observer it would appear that a graave error has been made in that assumption. Surely no professional apprentice could have the childish lack of decorum and consideration displayed in the rustling of papers, giggling and nudging, and general elementary conduct which is so violently noticeable during our chapel service.

If we must get down to the lowest level of appeal, we may mention the fact that as chapel is required just as classes are, we could at least consider it to the extent and conduct ourselves as if we were in the lecture room. After all, our faculty is in a position to judge us from the auditorium platform as well as behind the desk.

THE MODERN DANCE

Since we are living in a modern age, we should know about the so-called modern dance. What is it? Why is it that so many people don't appreciate its movements and its rhythms? Is it because they aren't able to understand the things of their own age

By the modern dance we mean those types of dancing which are neither classic nor romantic. The classic dance has a set vocabulary of movement which for perfection of execution must be performed in a prescribed manner. The predominant characteristic of its movement is artificiality. The romantic dance threw off this restrictive vocabulary. It was not interested in what is considered to be a collection of meaningless words; it wanted to get at meaning irrespective of words.

The dance has only recently begun to be recognized as a major art and there is still considerable confusion about it, not only in the public mind, but in the minds of dancers themselves as a class. It has not been an easy matter, however, for ever the most sympathetic spectator to determine what the basis of the modern dance is when he sees no two dancers' performances apparently in any way similar to each other. He has been further confused by the neglect, the ignorance and even the hostility of the majority of music critics on the newspapers who undertake without any preparation and with even less sympathy to write critically of dance performances.

The modern dancer has discarded completely the theory of arbitrary forms and has builded on the principle that emotional experience can express itself through movement directly. Thus for the first time it has become possible to have a creative tragic dance as well as an abstract lyrical one.

The modern dance is not a system; it is a point of view. This point of view has been developing through the years, and it is by no means an isolated development. It has gone hand in hand with the developments of points of view on other subjects.

One distinctive point of the modern dance is the discarding of all traditional requirements of form and the establishment of a new principle upon which each dance makes its own form.

In considering the modern dance it is well to be perfectly clear on the use of the term, beauty, for the most common accusation that is hurled against it is that it is no power of beauty. This is an accusation decidedly removed from the truth. The more accurate statement of the case would be that some people have no aesthetic response to the modern dance. This puts the limitation on those individual minds where it belongs, instead of wiping out an entire movement.

WILL KING EDWARD MARRY MRS. SIMPSON?

The whole world, standing alert with eyes and ears open for the latest news on the courtship of King Edward VII and Mrs. Simpsonfi is wondering what the final outcome will be—marriage or just an end.

King Edward has known many beautiful women in his time, some probably more beautiful than this Baltimore socialite, and therefore it is not probable that he is dazed by her charm. Anyone in such a high position would not willingly make his country the talk of every nation if he had any love and respect for it. There must be some cause, and an ordinary courtship does not call for a daily order of flowers.

Types of women crave social prominence and publicity; newspapers have already furnished the latter, but a marriage will be necessary to achieve the former. If they marry she will not be allowed to receive with him at presentations. These things will not matter if she really loves him.

The people of England respect and love their rulers. Will they continue to do so after one marries a commoner? They might be broadminded enough to let it make no difference since it's their ruler's choice, yet to have him marry someone not of his own country or rank could make them lose some respect they have cherished.

Problems would always arise from this marriage, and since the voice of the people is the government and it changes often, no decision would be permanent. Civil wars have been started by a smaller flame.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By the time this column greets your eyes, everyone will know who is to be the head of this great country of ours for the next four years. We should face the issue with high hearts and if our side wins—don't gloat; if he loses, be ready to help the new administration with pert countenances!

It seems as though European countries are certainly preparing for something! Six of them—Austria, Italy, France, Germany, Yugoslavia, and Switzerland—are improving their natural Alpine defenses. Military men declare that, as a result, decisive battles of a future war might be fought among dizzy crags and raging blizzards thousands of feet above sea level by men on skis and snowshoes.

In spite of the fact that Madrid is safe from cavalry and foot troops, the air fleets of the Fascists have been bombarding the city from the heights. Four attacks were made on Saturday, and women and children were most of the victims of the wrathful revolution. An American girl from Texas, narrowly escaped death, when, on the fourth attack, a bomb exploded not twenty feet from her.

According to Richmond authorities, a steady rise in mortality points to an abnormal lowering of living standards, bad housing and poverty so abject that families have been forced to crowd together, multiplying the number of persons who are exposed to every active case. In 1929 the general death rate was 16.1; in 1935 it was 15.8—and while the number of births has declined, we find that infant mortality has increased considerably.

A startling situation, which started on the Pacific Coast has rapidly spread to the Atlantic ports. The Maritime Engineers Union ordered its license—bearing members to resign and leave the engine rooms of strike-bound coast ships. In San Francisco, grocery and food storage warehouses are remaining closed as the result of one thousand warehousemen seeking wage increases. Sixteen ships have been tied up by sympathy strikes at Philadelphia, and nine were reported strike-bound in Baltimore. This strike—the result of mob discontentment and stubborness—will, without a doubt, paralyze the shipping industry on both coasts plus possible effects on Alaska and Hawaii.

Everyone's hopes took a flying tumble in someway or other this past week-end. V. M. I. went through Virginia's line with a 12-0 victory. V. P. I. trounced over Richmond 20-7. W. & L.'s Generals were babies in the hands of Duke's Blue Devils and, as a result, the score was 51-0. Hampden-Sydney played the part of "wolf" when they met William and Mary and threw them for a 19-0 victory. Roanoke took King 20-7—and, on and on—

We hear that Mrs. Simpson is the guest of England's King Edward in his country home; that real jewelry has returned with its age of elegance—especially gold, set with stones or worked into designs; that the scientific fight on cancer has been greatly aided by a new gun—a machine that is said to be three times as effective as the X-ray; that the stork derby in Canada is ended—with the prize of $500,000; that a bunch of freshmen and sophomores are going to get in trouble for masquerading as the noble and honorable association known as Chi.

Time and tide brings all things.

Rotunda Reverberations

Wasn't Cotillion grand? Everything went off with a bang. But then you wouldn't expect people to do otherwise with a receiving line and floor committee staring them in the face when they opened the door. Even Mr. F. Williams had to go down it.

The dresses and flowers were oh—so pretty—like New York or something. It really would have been complete if Lucy P. and Smitty had gone as the Siamese twins with a Christmas funeral wreath around their necks. Many things happened at the dance. To walk in you might have been surprised to see Chic over in the corner fussing with her date, Gay Steffens dancing with a V. P. I. uniform—but alas, the poor cadet left his belt back at school. (he really went down that receiving line with all the grace required of a uniform, however, more power to him). Then there was a certain person who insisted on telling Mary B. what ugly green eyes she had. And what to eyes of a Senior should appear, but a freshman asking her to dance with her date. (that freshman is causing trouble in more than one way). As usual, there was the young man—several of them in fact, who insisted on telling you how beautiful you were—and even getting around to the marrying stage.

Will authorities ever cease? In brousing around we even find one on "bull sessions". "The opposite sex", is the most popular topic for bull sessions among college lads and lassies, according to a censure taken by Professor Paul Fay of the DePau University psychology department. This authority gives the general discussion topics in the following order of importance: the opposite sex, college studies, campus affairs, miscellaneous conversation, discussion of the same sex, college sports, organized amusement, food, professors as individuals, general politics, other non campus news and cultural subjects.

And that ,we should say, would cover completely any campus!

This bit of verse from Renssalaer Polytechnic seems most appropriate for this weeks column:

I think that I shall never see
A party like the G. O. P.
A crowd whose loving heart is pressed
So close to Wall Street's garden breast.
A crowd that looks to Hearst all day
And lifts its oily head to pray
A crowd that now all coyly wears
The Du Ponts sunflower in their hair.
A crowd that courts in evil fate
That intimately lives in hate.
Speeches are made by fools like me

Literary Column

Do You Know English Literature?

Here are a few of the interesting questions and answers given in "Do You Know English Literature?" by Blanche Williams and John Macy.

1. What is the most extensive literature ever known to the world?

The literature of the English language.

2. To whom are thanks due for preservation of the old literature?

To the monks and nuns; later, to professional scribes, employed in monasteries.

3. With what great work of translation is John Wycliff accredited?

The Bible.

4. Who said, "Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man"?

Francis Bacon, in the essay "Of Studies".

5. What is Pepy's Diary?

The shorthand notebook of Samuel Pepys (1633-1703) came into literature in the nineteenth century, when they were deciphered and published. The Diary was not intended for publication yet was carefully preserved by Pepys as if he considered it important. It is an intimate, naive, detailed account of great and little matters of every description.

6. For what is Lady Mary Wortely Montague remembered?

For her incomparable letters, mong the best in the language; they are unsurpassed for close observation, vivacity, real penetration into the life of the times, and are in excellent style.

7. What was the chief service that Robert Burns performed for poetry?

He broke the hold of conventional sentiment with lyrics that fulfilled Milton's requirements of poetry—that it be simple, sensuous, and impassioned; he aroused a new appreciation of nature; he was the poet of lowly humanity.

8. What did Burns regard as his best poem?

"I look on Tam O'Shanter to be my standard performance in the poetical line."

9. Who was Fanny Browne?

The "beautiful and elegant, graceful, silly, fashionable and strange" lady whom John Keats hopelessly loved. (The description is from one of the poet's letters.)

10. Who produced the finest of the terror novels?

Mary Wolstonecraft Shelley, in her "Frankinstein", or "The Modern Prometheus" (1818)

11. Which is the tenderest of Lamb's essays?

Dream Children: A Reverie.

12. Which is the most humorous of Lamb's essays?

A Dissertation Upon Roast Pig.

13. What is Bryon's masterpiece?

Don Juan.

14. Of whom did Tennyson write, "His honor rooted in dishonor stood, and faith unfaithful kept him falsely true"?

Launcelot in "Launcelot and Elaine".

15. What is Dicken's masterpiece?

"David Copperfield", which he rightly liked best of all his books.

16. What is a dramatic lyric?

A poem in which the poet puts the emotions into the mouth and mind of an imagined character, as distinct from a lyric in which the poet expresses his own emotion. This form is Browning's invention and in it he is unapproachable.

History:

Note: Reviews are excerpts taken from Book Review Digest

The Spanish Main—Philip Ainsworth Means.

In this book the term "The Spanish Main" is used to designate the entire Carribean Sea and the southern half of the Gulf of Mexico, the islands of those waters, and the mainland thereto. The book is a history of this region from the discovery by Columbus to 1700, and covers the conquest by Spain and the efforts of other countries, England, France, and Holland, to break the power of Spain there.

Seldom does one find a book, written by a scholar exact in facts carefully documented and organized, which also is so interesting and entertaining that it cannot be put aside. Mr. Mears, however, accomplishes just this in "The Spanish Main."

America—Its Hisotry and People by Harold Underwood Faulkner and Tyler Kepner

This book opens a door upon a new and stimulating view of American history. The story of America, simple comprehensive, with everything in it, is told in an entirely new way that makes our political, social, cultural and economic development clearer, more vivid, and more complete.

In separate sections the authors trace the course of art, religion, education and science; the trend of foreign affairs, our emergence as a political power, etc.

This authoritative and wholly modern work provides a refreshingly different approach to American history.

The Story of Congress by Ernest Sutherland Bates

Never before, probably since its beginning has such a bright light been turned upon Congress; and here is a new microscope on the inner mechanisms of legislative procedure. It is an amazingly vital picture of American politics.

The author does not believe that economic courses work themselves out apart from human agencies and purposes, and has stressed the many colorful personalities who have made the history of

Hallowe'en Emulates Customs Of Druids and Early Romans

A spicy nip to the air, rustling leaves, pumpkins and nuts are the heralds of that very interesting holiday, Hallowe'en. Then too has arrived the time for black cats, witches or broomsticks, hats, and owls with crescent moons, for this is the time when ghosts roam and skeletons prowl, so "the goblins'll git ya, if ya don't watch out".

We owe our ghosts and phantoms to the ancient Druids, who had a festival starting at midnight, October thirty-first, when they built bonfires to keep away the evil spirits. The lord of death, Soenon, called condemned souls to inhabit the bodies of animals and in general prowl around and haunt people.

Then too, the early Romans had a word for it. On the first of November, they feasted, in honor of the goddess Pamona, and we're just as glad that they did, for it was then that some of the old customs, such as bobbing for apples, were originated.

Not only does Hallowe'en incline toward the mysterious, but it likewise "smacks" of the romantic. For virtually every young hopeful has, at some time or other, gazed rapturously into a looking glass, waiting for the reflection of the "one and only" to be discovered jeering over her shoulder. If this fails, she may revert to the old custom of throwing apple peelings over her left shoulder, hoping that they will arrange themselves on the floor to form a nice, appropriate initial of her own choice.

Most adults greet the custom of masquerading as gleefully as they did when they were children, for it takes but costumes and masques, to transform us from our everyday selves into that which we would like to be—be it anything from Santa Claus to a butterfly.

Years may come and go, but not before they have left us with the stimulated imagination and renewed love of fun, which is inspired by the jolliest season of all, Hallowe'en.

Pope Plays For Openings

Bob Pope and his popular ten piece orchestra have been signed by the German Club to furnish the music for the opening dances which will be held during home-coming.

Chapel Behavior Is Problem to Students

Thursday, Bonnie Lane called attention to the need of reverent and attentive behavior in chapel. Due reverence should be given to the few minutes that we assemble for worship. Bonnie, also urged the courteous treatment of visitors and speakers. Knitting, reading mail, and other things irrelevant to chapel, discourage the best of speakers. She requested our cooperation in the proper observance of chapel.

Epworth League Has Party for Students

The Epworth League of the Methodist church entertained the S. T. C. girls and H.-S. C. boys of that denomination with a Hallowe'en party in the Sunday School room of the church, Wednesday night, October 29. After everyone had been scared to death in "The House of Horror" and had had his fortune told, Dr. Jarman sang three selections: "The Blind Ploughman", "Rolling Down To The Rio", and "On The Road To Mandalay." As an encore he sang his favorite, "Keep On Hoping."

After several games were played, Miss Irene Leake entertained with songs, and refreshments were served in Hallowe'en style.

India Martin Speaks At B. S .U. Convention

The Baptist Student Union State Convention is being held at the University of Virginia this week-end, November 6-8. India Martin, president of the Farmville B. S. U. is listed among the speakers for Sunday morning. Her topic will be "Church Support."

The keynote of the convention will be "The Will of God", and it is expected that it will prove of great inspiration and interest.

Those attending the convention from S. T. C. are: India Martin, Virginia Pilcher, Marjorie Thompson, Evelyn Hastings, Evelyn Beale, Sara M. Beale, Adelaide Dressler, Alice Elder, Lucy F. Smith, Lois Barbee, Louise De Jarnette, Francis Holloway, Katherine Thomas, and Miss Katherine Tupper.

Music sounds from the gym, a cordial receiving line, flowers, stamped hands, a glitter of jewels, ruffles, patent leather shoes and sleek black tuxedos. The dance is on, under a levy of gay balloons, to the tune of mad music. Eyes smile into other eyes as feet move together in perfect rhythm. Stags hover together and view their preys. Lines flourish. A voice croons out. Dresses wind in and out, making the scene one of many colors. At last it is over—one more fall cotillion. Tired feet are rested. Bull sessions gather and last far, far into the night as young eyes shine and young voices get shrill in the fun of living over the pleasure of the dance—at last all is still and Morpheus reigns supreme.

Thank goodness it was time to go home when they started that.

"The Third Mary" has caused many an hour's practice lately. We are told it's to be quite good. Some people will be awful glad when it's over. That fair H.-S. lad who has been leaving off shaving every day for self-protection—will soon be able to take his mask off. We know who you are anyhow.

Aren't we glad to see those four girls back from Louisville tonight? They look (as if they had a wonderful time) tired. Poor things, all their shoes will have to be half-soled and some sleep required, but we're awful glad they could go. One thing, they said they didn't have to worry about expenses 'cause they had plenty of them.

And the next time Charlotte Rice has to buy a diamond from the dime store may she try to fool somebody besides her roommate, Ruth Chambers. She really did bite.

Episcopal Girls Dine In Minister's Home

Each year Mrs. Tucker entertains the new Episcopal girls of S. T. C. On October 8, her dinner guests were Prince Smith, Lawrenceville; Beulah Ettinger, Lawrenceville; Mary Brookfield, Alexandria; Louise Campbell, Amherst; Frances Alvis, Lynchburg; and Beverly Baptist, Boydton.

On October 9, Martha Meade Hardaway, Burkeville; Mary Mahone, Petersburg; Nancy Taylor Eastern Shore; Esther Beebe, Spartansburg, S. C.; and Helen Hoyer, Hampton.

On October 15, Jacqueline Adams, Kenbridge; Marie Dix, Saluda; Anne Berkeley Williams, Blacksburg; Bruce Crowell, Danville; Micou Sneed, Toana; and Helen Jeffries, Culpeper.

October 28, Shirley Andrews, Norfolk; Lucy Blackwell, Warrenton; Gene Brittle, Emporia; Iva Cummings, Lexington, and Lucy and Judith Jeffries, Shackleford.

Choral Club Party Has Hallowe'en Theme

The Choral Club had a get-together party on Monday night, November 1, in the Choral Club room. The guests were greeted informally by Marjorie Robertson, chairman of the program committee. The Hallowe'en theme was carried out in the decorations, games and refreshments. Marjorie, acting as leader of games, awarded prizes to the winners, Ruth Boaz and Louise Foster. After everyone had eaten their peanuts and had had their fortunes told by the number of seeds in their apples the group accompanied by Mr. Strick at the piano sang "The End of a Perfect Day".

Besides the members of the Choral Club, Mr. and Mrs. Strick and daughter Jean were the guests.

Working with Marjorie Robertson on the committee for the party were Judith Gathright and Virginia Pilcher.

DOROTHY MAY STORES

Supervisor of Music Speaks to Students On Arts In Schools

Dr. Thomas D. Eason, head of the State Board of Education and Mr. Richmond, the newly appointed state supervisor of music, were guests in chapel last Wednesday. Dr. Eason, a former teacher of S. T. C., introduced the music supervisor.

Mr. Richmond spoke of the prevalent need of music throughout the state. More and more, our schools are emphasizing music as a part of our high school courses. We, as future teachers, need not feel inadequate to teach music because we are not trained musicians; we can foster a love of music by letting our pupils participate in it. He listed landscaping and art with music as being needed in our public schools.

In closing, Mr. Richmond recalled Mr. Erskines' theory of education: that participation in studies and enjoyment of these studies are what we are seeking in music and other phases of education.

Campus Fees Cover Quarterly Magazine

That the Farmville Quarterly Review will be placed in the college fees has been announced by Dr. Jarman. This means that the magazine will be distributed to all students and financed by the campus fees, paid to the school by the girls. In this way, each student will have the opportunity of possessing the magazine. It is hoped that this will cause this publication to become a permanent one.

It has been announced by the staff that the deadline for articles to go in the fall issue of the Quarterly Review Thursday, November 5. This issue will be given the students around the latter part of November.

Captains of Hockey Elected By Classes

Captains of the class hockey teams were elected after the class meetings on Tuesday, November 3.

Mary Virginia Walker will captain the seniors. She has taken part in various sports since her freshman year. Edna Bolick was unanimously chosen by the junior hockey team. She was captain of their team last year also. The sophomores elected Army Butterworth, who was captain of their team last year. Harriet Vaden was chosen by the freshman class as their captain. She is assistant manager of hockey, on the A. A. Council.

The inter-class hockey games will be held November 10. Color Rush will precede the games, at lunch time.

Sodalitas Latina Has Meeting on Thursday

Sodalitas Latina the Latin Club, held its first meeting of the year last Thursday, October 29th at 5 o'clock in the Language room. Libby Morris, president, welcomed all the old and new members. After the business meeting, the meeting was turned over to Ruth Phelps, chairman of the program committee. Several reports were made on the derivations of "money", "salary" and "cuss" words. Games were played after which the program ended with the whole club singing "Virgil" in English and "O Fons Bandusiae" in Latin, accompanied by Ruth Phelps at the piano.

HIGHLIGHTS OF ASSOCIATED C. P. CONVENTION

Delegates of Publications Meeting in Louisville, Kentucky, Return; Speakers and Social Functions Prove Highly Entertaining, Say Students

With speakers of such prominence as Herbert Agar, "Dusty" Miller and John B. Kennedy, delegates to the Associated Collegiate Press Convention which met in Louisville, Kentucky, October 28-31 were both instructed and entertained.

Among the 375 delegates convening at the Brown Hotel were representatives of 33 states and 160 colleges and universities of the nation. The State of Virginia, itself, had 22 student representatives, among which four were from the Farmville State Teachers College.

Herbert Agar, economist, associate editor of the Courier-Journal of Louisville, and Pulitzer Prize winner, was the first of a roster of prominent speakers to address the fifteenth annual convention of the A. C. P. His address, "If I Were a College Editor," contained the thought that editors today have a unique opportunity in a critical time. He brought out the fact that man has let things happen instead of making them happen, and that the press can stimulate and build political thought which will correct the situation.

"We must love our country so much that we hate it," was the keynote of Agar's address. Its ability to face facts, its faults and imperfections, must become the brunt of our scorn and the objects of reform, he said.

"Dusty" Miller, famous humorist and editor of the Wilmington Ohio, News, was the principal speaker at the banquet on Friday night. Dinner music was furnished by the U. of L. Radio Trio.

John B. Kennedy, N. B. C.'s ace news commentator, addressed the convention at its final meeting on Saturday on "Current Affairs and the College Student."

"I do not consider that there is any authority for current affairs because the current is too fast for anyone to keep up with," he said. Nevertheless, we are facing a contest between communism and capitalism in which the intelligent student must eventually take his part. Mr. Kennedy established a number of vital points; i. e.: that communism always ends in personal tyranny; that we suffer more economically than in bloodsheed, in war; that in so far as trade is concerned we have not advanced beyond the primitive stages in our thinking; that the chief trouble is not, at this time, over-production, but under-education of the producer.

Among the other speakers of the convention were Dean B. M. Brigman of the U. of L.; Mayor Neville Miller; James Hanratty, president of the K. I. P. A.; and journalists from various states and institutions.

Beside the banquet, entertainments included tours of the city and printing establishments, a luncheon given by the Louisville Courier-Journal and a dance. For the latter Jimmie Robinson and his orchestra played. There was a special floor show of song and dance numbers.

Round table discussions were conducted for both editors and business managers of newspapers, yearbooks, and magazines. In these, after a talk by an authority of the subject to be discussed, open forum was held in which individual problems were made known and remedies suggested. The topics selected for these meetings were of universal need and interest ,and furnished an opportunity for improvement in the individual's work.

SPORT SLANTS

Archery

Archery: Did you notice? or have you heard? Whiz, whiz, whiz!!! Here an arrow and there a bow, and somewhere in the distance there is a target. If you hit the spot you are tops, but if you don't, no one will ever know. After all we are all learning, and it's great fun. The athletic field looks as though Robin Hood's court has come to life. Come on out, girls and learn how to shoot the apple off William Tell's head.

Practices are held every Monday afternoon and Maxine Burke is always ready to help you out, and show you "how it's done."

Basketball

Basketball: Girls in red and blue gym suits, all going in the same direction, and their destination is the gym. And we don't wonder one bit. After all, basketball practice is only held on Wednesday afternoons, and now is the time to get those required practises. You should see Frances Hudgins, Jennie Bell Gilliam, Jennie Carroll, Inez Chappell, Ruth Phelps, and Sue Eastman. They really take the gym by "storm". And are those "rats" (pardon me)—freshmen going places. They truly have plenty of good material, and with practice they will surely go places. So keep up the good work! The time is drawing near when we should start practicing, so that we won't have to rush at the last minute to get practises in! Don't forget the Color Cup!

Monogram Hikes

Monogram Hikes: "What ho and a non!" And another five mile hike proved to interest our girls last Saturday afternoon. The girls left the Rotunda Saturday afternoon and a "rosy cheeked" bunch of girls returned in the same Rotunda later that afternoon. Saturday was a perfect day for hiking—and a "good time was had by all".

Hockey

Hockey: Well it won't be as long as it has been. The days are rapidly flying by, and very soon those final games will be played. "Who will win?" "Will the freshmen wear their caps till Christmas?" "Which colors will prove victorious?" These are the questions that are asked on every side. But no one seems to know the answers. We do know that there are hockey practises every Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, and that some people had better start practising. Can you imagine anything as embarrassing as having the freshmen win over "all of us old girls"? Well, I can't and we had better not let them. The only solution is, for everyone to start practising, and work hard so that your colors will be "flying high"!!!

Don't forget the color rush that is held before the games. You had better start picking around in order to find those girls that are really "fleet of feet".

After all "the early bird gets the worm." "But who wants a worm". What we want is "our colors" tacked on every building on campus.

Come on classes, and start showing that class and school spirit! This year has to be the best yet!

Program of Pianist Includes Selections Of Modern Tempos

A large audience welcomed the opportunity to hear a piano recital by the famous young American artist, Miss Helen McCraw, in the auditorium Friday evening, October 30th, at eight o'clock.

Miss McGraw's program ranged from the "Prelude and Fugue" by Bach to the "Sonata Fantasie," opus 19 by Scriabin. It also included the following selections: Fantasic, D minor, Mozart; Rhapsodie, E. flat major, Brahms; Sonata, A flat major, Brahms; Sonata, A flat major, Beethoven; Three Preludes, Debussy; Standchen, Strauss-Gieseking; Etude Number Four, Stravinsky.

At the conclusion of her playing the famous "Sonata Fantasie", she was enthusiastically encored.

Miss McGraw received the highest degree, the Artists Diploma of the Peabody Conservatory of Music, Baltimore, Maryland in 1930. While there she was a pupil of Alexander Sklareskki, a well-known Russian teacher of piano. During the same year she competed with musicians from all over the country and won the Nuemberg Foundation Music Contest.

She made her debut at the Town Hall in New York where she was acclaimed a brilliant success. Later, she studied in Paris and gave concerts in that city and London and other leading cities in Europe.

Weidman Presents Program of Dance As Third Lyceum

Artist Has a School With Humphreys In N. Y.

TECHNIC SHOWN

Interpretative Dance Is Feature Of Program

A program of modern dance presented by Charles Weidman assisted by Jose Limon and George Brockman was held in the S. T. C. auditorium on November 9. The dancers were brought here as one of the artist series of Lyceum numbers.

Mr. Weidman, who has been dancing for about seventeen years has, with Doris Humphreys, conducted a school for dance in New York for the past seven years. His assistants, Jose Limon and Charles Brockman, are his students. The former is of Mexican birth, though he has been in this country since he was two years old, and he has been dancing for six years. Mr. Weidman and Mr. Brockman are of German descent.

Mr. Weidman arranged his program that it might prove educational as well as entertaining. He began with a demonstration of dance techniques with body mechanics and the technique of dance composition, classifying the movements as the dancers demonstrated them.

The first dance was the Convergence and Affirmation from "Quest" by Norman Lloyd, the assistant at the piano, with all three dancing. It portrayed the difficulties of a young artist trying to free himself from outside distractions.

After a brief intermission Weidman himself used his body as a means of expression in the dance "Declaration". Jose Limon presented "Danza" by Prokodieff, which was in two movements, one expressing song, the other dance. Other selections were "Mens' Dance" from Doris Humphrey's "New Dance"; "Kinetic Pantomime", a comedy number; and "Cancion Y Danza".

The program closed with a dance called "Traditions", for which the music was composed by Lehman Engle, former pupil of Mr. Alfred Strick. This unique dance depicted the death struggle of a tradition, it's final defeat, and the ensuing establishment of another habit or tradition just as strong.

Six Students Are Bid By Debaters

Girls Are Selected By the Try-Out Method

The Debate Club held try-outs for those wishing to become members on Wednesday, November 4th, at five o'clock in the small auditorium. Those girls trying out gave short talks on the question of Congress being empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry. The following girls were issued bids: Grace Waring, Ruth Sears, Chic Dortch, Vivian Womack, Florence Bress and Evelyn Kreger.

Due to the fact that one college was unable to send a representative to the Open Forum which was planned for Friday, November 13th, the former discussion is postponed until a later date.

Youthful Magician Will Appear Here

Ben Franklin Brings Show as Social For S. C. A.

On November 24 at 8:15 in the S. T. C. auditorium in Farmville, Benjamin Franklin, a former Hampden-Sydney student who is now at the University of Ohio, and who is a ranking magician will give an evenings entertainment in magic.

The entire student bodies and faculties of S. T. C. and Hampden-Sydney will be given a blanket invitation to attend the performance as guest of the Students' Christian Association. No outsiders will be admitted.

B. Franklin attended Hampden-Sydney three years, transferring to the University of Ohio in the fall of 1935. He has many friends at Hampden-Sydney and Farmville who will be glad to renew his acquaintance. Although in his early twenties, Mr. Franklin has acquired a notable reputation as a magician. Many recall his past shows at Hampden-Sydney and Farmville.

His present show is entirely new with many spectacular additions of illusions. His reincarnation scene alone, some 12 by 15 feet in size, requires a large stage and good lighting for presentation.

Drama Apprentices Give One-Act Play For Club Members

Under the supervision of Marjorie Thompson the aprentices of the acting group of the Dramatic Club presented a one-act play entitled "The Rector" in the regular meeting of the club Wednesday night, November 4th.

The Rector, John Herresford, as indicated, is the pastor of a small town church; and, in the opinion of certain active members of the ladies circle, unfortunately is not married.

He is very young, rather unsophisticated and all in all, badly in need of the prestige and respect accorded a husband and head of a family. With this in mind the ladies with all good intentions decide that he should marry, and proceed to select a wife for him.

Mrs. Lemmingworth, prominent in the church, appoints herself as committee number one for this job, the result being that Miss Trimball, the most decided old maid of all the eligible spinsters, is designated as just the fine girl who would make a man a dutiful and loving wife. But the Rector objects, and Mrs. Lemmingworth's fond hopes suffer catastrophe when he professes his love for Miss Victoria Knox, a modern young lady.

Those taking part in the play were Betty Hardy as the young

Bill Cope, Banjoist, To Play at S. T. C.

"Happy" Bill Cope, wizard of the banjo, accordionist, guitar, and piano artist, will appear in the S. T. C. auditorium under the auspices of the senior class, on Thursday, November 12.

Bill Cope is of international note, having traveled in Belgium, England, Canada and France, as well as the United States. He has also appeared in vaudeville and as a radio entertainer.

"Happy" Bill's program will consist of songs, music on the banjo, guitar, accordion, and piano, and bits of comedy entertainment.

When he appeared at S. T. C. five years ago, he played to a packed house of enthusiastic students and townpeople.

—Editorial— CASE: US VS. RATS

Vandalism may seem a harsh — nay, ridiculous word to apply to the habit of eating in the theatre. Nevertheless, there is a perfectly good reason why that term may be applied (and mentally is) by those who own the building in which the pictures are shown.

The lamentable fact is that rats are ever sensitive to the odors of food and come scurrying forth to devour the remains of theatre feasts. They especially enjoy popcorn, and candy papers, to say nothing of delicious nab boxes. There would be no objection to their joining the fun except that they refuse to remain innocent. They settle down to a fruitful existence in the building and gnaw at its foundations systematically.

To those who own the building, to those who clean the building, as well as those who use the building, this is a distinct disadvantage.

We all appreciate the opportunity of seeing a good show while we munch a candy bar, but why double up on the pleasures? They last longer the other way. As yet, the rodents have manifested no avidity for coca-cola cups. If we are thirsty we may be relieved.

From this time thence, our vandalism will not be innocent. We know now the tragic facts and shall act accordingly. Our watchword thenceforth shall be, "No food at the show."

James Gives Talk On Public Welfare

Speech Opens Series For Welfare Class

At the first of a series of talks for the Child Welfare class under Miss Stubbs, Mr. Arthur James spoke on Wednesday, November 4.

Mr. James explained the development and mechanism of the Public Welfare system as it is operated in the state of Virginia. In 1922, the Welfare Act, which is not compulsory, was passed. The Board of Welfare differs from the Board of Charities in that this service extended into the counties and cities as a method of prevention. Our charter provides for the development of welfare departments of service in counties and cities. The election of the board of supervisors is done by both county and city welfare superintendents who are able to carry on poor relief and other relief measures; a probation officer to country trial justice who is judge of juvenile and domestic relations courts; a parole officer for state institutions. The duty of the State Superintendent of Public Welfare is to coordinate and supervise all private and public welfare centers, to benefit the community. It is essential to have a service in the counties and cities upon which one can rely, for without it the state is worthless; the state has no other means to keep in touch with those

Majority of Class Secures Positions

Sixty - Three Percent Of Diploma Class Is Teaching

Out of the seventy-nine graduates of last year's sophomore class, there are only eight at home. The majority of the class is teaching. Three are in business. The majority of the graduates attending college are enrolled at Farmville State Teachers College.

The two year course girl stands a good chance of obtaining work, for there is more demand for primary and grammar grade teachers than there is for high school teachers.

The girls in business are Lucille Davis, Elizabeth Haukley and Dora Parker.

The girls in school other than S. T. C. are Anna Hock, Marshall College and Marion Hansbrough, Business College, Roanoke.

Betty Harrison is the only girl who has married.

The girls at home are Maude Duck, Edith Himes, Valla Nimmo, Mary Louise Partridge, Mary Phipps, Cleo Reynolds, Frances Teass, and Juanita Zeigler.

The juniors at S. T. C., are Juanita Callis, Erna Dickerson, Eleanor Dodson, Richie Ellis, Ervin May Hamilton, Kathryn Jamison, Kathleen McCann, Alice Nelson, Kathryn Fitzgerald (Senior), Mary Virginia Pilcher, Clara Pinckard, Margaret Russell, Virginia Scan-

Spirit Of Joan Of Arc Rules Over Activities In S. T. C.

Typical of our lives here today is the equestrian statue of Joan of Arc which stands on the colonnade. It signifies power, vitality, and force, impelled by an inward strength and a consciousness of right. With her eyes and her sword pointed upward to the source of her inspiration and power, Jeanne d' Arc's spirit marches triumphantly forward, a symbol of enthusiasm that will never die, a challenge to all of an endless devotion and inestimable spirit of love.

In the spring of 1927 Alpha Delta Rho (now Alpha Kappa Gamma) in searching for a gift which would embody the ideals of leadership finally selected out of all the art portraying Joan of Arc, the equestrian statue by Anna Hyatt Huntington, America's foremost woman sculptor. Her greatest work is this equestrian statue of Joan of Arc.

A committee chosen by Alpha Delta Rho wrote to Mrs. Huntington, after making arrangements to buy the statue, and told her of their plans.

In reply to their letter they received an answer from Mrs. Huntington bringing the almost unbelievable and wonderful news that her husband, Archer Milton Huntington, the author, would present the Joan Circle of Farmville, Virginia with a bronze copy of this model.

There are only three large statues of this work in the world: one in France, one on Riverside Drive, and the other in Mrs. Huntington's native state—Mass-

H.-S. C. and S. T. C. Present Fall Play

Crother's Comedy Is Drama Choice of Clubs

State Teachers College and Hampden-Sydney College will present the comedy, "Mary III" on November 20. The cast is under the direction of Miss Wheeler and is composed of members of the dramatic clubs from both schools. "Mary III" marks the ninth in the series of productions in which both organizations have participated.

The title role is played by Virginia Agee who, in the spring of this year, played Katherine in the "Taming of the Shrew" by our Dramatic Club. Opposite her in the male roles are Jim Johnson and Marshall Suther, neither of whom have appeared on this stage but have at their own college.

"Mary III," wriitten by Rachael Crother had a successful run on Broadway several years ago, proving very popular since. The heroine is the acme of modernity, being a headstrong, vivacious person who causes her parents and lovers no little concern with her wild ideas. She is the descendent of several generations of charming, coquettish ladies who have handed down their attractiveness. Two brief prologues introduce Mary I and Mary II at the time of their greatest conquests. Mary I as the grandmother in the rest of the play, adds no small amount of fun and laughs. Two friends of Mary III, an engaged couple, are amusing and absurd with their loudly ultra-modernism.

Members of the cast are as follows:

Mary I—Ciara Nottingham

William, lover of Mary I, Bill Waldrop.

Mary II, Nan Throckmorton

Robert and Richard, lovers of Mary II, Bill Willis and Webb Surratt.

Mary III, Virginia Agee

Hal and Lynn, lovers of Mary III, Jim Johnson and Marshall Sutter.

Bobby, brother of Mary III, Vernon Benedict.

Max and Lefitia, friends of Mary III, Tom Mason and Frances Hutcheson.

Nora, a maid, Ann Scott.

Senior Class Elects Gillette and Slater To Honorary Offices

Victoria Gillette and Mary Lib Slater were elected class historian and gift-orian, respectively, of the senior class on Tuesday, November 10.

The class historian has the duty and privilege of writing up an account of the four years which her class has spent in Farmville. This history is read at the Senior Sing at the close of the year. The gift-orian has the duty of selecting appropriate gifts for each member of the graduating class. These are presented with a word of explanation at the class day exercises during commencement week.

Convention of B. S. U. Meets at University

The Baptist Student Union Convention held at the University of Virginia November 6-7 was both instructed and entertained by the speakers from all over the country. Besides the main addresses there were numbers of informal discussion groups for the edification of the delegates.

Fifteen colleges of the state were represented at the convention, while S. T. C. alone had 14 delegates. Among these was Virginia Pilcher who, at the conclusion of the meetings, was elected first vice-president of the State B.

Kappa Delta Pi Gives Various Programs In Chapel

GILLETTE SPEAKS

Purdom and Strick Conclude Week With Music

National Education week, November 9-14, is being celebrated at S. T. C. through the combined efforts of Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary education fraternity, and the Education Department of the college.

The week's program was opened on Tuesday morning at the chapel hour in a talk by Victoria Gillette, president of Kappa Delta Pi. She gave us the background and purpose of National Education Week, stressing the importance of national education as a vital factor in the progress of the nation. Victoria explained the outlook of the modern student and expressed the hope that the program prepared would be of assistance to each citizen of the college.

She presented the outline of the program for the week (which is as follows: Tuesday, Bonnie Lane, a talk on "Choosing a Career in a Teachers College." Wednesday, Virginia Bean, a talk on "Developing a Balanced Program While Majoring in Elementary Education"; and Bess McGlothlin, a talk on "Increasing Professional Possibilities Through the Proper Choosing of Electives." Thursday, Dorothy Price, a talk on "Horace Mann, Father of the Public School System," followed by a playlet depicting the founding of the first state normal college. Friday, Dr. J. L. Jarman will address the student body in "Respects in Which the Teaching Profession is Crowded and Those in Which it is Not." On Saturday morning Mr. Alfred Strick and Miss Lisabeth Purdom will present a musical program.

Project Chairman Announces Subject

Pi Gamma Mu Will Present Peace Conference

Every year it is the custom of Pi Gamma Mu, social science fraternity of the college, to present a project to which everyone is invited. This year it will take the form of a World Peace Conference, to be held sometime in the spring. The scene of action is supposed to be laid in the White House at Washington, and each country is to be represented by one girl.

The underlying thoughts to be discussed at the Conference are: first, each country's particular problems in relation to building up attitudes for world peace, and second, a general understanding of conditions in these countries.

There are two are three girls working on each country, and it is their duty to do reference work, collect data and general information about their countries; and be able to put forth their fundamental points and arguments clearly and concisely.

The countries and their representatives are as follows:

United States—Ann Galusha, chairman, Martha Glenn Davis and Louise Walmsley; England—Kathryn Jamison, chairman, Chic Dortch and Dot Price; France—Lloyd Kelly, chairman, Marion Pond and Virginia Bean; Italy—

EDUCATION WEEK

Throughout the entire country, schools are observing National Education Week. Educators have realized the importance of bringing the home and the school in closer harmony. This week is set aside in order to do that.

The program, sponsored by the National Education Association, has as its aim the awakening of the general public to an increasing knowledge of the important part that the schools have in the formation of future citizens and their role in society. Today people realize that the school is about the only organization that can prepare the youth of today to take his place in the world.

Just as the school has its work to do so has the home. The home can work cooperatively with the school only when it knows what the latter is supposed to do. Through out this week the parents are able to find out exactly what is expected of them.

Education also plays a considerable part in the prevention of crime, disease, and other social problems; but it is necessary to have the active interest and cooperation of all member of a community. Education Week is centered around the idea of prevention rather than of cure of the different problems. The leaders in this movement welcome the opportunity to stress that progress along this line can be made only with the combined strength of individuals.

So, with a proclamation, President Roosevelt set aside the week of November 9th through 13th as National Education Week. Everyone realizes that such a week is as important to American life as any other legal holiday.

PEACE

Eighteen years ago today the entire world offered Thanksgiving. The war had ceased, and peace was to be restored, peace in one way because the guns along the fronts were silent after so long a period of firing.

We, who were too young that day, cannot imagine what thrill our fathers and mothers had when the word resounded that peace was to be restored again. Yet each of us has experienced some peace. It might be the silence that laid over the earth when all was quiet and well. No doubt it was such when the Angels proclaimed the birth of the Christ Child. It might be the calmness of mind when we felt that we did our best whether failure or success was ours.

Yet today we sometimes wonder whether we shall have peace—the peace that follows war—much longer. The different events that happen throughout the world lead us to believe that once again people will witness a war-torn world. But everyone knows that war is murder of people by the thousands and usually of the "flower of the land."

Why then do nations proceed along those lines that ultimately will lead to the clashing of arms? No one can really say that it is because they want to fight. Far from it. They are as individuals are, selfish, and wish to have what would aid them best in becoming powerful. Few of the nations have learned that cooperation gives the better results.

On this day, the anniversary of the discontinuance of firing, we are reminded that peace is ours at present. It is up to us to preserve that peace or to destroy it.

CIVIL SERVICE

It is possible that in the next two years we will see the 22nd Amendment presented to Congress in words to this effect: "Appointments and promotions in the Civil Service of the United States shall be made according to merit and fitness to be ascertained, so far as practicable, by examination, which so far as as practicable, shall be competitive."

The people of the United States are tired of the spoils system and the holding of civil positions by vote-buyers. In the Institute of Public Opinion survey it was recently revealed that 88 per cent of the people are in favor of the merit system.

At the present time there are about 5,000 Civil Service Reform League members and associates who are working to win America from the spoils system. They wish to enlist 100,000 more members and have each member secure 50 names on a petition to Congress bearing the proposed amendment. Realizing that there is little hope for a shrinkage in government spending, the public wishes stricter economies, wiser expenditures and relief from taxes.

This problem is of vital interest to college students. Regardless of political parties there are countless jobs in government administration to be carried on, and these jobs have recently been increased by the hundreds of thousands. The merit system would unfold these opportunities for educated men and women. A higher type of young person would be placed in government jobs, which automatically includes the college graduate. Careers thus opened in public service will bring greater prestige and save millions of dollars in graft and reckless spending.

The Civil Service Reform League, founded in 1881, is a non-partisan, non-profit making group. Its objective is to replace the spoils system with the merit system. Most of us will be in a position to push this movement forward in the next few years. Shall we accept this challenge to our democracy?

Then there's the man who spent the summer in a trailer and came home and got lost in the living room.—St. Louis Star Times.

Perhaps it is only in the natural order of things that a crank should be constantly starting something.—Washington Post.

It is rumored that a young doctor, a graduate of one of Philadelphia's foremost colleges, was ejected from a library for trying to remove the appendix from a book he was reading.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

Madrid is in turmoil! Fascist troops have entered it, and ever, since, there has been fighting. Guns were not the only weapons used: it has been reported that hot oil was poured off roof-tops by the government forces as a means of defense. Scores have been killed right and left from the air bombardments. War—what a disastrous thing! It quenches the thirst of a handful of men, and leads other men to ghastly, untimely death. It gives momentary satisfaction to present generations, yet stores up depression and heart-breaking trials for future generations. It breaks down nations, cities and populations to dust, and although history records it, and the eyes of the unborn generations will sparkle when they read it—the thrills cannot replace the things that spoke of genius and careful, studied planning. Why must we have war?

Those who live in mining sections know that such people as John Lewis should be ousted. He, the president of the United Mine Workers, is the sort of person who wants his way as he wants it, when he wants it. He declined —rather rudely—to meet William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor who is trying to bring about peace among working unions. Lewis declined because Greene said, "I would gladly meet Lewis but I lack authority to change policies outlawed by the executive council." So—Lewis packed up his toys and went home.

Double, double, woe, and trouble isn't confined to bridge fullers and weary football coaches. Troubles never cease for the college "Boswells." It's nearing All-American time, and experts are harassed by a flood of nominees and are alert for every fault in the mental process of elimination. But, while we await this time, let's consider last week-end's football schedule. Perhaps the greatest surprises were the Hampden-Sydney—St. John score 0-0, and the W. & L.—V. P. I. score 27-0. Harvard steamrollered the University of Virginia 65-0; this score was one of the highest in Crimson football history. V. M. I. rolled William and Mary for a 21-0 loss while Maryland soundly whipped Richmond 12-0. Next week-end's schedule promises to be most interesting all the way around! Turkey day is nearly here and this week's tale will tell a mouthful!

The picture of youth as light-hearted, gay and irresponsible, as painted in the movies and lighter literature, is not true according to the director of student guidance and placement at V. P. I. He has statistics that prove that young people are eager to make the most of their opportunities; that youth worries about family conditions, social etiquette, making good impressions—and woe, woe —girls cause the stronger sex fewer worries than any other factor.

Did you know: that "Chic" Sale, beloved comedian of stage and screen is dead?—that King Carol of Rumania is trying to banish his mother, Dowager Queen Marie, from the country? —that during the past year about 1,100 patients were examined in the State mental clinic?—that a prisoner in Boston refused parole because he made more money inside the prison walls than outside?—that Norma Shearer's and Leslie Howard's portrayal of "Romea and Juliet" is supposed to be one of the best performances ever seen on the screen and stage?—that Elaine Barry has succeeded in hooking John Barrymore, and that they were married November 9?—that earthworms grow eleven feet long in some sections of the world?—that "Chic" has been reported on a rampage for the past week?—that there are only 41 days till Christmas?

And so adieu—

"Time and tide bring all things."

Intercollegiate

Co-eds at the University have decided what's wrong with men. Enumerating their faults we find: 1. They expect too much from women. 2. Their idea of a good time is any gal and a jug. 3. Their idea of the well dressed man is Mahatma Ghandi. 4. The reason they don't wear big hats is because they can't get them big enough to fit their heads. 5. Their line of gab sounds like the broken record. 6. Their dancing is a cross between a Mexican jumping bean and a drunk with a bad case of jitters. 7. They think that manners are the things you live in—and hors d'ouevres are what you give to waiters—Quite a good list so far as they go, but we should like to add this one as number 8: Each member of the stronger (?) sex considers himself a self-made man—and worships his creator.

Theories

1. Campusighs for the gals who get campused for coming in late.

2. Campusneers for the girls who DON'T get campused for coming in late.

3. And phooey to the boys who bring the gals home late—and don't have to suffer for it like they do.—Kentucky Sentinel.

It's fair to be giving advice to men who are about to experience a Leap Year date, but males at Washington University, knowing that such things will be going on until December 31st, offer these suggestions to all collegians:

Be sure to keep your escort waiting at least 20 minutes.

Load your pockets with combs, powder puffs, and mirrors. She will be disappointed if she hasn't anything to carry.

Of course she'll provide you with cigarets and gum. Under no circumstances light your own cigaret. It would make her feel bad.

During intermission in dancing order at least a double chocolate malted milk. She doesn't want you to think she's a miser.

Be subdued and meek at all times, but insist on your rights. Taxis are available at all hours.

This verse doesn't mean a thing;
It's merely here for volume,
We've simply copied the gol-darn thing
To fill this lengthy column.

Literary Column

On Saturday, as a part of Education Week, Miss Purdom and Mr. Strick will present a musical program. The following are songs which will be used:

The Star: Music by James H. Rogers; Poem by Charles F. Lummis.

Star of me, star of me,
Matching the mother-skies
Where thine elder sisters be,
Would I were heaven, with all its eyes on thee!!

Love's in my Heart: Music by R. Huntingdon Woodman; Poem by Dana Burnet

Love's on the high road, Love's on the by-road,
Love's on the meadow and Love's in the mart;
And down ev'ry by-way where I've taken my way,
I've met Love a-smiling, for Love's in my heart.

The Spirit Flower: Music by Campbell-Tipton; Poem by B. Martin-Stanton

My heart was frozen, even as the earth
That covered thee forever, from my sight.
All thoughts of happiness expired at birth;
Within me naught but black and starless night.
Down thro' the winter sunshine snow-flakes came,
All shimmering like to silver butterflies.
They seemed to whisper softly thy dear name;
They melted with the teardrops from mine eyes.
But suddenly there bloomed within that hour,
In my poor heart so seeming dead, a flower!
Whose fragrance in my life shall ever be
The tender, sacred memory of thee.

MUSIC

NOTE—Reviews are excerpts from Book Review Digests, etc.

A Musical Compaoion—edited by John Erskine

To anyone who has learned through the radio or phonograph to enjoy good music, this book will prove invaluable. It will not only provide him with the kind of factual knowledge he seeks about composers, symphonies, operas, instrumental and vocal pieces, and the history of music, but it will also broaden his musical horizon: he will find himself getting more enjoyment from the works he already knows and at the same time learning to enjoy other and different kinds of musical composition.

The volume is the work of seven eminent English musical authorities, edited for American readers by Dr. John Erskine, who is president of the Julliard school of music and a noted pianist as well as a writer of greater distinction.

Dr. Erskine says in his introduction, "In this country there are many people who would not call themselves even amateurs in music, who perhaps have missed even an elementary instruction in the art, yet who show an increasing love of it. In any precise sense they may never have the time to become musicians, yet they constitute a respectable part of the musical audience, and they wish to make their appreciation of music more intelligent. For them this book may well prove, as its title implies, a constant companion.

The book is arranged in the following divisions—Book I: ABC of Music, Book II: The Orchestra and Orchestral Music; III: Opera, IV: The Human Voice, V: Chamber Music, VI: The Solo Instrument.

Symphonies And Their Meanings by Philips H. Gaepp

An aid in the study of the symphony, and as a companion at symphony concerts, these books are unrivalled. In Vol. I and II Mr. Goepp deals with the older classic symphonies, and in Vol. III with the modern composers and their works. The representative symphonies of the great composers are taken up, being illustrated with excerpts from the score. He shows the individuality and special intention of the master and where possible the underlying purpose of his art. His work is vital and sympathetic and his originality of style has made these books deservedly welcome among all music lovers.

Mr. Gaepp says, "The plan of the book is very simple. It is really the reverse of the traditional. Little is here told of the masters, of the composer's ancestry, of the painful scale of his

They Died For Peace May We Keep It

Just eighteen years ago—yes, eighteen years November—thousands of tired, worn soldiers awoke to find another day. Just another day. They knew not that it was different. They had ceased to hope for an end to that horrible slaughter. They had grown to believe there was no end.

Each day had seen more boys broken, more boys injured, more boys gone forever—dead. Every day they awoke with hatred in their souls and murder in their hearts for thousands of boys they had never seen. Thousands of boys that hated them—each for the same reason—a reason they knew not. At first they were frightened—afraid to sleep—afraid to wake lest that day bring death. After awhile they ceased to think. They ceased to care. They fought to kill that they might live. They killed to stop the killing. They fought for peace and knew it not.

No wonder the earth shook with laughter and eyes were filled with tears of happiness—no wonder the boys shouted, that hate flew and arms embraced bodies that short hours before they had tried to kill—the word had reached the trenches! Thousands of eager ears had heard the news! The war was ended—there would be peace!

Peace—or was it peace? Millions of homes wept for joy while millions wept for their dead—but all for peace. Oh! that every day might be like that with God and man so close there would be no more war. But the world has a short memory. Already she has forgotten that her best died and that earth ran red with their blood; that billions of dollars were spent in organized murder. Today she stands on the verge of another war.

Might someone take her by the hand and lead her to "No Man's Land" and show her blurred eyes the millions of crosses standing there—each a pledge to peace. May God give her power to understand they died for the Armistice that she signed. May she ever keep it!

Class Notes

Freshmen

The Freshman class met in the auditorium after prayers on November 10. The cheer leaders led yells for the team. The president appointed a committee to work on the presentation of their classman. An announcement was made that the Freshman Commission will take clothes to the cleaners, and for all the work it gets there is a 30 per cent comission. After a few more announcements, the meeting adjourned.

Sophomores

The Sophomore class held its meeting in the 'Rec" at seven o'clock. The President announced that the Freshmen will have to wear their caps until Thanksgiving. She also asked that the costumes that were used in the circus be returned as soon as possible. The treasurer urged that class dues be paid. Then the cheer leaders led yells for the team, and the meeting was adjourned.

Juniors

A very short meeting of the junior class was held in the Choral Club room on Tuesday, November 10. The meeting was opened by the president, and followed with a yell for the team led by Will Scott.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and Madeline McGlothlin told the class that the junior presentation will be on November 18. As there was no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

Seniors

The seniors at their class meeting Tuesday night discussed the Senior Dance, which is to be held on December 5, and for which the V. M. I. Commanders will play. It was decided that there be a senior figure. The price has been placed at fifty cents for stags with twenty-five cents extra to take a date.

Color Rush of Old Is Part of S. T. C.

The color rush is part of S. T. C. If only these old walls could talk, what glorious stories of other color rushes they could tell. They would resound with madly dashing feet, wild shrieks and gay struggles of other girls from S. T. C.—girls with long hair and longer dresses.

Thanksgiving day was the time of the color rush. It was declared a holiday and, after much anticipation, took place—at six o'clock in the morning. Sometimes overexcited inmates of the "State Normal School for Females" sat up all night, caring more for their colors conquering than their descendants care for beauty sleep.

Since 1933, S. T. C. and her young sophisticates have chosen to spend Thanksgiving a-galavanting in gay spots, in yelling for nonchalant football teams instead

Alpha Sigma Tau Has Birthday Anniversary

The Zeta Tau chapter of Alpha Sigma Tau celebrated its Founder's Day banquet in the college tea room on October 30. A color scheme of green and gold, the sorority's colors, was carried out in the decorations and placecards.

Among those present in addition to the local chapter, were Miss Grace Mix, Pan-Hellenic adviser, Miss Virginia Bedford, faculty member and adviser, Miss Mary Nichols, faculty member, Misses Dorothy Deans, Paige Magee and Mildred Chandler.

Spirit of Joan of Arc Rules S.T.C. Activities

of nervous, eager girls with "do or die" expressions on their faces Gone is the thrill of the old color rush; gone is the old spirit of the race. "The old order changeth yielding place to the new," and S. T. C. is not far in the lurch. Now the excitement takes place in the afternoon with its own particular kind of noise and thrill. Maybe the old excitement is gone, but no one cries for the old days because other things have taken the place of curls, ruffles, and noisy color rushes at the break of dawn.

Here she shall stand throughout all time. Nature in her wildest moments beats about the material composition of the statue. But the real Joan of Arc, the spirit we love so well, remains. Each year as time goes by, new eyes eagerly search for the truth embodied therein; new faces reflect the glory of the resplendent figure; the boundless faith of Joan of Arc permeates the lives of thousands of students who pass daily; hearts thrill anew, sensing the vision of the ideal.

Bebe Russel Marries Mr. Leonard Barnes

Miss Bebe Russel and Mr. Leonard Barnes were united in marriage on Friday evening, November 6th, at the home of the bride in Covington, Virginia.

The room in which the ceremony took place was beautifully decorated with a background of evergreens with tall candles in graduated settings, casting a soft glow over the charming bride who wore her mother's wedding dress of embroidered crepe satin.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held. A beautiful bride's cake was used as a centerpiece for the table, which was attractively decorated with candles and white chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Barnes graduated from this college with a diploma in the class of '34.

Schools Far and Wide Find S. T .C. Girls Among Visitors

With so many dances throughout the state this week-end the S. T. C. prom trotters were kept busy. Many girls remained at school and attended Hampden-Sydney homecomings while others wandered off in every possible direction.

Swamping V. P. I. on the gridiron, the strains of Dan Gregory's dance band, the echo of joyous laughter and smooth lines remain in the minds of Virginia Agee, Jean Taylor, Frances Hutcheson Isabel Williamson, Selma Berry and Butterfly Breckenbridge as memories of Washington and Lee homecomings.

Pumpkins, cats, cornstalks, confetti, balloons and the mose divine boys adorned the Randolph-Macon gym for opening dances. Among the girls dancing to the tunes of the University of Virginia Cavaliers were Lucy Baskerville, Ann Billups, Kitty Roberts and Dorothy Roper.

The William and Mary—V. M. I. game attracted Elsie Dodd, Charlotte Rice and Virginia Baker to Williamsburg where they witnessed the Flying Squadron's 21-0 victory over the Indians.

Mable Burton has returned after attending the Wake Forest—Duke game and dance at Raleigh, N. C. The colorful game and music of Hal Thurston featuring Tubby Oliver contributed towards making her week-end perfect.

Julia Rainey attend the dances and game at N. C. State the past week-end.

Mary Elizabeth Slater motored to Richmond where she witnessed the University of Maryland—Richmond College football game.

Harriet Vaden had as her guest this week-end Jane Powell.

Lois Powell spent the past week-end in Kenbridge as the guest of Elizabeth Hardy.

Jane Hardy, Nancy Gray, Margaruerite Blackwell, visited last week-end at Randolph-Macon Woman's College in Lynchburg.

Minnie Smith, Elizabeth Butler, Marjorie Wicks, Nyra Hines and Francis Channel were spectators of the Navy—Notre Dame game in Baltimore.

For Joan of Arc marches "Forward with God", one "who in the moment of victory remains inaccessible to vanity and hate; who in the midst of popular enthusiasm lives in humility and prayer; who in the universal crush of ambition cares neither for profit nor honour."

Alpha Sigma Alpha Honors Founders

Group Will Dedicate Bench and Bird-Bath

Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority will celebrate its thirty-fifth anniversary, Saturday, November 14th. There is to be a dedication service of a memorial bench and birdbath to the founders of the Alpha chapter at 3:00 p. m. Nancy Burgwyn, the daughter of the first initiate will unveil the memorial, and Dr. Jarman will accept the gift to the school.

Immediately following the dedication service there will be a formal tea in the Student Building lounge to which all founders, alumnae, Delta Sigma Chis, heads of the other sororities on campus, and the faculty have been invited. Dinner will follow at seven at Longwood. The alumnae, founders, and the national officers have been invited to attend the banquet. Miss Evelyn Bell, the national president, will come from Buffalo, N. Y., to attend the service and speak at the banquet.

A. S. T. C. Breakfast

Alpha Sigma Tau sorority entertained at a breakfast in their chapter room on Sunday morning, November 1, for the returning alumnae.

Those alumnae present were: Lucille Davis, Jane Lybrook, Marjorie Booten, Grace Virginia Woodhouse, Dorothy Deans, Mildred Chandler, M. R. Rawls, and Paige McGee.

Red And White Gains Victory In Intra-mural Hockey Games

Junior Team Defeats Seniors 3-0 On Nov. 10

The hockey game between the juniors and seniors ended in a 3-0 victory for the juniors in the annual conflict which followed "Color Rush" which was at 2:00 o'clock, Tuesday, November 10. An unusually large number of the student body attended the game. A great deal of class spirit was exhibited on both sides.

The juniors were victorious. Three goals passed the seniors' goalkeeper, Frances Hudgins, who despite this fact played an outstanding game. Among the others who played well are Bess McGlothlin, Evelyn Mann, and Edna Bolick. Both teams displayed splendid passwork and good sportsmanship. The seniors were handicapped by having the position of Left Inside vacant.

A. C. E. Has Program On Nursery Schools

The regular monthly meeting of A. C. E. was held Thursday night, November 5th in Student Building Lounge. Following the business session an interesting program on Nursery schools was held. Miss Mix introduced the subject, telling the aims, purposes, and ideals of nursery schools. Mrs. Barrow, head of the local nursery school, then led a very interesting discussion in which those present participated. Plans were then made for a Christmas party to be given the nusery school children by the Association in December.

Interview With Jose Limon

Q. Where were you born?

A. In Mexico.

Q. How long have you lived in America?

A. Since I was two years old.

Q. Are you a citizen of the United States?

A. I have applied for my naturalization papers, but must wait another year for them to go through.

Q. How much do you practice before a concert?

A. We practice four hours in the morning, four in the afternoon, and four hours at night. If we are not through at the end of four hours at night, we work on till twelve or one if necessary.

Q. Do you get tired of it?

A. Yes, awfully tired, but it is the only interest any of us have at all, so we do not mind spending all our time that way.

Q. Does it take long to learn to compose?

A. You must learn all the techniques and fundamentals before you can compose. It takes years of preparation, study and practise.

Q. What will you do when you grow old?

A. The modern dance is unlike the ballet, when youth and beauty are essential, and when even the most fortunate dancer was through at thirty. In the modern dance mature minds and bodies are needed. The modern dancer reaches his peak between thirty and fifty. The greatest concert dancer in Europe today is sixty years old. Then, too, when one gets older he can teach what he has learned to the younger ones.

Q. What would you like most to do?

A. Just a few times, I would like to feel that I have had enough sleep!

Green and White Is Victor In Color Rush

"Green and White" was victorious in the color rush held at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon. "Green and White" banners held sway on both Student and Senior buildings, while "Red and White" adorned the Rotunda.

The runners to the Rotunda were Clotilde Jarman and Casey Coleman; to Student, Army Butterworth and Elizabeth Kent; to Senior building, Zell Hopkins and Evelyn Mann.

Chairmen for the event from the classes were: freshmen, Lulu Windham; sophomore, Virginia Carroll; junior, Will Scott; and senior, Irene Parker.

Rotunda Reverberations

Come Thanksgiving!—but we tell 'em we've plenty to occupy our minds. Naturally our weekends are always filled with something—even if it's nothing but a lot of sleep.

Last week-end came tripping in with another H.-S. dance, "Home Comings" this time. It was quite an elegant affair, so I am told (even if the dance was sticky Friday night)—favors and everything that's quite out of the ordinary you know; and just when Sue Lane thought she was doing so well, off her lover gallops on Sunday to Lynchburg ("Ain't it terrible?"). Maybe Sue could help Virginia Tillman find that thing she's looking for ("What is this thing called love?").

Once upon a time there lived a girl in Richmond, she grew and grew until she was considered tolerably able to come to Farmville and register as a freshman. However, she forgot to learn to say "pardon me"—whether on the hockey field or in the halls. She hits your shins and pushes you out of the way and only stares—you might be a pampered child to your mother, but there are just about seven hundred and fifty more here. So try to stay out of it, or else I'm afraid you're going to catch it soon. Freshmen aren't the only ones—those sophomores who walk around refusing to speak aren't all they're cracked up to be.

Some Seniors certainly had a fine time last week-end—Bonnie Lane flossed off to N. C. and left all her children behind. "Mama—oh Mama where have you been?" Minnie Smith did well by herself—even if she was for the losing side; and if many people come back bringing what Jean Willis did, I say stay at school. You never can tell where you might see that again—eh Mary Harrison?

The class games were played off yesterday—We hope you supported your class. There are some weary people walking around today—bruises, etc. But think of how we'd feel if we'd tried to imitate Charles Weidman. The bruises will go away, though (and so will your money if you don't hold on to it), so cheer up.

And if you miss your "true-love" back home, go down to Shannon's and listen to that "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You." It'll put chilly bumbs all over you.

By the way, who got the late date with George Brockman?

who have been in its wards. In 1936 the state came to the assistance of the welfare department when the General Assembly appropriated money for relief, and Governor Peery chose to give the funds to one concentrated office headed by an approved person. The system now in use has proven adaptable to easy economic development, for some counties have already increased their number of officers. The Public Welfare Service works against having more than one welfare service; as emergency cases arise out of other type of departments, they can be included under the head of Public Welfare Service.

Freshman-Sophomore Conflict Ends 3-1

Another victory was chalked up for Red and White yesterday when the freshmen hockey team defeated the Sophomores 3-1 in a spectacular game.

The freshman team rallied after the Sophomores had scored the first goal and held their opponents in check throughout the remainder of the game. Every attempt on the part of the Sophomore team was thwarted by the strong Freshman defensive.

Both teams were quick and exhibited good passwork, yet the Freshman team displayed a greater spirit of cooperation and skill in handling the ball.

On the Sophomore team Mabel Burton made the only goal. Evelyn Crenshaw, Ann Billups, and Chlotilde Jarman for the freshmen.

SPORT SLANTS

HOCKEY

Freshmen, Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors are all "playing hard", and wishing for impossible things to happen. Such as, "for Harriet Vaden to miss hitting a ball" or "for the goal keeper to let a ball pass into the goal." Everyone is in a "storm", and trying to get seven practices in, all in one day, in order to play in the class games. Last week three practices were held; one on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The girls worked hard and tried to get in all those "little last minute details." The freshmen are "fighting hard," and they are determined to "discard their rat caps." While the sophomores are just as determined and are "counting on seeing rat caps 'till Christmas." The Juniors and Seniors are practicing hard, but saying very little, except that their color will win. And all anyone can do is "play their best," and "hope for the rest." May the best team win, is all that I can say.

COLOR RUSH

"Ye old color rush" caused "excitement plus" on Tuesday afternoon. And why should it not? After all it means a holiday, and greatest of all ,it helps to "determine the winner of the color cup." The lastest of runners were picked by all the classes, and each class displayed the "spirit that accompanies true sportsmanship."

PING PONG

Who goes there? Who is that towering young man playing ping-pong with Jennie Belle Gilliam? It seems that ping-pong is exactly the right thing for entertainment on Sunday nights. "Army" Butterworth was making her gentleman friend gasp with fright. She can really "whiz" those balls across the net. More power to her. It must feel "swell" to be "heroine" of a game, even if the game is ping pong. "Around-the-table" ping pong was quite the rage. With Mary B. and Mr. Hopstetter, Prince Smith and her boy friend, Margaret Britton and Jennie Belle Gilliam and their friends all taking part with childish delight. But it really is great sport and a "ready" game. Come on down the "rec" just any old time and try your luck. The ping-pong balls may be gotten out of the closet in the home office. Here's your golden opportunity, so make use of it—and play ping pong.

TENNIS

The tennis tournament has been going along nicely and at the present there are only a few games to be played off. Practice was held Friday afternoon out on the courts. The courts are much better since their recent attention, and it is really a pleasure to play. Come on out girls, and "learn all about the racquet."

Monogram Efficiency Tests

Friday afternoon efficiency tests for the Monogram Club were given. If you are interested in taking these tests please come out, and do so. Everyone is invited. Marguerite York and any of the club members are always ready to help you, if there is anything you don't understand.

career, even of the date of his works. Concrete events have, in themselves, no place. And yet, it is believed, instead of a loss, there is in this very omission a great gain of personal interest, on insight into the essence of a master's individual quality, of his poetic character."

Bishop, president of Averett College, Danville, Va.; Dr. E. B. Jackson, pastor of First Baptist church, Harrisonburg, Va.; Mr. Claude Bowen, educational director of Foreign Mission Board, Richmond, Va.; and numerous others of equal merit.

The entertainment features of the convention included "get-togethers," a luncheon, and a tour of the historical spots about Charlottesville.

The convention concluded with a business session in which Mr. Ransom Duke, of William and Mary College, was elected unanimously as state president of the B. S. U.

Those who attended the meetings from S. T. C., Farmville, were India Martin, Virginia Pilcher, Marjorie Thompson, Evelyn Hastings, Alice Elder, Evelyn Beale, Sara M. Beale, Adelaide Dressler, Lucy F. Smith, Lois Barbee, Louise De Jarnette, Frances Holloway, Katherine Thomas, and Miss Katherine Tupper.

Bonnie Lane Gives S. T .C. Students System For Drills

President Appoints Willis Scott As Fire Chief

"DRILL IS SERIOUS"

Presidents Are Responsible For Girls

At a call meeting of the student body Tuesday night, November 17, Bonnie Lane, president of the student body, explained the new system of fire drills.

Some of the important facts to bear in mind about the system are that the big bell is not the fire drill bell, but the new siren bells which have recently been installed; and that the time of the drill will not be known by the student body.

RULES FOR FIRE DRILL

1. Close windows.
2. Turn on center light of room
3. Put on heavy coat
4. Get towel for protection from smoke
5. Carry book
6. Leave door of room open

The fire chief, Will Scott, who is assisted by marshals from each hall, was introduced. The marshals are Juanita Callis, Student Building; Ruth Phelps, Annex; Isabelle Williamson, Main; Ruth Curtis Roberson, Gym Hall; Vera Ebel, Library; Ruth Sears, Senior Building; Elizabeth Waterson, Cox Hall; Virginia Savage, Venuolo Hall; and Margaret Blackwell White House Hall.

"A fire drill is really a serious thing. Everyone must leave the building" Bonnie quoted the chief having said. When out on the campus a student must remain until her hall president has called the roll of her hall. If a student fails to answer, she will be placed on campus for one week. The big bell will be the signal to come back into the building.

There will be one fire drill before Thanksgiving. The fire department is working out a plan to give each professor, whereby fire drills can be given during the classes.

Fire sirens and extinguishers have been or are being installed in all the buildings. "In case of a fire, break the glass on the siren

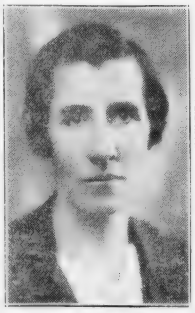
Editor Announces Additions to Staff

Changes In Line-Up Of Staff Are Made



Eight reporters, a columnist, and two typists have been added to the Rotunda staff at the conclusion of a months' try-out.

From twenty girls who have been trying-out for the staff of the paper eleven were chosen as members.

Changes have been made in the staff line-up, promoting Libby Roberts and Mary Harrison Vaughan to positions as news editor and feature editor respectively.

New members of the staff include: Jacqueline Johnson, columnist; Marian Harden, Helen Reiff, Beckie Sandidge, Vivian Womack, Pattie Jeffreys, Johnnie Lybrook, Pattie Bounds, and Helen Jeffries, reporters; and Janie Scaggs, and Frances Lyons, typists.

Senior Classman

Miss Olive T. Iler, who will be presented for the last time by the Class of '37.

Senior Class Will Present Miss Iler To Student Body

Mary Bowles Makes Last Presentation Address

Miss Olive T. Iler will be presented to the student body by the senior class on November 14, at chapel.

Mary Bowles, president of the class, will address the student body in her final presentation speech on Saturday, as the class participates in the presentation ceremony for the last time.

Members of the class, in caps and gowns, will sing in review the class and classman songs of their entire four years. Two new songs have been composed, also, for the class of 1937 and its classman Miss Iler.

Noted Psychologist Speaks to Students In Sociology Class

On Friday, November 13th, Miss Lamb, psychologist in the Mental Hygiene Department of Public Welfare, described the work of her department to the Sociology Class on Child Welfare.

She gave a brief history of the development of the Mental Hygiene Movement which has existed for twenty-eight years. It was started by Clifford Beers, who, after recovering from a short term of insanity wrote, "The Mind That Found Itself". This aroused much interest among influential persons who joined Mr. Beers in his work and are still actively carrying it on. The first Mental Hygiene Clinic was established in Massachusetts, and Virginia has had one since 1924, which became fully organized in 1929.

The cases they handle are sent to them from the Children's Bureau with any information they have secured. These children are given a thorough examination which consists of intelligence tests and interviews by psychologists and phychiatrists. From this examination, the interests, mental and manual ability and the conditions under which a child could best adjust himself are shown. After these facts are obtained recommendations are made by the Mental Hygiene Department so that the best results from the child's care may be obtained.

Miss Lamb emphasized the important part teachers and schools play in the development of these subnormal children. They should be able to recognize and understand these cases and know just what to do for them. Vocational training for the children who can-

Dortch and Bress Speak at Meeting Of Forensic Club

Dr. Walmsley Gives Debating Points In Conclusion

The Debate Club at the regular meeting on Wednesday, November 11th in the small auditorium, gave those girls who were recently initiated into the Club an opportunity to show their ability and interest in forensic activities. "Chic" Dortch spoke on "The Election—Its Possibilities." "Women and Peace" was presented by Florence Bress.

There was also a program debate on the national Pi Kappa Delta question centered around the phase of government control in regulating hours and wages for industry. Vivian Womack and Eveyln Kreger upheld the affirmative and Grace Waring and Ruth Sears supported the negative. Dr. Walmsley gave constructive criticism and explained points of debating tactics.

The two teams, which are going to Winthrop College to the Strawberry Leaf Conference on December 3, are at work on the National Pi Kappa Delta question. Practice debates with Hampden-Sydney will be held to furnish experience for these girls.

Miss Tines Lectures On Care of Children For Welfare Class

Miss Tines, from the Children's Bureau of the Public Welfare Department of Va., gave the second of a series of talks to Miss Stubb's Child Welfare Class, Friday, November 6th on the child welfare service.

Miss Tines' opening statement was that the chief cause of the large number of children sent to Richmond each year for care is poverty. She has worked and observed in other states and several large cities, yet she says the poverty conditions of the rural sections of Virginia are worse than the slums of large cities. This is due to the fact that cities have adequate Housing Laws which provide shelter for every person.

The children handled by the Bureau are two groups, between which there is not a definite dividing line—the dependent and neglected and the delinquent children. The work of her department is in placing the children to the best advantage. They have three alternatives for their care: to im-

U. D. C. Historian Gives to Students Rules for Contest

Twenty - Five Dollars Is Offered As Prize

"Virginia's Responsibility to the Nation" is the title which has been chosen by the United Daughters of the Confederacy for essays entered in their contest for college students. A prize of twenty-five dollars has been offered for the best essay submitted on that subject.

Mrs. Maria Bristow Starke, Historian of the Virginia Division of the United Daughters of Confederation has issued announcements of the contest rules governing it. Mrs. Starke is an alumna of Farmville S. T. C., and her father having preceded Mr. Sam Graham as business manager of the college.

Rules for the U. D. C. essay contest are as follows:

1. Essays must be typed and not to exceed 2500 words. Number of words stated at top left hand corner of page.
2. Papers must bear fictitious name of writer, real name with school and address in sealed envelope clipped to paper having fictitious name on outside.
3. Papers must be kept flat and mailed between cardboard.
4. Essays must be in hands of local U. D. C. Chapter of Division Historian not later than May 1st, 1937.
5. Bibliography must be given—but not be included in number of words.
6. Use term "War Between the States." Ten points will be de-

Program Of Music Finishes Celebration Of Education Week

As a concluding program in honor of National Education Week which was celebrated November 9-14, Mr. Alfred Strick and Miss Lizabeth Purdom presented several musical selections last Saturday.

"A Pirate's Dream" by Herter was sung as the opening number by the a chappella choir.

This was followed by Miss Purdom who sang "The Star" by Rogers and "Spirit Flower" by Cambell-Tipton.

The last song "Thanks Be to God", was sung by the college choir.

Mr. Strick was the accompanist on the piano.

Kibitzer Muses Over Things As Play Practice Progresses

I wonder if Miss Wheeler's foot burns when practice is over? If I did all that stomping during two hours or so, I'd wake up at night as cold as wet putty, having pulled the covers off trying to stomp in my sleep.

There comes Jim Johnston's fire entrance. They say he's one of Hampden-Sydney's best looking boys and is just another Rhett Butler as far as his remarks go. Wonder why no S. T. C. girl has been able to get him? Maybe if I . . . Look at Virginia Agee frown! I'd better listen to the script—for all I know she was supposed to laugh there; but probably not, because Miss Wheeler didn't snap her fingers.

Oh, my goodness, "Bobby" Vern Benedict reminds me of our Tommie, always in trouble. "Mother" Nan Throckmorton let him have that hush money a lot quicker than Mom paid Tim's last fine. I should have noticed Bobby's technique a little closer, but I can't help feeling a little homesick.

Look out, Bobby, here comes "Daddy" Bill Willis — he might not understand why you need ready cash. Geemanee, he's a lot sterner looking with gray hair than he was as "Mother's lover" in the prologue. I hope Sam says some of those things to me when he asks me to marry him. If he leans over me like Bill Willis did Nan a while ago I know I won't be able to say anything—not even, "yes."

What's all the commotion? Oh "Grandma" Clara Nottingham is coming in over there. Mmmm, she is still pretty even if she is a grandma now. No wonder "Lover" Waldrop forsook "dear Betty" at the first of the play. Clara sounds just like Grannie did last time she lectured me on boys; men must have been awfully simple in her

Dean's Convention Will Meet Nov. 27 In Capital City

Miss Mary W. Cox Is Invited to Meet There

Miss Mary White cox recently received an invitation to attend the Dean's Convention to be held in Washington, D. C., on Saturday, November 21 at the American University.

The program as planned for that day promises to be excellent and instructive.

Miss Irma Vaigh, National President of the Association will open the Convention with an address, followed by a discussion period.

At the luncheon chancellor Joseph M. M. Gray of the American University will speak on "Those German Women." As chancellor Gary will speak from experience (he was a visitor in many German Universities this summer) his talk suggests colorfulness.

The remaining time will be employed in a discussion of various topics suggested at the National Association of Deans of Women in St. Louis.

Beers and Brewer Are Among Oddities In Students' Names

Evanston, Ill.—ACP—Some of the unusual names of Northwestern University students tend to be alcoholic.

There are a couple of Beers, a Booz, a Beerman, a Brewer, a Bender, and a Bock—not to mention six Steins. Some of the non-alcoholic names are: Pond, Pool, Brook, Lake, and Rainwater.

An oddity-hunter might raise his eye-brows when he learns that there is a sophomore who is a Frosh, a lawyer who is a Heckler, and two dentists named Toothaker and Jirka.

Other surnames tended to become nautical and horical: Sailor and Seamon and Stead, Stirrup and Saddle. A few combinations deserve mention. Frizzel and Fry, Creed and Motto, and Finger and Bone.

Contrary to tradition, Smiths did not lead other names in representation. The Johnsons were first with the Millers and Smiths following up in that order.

Miss Leola Wheeler Directs Annual Production

AGEE PLAYS LEAD

Tickets Are To Go On Reserve On Nov. 19th

Dramatic clubs of Hampden-Sydney and Teachers College will present Mary third on Friday, November 20. This marks the ninth in a series of successful productions by the combined organizations under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler. Miss Wheeler is widely known and recognized as a director in amateur theatrical circles of this state also being a popular lecturer before social and dramatic groups.

"Mary Third", which ran for several years on the New York stage, has as its leading character a very modern miss disturbed and disturbing with ideas about love. Her two suitors, as well as her family, she keeps in constant turmoil, continually fearing for her good name and sanity. Mary first and Mary second, grandmother and mother of Mary third, impart much charm and wit to the story by comparisons to their day.

Virginia Agee as the leading lady plays opposite Jim Johnson and Marshall Suther. Other members of the cast are: Mary first, Clara Nottingham; William her suitor, Bill Waldrep; Mary second, Nan Throckmorton; Richard and Robert, her suitors, Webb Surratt and Bill Willis; Max and Letitia, friends of Mary third, Tom Mason and Frances Hutcheson, Bobby, brother of Mary third, Vernon Benedict; Nora, a maid, Ann Scott.

Tickets are being sold by members of the dramatic clubs of both colleges. Reservations may be made at White's Drug Store Thursday morning, November 19, after ten-thirty o'clock.

Dr. Jarman Ends Week's Addresses

President Discusses Placing of Girls As Teachers

Concluding the program of speakers for National Education Week, Dr. Jarman, president of the college, related to the student body Friday morning at the chapel period "The Respects in Which the Teaching Profession is Crowded and Those in Which it is Not."

"The field is not crowded for A teachers; there is always room at the top for the best," were his opening words. His talk was in reference to the state of Virginia, this institution, and the placement of the last June's graduates, both two-year girls and degree girls. He stated, that, though there are 4,-000 elementary teachers in this state not qualified from the standard of 2-year certificates, the standards have increased during the past few years.

Theoretically, high school teachers are less in demand than those trained for elementary grames—there are 5-6 elementary teachers selected to one high school teacher. This is due mainly to the fact that the graduates of the Liberal Arts Colleges become applicants for positions of teaching in High School, while the elementary teachers are trained only in the teacher-training institutions.

MARY III

In these modern days we don't support presentations just because a good or worthy organization puts them on, but because we get entertainment from them. This means that to be successful the plays must be good. "Mary III" is good.

The fall play is cultural as well as interesting. A program of this kind featuring well-known students attracts S. T. C. and H.-S. C.

Miss Wheeler has never failed us, and the characters proved themselves worthy of their parts. It is a known fact that Miss Wheeler will not put on a play unless it is entirely ready for an audience and the Dramatic Club performance has never been a disappointment. f

TO KAPPA DELTA PI

Through the entire country people realize more and more the important place the modern school has. This realization caused educators to set aside one week annually as National Education Week.

We welcomed last week because it afforded us an opportunity to learn more of our college curriculum. We are better able to decide whether to go into the elementary or the secondary field of teaching. We know that the teaching profession is not the only one for which we may prepare.

It is to Kappa Delta Pi that we should offer our thanks. That society brought before the Student Body facts that will aid each one in selecting her profession.

QUARTERLY REVIEW

The fall issue of the Farmville Quarterly Review has gone to press. This issue is filled, but there will be two more issues to appear on the campus this school year.

Let it be the duty of each girl to attempt some writing for this magazine, no matter how unimportant the writing may seem. Without this cooperation, the magazine will not long survive and Farmville will be the loser.

Intercollegiate

Perhaps the men at Northwestern University realize the impossibility of ultimately escaping women. Resigning themselves to this inevitability, and trying to facilitate matters for the girls, they proffer these humble suggestions, speaking for the "Fellow across the hall".

Wear a delicate perfume; otherwise, he's liable to think there's a stray cat in your purse.

Be nice to the poor boy. After all it's his money.

Don't stall him off too long; he might not come around again.

When he asks you for a kiss, don't say, "Oh, you'll spoil my make-up." If you do he's apt to really spoil your whole make-up.

Wear a good, flavored lipstick, and by all means, one that comes off. He likes to show it to the boys when he gets home.

Don't order milk when the others are having high-balls. Order coffee. He'll stay nicer longer.

Don't introduce him to the housemother till you've closed the door behind him. He might leave you both at the steps.

Don't take his fraternity seriously. He doesn't.

Don't say "good night" at 12:30 on a one o'clock night. He's liable to say "goodbye" to you.

Don't talk about other fellows when you're with him. Men are funny about that.

A freshman at Perdue is now all straightened out concerning school. He registered in the Pharmacy school this fall. Not long ago he went to see the dean and said he desired to change schools. It seems that his reason for changing was that he came to Perdue to study Agriculture and since Pharmacy wasn't the Science of Farming he thought it would be best if he changed.

More of those things:

A highbrow is one who pretends to know whether the dancer is interpreting a moonbeam, or a cow annoyed by hornets.

The trouble with the man who knows nothing is that he's the last to find it out.

A cabaret is a place where an entertainer gets paid for annoying you while you eat.

The fellow that is a bright spot in some girl's life generally gets taken to the cleaners.

Who goes there?
Fried with bottle.
Pass friend. Halt bottle.

Six Hollywood stars are listed on the rolls of Greek letter houses at The University of Illinois. Nancy Carroll and Mae West are members of sororities, and Robert Taylor, Robert Montgomery, William Boyd and Richard Bennett get their mail regularly at Illinois fraternities.

From The Alabamian comes this group of "Prissy Proverbs":

Eat, drink and get married or tomorrow you may be old maids.

Success has turned more heads than halitosis.

Thanksgiving
Virginia Earle

O God, in this thy great Thanksgiving Day,
Low, solemn hymns the white-robed choir boys sing!
A thousand silver-chiming church bells ring, a hundred thousand people kneel to pray
"Thank God for home and bread and fires," they say,
And whisper low of me: "Wild pagan thing!
Why, when we worship, should she run away?"
But I, where autumn trees flaunt burnished gold,
And flames of crimson flash in autumn wind,
Cry out: "Praise God for sunshine through the rain,
For April wind, for storm clouds, dark and bold,
For radiant color flame that sears the mind—
Praise God for life, with all its joy and pain."

The History of Thanksgiving Day

The first Thanksgiving Day celebrated in America was a harvest feast of Thanksgiving held by the Pilgrims. They had been here a year and their crops were much better than expected. Late one day in the fall, Governor Bradford sent men into the forests to shoot wild birds for a harvest feast. The Indians who had been friendly were invited to rejoice with them. The Indians brought gifts of venison and the feast lasted three days.

As new colonies settled the land, the custom of a yearly Thanksgiving spread throughout the country.

In 1789, General Washington expressed the spirit of the day in his Thanksgiving Proclamation:

"Whereas it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of Almighty God, to obey His will, to be grateful for His benefits, and humbly to implore His protection, aid and favors . . . Now therefore, I do recommend and assign Thursday, the 26th day of November next, to be devoted by the people of these States to the service of that great and glorious Being, who is the Beneficient Author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be; that we may then all unite in rendering unto Him our sincere and humble thanks for His kind care and protection of the people of this country, and for all the great and various favors which He has been pleased to confer upon us."

In 1864, Abraham Lincoln, set the fourth Thursday in November as the national Thanksgiving Day. Since that time it has been regularly observed in the United States. The president issues a proclamation which is sent to each state governor who in turn issues a proclamation to his state.

A fool and his money are some party.

If you want to remember things tie a string around your finger—if you want to forget things tie a rope around your neck.

He knows me like a book—a book he hasn't read.

Fascism is patriotism gone haywire.

A ripe old age is nothing to brag about—consider the tomato.

THE LIBRARIAN - - - - - - - - - - By Jacqueline Johnson

We are very fortunate in having a library that is rich indeed in periodicals. These periodicals are arranged according to subject matter, such as Current Events, Music, Fashions, etc. Only the last issue of each magazine is kept in the Periodical room, the rest being filed away ready for your use, upon calling for them at the desk. Most of these magazines are sent away to be bound in volumes.

In order that no one will have any trouble in finding exactly what they want, the library is provided with indexed books for that purpose, and so each student is offered an opportunity for extensive research work.

Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature. The publication of the Guide follows as closely as possible the publication of the periodicals themselves. It is issued semi-monthly September to June, inclusive, monthly in June and August.

At intervals, a large cumulative volume covering a period of three years each is published.

The Guide covers the complete contents of the periodicals which it indexes by subject and author and gives title entries for many stories, poems, plays, etc.

All the references are entered under specific subjects making it as easy to find any one volume or what has been published on any one subject as it is to find a word in the dictionary. Cross references make certain the findings of all the information on any subject in all its relations. Maps, portraits, and illustrations are noted also.

Each entry gives the necessary information for finding the article: name of periodical abbreviated), volume number and inclusive paging (separated by a colon), and date.

Example: International Relat. International Outlook—W. Steed, Contemp 142: 137-36 ag '36.

Explanation: The article entitled "International Outlook," by the author, W. Steed, is to be found in Contemporary Review, volume 142, on pages 137-146 in the issue for August 1936.

The Guide supplements and keeps all reference books up to date. It locates quickly the most recent material and is an invaluable source for outside reading, for essays or papers, and last word information for class room work and debate.

Often in the larger cumulated numbers more than a page of references will be given under a single subject. For special study these references are valuable even when the library does not own all the magazines referred to, because specific information is given which makes it possible for the reader to purchase or borrow the issue of a magazine in which an important article is contained.

International Index to Periodicals. This book contains an international author and subject index to 240 periodicals devoted to pure science and the humanities.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By VIRGINIA AGEE

Thirty forgotten graves, 55 struggling children, and a bitter quarrel over a first prize, marks the finish of Canada's famed "Stork Derby". Six poverty-stricken families have made themselves the object of the world's sympathy, ridicule, and scorn! The suggestion was at first laughable, then when the contestants began to really take it seriously, it became ridiculous. It has now passed through the sympathy stage and has become a subject of international disgust. What on earth will supposedly civilized humans think up next?

In Burlington, Colorado, Sim Hudson treated the town because he won an election bet.

At noon, November 14, he gave everybody a free lunch.

Two dances were in progress all day long.

Four bands played in the streets.

A parade was held in the afternoon

A crowd of about 8,000 attended.

The report was that Sim's bet amounted to $4,000.

A very commendable project made its debut in Chicago not long ago. Jack and the Beanstalk was staged in Grand Opera—it thrilled both children and grown-ups (folks, John Erskine apparently meant it when he described it as "a fairy opera for the child-like") with its beauty and originality.

A Hindu philosopher selected only three of Hollywood's famous stars as being perfectly balanced—including mental, spiritual, and physical attractiveness. These three stars were Gladys Swarthout, Lily Pons, and Frederic March.

He went on to say that Clark Gable and Carole Lombard tipped the balance with supreme physical appeal, while Mary Boland had "too much mentality" for perfect balance.

Tillie, Myrtle, and Jennie are three beautiful circus elephants—yet they must earn their bread and butter for the time they don't caper in sawdust rings. They do the work of ordinary farm horses — pulling wagons and plows on a 180 acre farm. And did you know that an elephant (moving all four feet at a time) can plow an acre of ground in half the time a horse does?—and the poor driver has to dog-trot to keep up with them.

This Friday night we have a big annual affair coming off in our school. The Dramatic clubs of S. T. C. and Hampden-Sydney are presenting MARY THE THIRD. Our own Miss Wheeler is directing and the cast has been working plenty hard. Come and see it! See how your granny got her man, and how your mother got hers. As for yourself—well, there's no telling.

Did you every study girls? It's an amusing subject—really. Their looks, their habits, their conversation — everything about them is hilariously funny if you really think about it. Take the sophisticate—her bearing, her conversation, her manners. Sometimes the "head carry" seems a trifle exaggerated; perhaps she uses broad A and that always makes people's heads snap up and their eyes pop; her air of boredom — and funnier than the sophisticate are those who strive mightily and hard to imitate her.

Some persons have the habit of collecting and memorizing asinine poems. Here's a contribution—may those who read it and don't like it have pity; and may those who simply love it keep it in their pates:

"The mule he are a funny bird.
He hair are long and thick.
He are mostly ears and head,
And a lot of he are kick."

Imaginative Fashion Revue Delights Milady's Mind's-Eye

Drama Is Keynote Of Apparel For Evening

Come! Let us away on the wings of imagination to a fashion review in one of New York's smartest shops of the latest styles ushered in with the falling leaves and crisp, cold air of late autumn.

A herald blows a blast on his silver trumpet, the velvet curtains fall back and amid the ohs! and ahs! of the awed feminine audience the parade begins.

Drama . . . and with milady enters glamour, a gown of grape wine duvetyn, jewelled to a provocative decollete. A cloak of electric blue with royal spread to cover it.—Applause. .

The next model wears a dance frock bringing a thrilling translation of the Edwardian revival, a costume with bodiced jacket that, when removed, proves to have concealed a daringly cut evening gown beneath, a rhinestone studded crepe of sculptured simplicity with rhythmic skirts in black and white.

The slippers worn with this frock are sumptuous silhouettes of glamour in jet black with gold or silver. The evening bag is jewel-studded, multicolor, embroidered brocade. When milady enters the dance hall with this outfit, you may be sure she provokes invitations to dance.

Next, we consider a fur coat of silver squirrel, the newest enthusiasm of the Paris coutourier. It awakens quick longing in feminine hearts and puts a covetous glint in the eyes of those who have a taste for momentous fashions. To complete the outfit, a "spaghette" turban of felt strips in wine or green is worn and the newest thing in gloves—the Wear-Clean doeskin of substantial British quality. There is a fascination about these gloves that wear themselves clean in this day when everything turns to dust and cinders in our hands.

For town and travel wear there are the ever-popular suits. One of the newest is grey worsted bound with black and having a black crepe blouse.

To make you a midwinter-night's dream of loveliness, there are sleepers in peach or tender pastels, warm and devastatingly smart. They foam up into a flattering froth of angora and are edged with ruffles.

The parade fades from our vision and with a start we realize we are not in New York but in ole S. T. C. about to witness another parade—the parade of talents in the dramatic play "Mary III" when in reality feminine voices may oh! and ah! at the review of lovely fashions and brilliant acting.

Education Sorority Celebrates Founders Day With Banquet

The Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority celebrated its Founders' Day at a banquet given at Longwood on Saturday, November 14 at seven o'clock. Among the guests of honor were Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Misses Lila and Wilhemina London, and the Alpha Sigma Alpha National President, Miss Evelyn G. Bell. Several of the founders returned also. The place cards for the banquet carried out the theme of the birdbath and bench which had been dedicated earlier in the afternoon ,while the color scheme was carried out in green and gold.

Missionaries Return From Stay in China

The Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Graham Jr. who have recently returned to this country from Chinkiary, China, have been visiting in Hopewell where Mr. Graham has been speaking. Mrs. Graham was before her marriage, Miss Louise Garrett. While at Farmville S. T. C. she was outstanding in music, taking the leading roles in several musical productions. Although Mrs. Graham did not intend to become a missionary when she was a student here, she has made it her life work since her marriage to Mr. Graham, an alumnus of Hampden-Sydney and star Tiger football player of 1917, '18 and '19. For several years now, Mrs. Graham has been teaching in a girls' school in China.

prove the conditions in the child's own home; to find a foster or boarding home for him, or to see that he is cared for in a suitable institution. Which of these is the best move is determined by the individual and circumstances of the case. Miss Tines says that taking a child from his own home should be the last resort considered as carefully as a very serious operation would be.

Alexander, Kitty Watkins, Pauline Jones, Mary Jones, Louise Walmsley, Mrs. Edna Jones, Mrs. Dydnor, Mrs. Nancy Dodd Smith and Miss Martha Walters.

World War Veteran Entertains Audience

Thanks are due the Senior Class for sponsoring Bill Cope, the entertaining World War veteran. Thursday night in the auditorium this versatile and ingenius person held the audience spellbound with his program of popular songs, "good ole mountain music." and semi-classic selections. He not only played the banjo, guitar, accordian, and piano, but he won the response of everyone who heard him with his novel arrangements and ready wit.

Alpha Sigma Alpha Holds Dedication On Founders Day

Bench and Bird-Bath Are Presented By Sorority

Alpha Chapter of Alpha Sigma Alpha celebrated its thirty-fifth anniversary in a memorial dedication to its founders on the campus in front of the Student Building at 3:30 Saturday, November 14, 1936.

Susan Lane, president of Alpha chapter, presided at the service. The national president, Miss Evelyn G. Bell, presented the memorial which was accepted by Dr. J. L. Jarman, Mrs. Louise Cox Carper, of Charleston, W. Va., and Mrs. Juliette Hundley Gilliam, of Richmond, Va., two of the founders were present at the ceremony. Other founders who were unable to attend are Miss Mary Williamson Hundley, Philadelphia; Mrs. Roderick M. Thomas, Coral Gables, Fla., and Mrs. John W. Nowll, Roanoke, Va. Nancy Burgwyn, Richmond, Va., daughter of the late Mrs. Morris Hunter, the first initiate, unveiled the memorial.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the chapter served tea in the Student building lounge. Members of the faculty, heads and advisors of the other sororities, and visiting alumnae were present.

Among the guests present for the occasion was Miss Hilda Stein, Carbondale, Ill., from the Delta Sigma Epsilon Sorority.

Methodist Students Honored With Picnic At Longwood Cabin

The chatter and laughter of S. T. C. girls filled Longwood's Log Cabin. It was Armistice Day and the student members of the Methodist Sunday School were celebrating with a picnic. Several amusing games initiated by Mary Virginia Blankenship were placed while the gathering twilight filled the room.

Soon, however, the mile hike began to have its effect in the way of a distinct sensation of hunger. But this was promptly and satisfactoritly remedied by weiners, coco-colas, marshmallows and buns.

National Sorority Holds Convention

Jane Royall Presides At Pi Kappa Sigma District Meet

A district convention of Pi Kappa Sigma Sorority will be held at the State Teachers College, Farmville, on the week-end of November 21, 1936. Miss Jane Royall, district president and an alumna of the host chapter, Alpha Epsilon, will preside at the business meetings.

Mrs. Charles Gebsoa, National vice-president, of Buffalo, N. Y., will be present in addition to other district officers. Delegates from the following chapters will attend; Alpha Alpha of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala.; Amicron of Marshall College, Huntington, West Virginia; Alpha Theta of John B. Stetson University, DeLand, Fla.; Alpha Epsilon of State Teachers College, Farmville, Va.; and the Huntington Alumnae Club of Huntington, W. Va.

Following the business meeting of Saturday afternoon, Alpha Epsilon will be hostess at a tea in honor of the visiting delegates. The convention banquet and the annual fall banquet of Alpha Epsilon will be held together at Longwood on Saturday evening.

The following will be guests of Alpha Epsilon at the banquet: Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Grace Mix, Miss O. T. Iler, Mrs. H. T. Stokes and Mrs. J. T. Thompson.

The convention will adjourn on Sunday morning following a breakfast at Longwood.

Honor Fraternity Entertains at Tea

Dr. Jarman Renders Several Songs On Program

The Alpha Phi Sigma honorary society gave a tea for the new girls that were taken in this quarter in the Student Building Lounge Tuesday, November 17 from 4:30 to 6 o'clock. Each new member was accompanied by an old member of the society. The guests were received by Ruth Phelps the new president and Bonnie Lane, the old president.

While sipping tea the guests were entertained by Margaret Garrett, Dr. Jarman, and Elizabeth LeGrande. Margaret Garrett, an old member of the society, played the piano throughout the program. Dr. Jarman, accompanied at the piano by Dot Wise, sang three selections namely, "In the Garden of Tomorrow," "Keep on Hoping," and "On the Road to Mandalay." Elizabeth Le Grande accompanied at the piano by Miss Purdom played three selections on the violin, "Barcarolle" by Paschall, Schubert's Serenade," and Saint-Saen's "Swan Song".

Besides old and new members of the society, the following honorary members were present: Dr. and Mrs. Wynne, Miss Lila London, and Miss Nichols, Miss Barlow, Miss Purdom, Mr. French and Mr. Holton.

S. T. C. Holds East West Tournament

State Hockey Team To Be Chosen Saturday

On Saturday, November 21, at 2:30 P. M. the South-Eastern All-State Hockey Team will be chosen from the girls that are being sent here to represent the East and West. These representatives have been chosen from the outstanding girls on the hockey teams in the colleges of Eastern and Western Virginia. The girls that are selected for the South-Eastern All-State Hockey Team will go to Baltimore to compete in the hockey tournament that is to be held there later this month.

Lunch is to be served at 12 o'clock in the tea room after which an executive meeting will be held in the small auditorium. At 2:30 the hockey games will be played after which the team will be chosen. After the games a tea will be held in the Student Lounge for the girls.

Farmville feels very proud that she was asked to hold the tournament here and we will do our best to uphold our true Farmville sportmanship.

Miss Coleman Talks On Youth of Orient

The B. S. U. is sponsoring a talk on "The Youth of the Orient" given by Miss Mabelle Coleman in the Y. M. A. Lounge at 4:30 p. .m Monday, November 23.

Miss Coleman is the publicity secretary of the foreign mission board. She has only recently returned from the Orient and her topic promises to be an interesting one. The hope is that many will attend and show Miss Coleman appreciation for her visit to S. T. C.

Notice

The Virginian Staff wishes to express its appreciation to the student body and the faculty for their cooperation, as individuals or as a group, in making it possible to successfully complete the photography for the 1937 Virginian. The staff is putting forth every effort to make this yearbook one of which each student may justly be proud. In meeting this end, we hope that the subscriptions this year will represent the enrollment in school one hundred per cent.

box and press the red button" was Bonnie's advice when asked what a student must do when she discovered a fire. The use of fire extinguisher will be explained and demonstrated by Mr. Graham at four o'clock on Thursday on the campus.

The question arose as to what should be done in case the siren from the town's fire department was heard. "If this be the case, go through the drill just as if it were our own siren" said the president.

day.

You know, that boy Suther has a part that's hard to play. He's always up in the Utopian heights somewhere just like Surratt had to be when he was competing with somebody else's, but I wouldn't have courage to say so like they have to.

I wonder whom Tommy Mason dates? If the twentieth weren't so close I think I'd—anyhow, I like him a lot. At the last game I saw him leading cheers for H.-S. C.; maybe that's what gave him such a voice. Miss Wheeler won't get to say she can't hear him further back than the front row. Frances Hutcheson should be glad she's playing opposite him, but she's so good herself I guess it works both ways. At first couldn't imagine Frances carousing around like the script calls for but she surely does put it over.

Great guns, it's ten o'clock, and here I sit gazing at these people like they might be from Mars. Anyhow, they are stars, but I guess I'll have to wait till Friday night to see the rest of this.

Put Christmas Seals in your December budget. The funds they provide in December fight tuberculosis all the year around.

SPORT SLANTS

(—By the Sport)

Say, have you ever,
Met the team in the Red and White?
A "crack shot" team, without
A question—
You'd better start your practice up

Say, have you ever seen that
Silver "color cup"?
The teams are working for it,
Without a question—
You'd better start your practice up

Good advice, don't you think!

The colors red and white proved the victors in those "breath-taking" hockey games last Tuesday afternoon— or should I have to tell you! Tuesday afternoon brought to a climax all those practices that we have been struggling so hard to "get in". As you know, all four teams played "swell" hockey, and everyone was kept on an edge, just waiting for anyone on either side to break through with a goal. The Juniors lauded over the seniors and those "raring" freshmen defeated the "proud" sophomores. However, each team displayed that outstanding characteristic, "Good sportsmanship," and that is one of those essential things, we strive for in all of our undertakings. The captains of the teams were as follows.

Freshmen—Harriet Vaden
Sophomore — "Army" Butterworth.
Juniors—Edna Bolick
Seniors—Mary Virginia Walker.

In behalf of each member on each of the four teams, we wish to thank our captains for their work and their efforts in helping our team to be the "winner."

Practices in hockey will still be held on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. So come on out and try out for varsity squad.

Tennis

The tennis matches are being played off, and at the present only a few more remain to be played. The outstanding players that have been left in the semi-finals are Jennie Carroll, Mary Elizabeth Badger and Ann Dugger. Tennis practices are held every Friday afternoon. You'd better hurry out and practice or "cold weather" will soon spoil all hope of tennis playing.

Color Rush

Rush, rush, rush! Green and white colors were the outstanding colors with a banner on Student Building and one on Cunningham Hall. A red and white banner adorned the Rotunda.

Even though green and white was defeated in hockey, they gained recognition in the "color rush." More power to these colors, "green and white" and "red and white."

Archery

Archery practice will start back on its regular schedule. There will be practices every Monday afternoon.

Basketball

Practice for basketball will be held on Wednesday afternoons. And there is no time like the present to start getting those practices. They are hard to make up at the last minute, and we do want each class represented by a team.

Price Relates Life Of Horace Mann

Play Shows Founding Of Normal Schools

The Chapel program on Thursday, November 12, continued a series of talks on education. Dot Price gave a short talk on the life of Horace Mann. Among the many great things in his life, she told the student body, he taught people to cherish and cultivate character; opposed the use of alcoholic beverages; founded an insane asylum; created state board of education in Mass.; was secretary of the board; reorganized Mass. state school; advocated the teaching of practical studies to be taught in schools and founded the first normal school in America.

The talk was followed by a play "Live to the Truth" by Mildred Sandison. This demonstrated the founding of the first normal school in America by Horace Mann in 1839. It took place in Lexington, Mass. The characters were:

Father Pierce .... Katherine Milby
Mother Pierce Norvelle Montague
Mrs. Hawkins .... Marguerite York
Miss Hawkins ..... Nan Seward
Miss Smith ..... Libby Roberts
Miss Damon ..... Martha Hamlet
Horace Mann .... Deane Saunders

Rotunda Reverberations

What! the doors to the auditorium closed again and I'll have to walk up stairs. But who will mind after seeing that wonderful play that the Dramatic Club is going to put on Friday night. These poor girls that have cast books aside preferring to stand outside the doors until play-practice is over and just gape at the boys had better put their minds on other things—Exams are just around the corner and no boy has ever been known to help a girl in college pass one. There are three hundred of them seven miles out—get your teacher to drive you out. And while you're gone if you miss any of your clothes look for Isabel Plummer. She's robbing everybody for the play—don't take her wrong—please.

Trip trip-tra-la-tra-la. Why who is this fantastic soul tripping through the chemistry lab? Not with a chemistry book in his hand but a bunch of beautiful flowers. Our Professor French's goodness—a change over night—a chemical explosion no doubt. Here's hoping some one can find the solution—we prefer a man to teach chemistry—so cast away thy flowers fair one.

Even if Richmond did beat Hampden-Sydney, our S. T. C. girls seemed to enjoy themselves. Except Will Scott—poor child—but then she went and could tell about the game when she got back and that's more than some could have done. Have you seen that big something Carter Belle acquired last Saturday night? What I want to know is how he asked you—huh?

Why doesn't Mary Harvey receive visitors earlier? Next time tell your friend to come around before closing hours—he did have a kind voice though. And if you see Charlotte Rice walking around in queer looking hose—you'll know that she asks for them not on her Mother's letter but on Jack's. They'll probably be V. M. I. football socks. Collegiate maybe—.

From the rehearsals of Mary the Third (III).

It seems that the H.-S. C. lad who omitted shaving for self-protection from one young (and offended) S. T. C. lassie, is quite willing to lay down some one else's life for her. What devotion!

Students Outline Educational Fields

Bean and McGlothlin Present Problems Of Majors

Wednesday, November 11, the education speakers for chapel were Virginia Bean who spoke on "A Well Balanced Program for the Elementary Course", and Bess McGlothlin who spoke on "Increasing Professional Possibilities Through Proper Choosing of Electives".

In her address, Miss Bean showed us the necessity of being a well-rounded elementary teacher. Two year graduates are at a great disadvantage because they have to come back to school, she said, for they have to do their practice teaching before they're really prepared.

Statistics prove there are more openings in the field of elementary education at this time than ever before. The wider range of the teacher's ability the greater the chance of getting a good position, since she has to teach all subjects, in that work.

In her talk Miss McGlothlin's aim was to caution us to be prepared for any situation that might arise in our teaching.

In reaching this aim she suggested the careful selection of electives and the extra curricular activties, such as the debate club, honor societies, etc.

The choice of major and minor electives should be determined by the locality in which the girl hopes to be placed, as well as her talents and interests.

Dr. Jarman also said that more and more professionally-minded superintendents wish to secure professionally trained teachers. He added that the reputation of this institution, now in its 53rd year is high. Many Virginia superintendents prefer Farmville graduates, and a few superintendents will have no other. In expressing this, he stated that the students are expected to be good teachers.

Have you noticed the checkerboard appearance of the sheets of the 1936 Christmas Seals? Look at yours.

The face of this same lad seems to hurt the sensitive eyes of our heroine.

To those who are observant one young lady gives the impression of doing more than acting in one of the romantic scenes.

How does Miss Wheeler expect the cast to stay sober when she herself gets quite amused at the antics?

Red Socks Vs. "Mary III"

November 10, 1936
S. T. C.,
Farmville, Virginia

Dear Mother:

Yes, you have every reason to believe that I'm fickle, but I know definitely now that I don't care to have those red socks, but rather the fifty cents. You see, there's going to be a big event here on next Friday night, and I certainly don't want to miss it.

Everyone has been talking about it for days, and each day I've been saving five cents for it, but alas, today I discovered that I would not have enough days to save fifty cents. So, you see, I really have to do without the socks. But it's worth every stitch of the socks because the best looking Hampden-Sydney boys and Farmville girls are taking leading parts in the event.

You know, Mother, that you wouldn't deprive me the privilege of seeing a really handsome young man for an hour or so; and then, too, it will be so very entertaining

But, you will send me the fifty cents, won't you? If I had known about this occasion when Dad made out my budget, I surely would have persuaded him to add this extra amount; but then, as I told you, I won't need the red socks.

Oh, we aren't selfish about our good times here, for you and Dad may come also. It will be worth the hour trip to Farmville to enjoy this opportunity. Anyway, your being named Mary should influence Dad somewhat in deciding to come.

Here's hoping that I receive the fifty cents by the end of the week, and even larger hope that my feet won't suffer from my changing my mind about the red socks.

Love,
Susie.

P. S.—Oh, dear, it's just like a freshman to forget. The big event is the play which the Dramatic Clubs of Farmville State Teachers College and Hampden-Sydney will give Friday in the Farmville auditorium. The play is Rachael Crother's well known comedy, "Mary III".

Hansel And Gretel Theme For Fete

McGlothlin Announces Election Schedule For Court

NAME CHAIRMEN

Fitzpatrick Is Aid For Committee Heads

Mary Harrison Vaughan, May Day Chairman, announced today that the theme for the 1937 festival will be the old story of "Hansel and Gretel". Plans are being made using the story from Grimm's Fairy Tales as a basis.

Miss McGlothlin, chairman of May Day, outlined the schedule for the election of the queen and court in chapel today.

Although the fairy tale will be adjusted to the needs of the May Day committee, it will lose none of its fantastic fascination in the retelling. The weird witch, her breath-taking sugar-coated house, candy sticks and gingerbread men will be on hand to lend the proper touch. The queen and her court will be a princess and her maidens who, under the spell of the witch, have been turned into inanimate delicacies within the sugar house. Hansel and Gretel overcome the witch and break the magic spell, freeing the princess and her hand-maidens.

The costumes for 'Hansel and Gretel" are in the hands of Isabel Plummer, costume director of the Dramatic Club. Katherine Irby is dance chairman for the fete, while Virginia Ritchie is chairman of music. Work has already begun in these departments. Mrs. Louise R. Fitzpatrick, as is customary, is advising the May Day committee and chairman in their plans.

The entire student body is expected to cooperate in the work of May Day. The opportunity for participation will be open in the spring, when definite arrangements will have been made.

Chapel Exercises Honor Dr. Jarman

Girls Render Songs On President's Birthday

Thursday, November 19, was Dr. Jarman's birthday. He came to chapel wearing his favorite flower —a red rose.

The girls assembled quickly and gave him the best gift they possibly could—song! "What's the Matter With Jarman", followed by two of Dr. Jarman's favorites—"In the Garden of Tomorrow" and "Keep on Hoping"—and last, but not least, "Happy Birthday, Dr. Jarman!" were the selections sung.

Then Dr. Jarman rose, smiling, and made a little speech. "'In the Garden of Tomorrow' is one of my favorites," he said. He also mentioned "Keep On Hoping" as being a fine song for a motto. Then he commented on the "lovely day" and "The seven hundred beautiful girls singing," and he said, "I should like for you to sing all through life."

Reverend Mr. Hollingsworth conducted the devotional services.

Literature Classes Reverence Memory Of Rudyard Kipling

Rudyard Kipling was honored by a program given by Miss Mary Clay Hiner's juvenile literature classes Monday morning at 10:30. This was done in celebration of National Book Week, and children of the fourth and fifth grades of the training school were guests of the classes. Sue Adams was chairman and announced the program.

Silent tribute was paid Kipling while Louise Borden played the "Recessional," one of his fine compositions. After that Becky Sandidge told of his contributions to prosaic literature.

Agee and Johnson Enthrall Audience In "Mary Third"

Combined Clubs Are Successful In Comedy

Virginia Agee, in the role of the third Mary, excellently portrayed the modern girl who is trying to find her philosophy of life in Rachel Crother's comedy 'Mary and Third." The play was presented by S. T. C. and H.-S. C. Dramatic Clubs on Friday, November 20, under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler.

Opposite Virginia, Jim Johnson played the role of the "Young man in love," who is averse to modern experiments and tends to the conservative. Jim showed himself of no mean talent in his initial appearance on the S. T. C. stage.

In two prologues Clara Nottingham and Bill Waldrep, and Nan Throckmorton and Bill Willis gave a picture of courtship in grandmother's and mother's day. Clara's later interpretation as meddlesome Grandmother was one of the high spots in the play. Nan's portrayal of the indecisive Mother, caught betwen the old and new, discontent yet afraid to face life, was considered the finest acting she has shown on our stage. Bill Willis, the "heavy" father, was strong in his part giving a well developed character sketch.

Others of the supporting cast contributed their part to the success of the fall production. They included Webb Surratt as the third Mary's ultra-modern suitor; Tom Mason and Frances Hutcheson as Mary's friends; Mary Joyner Cox, the Maid.

Delegates Attend Annual Conference

S. T. C. Debaters Go To South Carolina Thursday

Representatives to the Strawberry Leaf Conference will leave Thursday, December 3, for Rock Hill, South Carolina. Those girls who represent S. T. C. in debating are Ruth Sears, Pattie Bounds, Marjorie Thompson and Lillian Anderson. Florence Bress and Pattie Bounds will deliver orations and several of the other girls making the trip will enter contests of extemporaneous speaking, poetry reading and after dinner speaking.

These members of the debate club, with Dr. Walmsley, will represent S. T. C. in the various forensic activities during this conference which is held from December 3-5.

Mr. Painter Speaks To Sociology Class About Child Welfare

Mr. W. L. Painter, head of the Children's Bureau in the Public Welfare Department of Virginia spoke to the Child Welfare class on Friday, November 20 on the care of children by the state.

The children are divided into two groups, the dependent and neglected children, and the delinquent children. Local and county agencies take care of these in the former group. In the main, about 88 per cent of the care is being done by private facilities such as the church and local set-ups. The delinquent children are sent to the department in Richmond by the local juvenile courts. After examinations the children are, in as many cases as possible, sent back home because they can grow up

Junior President Presents Sponsor

Madeline McGlothlin Introduces Royall In Chapel

In chapel on Wednesday, December 2, the Junior Class made the third presentation of its classman, Miss Jane Royall.

To the tune of "Red and White" the Junior Class marched in and joined in singing with their sister-Freshman class. Following this was the class song of the Juniors. On the stage, a short tap dance carried out the theme of a hockey game, the six dancers being dressed in white skirts, red sweaters and carrying hockey sticks. Included in this number were: Virginia Doughty, Jack Johnson, Mary Harvey, Gay Stieffin, Kathleen McCann and Mary Joyner Cox.

These then stood back to make way for the class officers and classman while Madeline McGlothlin, president, made her presentation speech. Immediately following this singing of the three presentation songs, the Junior Class marched out to the tune of Red and White.

Fire Alarm Summons Girls To First Drill

The insistent buzz of the alarm summoned the students to their first fire drill last Wednesday. Clad in heavy coats, a towel over one arm, and a book in hand, they filed rapidly out upon the campus. According to Will Scott, fire chief, the building was cleared in good time. It is thought, however, that this will be done more rapidly after the installation of the new

Commanders Play For Senior Dance

Students Will Choose 1937 Queen of May

The selection of a May Queen from the names put up by the student body in today's nomination will take place Thursday. Students can vote at the table in the hall from chapel until lunch hour on that day. The name of the queen will be announced at Sing Saturday, December 5.

The nominees for the queen's court, picked from the names submitted by the student body today will be presented at Sing Saturday. From those candidates, the students will choose the fair maidens to be bewitched with the queen in this year's theme, "Hansel and Gretel." The queen will represent a princess changed into some delicacy, and the court will be her maidens changed into inanimate objects by the cruel witch.

The May Day committee has requested that everyone bring a pencil to Sing on Saturday night.

Y. W. C. A. Cabinet Sells T. B. Seals

Student Body Aids Yuletide Custom's Success

According to custom, the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet is sponsoring the sale of T. B. Christmas Seals in S. T. C. during the next two weeks. Members of the cabinet have the seals on hand at the present time and are asking the student body to help in this welfare work by purchasing seals for their gifts and cards.

Annually millions of seals are sold in this country for the control and prevention of tuberculosis. They have come to be accepted as the symbol of health during the holiday seasons. The custom has taken on an international aspect since its beginning in Denmark in 1904.

Begun by a Danish postal clerk for the building of a children's hospital, the idea had widespread appeal. It was adopted by a group of American doctors who formed the National Tuberculosis in 1907. For a number of years this association and the American Red Cross sold the seals in a cooperative arrangement.

Since 1929 the Tubeculosis Association has had full control of the sale of the Christmas Seals. It is in cooperation with them that the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet is selling the seals to S. T. C. students.

Class Will Sponsor Annual Formal Affair

TICKETS LIMITED

Officers Will Lead Senior Class in Figure

The V. M. I. Commanders will play the opening strains of music for the Senior Dance at 8:30 P. M., December 5, in the big gymnasium.

A number of changes have been made in the affair by the class of '37. Tickets sold will be limited to 350 girls and 250 boys to avoid excessive crowds.

The Senior Dance is a formal occasion. There will be a figure for seniors and their dates, led by the four class officers.

Tickets for the dance will be on sale at the table in the hall under the supervision of Agnes Thompson.

Child Sociology Class Begins Annual Trips To Welfare Centers

Miss Stubbs Sociology Class in Child Welfare started their annual trips to Richmond on Tuesday, November 17. Two groups made the trips which consisted of one all-day trip and one half-day.

The students went through the Public Welfare Department where they heard talks by Miss Lamb, Miss Fox, and Dr. Williams, members of the bureaus in the department. These lectures were descriptions of the work of the different bureaus in more detail than the former addresses made at S. T. C. While in Richmond they sat in on a staff meeting in which the placing of several children was decided and a description of the cases given. They heard some of the cases before Judge Ricks at the Juvenile Court in Richmond, and went through Richmond's Detention Home which cares for the children while they are being studied for placement.

Among some of the institutions visited by the groups was St. Joseph's Villa, a Catholic Orphanage just outside of Richmond. St. Joseph's Villa was established in 1931. The buildings and equipment are extremely modern, and the children receive every advantage possible outside their own home.

At the Industrial Home for White Boys, under the supervision of Mr. Blandford, they handle about three hundred boys from different parts of the state. They

Usual Post Holiday Let-Down Flees Before Senior Dance

With the excitement and rush of Thanksgiving holidays over, there's usually a rather crushing "let-down" during the first few days of classes. But not so this year, for hardly will S. T. C. have begun to think about settling down, when Saturday, the fifth, will be here, bringing with it—the Senior Dance!

The last few days before the occasion the mad rush and scramble will begin for anything from pearl Juliet caps to red gardenias, and you're sure to hear snatches of, "Kean? He's a Chi Phi!" or "Well, Kappa Sig's not so bad either" or wails such as "Would you, by any chance, have a pair of wine-colored satin sandals, size four-B?" and "Mother told me to be sure to have this wrap cleaned, but I put it off, and I just know it won't be ready in time."

Naturally everyone wants to look her best, for it's Senior Dance time with promises of brass buttons, Washington and Lee, Duke, and all points south. With the V. M. I. Commanders providing that certain something, S. T. C will lift to the strains of "Midnight Blue" while couples "swing it" with the Organ Grinder.

Sleepy Girls Must Beware Of Weird Sirens By Night

Some cold morning soon a weird siren will shriek into the early hours and call from warm bed each S. T. C. girl. Groans and foul language will probably be emitted as bare feet touch cold floors and hands grope awkwardly for windows.

The halls will become scenes of confusion as doors pop open and voices demand if it's a real alarm or just that siren from down town. Coats will be grabbed. Roommates will bump into each other in the mad scramble for shoes. As a last minute thought, each will grab a book and a towel to prevent loss of sanity and—hair or is it breath? Then out they will march, poor shivering souls called so cruelly from deep slumbers.

Down the steps they'll patter, into the frosty out-doors where their breath will make air white like smoke, where there is no real smoke. Marshalls will perform their duties as quickly as possible while shivers and chattering teeth make the only activity from without save certain enraged mumbles.

At last it will all be over. Back they'll march; eagerly they'll sling off coats and shoes, fling up windows and toss books and towels aside. How good the warm covers will feel. How contented will be the sighs as heavy eyelids once more drop over sleepy eyes.

HOLIDAYS

It has been said that everyone needs a vacation once in a while. Our holidays are that.

Is it impossible for everyone in our Student Body to be satisfied with the lengths of our vacations? But all are not contented with the few days we have left. They are endangering the idea of vacations for all. Perhaps they do not realize what it would mean not to have any.

Thanksgiving is past. Others are before us. Everyone can do her share by not asking for more days of vacation. Then we shall not have our holidays taken away because of misuse.

FIRE DRILLS

The fire drills are very important to the safety of every girl here and each one should take them seriously. Since the school is responsible for us while we are here, these drills are protections to it.

In case of a fire the first thing that would come into our minds would be how quickly we could get out. That's an important point, but all fires are not placed so that the stairs are free from smoke and flames. It would take too much time to go back after our towel or other possessions.

Cooperate with your fire chief in these practices so that you will know exactly what to do and how to do it in case of a fire and will not endanger others.

HOW IS YOUR MANNER?

Living with 700 girls in an atmosphere of comparative freedom, eating at a table for ten with no adults besides ourselves, seems to be conducive to careless habits, thoughtlessness of others' comfort, and strange to relate, bad manners.

It will be noticed that a brief column called "Charm Chides" begins in this week's Rotunda. In these social notes the attempt will be made to draw to our attention the lapse which are the most glaring in our manner.

If any of you feel that there is a particular fault which should be brought before us, please drop the suggestion in the Rotunda box.

Rotunda Reverberations

Oh—boy!—am I tired? (Our after Thanksgiving song). Come the cool of the evening when we can put our weary heads once more on a downy soft pillow (even if it isn't quite as soft as the one you slept on during the holidays—or did you sleep?) it will feel plenty good.

And what did you collect during the holidays? Chic Dortch didn't do bad—it wasn't a mincemeat pie either. Let's hope it will last much longer—until it's classed as an antique.

He played flower girl one week—acquired a fever blister the next, and we're just waiting to see what will come this week. (Nothing so far has happened but wait until after those chemistry tests this week—he'll either be bombarded or showered with roses). No use to say any more—he's our teacher.

What! What! A new night watchman in school and wearing pajamas and a bathrobe—oh-no, it isn't the breeze; it's Ruth Crumley. The poor girl lost at least five hours sleep on Sunday night, but if she collected hush-money from all those girls—the United States couldn't hold her.

Ring! ring! ring! Not California on the wire? Yes, indeed, and all for Zaida Thomas too—can you beat that? Wonder what could have been said to last three minutes—not three words over and over again "June in November"—

Charm Chides

"Hey, Bread!" Grab! Grab! Out comes the middle! "Butter!" On go hunks of butter. Gobble, gobble and then "Bread!" Pass, grab, devour! On it goes! It is the race of the day. Who can finish first and get the most?

What's it all about anyhow? Don't we have time to eat—if we get to meals on time? Isn't there enough to go around? Then why the hideous display? No one stops to wonder. You're hungry? Well, aren't we all? If all of us go slow and take time, the food will go around. Then everybody will get some, and the terrible wait at the end of each meal will be avoided. That will save tongues from uttering unpleasant words, digestions from being wrecked and hips from spreading out of bounds.

Remember we aren't hogs! We're self-respecting students who wish to act as such! Slow down: eat less, and you'll feel and look better.

Be sure to get your tickets for maybe. huh? the senior dance. It is going to be the dance—and not only that, but a senior figure thrown in for good measure. Only a limited number of tickets will be sold and it's formal—so take your castor oil tonight and get over the turkey greetings so you'll be feeling like a daisy Saturday night.

Wonder what "love on a bus" means to a certain S. T. C. miss?

Literary Column

An often used theme for poetry is that of an old woman. The sight of an old woman arouses different thoughts in the poets and each describes her in a different way.

Portrait of an Old Woman
By Arthur D. Ficke

She limps with halting painful pace,
Stops, wavers, and creeps on again;
Peers up with dim and questioning face
Void of desire or doubt or pain.
Her cheeks hang gray in waxen folds
Wherein there stirs no blood at all.
A hand like bundled cornstalks holds
The tatters of a faded shawl.
Where was a breast, sunk bones she clasps;
A knot jerks where were womanhips;
A ropy throat sends writhing gasps
Up to the tight line of her lips.
Here strong the city's pomp is poured . . .
She stands, unhuman, bleak, aghast;
An empty temple of the Lord
From which the jocund Lord has passed.
He has builded him another house,
Whenceforth his flame, renewed and bright,
Shines stark upon these weathered brows
Abandoned to the final night.

Old Lady
By Chesta H. Fulmer

She sits, so tiny and serene
So quaint and frail and old;
And smiles her little secret smile
At thoughts she's never told.
I know she's living in the past,
And that she's young again;
I know she lives and loves and laughs
Adown some memory lane.
I watch and glean a lesson there
And for my setting sun;
I'll live—that I may sit and smile
At youth-mad things I've done.

A Lady
By Amy Lowell

You are beautiful and faded,
Like an old opera tune
Played upon harpsichord;
Or like the sun-foilded silks
Of an eighteenth-century boudoir.
In your eyes,
Smoulder the falled roses of outlived minutes,
And the perfume of your soul
Is vague and suffusing,
With the pungence of sealed spice jars.
Your half-tones delight me,
And I grow mad with gazing
At your blent colors.
My vigor is a new-minted penny,
Which I cast at your feet.
Gather it up from the dust,
That its sparkle may amuse you.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By VIRGINIA AGEE

"Guest will come dressed in sackcloth and ashes and prepare to eat Dead Sea fruit"—that's the way ironic angles contemplating this earth, could appropriately extend an invitatioin to celebrate the 18th anniversary of the armistice which ended the World War on November 11, 1918. Somehow, the war which was to end wars seemed to have panned out rather badly, and we find all of Europe arming itself despite the glum lesson taught by Professor World War.

To be sure, a great deal in "talk"—but how much damage has been done heretofore through idle talk? European nations are talking war loudly, and America whispers the bitter word in a hushed voice. It seems that it would pay America to think twice before gloating over European wars. America must exert its energy to prevent its being entangled in Europe for in case of a major struggle ensues, she cannot keep out for long!

Christmas is creeping closer and closer! The wintry weather causes eyes to shine and cheeks to glow. We, of the feminine sex, naturally turn our thoughts to gifts which inevitably includes shopping — and may we take this opportunity to remind each and every one that there are only twenty-two shopping days 'til Christmas?

Tuberculosis seals naturally come simultaneously with thoughts of cards. This week the seals of the National Association go on sale. This is the thirtieth year of their existence, and in that time, the mortality rate in tuberculosis has been cut in half by the sale of these little stamps.

Here is a story (in two installments) that may be of interest to those who have been worried about the woman who swallowed an octopus egg at the beach last summer.

Installment 1:

"My dear, have you heard about the woman who swallowed the octopus egg? She was swimming at Virginia eBach and caught a little round white thing floating on the water. She thought it was a pearl and accidentally swallowed it. Now she's in the hospital suffering untold horrors. The egg hatched and the octopus is growing inside her. They expect her to die any minute. It's too revoltig? I'll call the hospital now and see how she is."

Installment 2:

"Hello—is this the hospital? How is the woman who has the otcopus growing inside her? . . . What? . . . Whoever heard of an octopus growing in a woman? Well, you needn't be so rude about it."

It seems as though there was a hopeful athlete who went out for college football his freshman year. He worked and slaved and never got in a game. He became a senior and was warming the bench in the last game of the season (he still never played in a game). The last substitute for his position was carried off the field, and young hopeful began tightening his helmet and getting kinks out of his limbs. The coach eyed his men with disheartening eyes.

"Curry," (young hopeful's name) he said, "get up—I'm sending the bench in."

An enthusiastic V. P. I. cheerer who was sitting on V. M. I.'s thirty yard line was getting in the red, white, and yellow fellow's hair.

"Yeah, Tech—come on Teck."

A drunken V. M. I. alumna turned slowly around.

"My god—static."

At the present time there are two "Hamlets" on Broadway: John Gielgud, described as a powerful Hamlet and Leslie Howard the charming Hamlet. John Gielgud, acclaimed by London critics as the greatest Dane of the century, opened in New York October 8th. One day later in Boston, the curtain rang up on Leslie Howards' $80,000 production of Shakespeare's best known tragedy Boston newspapers were unanimous in their praises of Howard's performance and Philadelphia seconded the Boston reception. Last week, a month after Gielgud's opening, Leslie Howard's Hamlet came to New York. Howard's interpretation of the neurotic Dane is quiet and thoughtful. In the love passages and in Orphelias' burial scene he surpasses Gielgud. But he is at his best when he uses his charming sense of drawing room comedy, but Shakespeare did not write of drawing room manners. Broadway torpedoed Howard's performance, comparing it unfavorable with Gielgud's.

This and other comments on the theatre are to be found in News Week November issue.

The civil war in Spain will probably be lost by the Spanish people only because the insurgents have received help from abroad which was refused to the government. There will be a new period of tyranny during which these Spaniards will not even have the poor consolation of reflecting that the cause of liberty has gained elsewhere through their slavery. Either this tyranny will be successful and Spain will be welded into a new Fascist State of the greatest strategical importance, or the tyranny will break down and Spain will be faced with a much more bloody civil war than the present one and with the prospect of a much more drastic swing to the left at the end of it—

The above is an excerpt from the article "The Spanish Tragedy" by Vernan Bartlett in "The Way of the World." Other timely articles on the Spanish question can be found in "Current History" and "The Nation" (all November issues).

Do you know what the trouble is with lady politicians? Women will never succeed in politics until they do favors, buy tickets, organize clambakes and picnics; in short until they are willing to play the game of present precinct politics. In most urban areas there are Republicans and Democratic wards and precinct clubs, and almost everyone of these has a ladies auxiliary, a polled replica of the men's club.

A woman in politics is like a woman throwing a baseball; she can throw it, but it does not go where she wants it and her execution is awkward.

These are only a few of the comments made by John Gordon Ross in his article "Ladies in Politics" in the November issue of "Forum".

Excerpts from A. P. Herbert's amusing article, "Some Thoughts on Television" in the November issue of "The Living Age."

Well, what troubles me is the thought of the plain singer and the nervous lecturer or speaker. The decent darkness of the wireless has been a godsend to them. But once television is available, I suppose we shall all greedily insist upon vision. The talk without the Talker will be considered dull. Plain Jane and Shy Simon, and Toothless Tom will be driven off the market; Beauty will regain her unfair advantage and the speaker with a film face or a way with him will oust unhandsome intellect or unshaven learning.

This latest miracle fills me with added inconsequent thoughts. Television cum telephone a hideous possibility! Never again would the badgered public man be able to pretend that he was his brother, or his butler. Meanwhile they (inventors) have done a big job for Britain and I congratulate them all. But I am still in a rage about my close up.

Thanksgiving Calls Students To Fun

Girls Desert School For Gala Events Everywhere

Turkey, pumpkins, cranberries, cousins, aunts and home, are what Thanksgiving meant to S. T. C. girls years ago. Football, dances, dates, fur coats, and having glee were foremost in the minds of the girls this year as they scurried off excitedly for the holidays.

V. M. I.—V. P. I.

Roanoke seemed to attract the majority of girls with boys from V. M. I. and V. P. I. The game between these two popular schools was witnessed by not a few Farmville girls. Many followed the V. M. I. uniforms to Lexington and enjoyed prom-trotting at the ring dances to the tunes of Tommy Dorsey. Among the girls seen were Eugenia Jolly, Lloyd Kelley, Elizabeth Wilson, Frances Hutcheson Elsie Dodd, Kathleen McCann, Page Nottingham, Jennie Belle Gilliam and Clara Nottingham.

W. & M.—U. of R.

Far too many girls than there is room to mention here witnessed the annual William and Mary—University of Richmond football game with its color, thrills, noise and bards. The Lamba Chi Alpha and Phi Delta Omega dances held at the University with Roy Dennis furnishnig the music for both and several unusual features caused the S. T. C. lasses in Richmond to don their silks and satins and "swing it" with the Richmond College lads.

Pi K. A. Ball

Balloons, confetti, elaborate decorations and Jimmy Payner's band attracted many to the 1936 all state Pi Kappa Alpha Ball which was held in Richmond at the John Maarshall Hotel ballroom Friday night. Among the S. T. C. girls present were Nancy Taylor, Harriette Vaden, Isabel Plummer, Vera Ebel, Minnie Smith, Mable Burton and Betty Harwood.

Army—Navy

Jane Royal and Bernice Jones attended the Army—Navy game in Philadelphia.

New York

Martha Hamlet and Juanita Callis spent the holidays in New York visiting Juanita's sister.

At School

But not all of the girls went home. Some remained as school and from all reports had quite a time with fewer restrictions, no classes and good food. Those remaining were Kathleen Twyford, Caroline Upshur, Fumi Wakayama, Elizabeth Whitehead, Amanda Wickline, Virginia Acworth, Sue Adams, Lois Barbee, Sue Baynard, Ruth Crumley, Betty Sue Cummings, Dorothy Fischer, Irene Francis, Patricia Gibson, Sara Justis, Nellwyn Latimer, Elise McMillian, India Martin, Margaret Mason, Doris Miller, Elizabeth Morris, Margaret Price, Elizabeth Roberts, Bunnie Robinette, Trilby Robinette, Julia Rowe, Florence Rowett, Virginia Savage, Janie Scaggs, Elizabeth Scales and Annie Laurie Taylor.

Gretna Trio Wins Second In Contest; Keesee Is Member

Sara Keesee, S. T. C. freshman, with Dolly Vaden and Margie Colbert, who compose the Gretna Trio, placed second in the state-wide amateur contest conducted in Charlottesville, November 30. The Trio won first place in the local contest at Gretna this fall, entitling them to entrance in the state contest.

Bob and Meadi Taylor of Lawrenceville, Va., also singers, won first place. A special radio broadcast was arranged for the contestants on Monday at 1:30 P. M.

In March, 1937, the winners of first and second places in the contest will go to Warm Springs, Ga., to be in a special moving picture.

Sorority Gives Tea for Alumnae

Alumnae Are Invited To Banquet By Hosts

The Pi Kappa Sigma sorority entertained guests of the district convention at a tea in the chapter room on Saturday afternoon, November the twenty-second. Also attending the tea were guests from the college.

A banquet was given in honor of the visitors at Longwood on Saturday night. The decorations were in the sorority colors and the theme was one of Thanksgiving. The guests were Mrs. Charles Gibson, Buffalo, New York; Marvidem Boyte and Doris Dede of De Land, Florida; Eunice Byrnside of Huntington, W. Va.; Dr. Jarman, Miss Mary White Cox, Miss Mix, Mrs. Herbert Stokes and Mrs. J. T. Thompson, all of Farmville. A large group of alumnae returned for the occasion.

The convention adjourned after a breakfast given at Longwood on Sunday morning, November, the twenty-third.

Drama Officers Are Entertained

Watkins Gives Tea At Hampden-Sydney

On Tuesday, November 24, Asa Watkins of Hampden-Sydney entertained at tea, officers of the dramatic clubs of both colleges and members of the cast of "Mary IIT", Asa is president of the Hampden-Sydney Club. Mr. Hugh White entertained the group with piano selections, playing at the special request of Miss Wheeler, "The Stone Cutter's Song," his own composition. It is the song of the stone cutters of northern China where Mr. White lived for some years.

The guests were: Miss Wheeler, Fletcher Walker, Josephine Quinn, Frances Hutcheson, Madeliene McClothlin, Nan Throckmorton Clara Nottingham, Virginia Agee, Bill Willis, Webb Surratt, Jim Johnson, Vernon Benedict, Tom Mason, Marshall Suther, Clifton Snidow, Bill Waldrep, Hugh White, and members of the host's family.

Youthful Magician

Ben Franklin III, who appeared at S. T. C. November 24.

Alumnae Chapter Meets at Salem

Officers and Delegates Are Chosen By Group

At a meeting of the Salem chapter of the Farmville Alumnae Association held at the home of Mrs. Eleanor Folk in Salem, Mrs. Julius Darden was elected president of the group. Miss Phyllis Denit was chosen treasurer, and Miss Margaret Northcross, secretary.

Miss Catherine Logan was chosen as a delegate from the Salem chapter to the Farmville Alumnae meeting in Richmond on Thanksgiving. Plans are being made for a tea on the second Monday in December to which all the Farmville Alumnae have been invited.

are given manual training and they make quite a good deal of their own equipment. The boys range from 10 to 18 years.

Some of the girls visited the Colored Boys Industrial School supervised by Mr. Layton where there are about 390 boys of about 10 to 18 years. During their visit the boys sang a few songs and showed pleasure at the class's interest in them.

The girls in the two groups who went to Richmond on November 17, 19, 23 and 24 were: Ruth Sears, Susan Lane, Midge Davis, Minnie Smith, Jean Willis, Sue Mallory, Ann Moore, Page Nottingham, Zaida Thomas, Claire Eastman, Libby Roberts, Dot Robertson, Mary Denny, Virginia Hannah, Mary Frances Adams, Frances Hudgins, Nellie Pierpoint, Victoria Gillette, Anne McCready, Dorothy Hutchinson, and Virginia Baker.

Mu Omega Leads Sororities In Grades For Year 1935-36

The sorority averages for the year 1935-36 were as follows: Mu Omega, 1.377; Sigma Sigma Sigma 1.730; Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.612; Alpha Sigma Tau, 1.586; Gamma Theta, 1.577; Alpha Sigma Alpha, 1.473.

Literature Classes Reverence Kipling

Susan Lane read "How the Camel Got His Hump" from Kipling's "Jungle Book", and then Ann Dugger told about his contribution to poetry.

In concluding the program Henrietta Ivers interpreted his poems "If" and "When Earth's Last Picture is Painted."

Franklin Appears Before Students

Alumnus of H.-S. C. Is Presented By S. C. A.

Ben Franklin, former student of H.-S. C. and famous magician, thrilled the audience in the S. T. C. auditorium Tuesday night with his "sleight-of-hand" tricks. Borrowing Hindu and Chinese incantations of magic and employing those of his own ingenuity, he convinced spectators that here was a magician of no mean ability. His delving into the supernatural and mystical, the appearance of a rabbit in a hat, his card tricks, the passing of a card into an orange, along with his charm as an entertainer, dazzled "mere mortal creatures."

The program was made possible by the S. C. A. of Hampden-Sydney. Students of both colleges were invited.

Delta Theta Alpha Has Eight Pledges November 23

The Delta Theta Alpha Club received the following eight pledges on November 23: Katherine Coleman, Edna Walden, Katherine Walden, Katherine Carlton, Virginia Woodward, Pauline Pearson, Marguerite York, and Edna Bolick.

High Hats For Heads High Is Season's "Tops" Vogue

Heads are in the clouds this season with hats soaring skyward in dizzy whirls topped by jaunty feathers or velvet bows. They form a sky-line of gaiety, style and beauty.

The variety in color, style, and materials of the new winter hats makes an interesting study for those sitting on the campus, walking down a busy street, or waiting at the entrance of large department stores.

You see a number of black felts topped with large wind-mill bows of wired black velvet ribbon. Small toques with shark's fin ridges on the top or looks of velvet jutting out in front of one eye, are popular.

Have, no matter what, a fur hat this year—of silver fox, mink, sable, nutria—have it any shape you please.

Bats' wings in blue and red velvet are very new. They are twisted together around a small black turban, and knotted in front, with a red "wing" shooting up, a blue one down.

Here comes a well-dressed "deb" with a wine colored hat pushed back, way back on her head—the brim hugging the neck, the forehead clear except for a gay feather strap resembling the head-piece on a London bobby.

Do you see that group of college girls over there across that street? They are wearing the ever-popular, ever-stylish berets. They have shoot-back, pancake shapes that thrust out sharply over the forehead. One is of black antelope, another of shirred red velvet ridged with a velvet "fin" and a third is made of black Persian lamb and is cut square above the brow.

Let us stop on this review of the highlights of high hats to do a little window shopping at a hat store. Over there in the corner is a perennial town or country hat to be worn with tailored clothes. It is very mannish and is topped with a small, brave feather. There is the periodic and perfect wide-brimmed hat of pine-green taupe felt with all of its brim straight ahead of it. Here, in the center, is a tall black antelope hat rimmed with silver fox. It frames the face of the model with a furry halo very much in the Grand Duchess of Imperial Court manner. And finally—extravaganza—the hat we won't forget: a Tartar's turban, high as the Caucasus Mountains, of black antelope.

Junior Team Ties Freshmen in Last Of Hockey Games

Accident to Bolick Brings Game to End

The juniors and freshmen brought the hockey season to a close with a tie of 3-3 when they played the final game Thursday, Nov. 19, at 4 o'clock, on the athletic field. The teams were well matched and played a most exciting game.

The freshmen scored early in the first half only to be tied by the Juniors. The class of '40 held its sister team to a tie throughout the remaining part of the game.

It was decided to play off the tie in five minute halves. This was brought to an end when Captain Bolick was accidently hit with the ball.

Both teams excelled in pass work. The game was fast, and each team worked hard to break down the defense of the opposing side.

The line-up:

Pos.	Juniors	Freshmen
R.W.—	Mann	Mann
R. I.—	E. Gilliam	Newman
C.F.—	J. B. Gilliam	Newman
L.I. —	Chappell	Billups
L.W.—	Bolick	Jarman
R.H.—	Phelps	Copley
C.H.—	Latimer	Vaden
L.H.—	Bailey	Nimmo
R.B.—	M. McGlothlin	Gathright

Williams Gives Talk On Mental Hygiene To Sociology Class

On November 18, Dr. Williams, head of the Mental Hygiene Bureau, described the work of the Mental Hygiene Clinic to Miss Stubbs' class on Child Welfare.

The clinic is primarily diagnostic and adolescent for children with an average age of 14 years. It is not a guidance clinic because the children are there too short a time. Their work is to cure, in the main rather than prevent.

Teachers and social workers can do the most important work in helping care for these children because they know the child's environment and they see the difficulty in its beginning. There are many factors involved in the cases of defective children—intelligence, physical deficiences, and home conditions.

The biggest task in treating a case is to get the child to understand the causes of his condition and how to care for them. The first step in caring for the person is a psychiatric interview in which the interviewer gains the person's confidence and then obtains information about his family and home conditions. The person is then given psychological and physical examinations and an intelligence test. After this information is gained the department makes recommendations as to what should be done for the child.

Queer English

We'll begin with a box and the plural is boxes,
But the plural of ox should be oxen not oxes.
Then one fowl is goose but two are called geese,
Yet the plural of moose should never be meese.
You may find a lone mouse, or a lot of mice,
But the plural of house is houses, not hice.
If the plural of man is always called men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
The cow in the plural may be cows or kine
But the plural of vow is vows not vine.
And if I speak of a foot and you show me your feet,
If I gave you a boot, would a pair be called beet?
If one is a tooth and the whole set is teeth,
Why shouldn't the plural of booth be called beeth?
If the singular is this and the plural is these,
Should the plural of kiss be nicknamed keese?

West Team Wins State Tournament

Members For State Team Are Chosen

On Saturday, November 21, the Farmville Athletic Association entertained the western and eastern sections of the Virginia Field Hockey Teams. The Western Team which won the tournament by a score of 4-0, was composed of girls from Sweetbriar, Hollins, and Harrisonburg. The Eastern Team was composed of girls from Westhampton and William and Mary. From the participants in this tournament the All-State Hockey Team was chosen and those girls went to Baltimore at Thanksgiving to take part in the Southeastern Section Tournament of the United States Field Hockey Association.

The following girls were selected for the positions on the All-State Team: Elizabeth Barger, Westhampton goal - keeper; Almeda Howard, Sweet Briar, right half; Mary Jane Judd, Sweet Briar, right wing; Elizabeth Lockett, Sweet Briar, left inner; Marian Fuller, Sweet Briar, left half; Marjorie Sylvester, Sweet Briar, center forward.

Margaret Cornwell from Sweet Briar was chosen to play in the position of left wing in the reserve team of the Virginia Association. Marian Fuller, Almeda Howard, and Elizabeth Lockett, all of Sweet Briar, were selected for the reserve team of the Southeast Field Hockey Association. Sweet Briar also had Miss Anne Delano, instructor of physical education, and Mrs. Rusted Thomasson, alumna, selected for the All-State Team.

Edna Bolick was Farmville's only representative in the tournament.

Music League Offers To Place Students On Commercial Basis

Of significant importance to all students who are engaged in the composition of songs and popular melodies, comes the announcement of the Intercollegiate Music League, with headquarters in the Little Building, Boston, Mass. This organization has been formed to effectively introduce, record, publish, "plug" and have performed over the radio the best works of those college composers and poets who are enrolled as members.

The Intercollegiate Music League fills a crying need for a legitimate and authorized agency acting as a commercial outlet for the production of college students, so that college students may have some commercial outlet for their productions.

The necessary contacts and connections with members of ASCP (American Society of Composers) have already been made and arrangements have already been completed for such a program.

All members of the League are known as Associates. Each and every associate shares annually in the net profits of the League, whether that associate has had a song published during the year or not.

Standard Uniform Popular song writers' contracts are given to successful composers. This contract has been approved and endorsed by ASCAP, SPA (Songwriters Protective Association) and MPPA (Music Publishers Protective Association).

All receipts of any nature derived by the League through its various activities are placed in the common pool and calculated in the annual distribution to Associates.

Arrangements have been completed to have Archie Bleyer, featured bandmaster of the Hollywood, New York broadcast a special arrangement of an outstanding manuscript approximately ev? ery two weeks over the entire Mutual Network (Coast to Coast).

The masculine pronouns are he, his and him,
But imagine the feminine she, shis and shim.
So the English I think you'll all agree
Is the most wonderful language you ever did see.

Hockey

The hockey season is drawing near a close and it was topped off with the East-West hockey game. Two games were played. The first being between the selection from the east and west schools. After this game was played, the judges eliminated girls and picked the first and second team. Then the reserves were put in, and they played against the supposedly first team. Changes were also made again, and some girls were switched from the second to the first team. After this game everyone was invited to tea in the lounge. During this time the judges picked and announced the all-state team.

Oh, yes, I forgot to add that Edna Bolick, one of our girls played in the second game. Although Edno was not particularly outstanding, she played well, and "kept right up" with those topnotch players. We are proud of you, Edna.

Here's hoping that next year will find girls from S. T. C. on all-state teams.

Basket Ball

Along with "ole man winter" comes basketball. Practices will be held more often since we no longer have hockey to practice. Remember that you must have a certain number of practices in order to play in class games, so you had better get started.

Archery

"Don't forget that we still have archery," says Maxine Burke, much distressed. Practices will be held on Friday afternoons now that the tennis season is over. So come on out and prepare to be cupid.

Gala Spirit Reigns As Holiday Beckons

Books, papers and pencils thrown in corners and forgotten—Cool, crisp, invigorating air—Dry leaves floating down and crackling under foot—Jaunty hats tilted over one eye and fur coats flapping in the breeze—Hoarse voices, burning throats and bright banners as a result of the exciting football game—Young people in couples—Big cars and little cars filled with crowds bubbling over with laughter and fun—Home—The family together once more around the table—Turkey and cranberry sauce. Soft music—The first big blaze in the fireplace sending up bright sparks—Friends dropping in—Telephones ringing—A contented thankful feeling—Have you guessed it yet? Yes, Thanksgiving!

Notice

Basketball practices will be held at 4 and 5:30 on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons from now on. As there will be intramural games, class members are expected to come out for their class teams. Ten practices are necessary to make a player eligible for the class team.

more naturally in their own homes.

While waiting for the time when they can be sent back to their respective homes, most of them are cared for in industrial schools and boarding homes. Sometimes they are placed permanently in foster homes.

More and more they are being sent back to their own homes and under the Mother's Aid provisions are made for allotment to the mother to make it possible for her to take care of them.

alarm system, since the present one is hardly loud enough. Until the new bells are put in, there will be no more drills.

The attitude of the student body toward this program, which is novel in the history of the school, has been so far one of cooperation.

Frosh Strut Stuff With Songs, Dances

Get a load of this, girls; some poor innocent proclaimed the Freshman Sing Saturday night the best sing given here this year! That feather-weight tap-dancer, Clotilde Jarman—she was everywhere at once, or at least her feet were; and Macon Raine, well, Macon's not two taps behind her. Anyone can tell that!

When Elizabeth Lintz sang "When Did You Leave Heaven" sh-h- was that the flutter of little wings? Little Sarah Keesee moved the audience with "Sing Baby Sing". For a while there was quite a bit of jiggling in the seats—you know the way girls kinda get rhythm in their bones. Maybe some people think Micoo Sneed is quiet—she can afford to be—her "uke" talks for her.

Those were just some of the high lights of that sing; for when singing and tapping were exhausted the wits took charge, and the performance was brought to an uproarous close with a fire drill—the S. T. C. students' nightmare.

The tortures inflicted upon freshmen in our colleges and universities today are lukewarm in comparison with those in the days of '09 and '10. In some quarters, "hazing" is looked upon as a childish and often harmful practice. Clinging to such a tradition as the wearing of rat caps does seem insane, but when we realize how much farter some foreign universities carry initiations, we see that our hazing now on the decline, is mild.

First year men at the University of Holland must keep their heads shaved to a high polish; they must never use doors in entering campus buildings. Viewing their "must" conduct from the standpoint of the habits formed they can, if they desire, become agile secondatory workers by the end of the first year. They must enter and leave by way of the windows.

A. Butterworth is Tennis Champion

Twins Again Meet In Tournament Finals

On Friday, November 20, the fall tennis tournament was brought to a close when Army Butterworth won over her twin, Betty Butterworth, after a three hours' battle. The final score by sets was 3-6, 8-6, and 9-7.

Last spring in the seasonal tournament Betty and Army met, with Betty as the victor for the championship.

This year's tournament, which began the first of November, had twenty-eight of Farmville's tennis players participating. The tournament was carried out on a basis of the process of elimination. The day before the final battle Army defeated Ruth Dunnington.

Varsity Hockey Squad Is Chosen

The varsity hockey squad has been chosen. The squad composed of two complete teams with substitutes. These two teams are to play against each other, and the varsity team will be elected. The following girls were chosen as members of the varsity squad.

position
C. Jarman	R. W.	E. Mann
E. Mann	R. I.	I. Chappell
J. Gilliam	C. F.	K. Newman
M. Bowles	L. I.	M. Badger

C. Coleman	L. H.	B. Copely
J. Gathright ..	R. B.	H. Vaden
B. McGlothlin ..	L. B.	R. Prelps
F. Hudgins	Goal	D. Fisher

Substitutes: A. Butterworth, E. Crenshaw, and N. Wilkerson.

The teams are to be selected as first varsity teams and second varsity team.

Agriculture students at Carolina State are giving their annual barn dance this year in real form. Every boy will be required to wear overalls and plain blue shirts. We presume the girls will be requested to wear gingham frocks and cotton hose.

You may not care much for an engagement ring, but it's nice to have one on hand.

Great bluffs from little study grow.

DON'T MISS THE LYCEUM

VOL. XVI. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 9, 1936 No.10

German Biologist Presents Lyceum

Dr. Georg Roemmert Will Appear Dec. 11

STAGE TO BE LAB

Former Professor To Demonstrate Micro-Vivarium

On Friday evening, December 11, at eight o'clock the third of a series of Lyceum numbers will be presented. At this time, Dr. Georg Roemmert of Munich, Germany, and formerly of Teacher's College, Columbia University, will demonstrate his Micro-Vivarium by means of micro-projection.

Dr. Roemmert, who is the leading authority in this field was the founder and Director of the Micro-Vivarium at the recent World's Fair in Chicago. At present he is on a tour of Eastern colleges demonstrating his important and interesting phenomena of the microscopic world. The interesting phase of this is the fact that he uses a new method which is not generally know to audiences. He uses neither films nor slides but shows actual specimens of magnified micro-organisms which are thrown on a screen. The effect obtained is that of an observer looking through a microscope.

Dr. Roemmert, by making the stage his laboratory, brings his audience into the very atmosphere as that in which he works. He manipulates the microscope himself and at the same time demonstrates, by means of a special arrangement of mirror and prism.

Professor Speaks Before Students

Dr. Allan Presents Theories Of Philosophy

Dr. Allan, Head of the Department of Psychology and Philosophy at Hampden-Sydney College, spoke to all the philosophy classes Friday, December 4, in the Recreation Hall, on "The Mind and Body Problem."

In his lecture, Dr. Allan discussed arguments for and against the following theories: Materialism, Parallelism, Epiphenomenalism, Interaction, and Emergence.

Dr. Allan opened his talk with the statement that thinking is like breathing since breathing is an activity, thinking is an activity of the brain. He seems to think that no one has ever succeeded in doing anything with the "theory of consciousness," which may also be an activity of the brain; therefore, a good way to study the mind and body would be through introspection. He maintains that the mind doesn't work according to mechanical laws therefore, the materialist theory is highly improbable.

According to the Parallelism theory, consciousness and the brain run side by side. He said that the brain activity and conscious atcivity are similar to concave and convex lens; one side was concave; and the outside, convex.

He maintained also that the mind interacted with the body thereby causing impulses and thoughts to arise in the body (a double action)—according to the "Law of Conservation of Energy." However, the physical system is where no energy can be destroyed or created. He did, however, be-

Hayes Introduces Classman of 1939

Sophomores Present Miss Moran In Garden

In chapel on Saturday, December 5, the Sophomore Class presented its classman, Miss Grace Moran to the faculty and the Student Body for the second time.

Carrying out the theme used last year that the members of the class of '39 are all flowers, and Miss Moran the gardener, Gwen Bell, Dot Buckland, Fannie Mae Putney, Mabel Burton, Martha Floyd, Erlean Rosser, Margaret Britton, Selma West, Catherine Habel, Lucy Baskerville, Louise Borden, and Henrietta Ivers were white rose-buds. They knelt in a semi-circle against a rose arbor, while the Sophomore Class sang to Miss Moran, following her presentation by Sarah Hayes, the Sophomore Class president.

Pi Gamma Mu Holds Open Forum Tuesday In Student Lounge

Pi Gamma Mu held its first open forum in the Student Building lounge Tuesday December the first. The topic of discussion was: the foreign reaction to the re-election of President Roosevelt.

Specific reports proved the European countries to be in favor of his reelection, the various countries interpreting the reelection in the light of its own governmental principles. Marian Pond chose

Honor Fraternity Holds Convention In North Carolina

Alpha Kappa Gamma Decides on Five Delegates

The National Convention of Alpha Kappa Gamma, national fraternity for leadership, will be held at Queens-Chicora College in Charlotte, N. C., on December 11 and 12.

The Olympian Circle of Queens-Chicora, will be the host for the annual national convening of Alpha Kappa Gammas from S. T. C., Farmville, University of North Carolina, and University of South Carolina.

One of the purposes of Alpha Kappa Gamma is to investigate problems and their possible solution. The problem for discussion a this meeting is the effect of too many organizations on the individual and student body. The Joan Circle, Farmville, will present a panel on this subject which will be results compiled from questionnaires sent to colleges throughout the state and those nearby.

Those attending the convention from S. T. C. will be Miss Florence H. Stubbs, National executive secretary; Miss Jane Royall, National vice-president; Virginia Leonard, president of the local circle; Virginia Bean, and Madeline McGlothlin.

S. T. C. Will Decorate Fir Tree on Campus For Holiday Season

A Christmas Tree brightened by red lights will adorn the S. T. C. campus for the holiday season in connection with the customary White Christmas celebration this year. One of the fir trees by the colonnade will be decorated in the traditional manner, on Tuesday night, December 15.

Instead of the usual presentation of gifts for White Christmas at Prayers, the student body will gather about the tree on the campus for this purpose. Christmas carols will be sung as heads of classes and organizations bring donations.

The ceremony will be performed on Tuesday night after the annual Christmas dinner in the dining room. Girls are asked to bring wraps, as they will be in evening dress.

The expense for the tree will be shared by the school, the faculty, and students. The table in the hall will be kept for donations from all who are interested in contributing.

Student Becomes Spell-Bound At Dignity Of Old Portraits

There's something dignified about this room, something that makes even your heart beat slowly, reverently. Perhaps, it is the pictures hanging here on the wall. No, it is not the pictures, it's something they stand for—their history — that makes us stand there awe-stricken, as if their very spirits were present in the room. This is Dr. Jarman's office and the pictures are pictures of men who gave their lives for the promotion of education and helped make Farmville what it is today.

Here is a picture of Dr. Wm. H. Ruffner. He headed the first system of free schools in Virginia in 1870, and 14 years later came to Farmville to be the first president of the first normal school in the state. We cannot imagine the struggle that was his. He had to secure northern teachers because the south had none to offer; he was confronted by the money problem, but the greatest battle was the fight against adverse public opinion. Somehow, with the help of two whose pictures are here beside him, Dr. J. L. Curry, first president of the board of trustees and Dr. Joe Nelson, a charter member of that board, he carried on. Both of these right-hand-men were widely known and gave large sums of money to the purpose of carrying on the school.

The second president, Dr. J. A. Cunningham had his picture here, too. It represents what alumnae say was a very strong personality and well-loved man. He served during a time of poverty, 1887-1898. During his administration, the science hall was built and a small auditorium, which was part of what is now the Rotunda, was built.

During the administration of the next picture on the wall, Dr. R. L. Fraser, steam heat and elec-

Smith, Thomas Are Elected Queen And Maid of Honor; Twenty-four Are In Court

Twenty-Two Girls Are Chosen For Court

ELECTION AT SING

Queen Nominees Are Automatically Members

Twenty-two members of the May Court were selected by the students at Sing on Saturday night. The thirty nominees for the court had previously been chosen by ballot on Wednesday.

The court is composed of twenty-four girls, of whom two are Mary Bowles and Bonnie Lane, May Queen nominees. The twenty-two who were elected on Saturday are Margaret Dortch, Lloyd Kelly, Page Nottingham, Martha Hamlet, Dorothy Wise, Bess McGlothlin, Claire Eastman, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Madeline McGlothlin, and Susan Lane.

Carter Belle Munt, Elizabeth Harris, Mary Harrison Vaughan, Isabel Plummer, Virginia Doughty, Elizabeth Morris, Virginia Agee, Virginia Carroll, Anne Hardy, Elizabeth Butler, Vera Ebel, and Gwen Bell.

Members of the court were chosen for qualities of beauty and grace, as they will participate in the dances of the May Day fete. They will be hand-maidens to the queen, under the enchantment of the witch.

Mrs. Stier Speaks Before Student Body On Peace Campaign

"We're all agin war. So what?" questioned Mrs. Stier of the Emergency Peace Campaign when she spoke before the student body at its regular meeting Monday night.

Mrs. Stier said that over one billion dollars, or $1900 a minute is now being spent by our country on war equipment. For this reason our educational process suffers for lack of adequate means to carry on the work.

Numerous peace organizations such as the United Youth Congress and the American Student Union have been formed by the youth of our country, and it is

Mr. Strick Plans Yuletide Services

Voices Will Proclaim Holy Nativity With Carols

Plans are underway for the annual Christmas Carol Service to be held Sunday night, Dec. 13 at 8:00 in the S. T. C. auditorium. This program has always proved to be very impressive and a full audience is expected.

The program this year is the same as in the past years, with one exception. The vested choir of the Training School will not be on the program. Rev. A. H. Hollingsworth, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Farmville, will be the speaker. Dr. J. L. Jarman will sing a solo, "The Birthday of a King." A number of Christmas hymns and other selections in keeping with the Christmas spirit will be "The Women of the Confederacy" by Francis B. Simkins of the S. T. C. faculty and James W. Patton of Converse College is now on sale at the Southside Drug Store in Farmville. The price is $3.00. It has been very favorably reviewed in important newspapers in many sections of the United States.

May Queen and Maid Are Chosen Dec. 3

PRESENT'D IN SING

Students Elect Two From Four Nominees

Minnie Walton Smith, of South Hill, Virginia, was presented to the student body as May Queen at Sing on December 5. Zaida Petitt Thomas, Wytheville, Virginia, Maid of Honor of May Day, was presented at the same time.

The student body elected the May Queen and Maid of Honor from four nominees, including Minnie Smith, Zaida Thomas, Bonnie Lane ,and Mary Bowles, on Thursday, December 3. The two girls receiving the highest number of votes were elected to the respective positions. The other nominees are automatically members of the court.

On Wednesday, by popular ballot, the students nomination girls for both queen and court. The four students receiving the highest number of votes for queen were made nominees.

In the "Hansel and Gretel" May Day theme the May Queen and her court will be a princess and her handmaidens who are under the spell of the witch. They are transformed into inanimate objects, such as iced cookies, in the famed sugar house.

H.-S. C. Glee Club Presents Program

Blandford To Act As the Master of Ceremonies

Tickets went on sale Tuesday evening for the first presentation of the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club in its 1936-37 season to be given December 12th in the S. T. C. auditorium.

The Glee Club completed their first week of concentrated practice last Friday with remarkable progress, and will begin this week putting on the final touches of tone and interpretation to the eight numbers to be used. The Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs are also taking part in the Saturday night performance giving their one act play "A Marriage Proposal". The joint program, to be divided into three parts, will last approximately two hours.

Solos will be rendered by Tivis Wicker, who sings "The Blind Plowman", and takes the lead in "'Ole Man River", a sketch being worked up by the club's Ziegfield-minded officers. Hugh White is expected to give his usual expert touch to two well known piano selections. Among the numbers being used by the entire organization are several well known selections such as "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes", "The Volga Boatman", "Ole Man River", "John Peel" (a Scotch hunting song), and a rollicking sea favorite of Nelson Eddy, called "What Shall We Do With A Drunken Sailor". The quartets are using some selections from Stephen Foster's works, Cibelius and Beethoven.

This year's club is adding a feature that has never been tried be-

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

A real Christmas spirit is one of the best and most wholesome entertainments of each year, because there are so many things we can do to make others happy as well as ourselves.

Here at S. T. C. we have excellent ways in which we may celebrate Yultide season. The hanging of the greens is very impressive and it gives the buildings such a bright look that everyone just feels a Christmas spirit stirring within them. But we feel this not only because of the atmosphere, but also because each of us takes part in it.

Christmas comes nearly a week after we leave for holidays, and we can accomplish so much during that time. Giving baskets to needy families isn't a new idea, but the joy is still there when we see the happy faces receive them and rejoice, that they, too, may not have been forgotten.

Another custom that will never go out of style is caroling. Everyone loves to bundle up warmly and sing the Christmas carols through the streets, either by walking or by riding. The lighted homes and streets and the cheery smiles and songs all add to the Christmas spirit.

Let's plan now to make this advent season the most eventful one for everyone by thinking of others and their means as well as our own.

PAN AMERICAN PEACE CONFERENCE

Again the eyes of the world are turned to the western hemisphere. There is no doubt regarding what the Pan-American Peace Conference stands for—a democratic peace.

It is the hope of the leaders to continue the application of such a peace in the Americas and to exercise any possible influence in making it world-wide.

The Americas desire to recreate the Monroe Doctrine as a Pan-American past. They realize that this would be a force in combating aggression by other nations.

Thus they are the allies of peace. They promise to work together to preserve that peace that prevails in the western hemisphere.

Joke of the week nomination:

Instructor: "Give me a definition for space."

Student: "Space is where there is nothing. I can't exactly explain it, but I have it in my head."

Girls! Here is a chance to get even with boys when they hoot at your football knowledge!

Their education, through the reports of questionnaires, has been sadly neglected along most feminine styles.

In answer to a description of a swing skirt, at a local university, one boy replied, "form-fitting, body by Fisher type." Another said "a skirt with rhythm.' A good stab was, "little at the top and big at the bottom."

Only one or two boys know what is meant by blocking a knitted suit. One answered, "putting stitches on so the suit won't unravel!" One wise fellow expounded, "making curves on a suit where they ain't on a girl." Another asked "offense or defense?"

As to what materials boys prefer on girls, a fresh freshman wrote in a red pencil, "cellophane."

"Too many college students are premature agnostics and atheists," declared John B. Kennedy, NBC political commentator and former associate editor of Collier's, speaking at the Associated Collegiate Press convention in Louisville, Ky. "They are often accused of being materialists but are really skeptics."

In his address, Mr. Kennedy stated that youth in college today "wants security rather than success," and is forming new social, economic, and governmental concepts constantly.

An alert reporter at the University of New Mexico recently recorded one-sentence interviews from people, taken at random while filing out of a lecture hall. What did they think of professors in this category?

"They are inhumane and abuse their authority."

"It's flattering to the students."

"It makes me madder than hell."

"They are good professors, but they shouldn't forget the clock."

"It is very unjust."

"They are o.k."

"I don't think much of them."

"They are a swell bunch of fellows."

"They haven't been brought up correctly."

"I believe they're selfish and cause a lot of inconvenience."

"I have never developed any feelings against them."

"They ought to be tarred and feathered."

Everything is swing these days. A modern music club is being organized at New York University. The purpose is to aid in the understanding of modern music, particularly those forms known as jazz, hot jazz, and springy swing.

Now that exams are here the professor announces a quiz and gives a bit of advice in regard to preparation: "Read over your class notes and see if you can make any sense out of the pictures you draw."

Literary Column

One of the first books on education ever written and printed in England was Sir Thomas Elyot's "Governour", published in 1531. The book is full of interesting stories which used to be told in old English schools to illustrate lessons.

The Master and His Scholars

When Konysius, king of Sicily, was exiled by his people, he went to Italy and set up a school for boys, to whom he taught grammar and other subjects. His enemies laughed at him for this, declaring that it was quite beneath the dignity of one who had occupied a throne to keep a school. But he replied that though he had been turned out of Sicily, he was still a king, for he had authority over his scholars.

His enemies then asked him what good Plato's philisophy was to him in his trouble, for he had studied it deeply.

"Oh", replied he, "it enables me to bear misfortune with patience."

So moved were his former subjects by his fortitude that they recalled him to the throne—a dignity which he would probably never have regained by the sword.

The Traitor Who Became Loyal

It was once reported to King Phillip, father of Alexander the Great, that a certain captain had been plotting against him, and the king was urged to have the man imprisoned. But Philip declined, in spite of the continued warnings of his courtiers, and friends. "If any part of my body was sick," said he, "should I cut it off and cast it away? Should I not rather do all I possibly could to heal it?"

He thereupon invited the traitorous captain to the palace, loaded him with gifts and honors, and in this way made him ashamed of his treason. The captain afterward became one of the most loyal and most loving subjects of the king.

The King Who Was Loved

Croesus, the rich king, was captured by Cyrus, king of Persia, and one day, after seeing the liberality of Cyrus, he said: "Surely if you give away like this you must become very poor, whereas if you kept your wealth you would soon have great riches."

"How much do you suppose I should have now," asked Cyrus, "if, during all my reign, I had kept everything and given nothing?"

Croesus named an immense sum.

"Well", said Cyrus, "I will send round to my friends and subjects, and tell them that I need money for some object, and you shall see the result."

After the messengers of Cyrus had been round, the king took Croesus to see the gifts that had been sent. Croesus was amazed, for there stood a great heap of gold of far greater value than the sum he had named as being what Cyrus might have saved had he been a miser.

"If I had hoarded and guarded my wealth", said Cyrus, "I should be envied and hated by my people; whereas I am loved and trusted by my people, and can in a moment have more gold that ever I could have saved in many years."

FASHIONS

"Soon it will creep up on you again—that old demoralizer of slick modern dogma and slick modern realism—the Christmas spirit. Through some small chink in your armour it will get you eventually. Such foolish things can get you down: snow falling; a German band playing carols; the smell of spruce and marzipan; children's faces, solemn with excitement. You'll capitulate, sooner or later. Probably later. So late that there'll be no presents left that you'd want to give your worst enemy. Conscientious objector—why not admit now that Dancer and Prancer and Blitzen can still come over the Queensborough bridge? Why not do as the poor postman begs, and shop early, wrap firmly, address plainly? And why not give yourself a little peace on earth by turning to pages 98 and 109 in Vogue (Dec. issue) and settling everything?"

Vogue also says—We like lavishness. We like gold that glitters—sequins in grander and gaudier colors than any peacock can boast. We like feathers, embroidery, beads, ermine, lace, brocades, and jewels—all those things that will make British hearts beat fast with pride when the Coronation procession passes by.

And we like the Paris Couturiers who have brought all these things into fashion at the psychological moment when glitter and an air of prosperity are what the world needs.

They have put their minds to the higher problem of bringing back femininity and elegance in one stroke. They left the silhouette straight, simple and soft so that the figure doesn't get lost in complications. You must feel comfortable and self-confident in the basic part of your clothes. Only then can you start to add fantasy, fully, and beautiful eccentricities, and to turn your clothes into dramatic accomplices rather than mere coverings.

Harpers (Dec.) gives us "Little Ideas from Paris".

While tennising or golfing or hiking, just for fun tie a cotton handkerchief around your wrist—a nice decorative one—or try a chiffon one for evening.

An evening coat exactly like the redingote you wear all day long—in navy broadcloth trimmed and lined in velveteen. Very chic with a gleaming white dress.

Tuck a bright velveteen scarf under your black evening coat and wear it all night tightly rolled in the high neckline of a plain black dinner dress.

Make a little Juliet cap of net, and encircle its edges with a wreath of multicolored ostrich tips—but the tiniest, brightest tips you can find.

Or a black velvet peasant cap embroidered brightly in silk like the cap of a little Norwegian peasant girl—to wear in the evening.

Per December issue of Delineator, Louise Mulligan, who designs the kind of clothes college girls dream about, has created a black taffeta dress that has that 'certain something'. It's as crisp as a crocker with shirring around all its edges and a great swish of fullness in the back.

Blonde, pretty, Louise Mulligan, had three tests that she applies

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By VIRGINIA AGEE

"And the son of royal blood should marry a daughter of royal blood—he should recognize his duty to his country and to his people" . . .

In other words Edward VIII of England should settle down with some undesirable fat, prudish European princess and be supposedly happy. He should give up Wallis Simpson for the so-called royal "code"—and let not the thought of love or happiness have any bearing upon his decision.

Why should a ruler be expected to undergo a life like that when no one else in this world does? Why hasn't a ruler the right to live his own life and with whom he chooses? At least, Edward is above board with it all—not like some of his ancestors who placed a crown on their queen's heads and set them in a palace, then turned their hearts to someone else.

This is an issue that concerns the immediate happiness of only two people—why can't other people let them alone?

It seems that the gentle animal known to us as a cow (and to children as a moo-moo) plays a greater part in our lives besides providing us with a nourishing food—so, you gals, don't be snooty with bossy. She may have given you that school girl complexion. They use powdered skim milk in cosmetics. (Also in sausage fillers).

In Greece, Franz Curtler won the coveted job as grave digger.

Shortly afterward, he was killed at a party celebrating the event.

They buried him in the first grave he had dug.

Moral: "Beware of the job of grave-digging."

Comment: Poor, unfortunate Franz!

"I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree."

Thus wrote Joyce Kilmer in 1913. Five years later he was killed in action in France. Had he lived, he would have been 50 years old on December 7.

The life spark of Joyce Kilmer has gone but his beautifully expressed spirit in "Trees" will live forever.

"Christmas time is drawing near—here are a few tips on gifts for your feminine acquaintances:

Lingeries—Glorious satins, beautiful laces, careful workmanship in pajamas, panties, gowns—and hosiery—always appreciated.

Perfume—Breath-taking, illusion — to "match" personalities.

Stationery—Monogrammed or plain. It's smartness itself and so unusual.

Remember—There are only 16 shopping days till Christmas.

Speaking of Christmas — wonder just what the weather is trying to prove?

By all right of the weather prophets, and the time of the year, the ground should be covered with pure white snow; the wind should be cold and crisp; the sky should be leaden grey—that sort of weather spells December, and simultaneously—Christmas! Christmas—with the gay atmosphere that comes only with snow and steam-breathed air—with carols and holly wreaths and mistletoe—with old-fashioned egg-nog and merrily decorated trees, and mysterious, beautifully wrapped gifts—with the coming of Santa Claus and the hushed realization that Christmas is the celebration of the birth of our Saviour—with the table groaning under the weight of the Christmas dinner and soft candle-light and the tears that come to your eyes when you realize how dear each member of your family is to you—with the spontaniety of laughter and gay voices and the spirit of frivolity and youthful carelessness—that's Chirstmas!

May each and everyone of you have the very merriest of Merry Christmases!

Girls Make Trips In Spite of Dance

Majority of Students Remain At School

With no large dances at the male institutions of learning out the state and a Senior Dance here it seems logical for most of the girls to stay at S. T. C., and they did. Some managed to find other dances to attend, however, and others went home as usual.

Charm Chides

Your mother is here to see you, and you want the school to live up to everything you've said about it. Proudly you take her to your room to show her your friends. You are talking animatedly to her. Suddenly your vivid story is cut short by a shrill "Mary!" from one end of a hall. "Mary!" Again you flinch, but still it comes. "Mary!" Then from some other floor a huge "What?" booms out. A whole discussion takes place in booms while you and your mother cringe in agony.

As you turn each corner, new shouts greet you. "May I wear your blue sweater today, Sue?" "I got a letter today." "Jane, guess what happened in English!" "Pennies from heaven!" "Is that the boy who—?" Voices that are shrill or deep or particularly loud! Often loud guffaws accompany them.

You glance at your mother to see how she is taking it. You squirm in mortification when you see her wince each time a new voice joins the unwholesome din. Usually your mother is such a healthy person without any sign of nerves, You wonder why you have never noticed the shouting before. Maybe it is because you've never put yourself in the place of a visitor. You remember that you, too, have done it. You wish you hadn't, and you solemnly swear never to do it again and risk ruining the school to somebody else's mother as it is already ruined for your mother.

Winter Shoe Fashions Trip Way Into Miladies' Hearts

Three-Inch Heels Put Women On Tip-toe

Tramp, tramp, tramp! They're marching down the Avenue of Style into the hearts of every lover of beauty and individuality—the new winter shoes in every color imaginable and every model that any smart young modern could desire.

Alligator walks away with the fashion honors in a classic opera, made by hand, in burgundy, brown black, blue or gray. Or maybe you prefer the outstanding beauty and grace of an opera pump in suede or patent leather with the 'Empire State Building" heel of 3 3-4 in., 3 in., or 2 3-4 in. and 2 1-2 inch.

For hiking and walking about town, jaunty British walking shoes are the thing. They come in leather with suede trimming and have medium or low heels. The models are irresistible.

You've heard of the shoe that fits like a glove? Well, they're here at last in the form of "Dormitory Sock" which is all the rage this season. It's like a high topped bed-room slipper and ties around the ankle. It is designed to replace a skiing shoe, to be worn indoors, yet, these pigskin pampooties are sturdy enough for campus wear.

From now on, all the little Gretels in the toy weathervanes are going to be pretty busy popping out. For the weather bureau expects twelve days of rain or sleet or snow each month from now until April. Unless you want to fly in the face of such predictions, you had better stock up your closet with rubber shoes that will get you about this winter. For downpours and light snow, the new shoe-like rubbers with heels to fit your town shoes and weight so light you won't know you have them on. For days when the street crossings are doughed under with slush, you'll want tailored overshoes—far removed from the old flapping galoshes as the flappers who wore them. Then, there are storm boots to help keep snow from slithering down when you tramp through drifts.

Swing time! Evening shoes for a gay time. Exciting new dance rhythm, light as a feather, giddy as to design in black or white satin, or if you prefer, in silver or gold.

On, on, this endless parade moves, some made to look fragile for the socially agile, some frivolous and fetching, and others strong and sturdy. We're all "foot conscious" this season. Even the song writers are influenced judging from one of the latest hits, "One, Two, Button Your Shoe."

Richmond Alumnae Are Hosts at Tea

Many Old Students Reassemble In City

Each Thanksgiving season finds numbers of Farmville alumnae attending the meeting of the Virginia Education Association in Richmond, and for their pleasure the president of the Association of Alumnae plans a social gathering of some kind. This year arrangements for an afternoon tea in Miller and Rhoads Tea Room on Friday, November 27, were made by a group of Richmond alumnae, and more than sixty former students, faculty members and friends were present to greet the president, Mrs. Charles Hall Davis, Jr. and Dr. Jarman.

A prettily appointed tea table, flowers and music, the dainty plates served by committee, and meeting old friends made the occasion most delightful. Some of the guests were Mrs. Minnie Taylor Bentley, Mrs. Evelyn Dinwiddie Bass, Mrs. Margaret Leonard Dillard, Mrs. Dorothy Leonard Moore, Mrs. Pat Cowherd Adkins, Mrs. Mamie Daniel Barbee, Mrs. Mary Alice Carden, Mrs. William M. Broske, Mrs. Jessie Kellam Harshaw, Misses Catherine Bentley, Elizabeth Bowers, Eva Palmer, Elizabeth Jarratt, Virginia Saunders, Lucile Tiller, Kitty Woodson, Evelyn Knaub, Helen Dunkley, Loulie Shore, Margaret Woodward, Annie E. Winding DanceFigure Planned by Seniors Is Sensation

Under the sponsorship of the entire class, Seniors gave their annual dance on Saturday night, December 5, 1936. The "Commanders" of V. M. I. supplied the music for the occasion which proved to be a gay and gala affair.

Mary Bowles, president Class of '37 led the figure in which the entire class and their partners participated. It was beautiful to watch from the balcony, including for the finish, a spiral which was wound up tightly and then unwound slowly. Immediately following the figure, the Senior "no break" number was played.

Records show that there was an unusually large number of escorts present for this dance.

Christmas Is Theme Of Open Meeting Of Y. W. Cabinet

Christmas was the theme of the recent open meeting of the Y. W. C. A. The program as presented by the Service Committee opened with the Biblical story of the birth of Christ read by Virginia Agee. Following this were several accounts of Christmas celebration in other lands according to the various interpretation of the birth of peculiar to the different peoples. The program closed with a reading "The Night Before Christmas". Refreshments were served.

Panhellenic House Presents Contest

Essay Contest Will Be Given For Colleges

"Does New York Represent the American Scene?" is a question the Penhellenic House Association of New York, of which Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn is president, asks in its Third Annual Essay Contest for college undergraduates, announcement of which is being made currently in 1200 colleges and universities in this country and Canada. For the past two years, the first prize of $100 and and a two week's all-expense visit in New York City has been won by students who had never before seen New York. Second and third prizes will include cash awards of $25 and $15 respectively, and an all-expense stay of one week in New York. In addition, fifteen honorable mention awards will be published.

A choice of one of three distinct titles is offered in the contest this year: "Does New York Represent the American Scene?", "Is New York a Vital Part of My Culture?", or "Is New York a Place to Launch a Career?" The essay must be limited to 1,000 words, and must be sent to the Panhellenic Association Contest Office, Beekman Tower Hotel, 3 Mitchell Place, New York City, before March 31, 1937.

An entry blank, obtained from the contest office, must accompany each essay.

Mr. Phillips' Talk Concludes Addresses To Sociology Class

On December 2, Mr. James W. Phillips, Assistant Commissioner of Public Welfare, delivered the last address in the series for the Child Welfare Class.

Mr. Phillip's speech dealt with the local aspects of Public Welfare, whose duty it is to salvage in their own homes as many families as possible, and to prevent the defectiveness, dependency, and delinquency among the people. These local agencies are essential because the most essential work, that of constructive prevention in each community, can only be carried out by individual case work and the local set-ups.

The two main local services are, the Public Welfare Unit and the Trial Justice Police and Juvenile Court. The Public Welfare Unit is made up of a staff of social workers whose function is to work cooperatively with the school and church in dealing with the mentally or physically disabled who cannot support themselves. About one third of the dependents in Virginia fall into this group and are over sixty-five years old.

The second division, the Trial Justice Police and Juvenile Court has at its head the trial justice who has two duties—to try all adult cases and to preside over the Juvenile Court. Each case brought before him is studied to determine the cause back of the offense and to try to rehabilitate the delinquent without sending them to jail or an institution. According to Mr. Phillips, jails are one of the chief sources of crime today. The offenders congregate there in idleness and deteriate mentally as well as physically.

At present, eight-three counties and twenty-one cities of Virginia have local welfare workers. The project in hand is to get most of the work done by local agencies, where the workers come in direct contact with the individual and can begin work right at the source, trying to prevent rather than cure.

the processes that are taking place under the microscope.

Students of biology and sciences will be particularly interested in this showing, for it will give vivid and vital illustrations of lessons that they have learned from the text-book. However, regardless of whether one is a student of biology, Dr. Roemmert knows so well how to make his lessons fascinating and easily understood that every person will be delighted with his demonstration. Enthusiastic recommendations are excellent assurances of an enjoyable program.

SPORT SLANTS

(—By the Sport)

BASKETBALL

With the approach of cooler weather, we find basketball attracting all the attention. After all, why shouldn't it? There is nothing like a practice in basketball, "to warm us up," and get us "ready for action." For remember, all those games we've just got to beat this year. We just must beat William and Mary, Blackstone, Sweet Briar and most of all, our rival, "Harrisonburg." In order to do all this we must have a lot of practice. "So, practice it will be!" Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday from four to five-thirty o'clock has been scheduled for basketball practice. You had better come on out to practices—and help to support your school and class colors, even if you think you "just can't play basketball well enough to come to practices." Just remember, that you certainly can't learn how to play by "going to the movies" or "sleeping." After all, "Practice makes perfect!" That may be an old proverb, but even the oldest of things suit our modern world and its doings.

The freshmen are very well represented at practices, and they all have that "fighting, ready to learn spirit." The upper classmen are not quite as well represented—maybe it's because they're getting old and feeble. Whatever it is, something must be done. Come on Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors! We can't let the freshmen walk off with all the victories. We are supposed to be old and experienced in this game while the freshmen are just learning. But from all appearances these "roaring, ramping freshmen" really have good material, and they are "going places with a bang!" "And they really are experienced.

Now that we have all been properly shamed, we expect everyone to come out for practice—all ready and raring to go! Ready? Whistle!!! "Let's have agoal!!"

ARCHERY

Friday is the only day left, to get in those practices with the bow and arrow. So come one,—come all! The "Court Days" required a bow and arrow. But who knows—maybe a bow and arrow may prove useful in some of our undertakings.

MONOGRAM CLUB

Monogram Club efficiency tests were given Saturday afternoon. Hurdles, shot puts, and javelines decorated the athletic field, and much was accomplished. These tests were topped by a ten mile hike! Maybe it pays to be efficient. It sure takes a lot of practice and energy, at any rate! Fifteen cheers for the Monogram Club Girls!!! They've got what it takes.

Representatives Give Conference Speeches Before Debate Club

The Debate Club met in the small auditorium at 1:30 on Wednesday night, December 2nd. The trip to the Strawberry Leaf Conference at Winthrop College in Rock Hill, S. C., was postponed due to the weather, and those girls who were to represent Farmville at the conference gave the program for the members of the club.

There was a program debate of the Pi Kappa Delta question concerning the power of Congress to fix the hours and wages for industry. Marjorie Thompson and Lillian Anderson upheld the affirmative and Ruth Sears and Pattie Bounds supported the negative.

The meeting closed with an oration, "Cordell Hull — The Good Neighbor" by Florence Bress.

tric lights were put in the school. The first sixty feet of the gym building was erected. The basement of that building, which is now used at the biology department, was then the laundry.

When we look at all these pictures and realize how much each has done to make Farmville what it is today, we are grateful for their having lived. But when we glance at group of pictures that represent Farmville S. T. C. of yesterday—when we see the one cramped building that constituted the school in 1902 changed into all that represents a fine school, we suddenly realize there must be a picture far greater than these that is not here, a picture of a man who increased the enrollment from three to eight hundred and made this school one of the twelve best of its kind in the United States. This picture is a living one, who walks about us daily, whose smiling face radiates sunshine across every path, this is the picture of him who has a kind word for all, this picture is the man who knows and loves us all—this is our own Dr. Jarman. A finer picture could not and will never hang upon this wall.

to every dress: "First, if it looks nice on me, I know it will look nice on a lot of girls.

"Second, if it looks ghastly on me, I try it on my sister. If it looks ghastly on her too, I throw it away.

"Third, I try to make every dress one I would be proud to wear. I wouldn't want to go to a prom in a wishy-washy gown that made me look like a faded sweet-pea. Neither would you. Every girl wants a dress that will make her stand out (no matter what mother says). I am using a lot of stiff, heavy fabrics in deep colors this winter."

Rotunda Reverberations

Dear Santa Claus:

We have so many girls at our house that it is impossible for all of them to ask for something. Some are little, some big. But some want things awful bad. Can't you help them?

Minnie Smith wants a big crown full of diamonds, and the latest song sheet called "They Crowned Her Queen of May." Then there's poor Virginia Tilman, who wants love in a big paper bag. Carter Belle Munt craves a man who likes to dance every once in awhile. Nan Seward had just as soon you'd remove that blond acquaintance out of her mind. Virginia Leonard pleads for a big trousseau, and her roommate wishes her to-be doctor friend would hurry and end school. Sara Belle begs for a diet; so does Micoo; one for one to fatten; one to reduce.

Sue Mallory wants something big and a little bald. Santa, if some of the girls like Chic Dortch and her friend, Mary Bowles, tell little white lies before Christmas, it is because they want big presents instead of pictures and things.

Ann Hardy might, and then again she might not, want about five round trip tickets to Richmond. Oh! Saint Nicholas, can you tell us why she likes to go there so much? Page Nottingham is tearing out her curly strands looking for a new coiffure. Help her ,even if it's in the form of a wig. Santa, if you can spare a couple of your Elves for Bess McGlothlin from now until May to assist in May Day, I'm sure she'd appreciate it, and her mother might be able to keep her at home awhile. Claire Eastman says it "ain't" what she wants; it's what she needs. All those poor Campus Queens are wailing for an early holiday with a delivery wagon that will roll down Shannon's by itself; one laden with food. Give Nancy Sellman a book on "How to Hold Your Man". She needs it after Sunday night. More pins and better ones, says Margaret Hannah, need to be distributed among the girls, all with jewels. Susan Lane just wants Sunday nights to go on forever. Jack, how do you do it? Kathleen Knuckles would like a little plane just to fly to Cornell in. Why? Why, Santa you see all, and you can certainly see that peculiar light in her eye; it isn't sleep either. Mary Lib longs for a new shot-gun so she can play burglar. Please bring Margaret Carroll, a big fire siren to put on her bed. We'd hate to see her burn up alive. And, Santa, if some of these girls said things, that you write down in your book about bad people when they got up the other night, for the fire drill, just think how you'd like to go out in your night clothes with your hair curled up high so your head freezes, "way up yonder in the frozen north"? Please don't forget the freshmen who say "I don't know what I want, but what I want, I want so very bad." They just can't make up their winds, unless it's Virginia Walner, who wants a Rag man.

Good night 'ole dear, and remember that us girls are depending on you to bring us what we want.

Love and kisses,
Your Little Friend

Stepper at Dance Thinks Things Over

"Good night, Bob." Good night is right! It was a swell night, but am I glad it's over! My feet do so hurt! I wish Alice would come on here and go home. The way she lingers over telling that mug good night. If he were mine, I couldn't stand waiting to get rid of him. Of all the—oh, well, I suppose all of us have different tastes. Bob is at least a good dancer!

That dumb Janet somebody was certainly rushing Bob. I didn't like it one bit. She may be dumb, but she's too pretty to be trifling with my man. Bob liked her, too. I'm sort of glad he's gone. I feel safer. Marie was paying too much attention to him, too. Of course, I'm not jealous, but—.

If Alice doesn't come on! This dress is too long to dance in. I've gotten it utterly filthy. I hate dresses that are dirty around the bottom. Nancy's dress was pretty, but Carrie looked like heck. Why does she wear dresses that show how big she it?

The music was excellent! One of those cadets was a love! Gosh, but I wanted to meet him. Alice! Oh, at last she has sent that little bit of heaven on his way. "Let's go to bed."

lieve in the "Law of Cause and Effect."

Dr. Allen stated the theory that King Edward existed on two levels, that of being monarch and that of being a man: He said that the awakening of a person caused the body to cease its protoplastic form due to the activity of the mind by the mind's relating itself to a larger field of events or the mind's relating itself to the body field, thereby, changing the body field.

In conclusion Dr. Allen attempted the hypnotism of Bernice Jones. He only partially succeeded, as Bernice was not what he called a "good subject" in that she could not sufficiently relax.

Roemmert Shows Microscopic Life; Lyceum Number

Biologist Presents Micro-Vivarium to Students

GERMAN SPEAKS

Formation of Salt Crystals Is Pictured

That the world about us is teaming with myriad forms of microscopic life was amply demonstrated by Dr. George Roemmert in the auditorium on Friday night, December 11, in what was third number of the current Lyceum program, this unseen wonder world was made visible by a special arrangement of mirrors and lenses attached to an ordinary compound microscope worked out by Doctor Roemmert himself.

There went up a general buzz of student excitement and amazement as the thousands of slipper animals (Paramoecium) contained in single drop of water were seen to collide with one another on the screen. Interest was not allowed to flag as one fantastic kind of organism followed another across the animated screen—Nose animals (Didinium) attacking and engulfing their larger cousins, the slipper animals; trumpet animals (Stentor) each with a collar of rotating cilia; bell animals (Vorticella) that contracted with a snap whenever the glass slide was tapped; cross-eyed flat worms (Planaria); squirming eels (Anguillula) that live in country vinegar but are entirely harmless; and various small crustaceans. Of the latter, the transparent water flea (Daphnia) excited interest, for one could observe peristalsis and the rapid beating of its dorsal heart.

The program ended with a demonstration of salt crystals as seen in polarized light. The hues and tints far exceeded any that the artist can devise and the peculiar movement of the salt particles simulate those observed in low forms of living matter.

Dr. Roemmert came to this country in 1929. He is a biologist of distinction, but is especially known for his micro-technique. He has taught at Harvard and Columbia Universities, and was a consulting scientist at the Chicago World's Fair where he had charge of the Micro-Vivarium which attracted as many as 4000 visitors in an hour.

Holiday Spirit Fills Air With Excitement

Mistletoe over doors! Red lips, gay smiles and swirling skirts! A time for snow, shining eyes and flying feet! Curls are rumpled, voices eager and embraces rapturous. Brief, cold air and cold cheeks.

Windows send out cheery glows of welcome with beckoning candles. Christmas trees with flares of light from windows and yards! Kitchens smelling of turkey, cakes, pies and plum puddings. Fruits, nuts, and stockings hung at chimneys with care. Warm fires on hearths and spirals of smoke circling to the sky.

Packages with gay ribbons! Celophane—many colored. Silver and green! Red paper and brilliant seals. Loaded mailmen! Grasping hands, delighted squeals and squelched curiosities! That delicious unsettled, excited feeling that sends shivers up spines.

Music! Soft music that ends triumphantly! A star! A prayer! A mother and a baby! Beautiful thoughts! Hope! "And on earth peace, good will toward men."

Sears Represents S.T.C. at Ashland

Randolph-Macon Has Open Forum Discussion

Ruth Sears represented Farmville at an Open Forum discussion held in the Chapel at Randolph-Macon Men's College in Ashland at eight o'clock on Friday evening, December 11th. The discussion centered around the question of social security and the best methods for controlling it.

James Turner of Randolph-Macon, in introducing the question, gave a history of working conditions from the guild system to the present time. Catherine Wood of Randolph-Macon Woman's College presented the history of Social Security in the United States. Renny Neilson, also of Randolph-Macon, discussed social security in other countries. Robert Harper, of Hampden-Sydney showed the need of Federal control of Social Security; while Hugh Avery of Washington and Lee demanded state control of this issue. Ruth Sears of S. T. C. then showed that the question of Social Security does not come under the sphere of governmental control.

Independence, Frankness, Are Virtues of Today's Students

"A little bit independent" seems to be the theme songn of the fair collegiennes" of 1936. According to some of our faculty members, our able sisters of ten years ago were a trifle timorous and backward in regards to their instructors, each other, and life in general.

When several teachers were asked their opinion as to how the college girl of today differs from the average "young studious" of ten years ago, many and varied were the replies, but they seemed to agree unanimously on the independence of collegiate youth today.

One teacher feels that girls are more frank today, when in the presence of their professors with whom they are more than willing to disagree. To quote her, "They would just as lief chew gum and use slang before a teacher, as elsewhere."

However, she did not consider that this necessarily detracted from the girl's character, since frankness is often an asset. She went on to say that girls seem to have a more definite purpose in studying, today, than they had several years ago. This may be due to the fact that vocational guidance is stressed more widely today than it has been in the past.

In direct opposition to this, another teacher stated that there is very little difference, since the human race hasn't changd in the last ten years.

Still another opinion was that, due to the increasing number of activities, and outside interest in the way of organizations, there is more cause for distraction of attention from studies. This instructor believes that girls used to have more time for study, with the result that they were inclined to be better students since their energies were less scattered. However, his general conclusion was that the college girls of today have more confidence in themselves and their ability.

Judging along a somewhat different line, one teacher is convinced that the girls of today know more about life in general. Until fairly recently, girls were much more closely guarded in the home, with the result that they were decidedly reserved when in the presence of strangers or the general public. Now they are thrown into contact with girls in every occupation of life, and in this way, their outlook on life, and their opinion of other people has been considerably broadened.

With all this, the girls of today seem to be a little less considerate

S.T.C. Has White Christmas Service

Students Place Gifts Under Fir Tree

Before the Colonnade and around one of the natural-growing fir trees on campus, the annual White Christmas Service was held on Tuesday night, December 15.

The contributions of various organizations were placed beneath the tree while the students present joined in singing Christmas carols. The tree presented a beautiful spectacle with its lights and other ornaments. Heretofore, it has been the custom to hold White Christmas in the large auditorium with the gifts being placed on a table before the audience. However, because this new procedure is so much more filled with the true Christmas spirit, it was adopted.

Apprentices Give Play Before Club

"The Playgoers" Is Last in Series of Plays

The third of a series of plays given by the apprentices of the acting group of the Dramatic Club was presented Wednesday night in the regular meeting of that club.

The play selected—entitled, "The Playgoers"—dealt with the domestic life of a London couple who at the time of the play were finding great difficulty in securing an efficient retinue of servants. At last they thought the impossible had been accomplished and were congratulating themselves on the excellent service they had succeeded in procuring. As it were they "talked too soon" which they shortly discovered—to their intense dismay—and the curtain closed on a very upset couple—left in a large house with but one servant—and that the "odd man."

The play was an exaggerated comedy and as such afforded much amusement for the audience. Those taking the parts of the various characters were:

The Master, Johnnie Lybrook.
The Mistress, Marguerite Russ
The Cook, Phyl Kolobahm
The Kitchenmaid, Sudie Dunton
The Parlormaid, Chlotilde Jarman
The Housemaid, Nell Ward
The Useful Maid, Wilmo Deaton
The Odd Man, Jackie Crenshaw

Vested Choir Sings Christmas Carols Directed By Agee

In Sing Saturday night, a group of girls, as a vested choir, sang Christmas Carols under the direction of Virginia Agee. The program consisted of "O Little Town of Bethlehem", "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear", "Hark the Herald Angels Sing", "Joy to the World", and "O Come All Ye Faithful", sung by the entire group. Frances Steed sang "Silent Night" as a solo with the rest of the chorus humming the accompaniment while Sylvia Summers, Sarah Keesee, and Frankie Bryan sang "There's A Song in the Air" as a trio. After the singing of the carols, Ginny Agee concluded the

Freshmen Present Classman Bedford

Presentation Speech Is Delivered By Powell

In chapel on Thursday, December 10, the Freshman Class presented its classman, Miss Virginia Bedford to the faculty and the student body.

Miss Bedford was presented as the artist. Carrying out this theme the stage was decorated with a huge paint box filled with cups of vari-colored paint. When the cups were removed, six girls were revealed. These girls, were: Jane Baldwin, Prince Smith, Nancy Taylor, Sarah Keesee, Micou Sneed, and Nan Armistead, represented different parts of the state. The paints were mixed

Alpha Kappa Gamma Holds Annual Convention

QUEENS IS HOST

Five Delegates Go From S. T. C. To Meet

Miss Jane Royall of S. T. C. was elected national president of Alpha Kappa Gamma at its convention held at Queens-Chicora College in Charlotte, N. C., December 11th and 12th.

Delegates from University of North Carolina, University of South Carolina, S. T. C., Farmville, and Queens-Chicora, convened in their annual meeting on Friday, December 11. At the business session on Saturday, Jane Royall, national vice-president, was elected to the presidency to succeeed Frances Cardwell of South Carolina. Miss Florence H. Stubbs was re_elected executive secretary of the national organization.

The theme of the convention was a discussion of the effects on student body and individual of too many organizations on a campus. Virginia Bean, of Farmville, led the panel discussion on that topic Statistics were presented by Jane Ross, Chapel Hill, N. C., while Jennie Clarkson, Columbia, S. C., and Mary Wilson, Queens, gave suggested solution of the problem.

Besides the business sessions and panel discussions a number of social functions were planned. They included a progressive dinner in the sorority houses, a visit to Mint Museum and a formal banquet at the Charlotte Woman's Club.

Delegates to the convention were entertained in the college dormitories. Those attending from Farmville included Miss Florence H. Stubbs, Jane Royall, Virginia Leonard, Virginia Bean, and Madaliene McGlothlin.

Sodalitas Latina Has Christmas Program

A Christmas program was presented at the meeting of Sodalitas Latina, last Thursday, with Ruth Phelps, committee chairman, presiding.

The Biblical version of the Christmas story was read in both English and Latin by Dudley Allen. Following this, Elizabeth Morris explained the seeming miracle of Christ's birth in Bethlehem. As the concluding number, Elizabeth Roberts sang the old, old favorite "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem."

After the club had sung in Latin, refreshments were served and the meeting adjourned.

Rotunda's Past Is Revealed As "Normal School Weekly"

H-m-m. Half an hour before the next meeting. Think I'll look at some of those old Rotundas in the Publication Office files. Here's one for December 22, 1923. Almost exactly thirteen years ago! Let's see what it looks like. It's about four inches shorter and two inches narrower than the Rotunda we got last week. Under "The Rotunda" in large print are the words "The Normal School Weekly." When S. T. C. was the State Normal School! All of the headlines are in the same size print. In the right hand corner we have "Virginian Promises to be Best Yet." Gosh, that's what they're saying for this year's annual, too. And Miss Wheeler must have kept on the jump even then, for further down the page we see "Dramatic Club will present 'Why the Chimes Rang' during the Christmas Holidays." Many of the articles are like those on our front page today—news of elections, conferences, speakers, etc.

The middle pages show the biggest change. I have never seen as many advertisements! Yes, there is Shannon's ad, but it's "Shannon's Soda Shop and Bakery." In the left hand column, page two, we have the Rotunda Staff—all strange names. Then instead of editorials, there is a program of movies for the week. Monday—John Gilbert and Estelle Taylor in "A California Romance." And Pola Negri and Conrad Nagel in "Bella Donna."

Page three seems to be a column page. "Joan Speaks" is the first that catches the eye. Well, Joan is cheering the girls for having to stay in school during the Christmas holidays! I wonder why they had to do that. The rest of the page is personal notes. College Cut-Outs (news of other colleges) and jokes. Oh, here's one joke you'll appreciate.

Miss Shelton: "Mandy, did you sweep under this carpet?"

Mandy: "'Yes, Missus Shelton, I sweeps everything under that 'ere

Christ-Child Is Born Anew In Hearts of His Receivers

There was a stillness in the air, a certain stillness, very sweet, that caught at our imaginations and held them spellbound by the very quietness that existed. It was Christmas Eve and everywhere the brown earth was covered with a velvet blanket of snow. A blanket pure, warm and soft, a blanket fit to receive the tiny Christ-child. High in the heavens a bright star glittered, its brightness exceeding all the rest. It might have been the same star that guided the Wise Men so long ago, with angel voices in accompaniment announced to the world the birth of a Saviour in a lowly stable. It was in there, in the same heaven; it could have been.

Somewhere in the distance church bells broke the sweet silence to make it sweeter with the call to worship. People filed reverently into churches everywhere to hear again the story of His birth. Sitting there in beautifully decorated churches they were aware, faintly at first and then brightly, that the same Christ child whose baby birth they were again acknowledging, was with them, everyone. They looked not as they did not see Him. In every face a bright smile was shining brightly, even as the star in the heavens, to show the world the way to the Christ child. The "facestar" pointed to the heart and there the Christ-child lay. For hearts are soft, warm places, beau-

HOLIDAY GREETINGS

It seems to us that now is the time and the opportunity for wishing you all a very merry Christmas, plus the happiest New Year that ever turned up.

If we can just hold our Christmas spirit in abeyance for a few more days, we can let go and have a wonderful holiday unshadowed by remembrance of grades which were shattered by "sad" exams.

We all feel like Santa Claus had us in mind when he put Christmas on Friday this year, for it will be the biggest holiday we've ever had. We can come back to our work in 1937 with brand new minds and excellent spirits.

ABDICATION

For the first time in British history a king abdicated for reasons other than political. In choosing between a throne and his fiancee, Edward VIII chose the latter.

Who knows how such a selection will turn out? The future of the British Empire seems to remain secure in the hands of his brother. No one can tell who could serve his country the better.

With George VI upon the throne, David Edward Windsor begins to live his own life. After serving his country for so long a time, it is natural for him to wish to be just another citizen. May peace and happiness be his.

EXAMINATIONS

Examinations are here upon us and there are certain items which must be called to our attention again.

First is the Honor Code we signed after we matriculated at S. T. C. It is truly fine when students can pledge themselves to be honorable and can carry it out. These simple character-building rules have a great effect upon others and upon the entire school.

Another important item is the observance of "Busy" signs. If you put yourself in the place of one trying to study, you'll not disturb her. Think of the other person and you'll find these rules easy to follow.

Read this, girls! It is now possible for students to be able to read a person's character by his dancing.

A person that dances pigeon-toed is charming, and the one that dances with his toes out is usually sensual, self-indulgent, and vain. Men that point their toe daintily are in love with themselves. Girls that point their toes are not an exception, as they are naturally dainty.

The partner that holds you firmly with elbows up is a go-getter, a tough companion, but a good provider. The dancer that holds his elbows up is sure of himself, the one that holds his elbows down is not sure and the one holds his high is proud and vain. The woman that needs a strong leader is timid. If a man cups his hand on your back, it is a sign of possessiveness. If the man holds the lady's hand with his palm up he is going to lead.

When a person changes his style of dancing, it shows he is open minded, adaptable, and courageous. If a partner is always trying to correct you, he is vain and cunning. Most dancers that look straight ahead are stupid and stubborn. Being carefree and indifferent shows up a sloppy dancer. The springiest dancer generally is the most joyful and cheerful.

In case you have to sit out a dance, try reading the dancers' characteristics. This will broaden your sense of humor!!

Now I lay me down to rest
Before I take tomorrow's test.
If I should die before I wake
Thank gosh, I'll have no test to take.

Fordham Yell: One dam, two dams, three dams, Fordham!

"The sought after college teacher is one whose scholarship is sound and of quality, whose interest in students is human, and whose method of presenting material is stimulating," Dr. L. Hekhuis, dean of the college of liberal arts at the University of Wichita pictures the ideal instructor.

After what seems to be extensive study, some of the originators of our modern witticisms are as follows:

Adam: "It's a great life if you don't weaken."

Plutarch: "I'm sorry that I have no more lives to give my country."

Helen of Troy: "So this is Paris."

David: "The bigger they are the harder they fall."

Columbus: "I don't know where I'm going but I'm on my way."

Queen Elizabeth to Sir Walter Raleigh: "Keep your shirt on."

Connecticut College is joining hands with Wesleyan University this year as far as drama is concerned. The former school, a women's college has had to cast females in all roles in the past. With cooperation from Wesleyan men, the performances should be more realistic.

Charm Chides

Christmas time is here and no one likes to mention exams at such a time. Nevertheless, exams should be mentioned and seriously considered.

Remember, you'll enjoy Christmas much more if you've passed your exams with a boom. This depends upon the cooperation of everybody. If everybody gets down to studying early in the night during the hectic period, everybody can study easier, finish quicker and accomplish more. When you have the desire to yell and play, remember the other fellow and snap out of it.

Take your exams seriously. They mean a lot both in your life here and in after years. This means that you all should use your time to more advantage and to the advantage of everybody else. Stay home. Maybe the people you want to visit want to study, even if you don't. Don't yell and shout in the halls. Eat your meals quietly so you can digest them and put out your very best work. Go to bed early and will you be glad when the time comes for the exam! And will you feel proud when you go home without circles under your eyes and jittery nerves! And what a jolly good Christmas will be in store for us all!

Rotunda Reverberations

What! You're sleepy. I don't see why. Oh! You sat up late last night. Why, I slept like a log. (Oh, yeah.) You say you're taking exams. I see—played all year and now you're paying for it. Maybe you'll learn some day. I doubt it though. Just think, in four more days you'll be home with Ma and Pa, a nice soft bed, a frigidaire full of food to go to anytime you feel the urge, a car or a cart to ride in, and no one to say lights out, please. Gosh, it's a wonderful feeling—no classes to get up for or to make excuses for missing, no meetings to attend. But then, no roommate to tell your troubles to late at night, and no one to drag you out of bed in the morning. And still, there will be Ma and Pa saying, "I declare, Sadie, you didn't eat like that last year when you were home, and come to think about it, you weren't as fat as you are now."

Have you had time to think of a New Year's resolution while studying? Did you say to yourself I'm going to start or stop doing something? What are you going to do? Charlotte Rice says and is sticking by it, "Never put off 'till tomorrow what you can do today." If you don't believe it, look at all this parallel she's trying to get up at the last minute. Mary Harrison Vaughan resolves to lower her shades in the day time as well as at night—a beautiful shape, 'tis said. Another group of girls are going to try leaning on beds or posts instead of their walls. Poor Virginia Allen promises to study hard so tests won't frighten her so. Miss Mary begs all the girls to resolve to stay at school more on week-ends. Mary Lib and Elsie say never again, and so far, far into the night.

Anyhow, the Rotunda wishes you a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, and here's hoping that each of your shining faces will appear on the morning of January 5th—rain or shine.

We know you're right, Minnie, with your portrait rating both Richmond papers—specs n'all!!

Christmas Here Again

Snow upon the flagstone path,
And frost upon the pane;
Candles on the window-sill
And Christmas here again!
Holly on the mantel edge
And laurel on the door;
Fire within the gracious hearth
And Christmas here once more!
—Elspeth MacDuffie O'Halloran

The Silver, Shimmering Season

And now once more the holidays are here—
The silver, shimmering season, when the glow
Of heaven is powdered star-wise on the snow;
When men and women live again the dear,
Quaint raptures, tinsel-hung, of yester-youths;
When children follow with unquestioning faith
The crimson boot heels of a jovial wraith;
When wishes burn by magic into truths.

Holy Night

Tonight, the quiet stars look down
On sleeping, snow crowned hills,
And sleigh bells fling across the dark
A melody of silver trills.
It must have been a night like this,
When angels touched another hill
With hope and love, that's ever grown
Since when a star stood still.
—J. Earle Wycoff

Long, Long Ago

Winds through the olive trees
Softly did blow,
Round little Bethlehem
Long, long ago.
Sheep on the hillside lay
Whiter than snow,
Shepherds were watching them,
Long, long ago.
Then from the happy sky,
Angels bent low,
Singing their songs of joy,
Long long ago.
For in a manger bed,
Cradled we know,
Christ came to Bethlehem,
Long, long ago.
—Old English

Christmas Wish

I wish for you: a memory
Of lights against the sky,
Of Christmas stars and candles,
Of hearthfires burning high;
An echo of their laughter;
Faint nostalgia of a tear;
A spark of Christmas magic
Through the year.
—Dorothy Klemer

Anyhow, the Rotunda wishes you a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, and here's hoping that each of your shining faces will appear on the morning of January 5th—rain or shine.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By VIRGINIA AGEE

History and Romance—those two words are being spelled every minute in the melodramatic actions taking place in England.

The Duke of York in a pompous ceremony was proclaimed "our only lawful and rightful liege, George VI, by the grace of God, King of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, to whom we do acknowledge all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God, by whom kings and queens do reign, to bless the royal Prince George VI with long and happy years to reign over us."

Edward David Windsor, ex-king of Great Britain, is on his way to Austria. In a farewell speech to his subjects Friday afternoon he made the statement that the burden of a kingdom was too heavy a load "without the woman I love".

What price people pay for happiness sometimes! The loss of a kingdom seems a great price to some of us, but even a king has the right to be happy, and now with his heavy responsibility lifted from his shoulders, Edward is destined for happiness.

On the night of November 15, a baby was born in Calgary, Alta, Alaska. It weighed three pounds and was two and a half months premature. The baby is still alive and well.

It was obvious there was another child due—also living—so the doctor sat down to rest and wait—he is still waiting.

The stork is due to return late in January.

In every great department store of our country, there is a Santa Claus, the saint of Christmas for children. How their little hearts warm and beat faster when they encounter this jolly, chubby, old man with his fur and broad smiles. How they all confide in him and how he'll listen very carefully!

Children live a lifetime in their wait for that old man who comes in a sleigh drawn by eight reindeer; who slips down the chimney on Christmas Eve and fills their little stockings and leaves gifts that will make childish eyes open wide with admiration and happiness.

Oh—to be a child again — to wake on Christmas morning and slip downstairs in flannel pajamas—there to get the thrill that comes once a year! To see the Christmas tree a glowing wonder in lights and tinsel and icicles—to see dolls and trains and rockin horses, bicycles and books and dolls all together under the tree with beautifully wrapped, mysterious packages—to see the stockings hanging at the fireplace fairly bulging with goodies in the form of candies and nuts and fruits! That is a child's Christmas.

To those who have grown up, it is all right to watch their eyes glow, their little feet dance, and their cheeks flush with pleasure and happiness.

Our Christmas means that and more—we have days before Christmas planning and shopping and being furtive and mysterious—wrapping gifts and sending cards and feeling the warm glow of the Christmas spirit vibrating in every part of our bodies—cutting up fruits and nuts for the fruitcakes and smelling the delicious aroma that comes from them while they are baking—tying red satin bows on the holly wreathes and hanging them on the door and in the windows—smiling as you hang clumps of mistletoe in unsuspecting places—lighting the candles and feeling their soft light pierce your soul with its beauty—adorning your newest evening dress and dancing and laughing.

Christmas brings an atmosphere — a glow that comes at no other time of the year. This atmosphere comes with the soft music of carols, the reading of St. John's version of the birth of Christ, the snow flurries—millions of things—little things—big things—they play different roles in individual lives.

Literature:

The Satire by Walter de la Mare

The dying man on his pillow
Turned slowly his head.
"Five years on my Satire on Man
I spent," he said.

"But, lying alone, I have mused on myself, of late!"
Smiling, he nodded, and glanced
At the ash in the grate.

From The London Mercury. Also included in this Christmas number are stories (a delightful one incidentally by Walter de la Mare), articles, gravure plates, wood-cuts, and line drawings with an illustrated guide to Christmas books.

Several eminent authors when asked what books they liked gave the following answers:

Ellen Glasgow: "The Flowering of New England" by Van Wyck Brooks; "The Last Puritan" by George Santayana; "Gone With the Wind" by Margaret Mitchell.

George Jean Nathan: Swinnerton: "An Autobiography"; "Three Worlds", by Carl Van Doren; "Life of George Moore," by Joseph Hare.

Alexander Wollcott: "Why we Went to War" by Newton D. Baker; "Gone With the Wind", by Margaret Mitchell.

Margaret Mitchell: "I thank you so very much for wanting me in your Christmas issue and only wish there was something I could do about it. But my reading this year has been confined to footnotes in small type which told me how much cotton sold for in Liverpool in 1863; when steel rails for trains came in and cast iron ones were abandoned; did basques fasten with loops or hooks and eyes; what was used for illumination after Sherman went through the countryside; was lodine used during the war and for what purpose; how many babies did Mrs. Bixby have; and oh, a thousand other small items!"—New York Herald Tribunes' issue of Books—the Christmas number and Fall Book Guide.

The Stranger by the Lake
by Margaret Ward

I met a stranger by the lake
One dusk.
The sky was filled with rose,
And the lake with roaring rhythm
White tipped.
And though the air was cold, and the spray,
I forgot to be.
I saw the lines about the stranger's eyes
Above his smile.
Our woods flowed easily,
As clear as the nectar
Of a mountain grotto,
As simple
As a peasant's tender laugh. No barriers were there
Before, behind, and sympathy was free;
Soon I left the stranger by the lake
Never again to see him, though often
I thought of him, and sighed faintly.
Yet as the hours fly over me
With trains of mud and grey mist,
A thought I have
Of perfection,
Though scarcely more than a seashell
In a dream—

Sigma Sigma Sigma Has Annual Banquet In College Tea Room

Sigma Sigma Sigma held its annual informal Fall Banquet on Thursday, December 10, in the Tea Room. Decorations were carried out in the Christmas theme, there being a miniature Christmas tree on the banquet table strung with red and green gum drops and tinsel. Place cards were fashioned in the shape of candlesticks, having a large gum drop for the base with a small candle in it and a red handle of red paper with the member's name written in white ink.

Pi Kappa Sigma Has Xmas Buffet Supper

Pi Kappa Sigma Sorority held a Christmas party in the Chapter room Sunday night. A buffet supper, carrying out Christmas colors was served. Presents left by Santa Claus around the Christmas tree were distributed to all. Miss Iler, Mary Diehl, and Jane Royall were present.

A. C. E. Has Party For Children in Rec.

The Association of Childhood Education gave a Christmas party to the children of the Nursery School, Friday, December 11, in the "Rec" at 3:00 o'clock. Each child was presented a gift from under the tree and "Santa Claus" gave them each a stocking full of candy.

Donald A. Smalley, instructor of English at Indiana University, thinks that the poetry of John Donne and Robert Browning presents the "effect of the alarm clock and not of the harp, or of "Wagner rather than Mozart."

Delights For December Days Includes Furs, Caps, Mittens

Christmas Shopping Brings Forth Gay Colors

Homeward bound! through the frosty air of a typical December day—purplish, misty air that nips your ears and fingers and sends a surge of joy to your heart and puts a happy gleam in your eye. Exams over—and no more work or worry! No more work, did you say? How about that belated Christmas shopping that you've been putting off until you get home?

Oh! that will be a pleasure when you have a Prince of Persia coat to keep you warm as you push your way through surging crowds from store to store. It has a Shah's circling skirt and a slender waist under a wide, supple, kidskin belt shaped like a polo players'. In keeping with the Christmas season, don a red velvet point cap wreathed with Persian, and a pair of red suede gloves.

Christmas in the country; mauve_white snow crunching underfoot, frost-needled wind blowing—but never penetrating the warm, deep lamb's wool of a great Eskimo coat and cap.

For skiing and sleighing — a "Bull Run" suit in Union blue gabardine with gold plated buttons, red stripes and cowhide Sam Brown belt Epaulettes. Or if you are a Southerner and want to keep up the spirit of old Dixie, a Soldier Boy suit with a tight-fitting Zouave jacket and gold plated army buttons. In Confederate grey of cravenetted gabardine, the trousers have black stripes and a Talon fastened front. Authentic Forage cap in black or grey gabardine.

Extravaganza—the night of December 22nd—an opera. Milady sweeps in just as the lights are lowered, dressed in a gown of purple silk-jersey, flowing into proud folds, dark and vibrant against her skin, and pale suede gloves; arching over her head, a dark plume held on by a velvet band.

December 23rd—a dance—and under the holly and mistletoe Milady whirls and glides her lovely way over the dance floor in a dress of black tulle. Layers of dusky tulle, fragile as a mist, make the skirt that foams from knee-length in front, where it reveals an ice-white sheath of satin, to the heels in back. At the neck, a clump of white roses; and a feather swirls from a sequin head-band. A festive sandal for this brilliant evening is one made with geometric flame-like tongues mounting brass bands—alternate silver with black.

December 24th, Christmas Eve, and carols. For this beautiful occasion, wear a Vermont knit stocking cap and fringed muffler, green, red , white, or blue, a New England turtle neck sweater in white, over this you wear "The Heart Warmer" in bright green, red, white, or blue.

December 25th, Christmas Day. Out of the bed with a bound and into a lovely house-coat of rich uphostery brocade strewn with tiny sprays of flowers. It'll add to your joy as you dash down to see "what Santa Claus brought you" and the glamour of your fireside as you sit before it cracking nuts and talking.

When falling shadows herald the close of Christmas day, this year, we hope that all will proclaim it the most joyful and colorful ever. We know that the gaiety and splendor of Christmas will be kept alive throughout the New Year as the Goddess of Fashion, with a sweep of her magic wand, is ever creating new and more splendid styles.

Sigma Tea

Miss Pauline Camper entertained the Alpha Chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority at tea in the chapter room on Sunday afternoon, December 13.

The room was attractively decorated with holly and Christmas candles.

Miss Grace Mix, Mrs. Jamison Mrs. Mary Richardson Lancaster, Mrs. Shelton and Mrs. Laing were the guests present.

FRESHMAN CLASS

The Freshman Class had a Christmas party in the Student Building Lounge Thursday night, December 10th. The lounge was decorated in Christmas style. Gifts were presented to the classman and the class president.

PI GAMMA MU

The members of Pi Gamma Mu were entertained at a delightful Christmas party in the Honor Society Room on Monday night, December 14th.

GAMMA PSI

The members of Gamma Psi attended a Christmas party at Miss Virginia Bedford's home on Monday night, December 14th. Mary Diehl and Dorothy McNamee, members, were also present. Gifts were exchanged in the jovial Yuletide spirit.

DELTA THETA ALPHA

The members of Delta Theta Alpha attended a Yuletide party at the home of the McGlothlins on Monday night, December 14th.

B. S. U. PARTY

The Baptist Student Union gave all Baptist students a Christmas party on Saturday afternoon, December 12th, in the Student Building Lounge. After the singing of carols, Miss Rice told the story of "The Other Wise Man."

Alpha Sigma Alpha

Dinner: Miss Moran entertained the Alpha Sigma Alpha chapter in her home Sunday with a lovely Christmas dinner.

Party: On Mondy night, December 14, the Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority had a party in its chapter room. Everyone sat around the Christmas tree to unwrap Christmas gifts and enjoy the Christmas spirit.

Miss Geneva Parker of Petersburg has accepted a position as science teacher at Orange High School to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Ella Martin. Miss Parker graduated at S. T. C. last June.

Typical Night Life During Exam Week

Only one cloud looms on the S. T. C. horizon and that's—you tell us! Just maybe these girls aren't working. Flash!! Typical portrait of the night before exams—girl seated in front of tables bends diligently over work. With furrowed brow she seeks knowledge—(which is the polite way of saying "cram") laboring as she's never labored before—except this same time last year.

"Look out! Hall president! Cut those lights—wait — there, she's gone now. Lights, please! Oh, yes, he told us to be sure to know Ptolemy's theory. Oh, I hate that old egg before I've ever even seen him—why couldn't he just take the stars as they were, anyway? Didn't he know that things picked to pieces lose half their beauty? Hush—that's Martha Hamlet — snap those lights—can that radio —snore, idiot, quick—she's coming in!—Whew! That was close. She's gone now. I heard the steps creaking. Get up! We've got to finish that chapter." So, on into the wee hours of the morn the girls labor to uphold the intellectual banners of S. T. C. and then—they sleep through exams.

carpet."

On the last page there is an account of a Chapel program "Smile and the World Smiles with you." A long Christmas poem follows, and then more advertisements.

Still a few minutes left. Maybe a few headlines will give snatches of stories. Oh, here's one "Eighty More Bobbed Hairs than Long Hairs in School," and another "Four Hundred Freshmen Elect President." A November issue features a big picture of Dr. Jarman and the story of his life. And there's a whole issue, with pictures 'n everything, about the 1923 fire that destroyed the dining-room wing and dormitory—but that's another long story.

tiful places at Christmas time when beautiful thoughts, kind words, and handsome gifts are given to our friends.

It was a fit place for Jesus to lie; the people knew it and felt happy that He was there and not in that cold and lowly stable. They stepped from the church into the even stiller stillness. They saw the star and knew it shown brighter because the Christ-child was born anew in the hearts of all—that would receive Him.

Exams and Holiday Keep Girls Here

Few Leave School As the Quarter Nears End

Exams in the near future and term papers nearly due kept the heads of S. T. C. girls on books and not on trips for a change. Very few girls left school and none left to attend dances. That is a hard one to believe but true.

Week-end Guests

Nancy Woodward was the guest last week-end of Nannie Mae Parker in Cartersville.

Elizabeth Rucker visited her uncle, Mr. W. W. Rucker in Petersburg for the last few days.

Virginia Katie visited in Richmond the past week-end.

Grace Allen Pittard visited Mrs. R. W. Mallory in Emporia for the week-end.

Homeward

Girls that left school to visit their families were Virginia Baker, Virginia Read Turner, Helen Byrd Harris, Livian Powell and Kathleen Nuckols.

Richmond

Chic Dorth, Minnie Smith, Vera Ebel, Elsie Dodd, Frances Hudgins and Caroline Willis spent Saturday in Richmond.

Glee Club Gives Program of Song

Jongleurs Present a One - Act Comedy

With "Red" Blanford as master of ceremonies, the Hampden-Sydney Glee Club and Jongleurs gave a program in the S. T. C. auditorium last Saturday night, December 12.

"A Marriage Proposal", a one-act play, was given by the Jongleurs. Neville Ammen and Goston Boyle were among the boys taking part.

"The Blind Plowman" was sung by Tivis Wicker, and he also took the lead in 'Ole Man River", a sketch arranged by the club.

"The Volga Boatman," "John Peel," "What Shall We Do With a Drunken Sailor?" "and 'Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" were sung by the entire Glee Club.

Hugh White, director of the Glee Club, played several well-known selections.

After the Open Forum adjourned, a dance was given for the representatives at the K. A. house.

So you see, it's hard to tell just where we stand in the eyes of our advisers. Let's take the tip, girls. Be yourself, act as independent as you please, but remember your main purpose for being here. They like us better that way.

Each male student of Pennsylvania State College who expects his picture to appear in La Vie, the student annual, will have to erase his smile before posing for the photograph.

This is not a move to create general campus gloom. The editors have issued the order because they want all pictures to be in keeping with the tenor of the subject matter.

"Broad smiles on faces of the men will be omitted so that the general tone of the senion section will conform to the formal clothes worn," the announcement read.

SPORT SLANTS

(—By the Sport)

Basketball

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, all of these have basket ball practices! Everyone was urged to come out and play, and support her class colors. They were shamed into showing their real basket ball ability—and then were surprises right and left!! Frances Hudgins, Jennie Carroll, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Ruth Phelps, Inez Chappell and lots of other upperclassmen were "johnny on the spot" and ready to take that "ole ball" to town! And speaking of the "rats" in the "Pied Piper of Hamlin", you should have seen the "freshmen" down in the gym. They were all eager to play any position at any time. Chlotilde Jarman, Ruby Adams and those "raring, ready New Yorker's", Pat Gibson and Dotty Fisher, represented the Freshman class with "fighting spirits!" The Monday and Tuesday practices were topped off with "varsity basket ball tryout practices"! These practices were held on Thursday and Friday afternoons from four to five-thirty o'clock. If there had been a "flower" around everyone would have thought all those forms in the gym were "bees" after that one flower! But really that "flower" was the varsity squad and the "bees" were all those girls trying out for the squad! And to think that only about twenty-two of all those girls will be chosen for the squad! Each girl trying for the squad possesses certain good qualities. But does she possess enough for her to be able to move swiftly, have perfect pass work, good aim, and many other qualities that go toward making her a "good all round basket ball player?" We, as people representing all those out for basket ball know and feel confident that all those girls chosen for varsity squad will be deserving of their respective position. Here's more power to our coach, Miss Iler, to our manager, Sue Eastman, and to our A. A. president, Frances Hudgins, who are the unfortunate ones who have to choose those twenty-two girls out of the excellent material out for basket ball this year! Luck to you!

Five Girls Initiated By Monogram Club

The Monogram Club initiated the following new members on Friday night, December 11: Kathleen Bailey, Mabel Burton, Ida Sue Carter, Jennie Belle Gilliam, Irene Parker.

To be eligible for the club one has to pass the physical efficiency tests, go on a ten-mile hike, and by participation in various sports make a total of 400 points. These girls must also have a scholastic average of C for the two previous quarters.

After the initiation and a short business meeting the old and new girls were entertained by a Christmas party in the "Rec."

Hampden-Sydney Extends Holiday

All Cuts Suspended For the Coming Friday

Appearing before the Student Body on Dec. 9, Dean Walker announced the decision of the faculty, whereby Christmas holidays will begin on December 18 instead of the 22nd, as originally planned, and continue through Jan. 5, 1937. The resolution moved and carried by the faculty reads as follows: "that the Christmas holidays begin on Friday, December 18; that the regular schedule for the day be followed; and that all cuts be suspended for Friday, Dec. 18."

Before leaving the hall, Mr. Walker asked that a vote be taken to determine whether the students were willing to accept the terms of the resolution dealing with the schedule and the suspension of all cuts for Friday the 18th. Amid tumultuous excitement the resolution of the faculty was unanimously adopted by the Student Body. A rising vote of thanks was accorded the faculty.

Two main reasons have been brought forward as an explanation of the faculty's decision to lengthen the Christmas holiday. A number of boys would be able to get jobs in United States post offices during the Christmas rush if they could get home in time to begin work on the Monday before Christmas. Some boys live at such a distance from Hampden-Sydney that they would not get home until the day before Christmas if classes continued until the 22nd.

The Dean expressed the hope "that there wouldn't even be any sick calls on Friday the 18th."

Dr. Francis Carter Wood, director of the Institute of Cancer Research at Columbia University, announced recently that an international atlas on cancer, which is expected to aid materially in prevention and treatment of the disease, will be completed in about two years.

Lee Theatre Opens With New-Type Film

The Lee Theater, which has just recently been completed, opened Thursday, December 10. Its first picture featured Warner Baxter and June Lang in "The White Hunter". This theater is one of the few theaters in the state which uses the "trans-lux" films. The aisles are wide, and a good heating and cooling system is used for the comfort of its patrons. It is under the same management as the Eaco Theater.

AT THE FOOT OF BEAUTY

By Helena Rubinstein

In the past few years, we have all become increasingly conscious of our feet. Every crack between the toes ,every sign of a callous, of peeling, of roughness, seems to us the dreadful harbinger of some dire foot peril.

As a matter of fact, every crack and every callous is not necessarily serious, but, left to themselves, these slight abnormalities can cause a good deal of discomfort and embarrassment. Nor are they, to say the least, beautiful.

What to do? Well, if you are already suffering such discomfort as itching, you had better pay a prompt visit to your college doctor. If there is any infection, she will nip it in the bud. If, however, you are simply dissatisfied with the appearance of your feet and are afraid—very sensibly—of future developments, there are several things you can do.

First of all, a good deal of peeling and cracking results from careless drying of the feet. You take a bath or a shower or you go swimming and you fail to dry your feet thoroughly. The narrow interstices between the toes, which are certainly hard to get at and to dry, are too well protected by nature and by our shoes and stockings to dry of themselves. Consequently, they remain moist for hours—and are the worse for it. The skin becomes dry and loose. It scales and peels. To avoid this, you may simply need to use talcum powder after every wetting of your feet.

Waterlily deodorant talc will serve the purpose admirably. A very fine, soft talcum powder, it is an excellent dehydrating agent, as those of you who take chemistry know, and it will absorb all the moisture and dampness that haste and turkish towelling fail to reach. Waterlily deodorant talc has another valuable property which makes it particularly suitable for this purpose. It is a very good deodorant and will not only help to keep your feet in good condition, but will also keep them cool and sweet-smelling. It comes in a convenient shaker-top tin.

If, however, your feet are past the prevention stage and have already begun to crack and peel, powder alone may not be sufficient to remedy matters. You need in addition a good cream which will restore suppleness and pliancy, health and smoothness to the skin of your feet. Your pasteurized face cream is just the thing. You will find it very soothing to your feet, and its richness and smoothness will be quick to restore to sensitive, peeling skin, good condition and the beauty of health.

Honor Group Has Guest as Speaker

Miss Nichols Selects Subject Vital To Girls

At the meeting of Alpha Phi Sigma Tuesday night the regular business was dispensed with, and Miss Mamie Nichols was introduced as the guest speaker of the evening.

A subject vital to all womanhood, as well as college students was presented to an eager audience—"The Responsibility of the Women of Today."

"Our emphasis must be on what we do—not what we know. We must understand the principles upon which education is based. We must have self-dependence. We must have the ability to make a house a home. We must find the way to happiness," said Miss Nichols.

In conclusion, Dr. Meta Glass was quoted. "Play as hard as you work; give full time to what you are doing and do it well; and, above all, remember that education is larger than any institution."

Fall Magazine Issue Is Holiday Present

The fall issue of the Farmville Quarterly Review was distributed to members of the student body at lunchtime Tuesday, December 15.

The fifty-page S. T. C. magazine, with its neat blue and white cover contains the literary efforts of some of the outstanding student talent. Faculty members and alumnae are also numbered among the contributors.

Apple pie is the most popular food at New York University, according to Miss Noles, dietitian of the common lunch room.

Three freshmen at Michigan State Normal subjected themselves to turbulent stomachs in a chemistry experiment. One of them ate rock salt, the second swallowed a mixture of sand and salt, and the third digested a small amount of potassium chloride.

The fact that Alexander Franklin Wojciechowicz, Fordham's brilliant center, was such an insignificant high school freshman that his coach refused him a uniform is only one odd item about him.

Five feet eleven, and 192 pounds, he plays a bruising game and is hailed by some critics as the greatest center in Fordham grid history. One of Wojciechowicz' hobbies is crocheting. When at home, he often helps his mother make rag rugs. He likes to cook too.

But if you think that his crocheting and cooking make him soft, just talk to a few of the centers he has faced.

Student Body Hangs Greens In Rotunda

Hanging of the greens — How much does that mean to us? How many of us knew the origin of decorating trees before we went to prayers and were told about it? We also heard how Martin Luther having seen the moon shine on the trees conceived the idea of putting lighted candles on the trees. Since then we have always used lighted candles or colored lights.

As everyone came out of the auditorium, the freshmen commission handed them "greens", better known to us as spruce. The girls twined the greens around the columns and the rails in the Rotunda as they sang Christmas carols. It was impressive and made us wish even more deeply that Christmas would come on wings.

Freshman Commissi'n Has Bizaar In Rec

The annual Japanese Bizaar was held Saturday, December 12 in the "rec'" from four to six o'clock. The room was beautifully decorated with all colored crepe papers. Each member of the Commission wore Japanese attire. Kerchiefs, lounging pajamas, charm bracelets, writing paper, and change purses could be purchased.

Delicious tea was served to everyone. Home made candies were sold at the door.

The University of New York has established a reading clinic which is open to the public at a nominal fee. Research has proved that many students do not know how to read for best results, and experts have shown that there must be a rhythmic and rapid eye movement for proper reading. The University has perfected several machines which will be used to correct the reading habits of many students. Tests have shown that the most efficient readers are the most efficient workers. In one New York office the highest paid stenographer read 460 words per minute and the poorest only 273 in the same time.

Juniors Announce Annual Production

'Swingtime" Is Title Of Musical Show

AMERICA IS THEME

Greene, Jamison and Agee Direct Scenes

Under the auspices of the Junior Class, "Swingtime" will be presented on January 15, in the large auditorium at 8 p. m. A large committee has been at work for some time on the forthcoming production.

Beginning with a dance by a young American couple of the Revolutionary period, the next scenes will take the audience abroad for broadening ideas of musical trends of past years. Using as the central theme that of a great melting pot, an intricate plot has been worked out. After the melting pot has consumed these types a final scene, including everything from tophats and tails to black faces, will swing into the modern tempo which will represent the results of the preceding scenes.

For the past week rehearsals have been moving forward in a manner which is promising of good results. From this presentation one gleans a graphic picture of the true meaning of America. The first portion of the production is devoted to sentiment and romance, while the last part introduces that hilarity and freedom which belongs to young love and which is the spirit of America today.

Elsie Greene, Kitty Jamison, and Virginia Agee are in charge of the first three scenes respectively. Dancing is under the direction of Gay Stieffen. The committee for costumes is headed by Jennie Belle Gilliam, and tickets are being handled by Livian Powell. Music for the entire production is under the direction of Virginia Agee.

Y. W. Council Begins Annual Sing Contest

In the pages of our school's history we find annual accounts of exciting class competition under the headline of "Class Sings".

The Y. W. C. A. Council sponsors these outbursts of talent and awards a prize of unknown nature to the winning class, chosen by selected judges.

Those who sit in judgment this year are Mrs. Lang, Mrs. Warren and Mr. McCorkle. The amateur performances are judged on three points: originality, talent and presentation.

Beginning with the Senior performance on January 9, each class will present a sing program. After all the presentations have taken place, the judges will announce the winner.

Tributum Appears On School Campus

Local Latin Societies Dedicate Quarterly To Aviators

Jointly produced by Sodalitas Latina and Sigma Pi Rho, the Latin quarterly, The Tributum, recently made its first appearance during the current school year. This issue marked the beginning of the paper's seventh year and was dedicated to the two Wright brothers, Orville and Wilbur.

Arranged with the view of stressing aviation, a large portion of the quarterly was given to this project, tracing it from man's first attempt to fly, up to the latest improvement in aeronautics.

Another portion of the magazine was given to the recent expansion of Rome under the leadership of Benito Mussolini.

Edited by Katherine Milby with the help of her capable assistants, the Tributum should interest all students who are at all concerned with the Latin language. The quarterly has a considerable widespread distribution and has been noted with favor. The date of publication for the winter and spring quarters will be announced later and a copy of the Tributum may be secured from the business manager, Janie Lee Young, for ten cents.

Reverend J. B. Hill State Youth Leader, Makes Chapel Talk

The Reverend J. B. Hill, Richmond, State Baptist Sunday School Secretary, was brought to S. T. C. on Tuesday, January 12, by the Baptist Student Union. Reverend Hill addressed the student body in chapel Tuesday morning, and held a meeting in the Recreational Hall that afternoon.

At this time he discussed volunteer work for summer service for students.

The topic of Reverend Hill's talk Tuesday morning was "Looking at Life" or "Finding our Place in the Cosmic Forces of the Universe." He said that the first thing essential is that a person see life as it is in the world, so that he can know into what he is trying to relate his life.

Reverend Hill toured Europe last summer, passing through nine countries. He was impressed chiefly, he stated, by the great physical need of large portions of Europe, principally Poland, Russia, and Czechoslavakia.

Teachers Attend Modern Language Association Meet

Linguists Gather At Richmond For Sessions

The Modern Language Association of America, the world's largest organization of linguists and language students and teachers, held its annual convention at Richmond, Virginia, December 29, 30, and 31, 1936. Most of the sessions occurred at the John Marshall Hotel, in the city; but on the 30th the convention traveled to Williamsburg as guests of the College of William and Mary, held a business meeting in the Phi Beta Kappa Hall, and afterwards inspected the restoration of colonial Williamsburg now being carried in there. On the 31st the sessions were held in the buildings of the University of Richmond at Westhampton. As part of this great convention, there were also meetings of the national organizations of teachers of French, German, Italian, and Spanish, and of the American Association of University Professors. Farmville teachers who attended the language meetings were, Miss Helen Draper of the Department of Modern Languages, and Miss Lucile Jennings and Mr. J. M. Grainger of the Department of English. Dr. J. E. Walmsley, Mr. M. B. Coyner and Mr. Grainger also attended the Meetings of the American Association of University Professors.

The Modern Language Association devotes itself mainly to research in language, literature, and folk lore in living languages. It also publishes many books and a magazine entitled PMLA, to bring out the results of the investigations carried forward by the many groups within the Association. Being closely affiliated with organizations modern language teachers, however, it is concerned with the status of the languages in education. Some of the best in the addresses were in this field, notably the annual address of the President, Professor Carleton Brown, of New York University. President Brown deplored the decline of foreign language study and the subordination of the languages, including English, to the social studies in the present curriculum movement over the country.

Scores of papers on technical and research subjects were presented by specialists in the many sectional meetings of the convention. Among these were papers on literature in the South, the activities of folk lorists throughout the country, the tendencies in mod-

Lynchburg College Exchanges Debate With S. T. C. Jan. 16

Farmville To Uphold Affirmative Side Of Question

On Saturday evening, January 16th at eight o'clock S. T. C. will debate Lynchburg College in the small auditorium. The question for the discussion is the national Pi Kappa Delta question—Resolved, that Congress be empowered to fix maximum hours and minimum wages for industry. Farmville's affirmative team, composed of Lillian Anderson and Anthelia Robinette, will oppose the Lynchburg negative.

On the same evening the negative team will meet the Lynchburg affirmative at Lynchburg College. Ruth Sears and Pattie Bounds will support S. T. C. on the negative of this question.

At the program meeting of the Debate Club on Wednesday night practice debates will be held with Hampden-Sydney. Those girls who meet Lynchburg College on Saturday night will debate Hampden-Sydney in these non-decision discussions.

Pi Gamma Mu Opens Series of Programs On Social Customs

Pi Gamma Mu began a series of programs on a new topic Tuesday night. The organization decided that it would be interesting to know something of the different customs and holidays that play such an important part in our society today.

The first program centered around the different marriage customs. Ruth Crumley gave an interesting report on the beginnings of the many customs. Ann Galusha discussed those in the many lands. Among the countries she mentioned were Russia, China, and Abyssina. A round-table discussion followed the talks of the two speakers.

Shrubs Are Planted; Painting Completed

Eyes of returning students were greeted with changes in the college plant made during the Christmas holidays for beautification of buildings and campus.

The planting of shrubbery was the most noticeable improvement. Around the front of Cunningham Hall as well as on the front campus evergreens and Scotch Broom have been set.

Doll Shop Is Scene of Stunt As Seniors Portray Toys

All was black, while the bong, bong, of the midnight chime rang out. Suddenly, a light flashed on revealing the interior of a doll shop wherein every imaginable kind of doll was placed about. The Dionne Quints sat in a row on the counter. Ragged Ann and Raggedy Andy stood side by side with a Spanish Seniorita and Madame Butterfly. Little Black Sambo and his elephant drooped beneath the proverbial umbrella under the stares of a china doll and a Dutch maiden. A poor broken dolly lay on the couch with her stuffings all out, while two langorous, luxurious French dolls sprawled at her feet.

A mouse must have run out of the clock for it scampered about the shop winding up the various toys to see what would happen. Shirley Temple sang "The Good Ship Lollypop;" Rosie danced, as did the Tin Soldier; the Jumping Jack nearly hit the ceiling; the baby doll could crawl and wail, "Mamma."

The Whistlin' Doll lived up to her name and the Drummer drummed.

Suddenly, the strains of the "Wedding of the Painted Doll" called forth dainty bride and pompous groom to their never ending wedding march. The Jack in the Box let go with a squall, nearly frightening the other dolls stiff.

Without warning the shopkeeper appeared, bringing order out of pandemonium and frightening the little mouse away. Thus the curtains closed on the annual Senior Sing which is the first to be presented in the customary contest.

Susan Lane Will Be Queen At Fete

Susan Lane will reign at Mardi Gras ball.

Eight Princesses Of Mardi Gras Are Elected

STUDENTS CHOOSE

Pi Gamma Mu Is the Sponsor For the Masquerade

Susan Lane, Altavista, Virginia, is the students' choice for the reigning beauty of the annual Mardi Gras masquerade ball, to be given on February 9. Eight girls will attend Queen Lane as her court.

At an election held on Thursday, January 7, a list of eighteen girls' names was presented to the student body for the election of a Mardi Gras queen and court. Susan Lane was chosen queen, while the court of eight girls will be composed of Mary Bowles, Petersburg; Elizabeth Butler, Norfolk; Elsie Dodd, Richmond; Jennie Belle Gilliam, Petersburg; Lucille Moseley, Newport News; Carter Belle Munt, Petersburg; Isabel Plummer, Petersburg; and Nan Seward, Petersburg.

The dance to be held on Tuesday, February 9, in the gym, will be the fifth annual affair of this kind given by Pi Gamma Mu, social science honor society. Members of the society and the May Queen were eliminated as nominees for the court.

The queen and princesses will be escorted by princes of their own selection, preferably from other colleges.

Those admitted to the dance floor must be costumed and masked according to rules to be published next week. After the coronation of the queen the masked participants will join in a Grand March around the gym so that their costumes may be judged. Prizes of some value will be awarded to the most attractive couple, the most original costume, and the prettiest costume.

A limited number of tickets will be printed and sold sometime in the near future. They will be distributed to students first.

Student Body Has Monthly Meeting

Miss Mary White Cox Talks On Duties Of Girls

The danger of losing individuality through "following the crowd" was the opening thought of a talk given the Student Body by Miss Mary White Cox, Head of the Home, at a meeting held January 11. "One of the important things at college," Miss Mary said, "is to develop character and propensity to do the right thing regardless of what others do."

After expressing appreciation to the girls for greeting cards received during the holidays, Miss Mary gave a resume of ways in which the students have become careless and neglectful. "Many of the things you do," she said, "are not wrong, but are unbecoming." Table manners have become lax. The tendency is to eat before others and leaving the table early, causing confusion and showing selfish disregard for others.

More and more girls cut campus, endangering the lawn, while walks have been provided to prevent muddy shoes. Halls are looking ill-kept, with peelings and papers scattered about. Habits of careless and slovenly dress and speech in the dining room and classrooms have been noticed and disapproved.

Miss Mary brought out the fact that promptness would make this a well-ergulated school. "Be on time to meals, to classes, to study, to church," she requested. During the study hour, radios should be low and busy signs regarded.

Seniors were asked not to unlock the door to Cunningham Hall

WE HEREBY RESOLVE

New Year Resolutions! Hhe air is full of them, broken and otherwise. The problem is to find a set you can keep longer than the first week of January.

There is a list which we have compiled from a review of requests, pleas, and commands which have been meted out to us during 1936.

If we could take all these resolutions and roll them up into one big resolution what a great resolution that would be. And if we keep it, what a great year 1937 will be.

1. I will get to the dining room before the doors close and not leave until after the announcements are read.

2. At night I will keep my radio low and my mouth shut in hopes that the person next door is really studying.

3. I will get my mail in time to read it before chapel starts.

4. I will insist that I stand up while singing the hymn and not bang my seat down during the "Amen."

5. I will not hasten away early for a holiday, nor will I stay away a couple of days overtime.

6. I will get up for breakfast each morning so that my head won't ache, and I can save some money.

7. I will not make unreasonable requests of the Home Department and then get mad when they are refused.

7. I will not take popcorn and peanuts into the theatre for the benefits of rats, endangering my nerves and the new stuffed seats.

Seniors:

9. I will attend chapel on Saturday no matter how hungry I am.

Intercollegiate

A student at Hobart College, pursuing a theoretical course in a practical way, entered a new course in criminology and took his home-work so seriously that he was arrested for giving the registrar a bad check, for cashing two other "hot" checks and for looting a fraternity house.

Every man has his day! At least the "ugliest man" will soon reign over T. C. U.'s campus as "King (Kong) for a day." Campus queens, crowns, beauty and femininity have reigned on every campus, but not at Texas Christian. At least one day has been set aside on the student colendar of activities to pay tribute to masculinity and ugliness.

"A freshman is a charming contradictory species of homo sapiens, living parasitically on a college for four years. He is confused when others are laughing, and confuses others when he laughs. He is continually calling a senior a freshman and vice-versa. He gets homesick and admits it.

"He fluctuates between the girl back home and a peach of a blond in school, until he realizes that a girl on the campus is worth two back west. Then he is adolescent no longer—he is a sophomore."

In answer to the question, "If you were suddenly given a college to do with as you pleased, what would you do with it?" we have the following from a number of Barnard students:

1. Oh boy! I'd abolish examinations.
2. Have no classes before 11 o'clock in the morning.
3. I'd make the profs answer questions for a change.
4. I'd give all snap courses. Give the poor kids a break.
5. I'd sell the college to the highest bidder and sail on the first boat for a trip around the world.

"Johnny Student", as panned by Fannie Hurst:

"Today's undergraduate is alert, sophisticated, in-on-the-know, intelligent, clever, cynical, sure. He is not burdened with a sense of humor, he entertains self-pity, he thinks the world owes him a living, he is understandable apprehensive, he is prompted to drop his piece of meat for what he sees reflected in the water. He is not inclined to properly evaluate the country in which he has played no pioneering part. He does not believe in Santa Claus." But, what's her opinion against ours?

And now a treatise on MEN:

A-men: Said at end of prayer.
B-men: As in "her eyes were beamin".
C-men: Sailors.
D-men: Devils.
E-men: Virile, masculine men (English).
F-men: Not good enough to be G-men.
G-men: Heroes of movie thrillers.
H-men: Men employed by alphabet soup makers to pick up dropped English H's.
I-men: Columnists.

Dear Editor:

Who said there wasn't any Santa Claus? Whoever it was certainly couldn't have seen the bundle of surprises he left in the Town Girls' Room during our Christmas holidays.

If you ever longed and wished for something with all your heart, but doubted all along that your fond dreams would come true, and then had those dreams to materialaze right before your eyes— you know how we Town Girls felt during our first entrance into our remodeled room.

The first miracle to greet our surprised eyes was the rejuvenated floors, shined, polished and waxed to such a degree of perfection that even Fred Astaire could not complain. Who could blame us for madly running around and congratulating each other just as if we had each and every one contributed a little dab of paint or polish!

In the midst of the excited "Ohs," and "Ahs" and "Aren't you proud?" our eyes fell upon our new cabinet, and the "Ohs" and "Ahs" increase to a confusion of unintelligible babbling. No one knows how much this cabinet for our coats and miscellaneous paraphernalia means to us unless he or she has ever been entirely without a place to deposit such apparel. Besides this, have you noticed the difference it makes in the general appearance of the room not to see coats, headgear, or galoshes flopped in every available vacant spot?

Then, we notice with joy that there's something gone that used to be there. Oh yes, it's the dressers, of course, and in their place we have an attractive console mirror!

Will miracles never cease? Apparently not, for we have also additional lighting—not to mention three new chairs! What a difference it makes to be able to study in our room and not acquire a nice headache with the book knowledge.

Truly there must be a Santa Claus, or at least someone who is doing his work perfectly. The Town Girls wish to extend to our kind benefactor their heartfelt appreciation. Incidentally, we've each made a New Year's resolution to keep this new second home of ours just as attractive as possible.

(Signed) Town Girls

Rotunda Reverberations

Back again—and it doesn't even seem like there ever was a day called Christmas. Of course there are the after effects, such as seeing a lot of gold bracelets, rings, etc., adorning the girls' arms and fingers, and others smelling sweet from an over stock of perfumes, powders and lipsticks. Save it, my child. The day is coming when you won't have any, and Christmas is 342 days away.

Miracles are still happening—Minnie Smith (our queen of the May) walked in the Rotunda the other day and there she beheld her hero of two years back. Minnie blushed and he did too—in fact they had a blushing good time.

Did you know that Ruth Chambers has been so hungry since she got back that she's been sleeping with her mouth open in hopes that some person will take pity on her and drop a piece of something in? Just like a canary! And there's Micoo Snead who sits in her room all Sunday afternoon waiting for her country cousin. I'm told he didn't show up. Kat Cox ponders daily on the subject of how can she wait for two years—'spose you didn't even have a prospect? Cheer up kid. What was that Susan Lane was hiding behind the piano in the student building lounge late Sunday afternoon? Surely it wasn't a ham sandwich. If so, I'll take one too.

If you've seen girls in huddles for the last few days, you've guessed what they were talking about — grades — stop thinking about last quarter now and study hard this quarter. Don't worry Charlotte and Mary B. All we can say is we told you so about a certain class.

When some of us came back to school we left our manners at home. When girls get old enough to live in the Senior Building, it's time they were learning to thank people for favors bestowed upon them. After all we don't get paid to walk up two and three flights of steps just to tell you some one wants to see you.

And as for you, Mr. King Kong —we hope your disposition has improved since the holidays—it must have been your nerves that were over strained.

A 1937 Prophetess by Leray Victor Cleveland

"It's going to be a lovely year,
I know!
She was a small, frail thing, about seventeen,
Who said it, And the graces bowed and smiled.
She took the new year's calendar and turned to go. I touched my hat, said:
"Pardon me!
I overheard your words. Please tell me, friend,
How can you know what sort the year will be?"
She looked at me, What was there in her eye—
Deep pity, kindness, or the love of God?
She paused in quiet thought, as if to think
Just how to tell; whether to tell at all.
And then she spoke. Her words kept haunting me.
She laughed, "I am no prophet, that is true.
But still", she said, "I know that years are days,
And only days. So all I have to do to make so long a time all beautiful,
Is just to take one day and make it so,
and then another, till the year is gone!"
To her, it is a simple thing like that!
Why can't I have a lovely year myself?

The Million-Copy Books

(From the Birmingham News)

Margaret Mitchell's best seller, Gone With The Wind, has sold a million copies in six months. It is the first book to pass the million mark in this country in ten years, the last one being The Outline of History, by H. G. Wells, published in 1926, and credited with 1,200,000 sales.

According to an article in The Literary Digest, there are only 22 books on record as having sold a million or more copies in this country. The list, with the year of publication and the number of copies sold, is as follows:

1875—Tom Sawyer, by Mark Twain—1,500,000.
1877—Black Beauty, by Anna Sewell—1,000,000.
1880—Ben Hur, by Lew Wallace—1,950,000.
1881—Five Little Peppers and How They Grew, by Margaret Sidney—1,090,000.
1884—Huckleberry Finn, by Mark Twain—1,000,000.
1894—Treasure Island, by Robert Louis Stevenson—1,000,000. Trilby, by George du Maurier—1,000,000.
1899—In His Steps, by Charles Monroe Sheldon—8,000,000.
1900—David Harum by Edward Noyes Wescott—1,200,000.
1902—The Virginian, by Owen Wister—1,454,000.
1903—The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come, by John Fox—1,000,100.
1904—Story of the Bible, by Jesse Lyman Hurlburt—1,321,000.
1909—Trail of the Lonesome Pine, by John Fox—1,255,000. Girl of the Limberlost, by Gene Stratton Porter—1,-600,000.
1911—The Harvester, by Gene Stratton Porter—1,000,000. The Winning of Barbara Worth, by Harold Bell Wright—1,500,000.
1913—Laddie, by Gene Stratton Porter—1,500,000. Pollyanna, by Eleanor H. Porter—1,000,000.
1917—The Call of the Wild, by Jack London—1,472,000.
1926—The Outline of History, by H. G. Wells—1,200,000.
1936—Gone With the Wind, by Margaret Mitchell—1,000,-000.

This list makes an interesting study. There are some books on it of outstanding literary merit, but they are comparatively few. One conclusion to be reached from the list is that the public likes above all, an entertaining story. Just as in the theatre "the play's the thing," so in fiction, so far as the public is concerned, the story's the thing.

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By VIRGINIA AGEE

It seems strange to be back in school again after the joyousness of the Christmas season. There has been much talk of homesickness and far-away loves, but it is merely an illusion. This is the beginning of a new year—of new hopes—of new chances. This is the time to start in on those books with a display of beautiful workmanship instead of lamenting the low grades made last quarter. Start in all over again and prove to yourself, if to none else, that "you have something there" and that you mean to get a little use out of it. Christmas is gone now —it died with the Old Year—so forget it and all that was associated with it—. Baby New Year is thirteen days old today: have you accomplished anything at all since the day of his birth?

Of course, none on earth expects you to forget 1936 and all the joys and pains; triumphs and sorrows that might have gone with it. 1936 is an old friend—a dear friend —who left this earth for some better place, and who left behind it a wealth of happy memories filled with breath-taking moments of ecstasy—and the clouds that darkened our lives for a second, yet made us realize that "every cloud must have a silver lining". Remember the sweet things, the joyous things that make life worth living—forget those things that cause furrows above the eyebrows and any altogether unhappy countenance. For youth is for living—and living is for happiness.

We should be more than glad that we are Americans, and that on 12:00 of December 31, 1936 we welcomed an American New Year's Baby. Think of the poor unfortunates who are tossed in the middle of political, economic, and social strife in other countries of the world. We are speaking mainly of Spain—of her hundreds of inhabitants who heard no tidings of the New Year except through the thunder of war guns. Think of the Russians and Germans who are prohibited the privilege of celebrating the New Year. Think of all the war rumblings in Europe and thank God we are citizens of the United States of America—and that we won't be dragged into war that will mean the suffering and agitation and tears that are a part of war.

* * *

In our school life we have many things to look forward to in this glad New Year. We have Mardi Gras—a colorful pageant—dance adopted from the Creole district, New Orleans; Founder's Day — when we see and welcome back to the portals girls who have been gone from us long years, and girls who have been gone—not so long; Spring Cotillion—with its formal yet gay atmosphere; May Day—when we see beauty and grace and color combined with perfection of music and the dance; graduation that means triumph and sorrow—the Senior Class—our friends and companions leaving us to conquer new worlds of their own. What a year to look into—is there any cause to look behind into the past?—of course not—keep your eyes forward!!!

The Junior Production is to be presented Friday night. The name is fascinating — don't miss Swingtime. The entire Junior Class is working en masse to make it a success—and that is something!

And so—keep your eyes and mind ahead—keep your chin up—when in doubt lead trumps. Perhaps this poem will keep you when you're "heart-sick," discouraged and tired, and nothing seems right anywhere—

"Four things a man must learn to do
If he would keep his record true.
To think without confusion clearly;
To love his fellow-man sincerely;
To act from honest motives purely;
To trust in Heaven and God securely."

Mornings Find Girls Sleepy As Christmas Habits Linger

"Twas the week after Christmas and all through the school
Not a creature was keeping the "rise-early" rule.

With groans and stifled ejaculations, eyelids are lifted, as hands grope wildly for that darned alarm clock which seems to have been clanging half the night. A sleepy roommate is dragged out of bed, and greeted with, "What time did you get in—oh, quick tell me what you got for Christmas", to which the rather irate reply comes—"Uothing, why did you wake me up?"

"Nothing! Why you told me you knew you were getting a fur coat."

"Oh, yes, the fur coat. And oh, yes, Tommy gave me the cutest, fitted evening bag." Sleep is once more forgotten, as heads get together to reminisce over fifteen days of the grandest times.

Christmas is gone, but not forgotten, as we hear echoes of "—no less than eleven dances!" or "Dot said that her date told her that Phil said—", and "Christmas night at the Club beat all", in addition to—"Betty got the cutest cedar chest, but she says—".

Wild gabbling is interrupted by the 8:20 bell, as freshmen and seniors alike, stumble over overflowing suitcases to snatch at any available book to try their luck at remembering what they've forgotten over Christmas.

Some teachers give us little cards to fill out, and dismiss us, while others keep us a little longer to see if we really do still know anything.

Screams of "Janey, honey, gosh, it's good to see you" are accompanied by hugs and more conversation—loud, fast, and furious.

Two little freshmen tear past, looking rather wild-eyed and bewildered, and stopping only to wail, "Have you by any chance seen a black overnight bag and a piece of tan airplane luggage? We have two bags, but they are not ours, and one is locked while the other is full of size eight shoes," and off they go, to see if Aunt Lucy would know anything about them.

Comes the study hour, and once more girls settle down to hear about Nancy, who got in on the 1:30 and had to run over to Main to wake Martha up for an electric light bulb—"on account of hers had burnt out," and Judy, whose roommate had the key to her closet so that she had to borrow some P. J.'s.

And so, far into the night. Christmas is over, that is, all but the shouting.

Harmony Fills Halls As Juniors Practice

"Every time it rains, it rains pennies from Heaven!" The chorus echoed through the halls. Now the voices were getting sentimental with "I've got you under my skin." Perfect harmony mixed with complete rhythm! In other words, the coming Junior Production.

Majority of Girls Remain at School

Students Take Rest From Week-end Traveling

The S. T. C. social calender was given a rest this week-end and a majority of the girls spent their time recuperating from the holidays or making up for lost time with the boys from the hill.

Victoria Gillette was the week-end guest of Dorothy Price at her home in Brookneal.

Louise and Marguerite Faulconer returned to their home at Amherst to visit their parents.

Ann Moore spent the past week-end in Roanoke where she attended her sister's wedding.

Estelle Smith and Ruby Parson visited at Stony Creek the past week-end.

Gwen Dunton visited her sister, Mrs. R. S. Baldwin in Pamplin for several days.

Bernice Copley was the guest last week-end of the D. T. Wrenns in Kenbridge.

Mrs. T. R. Peters, of Roanoke, had as her guest last week Doris Fanper.

Before they even settled at school the following girls packed their scanties and returned home for the week-end. They were Virginia Price, Martha Meade Hardaway, Alice Gayle Ferguson, Frances Bryant, Louise Davis and Dorothy Harman.

Jennie Rock spent the last week-end at Worsham.

Cassie Boswell visited in Burkeville for several days.

Elizabeth Ball spent the past week-end in Richmond.

Miss Mary Has Tea In Lounge Honoring Former Assistant

Miss Mary White Cox entertained at tea in the Student Building lounge on Wednesday afternoon from four until five-thirty in honor of Mrs. Virginia Potts Redhead, alumna of S. T. C. and formerly Miss Mary's secretary.

Guests were faculty members and friends. Mrs. Bessie Jamison poured tea, assisted by Miss Pauline Camper and Mrs. Hallie Laing. A salad plate was served by Misses Jane Royall, Bonnie Lane, Virginia Bean, Chic Dortch, Mary Bowles, Selma West, and Sarah Hayes.

Dorothy Wise entertained at the piano during the afternoon.

The lounge was decorated with cut flowers.

Alpha Sigma Tau Is Entertained at Tea

Misses Margaret Bailey, Gay Stieffen and Margaret Pittard entertained the members of Alpha Sigma Tau sorority at a formal tea on Sunday afternoon, January 10, at five o'clock. A delicious salad course with iced tea was served by the hostess.

Besides the active members, other guests included Miss Virginia Bedford, faculty adviser and member, and Miss Mary Nichols, faculty member.

Announcement

On Saturday, January 16, there will be a state B. S. U. Council Retreat held at the Farmville Baptist church.

There will be representatives from the B. S. U. Councils from a number of schools in our state. This will be a business meeting, discussing the calendar of events for the rest of the year.

The meeting opens at 10:30 a. m. Saturday. Everyone is invited and especially all Baptist girls.

Mardi Gras Fete Challenges Imaginations Of Costumers

Colorful Materials Inspire Unique Plans

So you're puzzled over what you are going to wear to Mardi Gras—that gay, masquerade ball where the tender beauty and graces of the old South live again. You want to make it an affair that will rival the splendor and color of that grand festival at New Orleans. During the next month you might want to make one of these for the big occasion:

A middle European peasant costume, incarnating gaiety, lightheartedness, and the holiday spirit. It has a short peasant jacket of black wool over a flower-printed silk dress with full, gathered skirts. Instead of a black wool jacket, maybe you prefer one white silk with peasant embroidery of all colors. Tie your head up in a flowered cotton kerchief.

Maybe you'd like to be a modern Minerva and react the grandeur-that-was-Rome in a white crepe draped in gathered folds to the floor and caught at the waist with a gold cord. The cowl neck may be caught with two rhinestones, and the sleeves fall in sculptured folds. To make the costume complete, wear a pair of Roman sandals with their saw-tooth bands of gold kid stitched across and down their black satin surfaces. The wide angle band, laced up in front, should encircle only the neatest of well-turned ankles.

If the looking glass of Alice in Wonderland reflected such an enchanting person as the story relates, there is no reason why your mirror can't reflect a lovelier and more enchanting Alice planning for a modern Wonderland. The frock would be very simple to make—choose several yards of some flower-printed material, and make it with a tight-fitting waist having big—oh so big—puffed sleeves; and don't skimp on the material that you put in the skirt for the fuller it is the prettier.

Salaam to astern indolence: velvet pajamas, green as the Agha Khan's emeralds, and a brocade coat of green and gold. Comb your hair this is well-suited for a dark-haired person) back off the face and curl it in three large rolls at the back of the head. Large gold-colored ear-rings and two or three heavy gold-colored bracelets will make you more picturesque for your part as an Oriental lady.

Maybe you're romantic and dream of gypsies dancing under a full moon to the crying of violins over "Dark Eyes". If you are, a gypsy costume for you—a short, sort of bolero, velvet jacket over a white crepe blouse with long, flowing sleeves caught at the wrist. The skirt comes to the middle of the leg, and is a gypsy-like version of the modern swing skirt. It is white trimmed at the bottom with a wide band of black. Add a red kerchief for your head and a pair of large, brightly-colored earrings and the costume will be complete.

An old Southern colonial dress is very beautiful for the affair. A taffeta, draped low over the shoulders with a rose at the front, a tight fitting waist, and a billowy skirt, is typical of the period. Maybe your grandmother can make some "hoops" to make the skirts sit out, or maybe there are some among the heirlooms of your family.

It will be fun to sew and contrive costumes for this big occasion, even if you don't agree with me when you've sewed a sleeve in wrong and there are yards upon yards of material that you don't know what to do with—it'll all come out right in the end; and when it's all over, you'll say it was the grandest affair you've ever been to.

Class Games Are Under System

Varsity Players Are Now Ineligible For Teams

The series of Class basket-ball games which are played every year will be worked under a new system this year. No girl on the varsity basket-ball squad will be able to play in these intra-mural games. In this way every girl that goes out for her class team will stand more chance of playing.

Games will be played off possibly sometime in February. Intra-Mural games are played between the green and white and red and white class teams. The winning teams receive points toward the winning of the color cup. A set number of practices is required in order to play in class games. The schedule of practices is posted on the A. A. Bulletin board.

Negro Conference Closes Session

Resolutions Define Social, Economic Problems

Problems affecting the judicial, economic and political equality of Negroes were aired at length yesterday in the second day's session of the National Conference on the Problems of the Negro and Negro Youth, held in the auditorium of the Department of Labor under the auspices of the National Youth Administration.

Under the leadership of William Hastie, Assistant Solicitor in the Department of Interior, and Walter White, General Secretary of the National Urban League, means whereby members of the Negro race might bring their combined strength and influence to bear on adjustments of these inequalities were discussed.

The conference, which ends today, will formulate recommendations for submission to the President. Between sixty and seventy outstanding Negro leaders from many sections of the country are in attendance.

Yesterday's guest speaker was Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Treasury and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the National Youth Administration.

Describing the work of that agency in treating the depression-born problems of young people, she said that often the immediate task of administration obscured fundamental principles to the end that they inadvertently were ignored or circumvented in operation.

"Such splendid conferences as the one you are holding now," she added, "are of inestimable value to us. For they serve to bring us back again to those fundamental principles and problems upon which all our work is predicated."

Mr. White outlined the legislative program of the National Urban League, pointing out that many of its features are identical in purpose with those sought by the conference. Declaring that more and more encouragement was being found in gaining recognition for the program, he added:

"I have been familiar with national administrations in Washington ever since the time of Wilson. I have never seen a time when there was as much willingness to do something for the Negro as there is now.

"But we must stop being afraid. We must have courage enough to determine the things we want and to work and strive tirelessly for their achievement. We must strike now to avail ourselves of the opportunities that are before us."

Various speakers from the floor contributed to the discussion.

Today's program, which concludes the conference, will be featured by a talk by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace at the morning session which begins at 10 o'clock.

Recommendations of the committees considering the four major problems on the conference agenda will be heard and discussed at the afternoon session, following which will be adjournment.

SPORT SLANTS

(—By the Sport)

Basketball—Say it with a song. It can be done and we're doing it!
"It's a builder-upper—"
In the gym in the sun-light
You will practice all those charms.
"Ah, sweet mystery of basketball.
Now that you're back in circulation—
We've got you under our skin.
We think we've "got something here"—, but
One never knows, does one?

"It's in the air"—that game of basketball. The varsity squad has been chosen and we expect great things of our team this year, and we feel sure that they won't disappoint us. Basketball practices are held four afternoons a week, and so there's no reason for anyone to get behind in practices. Don't forget your class games. They are very near at hand and remember—the best team always wins.

You should just come out and see our "basketball products". The latest things in style and the last word in coiffure make us think of "Paris in the Spring". Frances Hudgins, with a ducky little bandanna handkerchief on her head took us back to the days of "Uncle Time". But best of all you should have taken a peep under that bandanna, for what to my wondering eyes should appear but lovely ringlets, my dear. Putting all styles and fashions out of our mind, we see those girls on the basketball team that show true form, and skill, and along with all this we find good sportsmanship, which is a true chaarcteristic of all our players. Please everyone come out and support your class colors. Practices will be held on the following days.

Day	Varsity practice
Monday—5 o'clock	General 4 o'clock
Tuesday—4 o'clock	5 o'clock
Wednesday—4 o'clock	5 o'clock
Thursday—5 o'clock	4 o'clock

Everyone watch the bulletin board for schedule of practices. We dedicate the following song to all girls going out for basketball. Just a reminder.

One, Two—Practice Ball

One, two get off my shoe.
Get right after that ball—
That's the game we play
When we practice ball.

Thee, four, shoot some more
Hurry for heaven's sake
We count each point you make
While you're playing ball.

Five, six, we have our tricks
So be careful with that ball.
Seven, eight, don't make a mistake
We've got to make those goals.

Nine, ten, we've got to get in
And show the pep we've got Old S. T. C.'s the spot—
For good basketball.

Hobby Guild Urges Students to Join

Group Recommends Best Literature To Members

The necessity of coordinating the various cultured interests which occupy the leisure time of modern America has brought about the establishment of a national association known as The Hobby Guild of America, with headquarters at 11 West 42nd Street, New York, N. Y. The announcement by the executives of the new group encompasses a complete program for the keener enjoyment and appreciation of all hobbies.

The word "hobby" is interpreted in its widest sense to include every interest which absorbs the nation's leisure. In order to acquaint members of the organization with the best literature available on their subject, authorities in each field recommend the most worthy and authoritative volumes as they are published. These recommendations are included in a periodical known as the Hobby Rider's Guide.

Free membership in The Hobby Guild is granted to all students of recognized schools, colleges and universities in the United States. A discount of 20 percent or book dividends equalling 20 percent of the purchases made from the guild is offered to purchasers of all books.

We invite all enthusiasts to join our essay contest on "The Enjoyment of My Hobby." Essays should not exceed 300 words.

Prizes for the winning entries will be:

1st Prize—$50.00 in books of winner's own choice.

2nd Prize—$25.00 in books of winner's own choice.

3rd Prize—$25.00 in books of winner's own choice.

In addition, 25 books listed at $2.50 each, will be awarded to those essays which receive honorable mention.

We are interested in hearing from you in reference to your hobby or other cultural interests and shall be pleased to forward our free membership prospectus.

Liberty Announces All-Player Eleven

All-American Eleven Is Selected By Poll

An All-Players All-America eleven, selected by the players themselves, is announced in the current Liberty magazine.

This unique selection, the last of the season, was taken among 1,498 varsity players from every part of the country. Conducted for Liberty magazine by Norman L. Sper, the poll was taken after each game when the players rated their opponents on the fundamentals of play. No "experts" were called in for advice, the winning players being named by the men they played against in 879 first-ranking games.

Dr. J. H. Franklin Will Speak Here In Peace Campaign

Seminary President Joins Anti-War Drive

300 MEETS HELD

Franklin Was Pastor And Foreign Secretary

Dr. James Henry Franklin, president of the Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pennsylvania, will appear in the S. T. C. auditorium on Monday night, January 25. Dr. Franklin will speak for the Emergency Peace Campaign as a part of a nation-wide drive for peace education.

Dr. Franklin is one of more than 300 nationally known speakers who are volunteering their services of approximately 1500 meetings which are being held in 500 of the nation's most important cities as a part of the Emergency Peace Campaign's mobilization to "keep the United States out of war, and war out of the world."

Ordained a Baptist minister in 1896, Dr. Franklin served as pastor of the Leadville, Colo. church from 1898 to 1901, and served at Cripple Creek from then until 1904. He was pastor of the First Church, Colorado Springs, Colo., from 1906 to 1912.

For two years prior to his assuming the pastorate at Colorado Springs, Dr. Franklin was secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, and from 1912 to 1934, was foreign secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. He has been president of Crozier Theological Seminary since that time. He presided at the Northern Baptist Convention in 1935 and 1936, and is a member of the International Missionary Council; the Committee of Direction in the Department of International Justice and Good Will, Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. He was awarded the Legion of Honor from France, and is author of "In the Trace of the Storm" and "The Never Failing Light."

Dr. Franklin was educated at Richmond College, Virginia, and Southern Baptist Theological Seminayr where he received the degree of Th. M. in 1898. He received the degree of D. D. from the University of Denver in 1909, and also from Brown University in 1922. In 1925, he received the degree of LL. D. from the University of Richmond.

S. T. C. Juniors Give "Swing Time"

Present Dancing And Music of Many Countries

As the curtain on the stage of the S. T. C. auditorium parted at 8:05 p. m. Friday night the Junior Class Presentation of "Swing Time" began under dark blue lights. The production lasted for approximately one and one-half hours. The audience was composed in the greater part of S. T. C. students, although a number of H.-S. C. boys were present.

"Swing Time" was composed of the music and dancing from many lands which assimilated in forming the swing of today. The first scene exhibited the European music used in Colonial America, illustrated by the minuet. Scene two opened the pages of music in the European Nations. Scotland's "Highland Fling;" for Italy, "Rose in Her Hair," from the motion picture "Broadway Gondolier;" Russia's "Gypsy Song"; Austria's "Blue Danube"; and France's "Wine Song". Each of the above was illustrated by singing, or dancing suited to the respective country.

Scene three took the form of minstrel, with the entire Junior class dressed in black tuxedoes or black coats and shorts, on the stage. The end singers were dressed in green, yellow, orange and red. Among the modern tunes sung by the chorus were "Shoe Shine Boy", "Pennies from Heaven," "The Way You Look Tonight"

Imaginations Hold Full Sway As Midnight Hours Approach

The long halls are quiet—most of the lights are out and the radios off, suggesting that everyone is asleep.

Suddenly a terrified scream rends the air, followed by another and another as other voices join the first. Doors fly open as if by magic, and sleepy-headed girls with cream besmeared faces and hair rolled up appear in the hall. Looking at one another in a dazed way they ask where the noise comes from.

Again shrill shrieks pierce the air, and running feet are heard. The girls all rush down the hall from where the screams have come. As they turn the corner they see a group of trembling girls huddled together in the hall. When they join the group a regular hub-bub arises as they inquire the cause of the screams and the frightened girls explain that something ("someone" others exclaim more emphatically) tapped on their window.

The girls move slowly toward the room on whose window the midnight visitor tapped. Timidly, they peep in the door, clutching each other frantically, then run back into the hall. Again they approach the room—this time a few of the more adventuresome step cautiously over the door sill. One out of sheer bravado crosses to the window and looks out. Seeing nothing unusual, she laughs at her frightened companions who now, too, enter the room, but cannot be prevailed on to go back to bed in the room. Gathering a few articles, they quickly leave the room and go to spend the night with some friend. Again quiet reigns as the last girl creeps back to her room, puts up the windows, lower the shades, puts a chair against the door, and snaps out the light.

Mistick Krewe Holds Sway Over Mardi Gras Festivities

With Mardi Gras less than a month off, and excitement and anticipation going hand in hand to hasten the days, it is fitting that we turn back to the early 100's to Louis Philippe in all his splendor, Paris with its gayety and her daughter city, New Orleans.

Our first hint of Mardi Gras comes to us from Byron, whose words:

For some say ,ere Shrove
Tuesday comes about,
The people take their fill of recreation,
With fiddling, revels, feasting, fun and mashing . . .

depict the significance of the colorful parades and masked balls of "gay Paree".

The sons of fashionable Louisiana were sent to Paris for their education, and thus they brought its brilliancy and jollity back with them.

The carnival started with a colorful parade known as a "marscarade" which included huge, grotesque looking figures, many times their natural size and wound up with a "grand mask and fancy dress ball.

As the years went by, Mardi Gras became more elaborate, and with the introduction of scenes on floats, came the inauguration of tableux by various secret societies such as The Twelfth Night Revelers, and the "Mistick Krewe."

The Krewe's identity and purpose was always a mystery to the townsfolk, and so this public display was the subject of much speculation and curiosity.

Following the grand march through the streets, the Krewe and the elite of Louisiana repaired to one of the foremost theatres of the Crescent City, where the Krewe, still vested in its outlandish garb, presented their four tableaux dealing with the supernatural. At their conclusion, the audience crowded upon the dance floor, the Krewe disbanded and mingling with the dancers, proved themselves courtly gentlemen, as well as goriest devils.

After that, each year brought in something more elaborate in the way of tableaux, and some of the most spectacular of these were: The Aeniad, Spenser's Faeris Kueen, Mother Goose's Tea Party, and The Arabian Nights.

We too, have our pageants, but outstanding among the reveiries of Mardi Gras, is that climax event which we too, will celebrate—the Masked Ball, where ladies dance with devils, laughing eyes sparkle behind masks, and the Mistick Krewe holds full sway at Mardi Gras.

Baptist Church is Scene of Retreat

Eight Students Are Representatives of S. T. C.

The State Baptist Student Union held a Council Retreat at the Farmville Baptist church on Saturday. Dolly Ball, Evelyn Beale, Sara Melba Beale, Adelaide Dressler, Evelyn Hastings, India Martin, Virginia Pilcher and Nellie Putney represented S. T. C.

The meeting, which continued from 10:30 in the morning until late afternoon, was opened by Dr. Cecil Cooke with a devotional service. Following Dr. Cooke, Reverend John B. Hill addressed the body, using as his theme "Duties of the Officers Held by Council Members." "The end," Reverend Hill emphasized, "is largely determined by the spirit of the beginning."

Ranson Duke of William and Mary contributed suggestions for the year's activities, stressing the fact that "the most potential things in life are the spiritual."

The meeting was pleasingly climaxed by the decision that this year's state convention of the B. S. U. would be held in Farmville. Virginia Pilcher was appointed to the state committee created to investigate ways and means of sending representatives to Southern Baptist retreat at Ridgecrest.

S. T. C. Participates At Rural Education Association Meeting

In the Department of Rural Education at the Richmond meeting of the V. E. A. the discussion of specific problems of one-teacher schools was led by Miss Mae Kelly, supervisor of Bedford County. Miss Alice Carter of Farmville S. T. C., led the discussion on the specific problems of Grade Six. An outstanding number of S. T. C. alumnae and faculty members participated in the meetings.

Miss Ada Bierbarren of Nottoway and Miss Mary Dinwiddie of Rockingham led a discussion on developing a broader conception of the meaning and use of sub-

Principals Confer Throughout State

S. M. Holton Attends Section Meet Of U. of Va.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week, Mr. S. M. Holton, principal of the Training School, attended a conference held in Charlottesville at the University of Virginia for the principals of the high schools from thirty counties in this section of the state. This was the first of these conferences to be held throughout the state. The second conference for the counties of Southwest Virginia will be held at V. P. I. this week, and the last for the Eastern Virginia counties will be held at William and Mary next week.

The purpose of these conferences is to work out a solution for the problems and the new curriculum and school administration and their relation to the principals and school organization.

Dr. D. W. Peters, director of instruction in Virginia, was in charge of the conference. Dr. Sidney B. Hall, Virginia Superintendent of public instruction gave an address on "The Principal and Instruction."

Mr. Holton's chief work in the conference was as a member of the committee on Organization of Public Expense and as chairman of the sub-committee on evaluation.

Y. W. C. A. Cabinet Has Short Program At Regular Meeting

An open meeting of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet was held on Thursday afternoon from four until five o'clock. A special program was put on at this time by the prayer and music committees. Frankie Bryan sang "There Is a Song in the Air" accompanied by Virginia Dare Ritchie. Margaret Carroll read the scripture. Sentence prayers were led by Lois Jenkins, Frances Carroll, Nancy Fontaine and Musse Hoyer.

The president, Dorothy Wise, discussed the prize offered for the best class "Sing" program.

Costumes For Mardi Gras

1. Each person admitted to the dance floor must wear costume and mask.
2. Costumes need not be elaborate, but should consist of an entire outfit, rather than evening dress with shawl, or some such improvision.
3. Boys attending must also be in complete costume, which eliminates full dress or tuxedo.

S.T.C. Has Dual Debates With H.-S.

Both Teams Discuss National Question For Practice

Farmville met Hampden-Sydney in dual practice debate on Wednesday night, January 13, at 7:30 o'clock. The discussion centered around the question used by the Pi Kappa Delta Chapters for this year—Resolved: That Congress be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry.

With Dudley Allen presiding in the small auditorium, Anthelia Robinette and Lillian Anderson upheld the affirmative of the question for Farmville. Walter Godsey and Bob Harper of Hampden-Sydney supported the negative. The debates were non-decisive but Dr. Walmsley gave constructive criticism of both teams.

At the same time Juanita Callis served as Chairman for a discussion of the same question in the Music Room. Bert Gartrell and Malcolm Campbell of Hampden-Sydney upheld the affirmative. Opposing them Ruth Sears and Pattie Bounds discussed the question negatively. Dr. Allan of Hampden-Sydney then spoke of the argument presented by both teams and showed means of improvement in each.

These practice debates were planned to give both Farmville and Hampden-Sydney experience in discussing the question for this year. By means of this practice both teams hope to better understand the issue of the question.

A. A. Is Sponsor Of Class Contest For Varsity Song

The Athletic Association is sponsoring a contest among the classes for a new varsity song. A prize will be awarded to the class submitting the best song.

Everyone is eligible to write a song for her class. Each class will choose two songs from those written. The chosen songs will be sung in chapel Friday morning under the direction of a cheer leader from each class who will introduce the songs.

Glass Blowers Will Demonstrate Art Of Old and New

Virginian Staff Has Venetians Here For Lecture

BLOWERS ON TOUR

Group Will Present Entertainment and Instruction

Spinning, silvering, blowing, and decorating of glass will be featured by the Venetian Glass Blowers when they appear in the auditorium Thursday night, January 21, at eight o'clock under the auspices of the Virginian staff. These glass blowers are from Columbia, South Carolina, and they have appeared in many of the well-known schools of this country.

Birds and animals, ships, cloth, and Venetian vases will be among the articles made from the blown glass.

The manufacture of glass both in ancient and modern times, as well as its value in the artistic, scientific and industrial world will be explained by a lecturer.

Dr. R. A. Baker, professor of chemistry at the University of Maryland said of the performance of the glass blowers, "It was not only delightful but very instructive, and we are already looking forward to the time when you can again be our guests."

Sophomores Present Harry Hoosegow As Villian of Melodrama

Acting in pantomine while Vera Ebel droned events, the sophomores went through the motions of an intense drama called "The Downfall of Handsome Harry Hoosegow" in Sing Saturday night. This was the second of a series of Sings to be put on by classes in a contest.

The first act depicted fair Fanny running frantically from a villian, Harry Hoosegow. Finally the helpless maiden is caught and away she is carried by the relentless villain. Then arrives the distraught lover of unhappy Fanny. The hero vows he will catch the wretch with his helpless victim. His search carries him to a camp of wild Indians who dance madly around Fanny to the tune of "Organ Grinder's Swing." Enter the hero, who kills the Indians with his trusty bean shooter and at last takes fair Fanny into his arms.

Between acts Frances Steed and Bunny Yonce sang "Indian Love Call," Nan Throckmorton, Alpha Lee Garnett and Clara Nottingham were the heroine, villian and hero respectively.

Southland Again Pays Honor To Leaders Of Confederacy

Once again, the people of the Southland stand with bared heads before memory's shrine to pay honor to the good, gray knight of the Confederacy, their hero—General Robert E. Lee. The people of Virginia especially, have robed him in the vestments of a god—this man who is ranked as one of the greatest of the earth's captains is the legendary hero of his native state.

Of a fine, old, illustrious family, Lee was spoken of with great promise even in his youth. His devotion to his mother and the help he afforded her in all her business and household affairs brought remarks of great admiration. He was an abstemious, orderly, home-loving young man. When he was older, the happiest hours that he could spend were at his beloved Arlington surrounded by his wife and children. A simple plain man he was at his best when he discussed simple things, the beauties of nature, the habits of children and animals, the appearance and humor of his horses.

Never did the Fates more skillfully weave the tangled threads of a man's life to test his character than they did Lee's. For three decades he bore the role of a sol-

NEUTRALITY

On Friday last, the United States Congress passed another neutrality bill. This, one of the first actions of Congress, makes strong the neutrality act in regard to the civil war in Spain.

Now a loop hole that could lead us into serious diplomatic trouble is being closed. No more arms, ammunition, or implements of war can be exported for use by either side in Spain.

With the threat of war looming over Europe, we are assured that the danger of our being drawn in is less. Our government realizes that neutrality must extend over all troubles that might lead to international conflicts.

THE INAUGURATION

For the first time a new presidential terms stars near the New Year, and we find the same president entering his work wholeheartedly and sincerely to keep pulling us from the depths of crime, poverty, and all of the problems which confront us in a crisis.

Inauguration means for you not only to aid your president, but also your fellowman. He needs your cooperation, and if everyone would work together, the entire burden per person would decrease. Work for the things you believe are right; support political figures who will work for the good of everyone.

Today we are finding our business improving. Our president wishes to continue business recovery. After doing his best in the past four years, he will strive to fulfill that expected of him in the coming four.

A University of Wisconsin prankster took it upon himself to remedy the situation after ex-president Glenn Frank had been removed from office by an eight to seven vote of the regents.

He thumb-tacked a "Man Wanted" sign on the ex-president's office door.

Dear Dad:

I received the threat in your last letter that my extravagance must be curbed, merely because you aren't making expenses. Now don't you worry. You just go on with your work and I'll make expenses.

Love, Junior

—Exchange

A student at S. M. U., working on his master's degree, intoxicates grasshoppers by getting them drunk on alcoholized lettuce, and he observes that human-like, they pass out and revive later. The nice thing about them is that they don't hic-cough or get sick. He hasn't discovered a test for hangover yet.

"Many of their marriages will fail, but the fact remains that they expect them to succeed," says Ray Erwin Baber in his article on "Marriage Standards of College Students," in World Digest.

Mr. Baber has been teaching a course entitled Marriage and Family Life, at New York University, and for the past six years has taken reports of the attitudes of his students on mate selection. From the responses of 642 students, equally divided as to sex, he has found that "economic state is a matter of small concern when it comes to selecting a mate; they are not indifferent to money, they merely do not place it first.

"Nor are good looks considered essential!" Two thirds of the boys insisted that their wives should not be too far down the scale, while four-fifths of the girls were willing to waive the question of looks.

"As regards the morals question, the young women approached it from the positive side and the men from the negative." Nine per cent more women than men insisted that the moral standards of their mates be as high as their own.

Top verse of the week:

I hope you don't go out tonight,
But if you do I hope it doesn't rain;
But if it does I hope you don't get wet;
But if it does I hope you don't get sick;
But if you do I hope you don't die,
But if you do I hope you go to heaven;
But if you don't well, I'll be seeing you.

Rotunda Reverberations

Wasn't the Junior Production grand? I should say it was quite the finest one given so far. May the others be just as good; then there's the Sing last Sat. night put on by the Sophomores—dramatic to say the least.

Students come and students go—but gossip in the Rec goes on forever. They say Nancy Selliman is going back to grandma's time. She puts her friend on the sofa and she sits on the other—and then a slap sounds through the Rec. My, my, grandma—There's a queer story going round. It's about a H.-S. C. Lochinvar by the name of Soap. He actually had two dates in a row in S. T. C.—more flypaper for him. And speaking of H.-S. C. what on earth is that Pi Kappa Alpha doing while Margaret Hannah teaches the little children? Stop worrying, Smitty, after all, exams out there don't last forever. I'm afraid some others will have their style cramped too for the next few weeks—but they'll make up for it later on. Watch out Mr. Reeves!

Poor Will Scott did nobely in the production; the after effects, however, were terrible. I guess maybe she'd recommend cold cream baths to most any one—

Charm Chides

Yes, it is Sunday night and dates are awfully interesting, aren't they? They look so silly down there when they know you're looking down. But that's only your side. Have you ever stopped to think how they feel, how they wish you'd go chase yourself instead of remaining to make them feel idiotic? They came, after all, to see somebody, not to be ogged at by a bunch of curiosity-overcome school girls.

Picture yourself being regarded by dozens of pairs of wide, amused eyes from above—eyes, that are not familiar and seldom friendly. You'd feel too absurd to look up and just too dumb for words not to look up when you know all the time they're there—those critical eyes, staring, judging, finding flaws. How would you feel? Just, what sort of place would you think this?

As for the girls who are being cute, can they look and act their best when they know the smothered whispers and giggles from above concern them? It is bound to be irritating and disastrous to otherwise pleasant dispositions.

If you have a date, come to the rotunda when it's time for him to arrive. If you haven't a date, stay home where you belong and give "courtin' couples" half a chance to be good at the noble art!

Literary Column

Character by the Month

Here is an old astrological prediction, said to indicate, with tolerable certainty, the character of the girl according to the month she happens to be born in:

If a girl is born in January, she will be a prudent housewife, given to melancholy, but good-tempered.

If in February, a humane and affectionate wife, and tender mother.

In in March, a frivolous chatterbox, somewhat given to quarreling.

If in April, inconstant, not intelligent, but likely to be good-looking.

If in May, handsome and likely to be happy.

If in June, impetuous, will marry early, and be frivolous.

If in July, passably handsome, but with a sulky temper.

If in August, amiable and practical, and likely to marry rich.

If in September, discreet, affable, and much liked.

If in October, pretty and coquettish, and likely to be unhappy.

If in November, liberal, kind, of a mild disposition.

If in December, well-proportioned, fond of novelty, and extravagant.

Birth Stones

January, the jacinth or garnet, symbolizing constancy and fidelity.

February, the amethyst, symbolizing peace of mind, and sobriety.

March, the bloodstone or jasper, symbolizing courage and success in dangerous enterprises.

April, the sapphire and diamond symbolizing repentence and innocence.

May, the emerald, symbolizing success in love.

June, the agate, symbolizing long life and health.

July, the carnelian, symbolizing cure of evil resulting from forgetfulness.

August, the sardonys or onyx, symbolizing conjugal felicity.

September, the chrysolite, symbolizing, preservation from folly, or its cure.

October, the aquamarine, opal, or beryl symbolizing hope.

November, the topaz, symbolizing fidelity and friendship.

Drama:

Acting is only the creation of an illusion of reality; Miss Cornell insists. "The essential thing is to make the audience believe all the time." For Katherine Cornell this problem was made more than unusually difficult by the very distinction of her presence.

The role of Sydney Fairfield in "A Bill of Divorcement" offered Miss Cornell her first chance to enact a believable characterization on Broadway. She was engaged for this part, on the insistence of the British actor in the lead who had seen her play Jo in London.

How Miss Cornell attacks a part is, she says, "very hard to describe." She quite consciously attempts to relate a part to herself. "Every character," she feels, "is both near and far from an actor's own personality." The player must understand the person, have a cerebral as well as an emotional sympathy with the role, to act it. Then he has to present it through his own qualities of mind and physique.

The finest hair line, in Miss Cornell's opinian, separates the good actor from the so-called "ham." The difference, nine times out of ten, lies in the power of selection, the ability to seize upon essentials and throw away the alluring temptations that clutter up a performance. Almost every imaginative person has a certain instinct for acting. But few have the power to execute, to put into practice, to make real to an audience what they see and feel.

The above was taken from an article entitled "The Actor Attacks His Part" in the January issue of Theatre Arts Monthly. This is the fourth in a series of articles on the working methods of distinguished Broadway actors. Helen Hayes, Lynn Fontaine and Alfred Lunt, and Nazimova, have been the previous subjects; Ina Claire will be interviewed next month.

Lament of an Old Theatre Man

The theatre?
The theatre's a mess!
A jungle of true and false, a regal stew,
A world of jumbled incoherence.
There
Selfless devotion still may find success,
But exhibitionism is the shorter way.
There genius may be rooted like the yew,
In the deep past, to raise her leafy crown;
Or some cheap-jack may catch the fickle town
To shake its pockets loose for twice the pay.
There legs are assets, while they last, no less
Than changing eloquence; there charm is gold
And favors stretches like lightening from the clouds,
To be no more foreshadowed than controlled.
It is the world where Cinderella finds
Her charming prince; and where a prince may meet
Indifferent doom; a sharpener of minds
Whose past is strewn with broken souls and feet.
And there the future, like a beckoning toot,
Shows many men her thighs, but few her heart.
And yet—and yet—
There is no stranger pull
Not even in the sea, than in his rout,

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By VIRGINIA AGEE

There are so many lazy people in the world! Surely, they do not term themselves as being lazy, but in the deeper sense of the word they are plainly, hopelessly lazy. They watch the cogs in the wheel go 'round and find it a fascinating pastime to do so. They had rather watch than do.

An eminent author and teacher, John Erskine, remarked the other day that it is better to try to write plays than to take courses in drama, better to dance than to go to lectures on the dance, better to do some painting than to study art. This is so nearly true that we could go down the whole list of human activities and say the same thing with convincing effect. It is better to play tennis, even badly, than to watch a championship match. It is better to make a pie or dress than to window shop at a bakery or attend a fashion show—better to earn a modest living by your own hard work than to inherit a fortune—better to sing around a piano than listen to a radio. The joy of creation is always greater than the undoubted pleasure of "looking on."

Study has its own values if it leads to active participation later, but too many people stop with study and never go on to its application. The sad fact is that the majority of mankind are "onlookers"; only a rare few are the "doers." Prosperous folk tend more and more to be patrons of the arts, sitters on the sidelines! But those who have the most fun will continue to be those who do rather than merely look on.

It looks as if the good Lord is either regretting last summer's ruinous drought in the western section of our fair country or is anticipating another one for the coming summer season. We are referring to the downpour of rain that has been showering us for the past three weeks.

Rain has been the cause of many lovely and beautiful things as well as heart breaking, miserable ones. It has inspired love and friendship; given life to the flowers and trees in the spring; caused genius to flow into the spirits and thoughts of poets, authors, and dramatists. It has made the air sweet with the scent of Mother Earth and with the songs of birds.

On the other hand, it has caused rivers to become swift and flow with passionate strength—taking life and all that made life worth living. It has made the mighty oceans strain at their leaches and howl fiendishly as the minute boats capsize! It rots the roots of the grains the grasses, the flowers.

Many centuries ago, it rained forty days and forty nights, and all the earth was a place of turmoil and death. It was then the rainbow—that magnificent arch of glorious colors—came into existence. The rainbow was a symbol—The symbol of a promise.

Rain on the roof!—rain on the window panes!rain dancing on the sidewalks and dripping from the trees. Sometimes we love it—sometimes we hate it! Love the rain; glorify in the strength of its power; and should you become frightened because of the insistent downpour, remember a promise that was made long, long ago.

Ann Harding, golden Madonna of the stage and screen is married again. Her new husband is a modest, self-made man—a noted musician—crack symphony orchestra conductor. Miss Harding has magnificently portrayed many characters on both stage and screen.

The chirographers, who read character from handwriting, can pick up a signature of Garbo and say, "This woman has acting ability."—How do they do it?

They say the next war would be with bugs, but Europe gives no sign of beating its military into "insecticide."

The drunk driver was a problem only to the immediate family in the days when there were horses that knew the way home.

S. T. C. Finds Herself Missing Aunt Lucy

There is something definitely missing from the Rotunda these days. As we walk by there we look in vain for the figure seated by the radiator, waving a friendly hand at us. When date time rolls around there's no Aunt Lucy to help straighten out our troubles, tell the unwelcome guest we've gone away, and to wander around among us to chat.

During the Christmas holidays, while on a visit with her daughter in Norfolk, Aunt Lucy was injured in an automobile accident, and was taken to the hospital. At present she is recuperating at her daughter's home and will return to school in about a month.

After all her years of service here it seems strange for her not to be with us, and we miss her indeed.

Coiffures Give Appearance Of Upward Trend In Styles

Hair is definitely on the up and up. Every end points to the sky. The simplest new coiffure is the roll around the head. This permits of many modifications to make it becoming to different faces. The hair may be parted in the center or at the side or not have a part at all. The roll may be continuous or it may be broken so that the big smooth rounds of hair lie at various slants or break into flat ringlets over the ears or forehead. It may give a suggestion of a modest pompadour. It may be a fillet of flat curls around the head. In our own midst we see those around us adopting these new styles. Elizabeth Butler, Helen Byrd Harris, and several others have parted their hair in the middle, combed it back and have a continuous roll around the head. The hair dips slightly in the back, and shows ears.

Then there is the increasingly popular coiffure "a la Simpson." The hair is parted in the middle, pulled back to a knot in the back and has a faint shadow wave at the sides. But don't try it this way if you're awfully young.

Your hair has many possibilities and it is worth the trouble of finding your own style of wearing it.

German Club Plans Mid-Winter Dances

February 19-20 Set As Dates—Band Is Unchosen

February 19th and 20th have been set as the date for the German Club Mid-Winter dances. Three dances, Friday Night (formal), Saturday afternoon, and Saturday night will make up the set. No definite arrangements have been made for the dances, but will be taken up and decided upon at a meeting of the Club to be held immediately following examinations.

Either Johnny Long or Jimmy Pointer will furnish the music according to June Irby, secretary-treasurer of the German Club. Irby further stated that only those members of the club dance that are fully paid up will be allowed to attend the dances.

Walmsleys Entertain Senior Class History Majors at Cactus

Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Walmsley entertained the Seniors, majoring in history, Wednesday, January 13, at the Cactus Inn. Those attending were Virginia Acworth, Martha Glenn Davis, Mary Virginia Walker, Goldie Williams, Betty Rivers, Anne Scales, Evelyn Howell, Cassie Boswell, Marion Pond, Nellie Pierpont, Alice Boggs, Virginia Hannah, and Ann Galusha.

Facial Treatment For Cold Weather

By Helena Rubinstein

To keep your complexion as soft and orchidaceus as you wish it despite wind and snow and ice, requires special treatment.

I have designed a very simple but efficacious treatment for you which will require little more than five minutes every day to take and which I know you will find most beneficial to your skin.

Because the complexion is generally drier and more liable to chap and parch in winter than in summer, because cold air and wind has a still further drying effect on the skin your face should be washed only at night when you will not again be going out. In the morning face and neck should be cleansed with a rich gentle cleansing cream like pasteurized face cream. This is a very thorough cleanser which not only removes every particle of dust and dirt but which also leaves the skin softer and smoother than before.

After cleansing with the pasteurized face cream, soak a small strip of cotton wool in your skin toning lotion special and go over your face with it very thoroughly. The skin lotion is a very gentle astringent that gives a smooth mat finish to your face and also closes the pores against dust and grime.

It is thus not only a beautifier but a protective. You will find it an invaluable aid against that painful raw look which is often such a distressing sign of winter.

Now, if you have a foundation, you will be careful to pat it all over face and neck. A town and country make-up film in peach-bloom or maresque will be most useful and attractive. Not only will it hide small lines and little blemishes, but it will hold make-up for hours. Into the bargain it is a real help in enabling you to blend your make-up easily and artistically. I recommend town and country make-up film to you especially for winter use, because it contains many valuable and beneficial biological ingredients which seep quickly into the skin and replace those natural oils which keep the skin supple and elastic.

If you have not invested in this excellent foundation a thin film of your pasteurized face cream will make your rouge and powder stay on longer and will also afford your complexion some protection against chapping and flaking.

If you have a personal beauty problem on which you need advice please write Womans Interest Syndicate, 522 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Dr. L. H. Adams of the Carnegie Institution's geophysical laboratory says that the age of the earth, as estimated by measuring the amount of the radio-active element uranium which has broken down into lead, is about 1,500,000,000 years.

Fancy Dress Ball Will be Florentine

Eight Farmville Girls Will Attend Dance Set

The annual W. and L. Fancy Dress ball, which will portray the glory and splendor of the Florentine palace of Lorenzo Medici, ruler of Florence during the late fifteenth century, will be held on January 29. 55 students and their dates will participate in the figure, led by Norman Iler.

The Gym will be decorated to represent the ball room of Lorenzo Medici at Florence. The colorful and artistic styles of the Renaissance will be the motif of all the decorations. Many famous fifteenth century Italians will be represented in the figure.

Farmville S. T. C. will be represented by a number of girls, some of whom will be in the figure. Among the latter are Eugenia Jolly and Jennie Belle Gilliam. Others attending will be Marjorie Wicks, Frances Hudgins, Dorothy Wise, Elizabeth Wilson, Virginia Agee, and Sarah Hayes.

Plans for the dance set are being rapidly completed. Hal Kemp's orchestra will open the Junior Prom Thursday night at 10 o'clock. On Friday night Eddie Duchin will play for the Fancy Dress ball, which will be broadcast at midnight, as is the custom. Duchin also will furnish music for the dansant and dance Saturday afternoon and night.

President of Council Announces Meetings

It has been decided by the House Council to hold roll call meetings of the various halls, beginning next Monday night at seven o'clock.

Martha Hamlet, president of the House Council, will explain some of the council regulations to the girls. She will also bring up a few problems with which the hall presidents have to cope, in the hopes that there will be better cooperation between the student body and the House Council in the future.

Social Gatherings Attended by Many

Mosque, Teas and Home Fill the Calendar

Miriam Ficklin, Nancy Gray, Elizabeth Sieber, Marguerite Blackwell, and Julia Raney entertained the Mu Omega sorority on Sunday afternoon with a tea in the chapter room.

Besides the active members of the sorority, Miss Leola Wheeler, advisor of the sorority was a guest.

The most outstanding events on the social calendar of S. T. C. girls for the past week were the operas held at the Mosque in Richmond. Too many girls attended these musical extravaganzas to mention here. The most popular operas judging by attendance of Farmville girls seemed to be "Carmen" and "Rigolleto."

Mable Burton spent the past week-end at her home in Richmond and had as her guests Frances Bryant and Kitty Brooks.

Pauline Scott visited relatives in Greensboro, N. C., last week-end.

Marion Harden was the guest of her aunt at Dillwyn for several days.

Dorothy Tillett was the guest of Ruth James for the week-end.

Ruth Boaz, Janice Young and Estelle Smith spent several days with Ruby Pearson at her home in Stony Creek.

Elsie Dodd had as her week-end guest, at her home in Richmond, Elizabeth Burke.

As usual the majority of girls leaving school last week-end went home. Among these were Virginia Lee Pettis, Louise Eubank, Alice Ferguson, Betty Fagg, Elizabeth Hardy, Ann Scott, May Bates, Cecile Hyde, Helen Byrd Harris, Marie Eason, Martha Meade Hardaway, Ruth Turner, Virginia Read Turner, Martine Womack, Eliza Wise, Frances Williams, Helen Cady, Marguerite Costello, Erna Dickerson, Elizabeth Baylor, Louise Allen, Dudley Allen, Jane Hardy, Jacqueline Adams and Virginia Allen.

As part of the prom publicity stunt at Norwestern University, 30 beautiful coeds recently drove around the campus in new 1937 model automobiles.

Ladies! Stop! Look! How Is Your Back?

A dozen times a day we stand in front of our mirrors. Yet, stand looking in at our faces and neglecting a "better half." For our "backs" are just as important as our "fronts." People stare at them when they wouldn't dare stare at our faces. Their eyes follow us as we walk up the aisle in chapel, to the post office, through the halls. We are "sized up" by our male friends from The Hill as we stroll out of Shannon's. How do you stand their test? Is your hair combed down with a neat even neckline, or is it sticking up and down and in and out in every direction? Is that hem even? Nothing is worse than to see a little border of pink and white showing at the bottom of a dress. What about the seams of your hose? Please don't have them looking like snakes, wriggling and twisting. And your shoes—do they turn over crookedly or are the heels run down?

Within the next few weeks many of you will be "truckin'" off to mid-winter dances at Randolph-Macon, Hampden-Sydney, Washington and Lee and other colleges. Can't you just see a boy standing behind you, looking you over, wondering whether to break or not? Help him decide. Look nice. Before you go, get your best friend to talk about your back viewpoint!

Woman's Club Will Bring Play Here

New York Cast Will Present "Little Women

Under the auspices of the senior Woman's Club of Farmville, a professional cast from New York will stage "Little Women", by Louisa May Alcott, in the S. T. C. auditorium on Monday, February 1, at 1:45 P. M.

The Woman's Club is sponsoring this performance in the hopes of arousing more interest and appreciation of finer plays in the school children of the community. Mr. McIlwaine, superintendent, is furthering this objective by permitting the presentation during school hours; and buses will bring in the children from nearby schools.

Although "Little Women" will be played by an adult professional cast, the troup has been playing for children for many years. This is the thirteenth season it has traveled, through fifteen states and Canada. This is the fourth season it has been brought to Richmond, where three plays were presented.

School children will compose a large part of the audience, but the general public is expected and welcome to attend.

ject matter in the Department of Supervisors. Mrs. Louise Eubank Broadus of Richmond, Mrs. Eleanor Scott of Nansemond, Miss Lillian Minor of Norfolk, Miss Frances Treakle of Lancaster, and Miss Rexie Gill of Westmoreland took part in a panel discussion on creative expression as an evidence of child growth.

Miss Susie Vann Floga of Hilton Village presided at the meeting of the Geography Teachers Section.

In the Mathematics Teachers Section, Miss Winnie E. Sutherland of Capron spoke on improving our mathematics teachers section.

At the meeting of the joint meeting of the Secondary and Elementary groups of the Science Teachers Section, the president, Dr. G. W. Jeffers, of Farmville S. T. C. presided.

In the Teacher Training Group Dr. J. E. Walmsley of Farmville S. T. C., chairman of the committee on In-College Guidance for Prospective Teachers, reported on the plans for 1936-1937. Dr. Wynne and Dr. Jarman of Farmville S. T. C. spoke upon some of the questions raised by the speakers.

Miss Bessie Mottley of Richmond presided at the meeting of the Vocational and Educational Guidance Section. Mrs. Margaret Henderson Forbes of Richmond reported for the Guidance Committee at Binford High School.

Southland Pays Tribute To Leaders

dier, graduating with honor at West Point, serving with distinction in the Mexican War, and later as superintendent of the Military Academy. He served with such outstanding ability, that when a war between the North and South threatened, he was offered the command of the Federal forces in the field. The crisis of his life had come. Virginia had joined the seceding states. Should he maintain the uniform of his united country which he had worn for thirty-six years and continue to serve the army that rendered him honor and offered more? Or take up arms for his kinsmen, his State, the land of his fathers? Should he renounce a career not yet in full flower; the assurance of victory; the approval of a nation that would hail him patriot? Or embrace the possible tragedy that awaited the South and be called a traitor? Arlington would be lost, his family's land, his children's inheritance snatched away. This was the problem he faced that April night before the war. No one knows the agony through which his soul passed as he paced to and fro on the veranda of Arlington trying to reach a decision.

At last it was made. "Save in the defense of my native state, I never desire to draw my sword." Thus the great, the noble Lee cast his lot with the "Lost Cause" of the South.

A private in his army once said, "Boys, the rest of us have developed from monkeys, but I tell you only God Almighty could make a man like Marse Robert." That was what one solder said and that is what the whole world thinks of a man who sacrificed his all at the feet of devotion to his native state.

"Thou wert head of all Christian knights; thou wert never matched of earthly knights' hand; and thou wert the courtliest knight that ever bore shield—thou wert the kindest man that ever strode with sword; and thou wert the goodliest person that ever came among press of knights; thou wert the meekest and the gentlest."

SPORT SLANTS

Basketball: Did you know that before very long, we are going to have to show exactly what all those basketball practices have done for us? Not only will the varsity team be put to test, but also the class teams. It really is essential that everyone trying out for class teams come out for practice. It is also essential for the ones on the varsity squad to be present at all practices. We do want this year to be our most successful year and our aim is to be undefeated! There is no excuse for our not being able to play good basketball because, we have been reminded so many times about our practices! They are very necessary if one expects to improve. There is an old saying, "if the mountain won't come down to Mahommet, Mahommet will go up to the mountain." In basketball it is understood that, the practice won't come up to you—so please come down to the practice! "Disappointment is a terrible thing," but I'm afraid if more people don't come out for class practices—some one or some class is going to be disappointed!

Now for the highlights of those practices that we have on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. For those that don't know, we do have basketball practices on those days—and we'd be delighted to have you attend! Mary Bowles is expected to lead the senior class to victory. She's a marvelous side center. But who knows? Maybe her ability will be recognized and she will be claimed by the varsity squad. We're waiting to hear from you, Mary. The seniors are really going "basketball." Next, from the Junior class, we see Eleanor Dodson and still more Juniors fighting for dear old "red and white."

The Sophomore Class is represented by Mary Elizabeth Badger, a "ready" forward, Vera Ebel, one of those "fast guards" and other sophomores who are determined that "green and white" will be victorious.

When we speak of the Freshman Class, all we can say, is that they are a "raring, vigorous, fighting bunch," and they are prepared to make a name for themselves, even if they are the youngest class!

With varsity and class games so near at hand, we urge everyone to watch the A. A. Bulletin Board and come out for practices. "The best team always wins!"

PiKA's Select Favorite Girl

National Poll Picks Marsha Hunt As Favorite

In a national poll to pick the most ideal college girl in the cast of Paramount's motion picture, "College Holiday," starring Jack Benny, Miss Marsha Hunt was selected by the 76 chapters of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity as most nearly approximating the college man's ideal.

Miss Hunt, a brunette, won by the narrow margin of one vote over Miss Harriet Haddon, blond. Miss Hunt, who plays the feminine lead in the picture, will henceforth be known as "The Dream Girl of Pi K. A.," the fraternity's sweetheart song.

Feature of the voting was the fact that both girls found supporters in every section of the country. Neither north, south, middle west nor far west showed a decided preference. It was a close race between the blond and brunette throughout the voting.

and "Night and Day." A duo composed of Virginia Agee and Elsie Greene rendered "I've Got You Under My Skin," and Gay Stieffen tapped and sang to "Lulu's Back in Town". A novelty arrangement to the tune of "Organ Grinder's Swing" brought out the familiar names of Shannon's and Southside. For the Grand Finale, the entire company sang "When Trouble Troubles You."

"Swing Time" was under the direction of Elsie Green, Kitty Jamison, and Virginia Agee. In the first scene, Virginia Doughty and Mary Harvey danced a minuet. The dancers and singers for the different countries were: Scotland — Marjorie Robertson; Italy, Elizabeth Carroll and "Ducky" Davis; Russia, Bruce Crowell, Annie Leigh Bailey, and Eugenia Jolly; Austria, Susan Lane and Mary Joyner Cox; France, Eleanor Dodson and Elizabeth Morris. Virginia Agee, dressed in a white tuxedo, took the part of the interlocultor in the minstrel with the following end men: Gay Stieffen, Sue Eastham, Mary Harrison Vaughan, Betty Butterworth, and Will Scott. Music was directed by Virginia Agee, with Virginia Ritchie at the piano; Gay Stieffen directed the dancing.

That little number Midge Davis was wearing last Sunday was supposed to have come off the Gobi desert—but we've got our doubts. You'll have to prove to us that dress hasn't been hanging in your closet all winter.

"Peter Pan" has come to S. T. C. in full sway. Not by himself, but with all his friends, Tinker, Wendy, etc. Here's hoping maybe you'll find a new friend—one for this week. You'll be needing something to help those aching toes every night.

Get Chic to tell you about the gangsters at U. of Va. Her hair isn't even back down on her head yet!

Rain, rain and more rain—it's enough to drive a body crazy, but cheer up. Next summer you'll be wishing for it. And while you're sitting in you can be planning your Mardi Gras costume. It takes a lot of planning to fix an original one. So you'd better put on your thinking cap or your rainy day hat. It's probably growing to your head by this time anyhow. Au revoir—pleasant dreams.

Air School Merits First Radio Award

Broadcasts Over the Network—CBS

The "American School of Air", winner of the first radio award of merit offered by the American Legion Auxiliary, is in its seventh season of broadcast instruction on the CBS network. It is heard each Monday through Friday from 2:15 to 2:45 P. M. EST, presenting courses in geography, history, literature, poetry, music, science, vocational guidance and current events. This year courses were inaugurated on October 13. They will continue until April 30, being interrupted only by the regular holidays observed by schools in the country.

Manuals, designed to help the teachers in securing vistual aids and supplementary instruction in the several courses, are distributed annually by the Columbia Broadcasting System to instructors in all parts of the United States. Directors of the school cooperate closely with all educational groups as well as with the 260 boards of education which conduct courses over their local radio stations.

The broadcasts are under the supervision of Edward Morrow, CBS, director of talks, and Miss Helen Johnson, broadcasting director of the school. Courses are planned with the aid of a board of consultants headed by Dr. William C. Bagley, professor education at Teachers College, Columbia University, and a cooperating committee of 86 prominent educators. Nothing is put on the air which does not meet with the full approval of this group.

DON'T MISS SOPHOMORE PRODUCTION

VOL. XVI. FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, 1937 No. 14

Sophomores Give Class Production

"Mother Goose Goes To Town" Is Title

BOUNDS DIRECTS

February 4 Is Date Of Musical Show

The Sophomore Class will present "Mother Goose Goes to Town" at 8 p. m. February fourth, in the large auditorium.

While we have had productions dealing with trips to foreign lands, night clubs, trans-Atlantic liners, and hotels, the Sophomore class is endeavoring to put on an entirely new type of production—one with Mother Goose characters.

In the prologue the characters of the nursery rhymes will come to life—stepping from Mother Goose books to appear as we knew them in childhood. Then, that fatal trip of Jack and Jill up the hill brings it to a close.

The other four acts take place hundreds of years later. We see the same characters, but while they haven't grown old with the years they haven't failed to keep up with modern times.

Many interesting and unusual situations arise over the love affairs of Jack, Jill, Lucy Lockett, and Georgie Porgie. Of course there's a villian, the Knave of Hearts, a court fool and a Jolly old King Cole. Gone are the fiddlers, though, replaced by a Swing Trio. Despite the troubles caused by the Knave, the new and wonderful love tarts, an astounding "find" helps to straighten everything out in the end.

The production is under the direction of Pattie Bounds, assisted by an able committee; Virginia Ritchie, music; Gwen Bell and Ann Dugger, dances; Florence Bress, tickets and ushers; Jane Saunders and Frances Steed, programs; Jane Burke and Louise Anthony, posters, cards; Virginia Jarman, Ellen Mims, Virginia Smith and Elizabeth Butler, scenery.

Dr. Jarman Appeals For Red Cross Fund

Dr. Jarman made an appeal to the student body in chapel Tuesday morning, to cooperate with the National Red Cross in their emergency drive for relief in the flood districts.

The Y. W. C. A. is in charge of collecting donations made by the students. They are asking that every person make a contribution, however small. The table hostesses will collect the contributions in order that every table may be reached.

Dr. Jarman closed his appeal with these words, "Let it be said that S. T. C. has responded one hundred per cent."

S. T. C. Will Meet Lynchburg College In Opening Game

Hudgins Is Captain Of Basketball Team

On Friday, January 29th at 3:00 the F. S. T. C. basketball team will meet its first opponent of the year. The Lynchburg College sextette will strive to overthrow our seasoned team on our own court.

The two teams met last year at Lynchburg with our representatives victorious. This year our team captained by Frances Hudgins, again has great prospects.

Our star center, Kathleen Ranson, guard, Lelia Sanford and other able seniors of last year will be greatly missed but able players have arisen in their places.

The line-up for the game will not be known until Friday night. The varsity team, as announced by Frances Hudgins on Wednesday, is as follows: Ruby Adams, freshman, forward; Elizabeth Berryman, sophomore, guard; Edna Bolick, junior, guard; Mable Burton, sophomore, 2 years on varsity,

Speaker on Peace Chooses "Futility Of War" as Topic

Says War Imminent Among European Nations

Dr. James Henry Franklin, president of the Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pennsylvania, spoke in the S. T. C. auditorium on Monday night, January 25 at 7:30. Dr. Franklin represented the Emergency Peace Campaign as a part of the drive throughout the United States for peace education.

Dr. Franklin chose as his subject "The Futility of War in the Settlement of International Disputes." He stated that in 1914 we sent our young men to war for such causes as "to make the world safe for democracy," to fight a "war to end wars." Yet, today the prospects of war seem far more likely than they seemed in 1914. He did not wish to say that war is inevitable; but unless the attitude and thought of the dictators of Europe change, there is grave danger of war in the near future. No Totalitarian state interferes with freedom of expression and humanity cannot progress unless men are allowed to express themselves and publish their opinions.

"It is better ultimately that the western hemisphere preserve the peace," Dr. Franklin stated. The speakers for peace attempt to make the people realize the grave danger of war and to lead them to study how to keep out of wars among other nations.

Dr. Franklin continued by saying that history has proved to be true that saying of the Man of Galilee—"Put up the sword, for all who take up the sword shall per-

Farmville Debates Lynchburg College

Teams Will Discuss Pi Kappa Delta Question

The Debate with Lynchburg College, which was scheduled for last week, will be held on Wednesday night, January 27th at seven-thirty in the small auditorium. Anthelia Robinette and Lillian Anderson, upholding the affirmative for S. T. C., will meet a negative team from Lynchburg College, in a discussion of the National Pi Kappa Delta question.

On this same evening Farmville's negative team will debate the Lynchburg College affirmative team at Lynchburg College on this same question. Pattie Bounds and Ruth Sears will support the negative for S. T. C. in this discussion.

President Announces Initiation of Students Into Dramatic Club

Formal and informal initiation of the new members of the Dramatic Club will take place two nights next week, it was announced by Fletcher Walker at the regular meeting of the club last Wednesday night.

Each girl who passes her exam and is voted into the club is required to put on a skit, donate a costume to the club, and pay her initiation fee before she becomes a member. This year the new members will wear masks for two days as a recognition of their being voted into the club.

"Suppressed Desires", a comedy in two episodes, by Susan Glaspell was given as the last apprentice play.

Eugenia Reeves, Anne Hurt Ross, and Sara Kessee were the only members of the cast.

Senior Class Wins Contest for Song Sponsored by A. A.

"Blue and White" Is New Varsity Song

The Athletic Association held its song contest after chapel on Friday, January 22nd, resulting in a victory for the senior class. Frances Hudgins, president of the A. A. announced the contest. The senior class presented two songs first. Their 'Blue and White" song written to the tune of a popular high school swing seemed to sway the audience. The songs were led by Mary Bowles and Virginia Baker. Their pianist was Dorothy Wise.

The junior class song "Spirit of S. T. C." written by Juaniti Callis Elsie Green and Helen Callahan to the tune of "V. M. I. Spirit" was next. Dorothy Wise was their pianist. The leader was Virginia Agee.

The sophomore class dressed in blue and white, presented two songs. Virginia Dare Ritchie wrote the words and music to "Blue and White". This song was played by Virginia Dare Ritchie and led by Frankie Bryan and Nan Throckmorton. Their other song, "For Blue and White" was written by Kitty Roberts and Frankie Bryan. The music was written by Margaret Critcher, and she also played the song.

The freshman class, through a misunderstanding, was unable to present its song, but will present it sometime in the near future, if possible.

After the presentation the seniors and juniors were asked to sing their song "Blue and White" once more for final judgment. The sister classes cheered for each other. The judges awarded the prize to the senior class.

Venetians Present Glass Blowing Art

Mechanics of Growing Industry Are Shown

The Venetian Glass Blowers adept in one of the growing industries of the world, thrilled its audience in the S. T. C. auditorium last Thursday, January 21st. Glass blowing is one of the oldest arts, having originated in Egypt and China and having been perfected by the Venetians. The Glass blowers seemed to possess almost magic power as they blew, wove, spun, knit and colored, silvered and decorated the glass into various objects. A Venetian vase, an old German pipe, a small sail boat, a dress, were among the interesting articles made from glass.

A contest between Ruth Sears and Mary Joyner Cox proved Ruth to be the champion "water blower."

The enthusiastic response by the audience paralleled that received by the Glass blowers at various high schools and colleges all over the country.

Honor Group Elects Ten New Members Of Creditable Ability

The Virginia Gamma Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu, national honor society in social science, elected the following girls to membership: Dean Saunders, Frances Smith, Nellie Pierpont, Martha Bailey, Doris Carper, Nora Jones, Catherine Walden, Dudley Allen, Anne Scales, and Jean McConnaughey.

Clare Tree Major Presents "Little Women"

VOL. I IS PLAYED

Dramatization Is Held Close To The Book

The Farmville Woman's Club is presenting the cast from the Children's Theatre of New York City in the play "Little Women"' at the S. T. C. auditorium on February 1.

Clare Tree Major heads the troupe from the Children's Theatre and she dramatized the story of "Little Women" which they play. Her cast has travelled throughout the nation, playing in many large cities and various sections of the country for the past thirteen years.

Their performance is quite different from the motion picture version of the story. Since the play has been planned especially for children, only episodes from the first volume are included. Both in matter and mood the play follows the book closely, from the opening lament of the girls because Marmee has said "no Christmas presents", to the engagement of John Brook and Meg in the end.

The most important advantage of this arrangement is that the little family is still intact when the play closes. They give none of the separation which comes with the second book—Meg's marriage, Beth's death, Amy's life in Paris, or Laurie's sojourn in college.

The Clare Tree Major cast consists of:

Jo	Margaret Joyce
Beth	Jewel Horse
Meg	Elizabeth Hugh
Amy	Norma Way
Marmee	Emily Gilbert
Laurie	Glenn Arnold
Hannah	Velma Reyton
Aunt March	Evelyn Roberts
John Brooke	Ray Parker
Mr. March	Frank Rothe
Mr. Lawrence	Robert Francis

Staff Announces Editor's Contest Of Class Editions

Prize Will Be Given For Winning Issue

The Rotunda Staff is sponsoring its customary editor's contest among the various classes, beginning with the February 3 issue of the Rotunda. On that date the Senior Class will edit the paper.

The month of February will be devoted to class issues of the paper with the seniors first and the freshmen last. The papers will be judged on make-up, head-lines, style of writing, etc. and a prize awarded to the winner.

Editors for the class issues have been appointed from the regular Rotunda staff as follows: seniors, Virginia Hannah and Bernice

Class Of '40 Reveals Turmoil In Choosing Plot For Play

One - Act Melodrama Climaxes "Rat" Performance

From back stage are heard the doleful strains of "Sing, Sing, Every Class Must Have Sing," and the curtains open giving a glance of the worried committee on Sing. What can they have? What can they do that nobody else has done? Oh worry! Somebody's got a swell idea—why not let Eloise Whitney, Grace Waring and Sara Keesee sing? As if by magic the evening gowned lassies come on the stage to sing "Midnight Blue."

Yes, that might do but you gotta have something more than just a song to get those judges on the right side of you. Worry, worry! And from those worried brows comes—"Here 'tis girls—why not let Martha McCorkle lead a chorus?" So from the little hole in the side of the curtain come so many sailor girls and they really dance up a storm, top it off with Virginia Lee Pettis singing "Let Yourself Go."

That wasn't so bad but the committee's still worried. What more could they have? Can't expect a song and dance to bring home the bacon. Black gloom now hangs over the committee. Somebody says "Coo" Snead could sing and here comes "Coo" with that "Banjo on her knee." Oh no, couldn't see very well back here—it's a guitar, after all! She looks like a cow girl all right and she's going to town with "In Old Wyoming." She leaves the stage—no, she coming back—after the chair she left and she's singing "Little Red Riding Hood."

Aw shucks! The committee's getting lower every minute. 'Was afraid of that. One of them is sick. They are leaving the stage. A stage hand comes in—what's gonna happen now? She's clearing the stage. It's a skit! The King, Queen, Princess and Handsome Duke. Oho, the usual conquest over the daughter's hand—plot. Other characters: A frightened Cat, Climax: the Duke kills the King, the Queen stabs herself, the Duke drinks poison, and the princess dies of grief. Nice bit of death they have up there on the stage. My soul! Even the curtains are falling—they're dead too!

Famous General Of Civil War Inspires Modern American

January 24th Marks Anniversary of Jackson

Down the corridor of the years into the hearts of every lover of the Confederacy rides another of her great heroes to take his place in our temple of memories—namely, the good soldier—"Stonewall" Jackson.

On January 24th, he lived again, a figure romantic and compelling, not to southerners alone, but to all Americans, for he was one of the greatest military tacticians of the world, and his high-mindedness and religious fervor command the respect and admiration of all men.

He went to West Point as did Robert E. Lee. When he entered he was an ignorant, awkward lad of eighteen from a farm in the hills of old Virginia. He was a striking figure, having a high sloping forehead, grayish blue eyes, clear and introspective; high cheek bones, almost gaunt; his mouth was a single line of compressed lips, and his jaw stuck out heavily, showing the determination that characterized his entire life. For when he grasped the opportunity to go to the Military Academy, his one purpose was to distinguish himself. He did not make many friends, for the other cadets considered him eccentric because he did not do the conventional things. He did what he pleased, spoke to whom he pleased, obeying all rules laid down by the officials but none enforced by the cadets. He lived by a set of strict self-imposed rules doing everything on time and in order. His life's motto was: "You may be whatever you resolve to be." Later, years after his graduation from West Point, and his participation in the Mexican War, he was made Professor of Artillery Tactics at V. M. I. His habits became very familiar to the citizens of Lexington and his eccentricities amused them. One day the Superintendent of the Academy sent for Jackson to come to his office. Jackson as usual, arrived precisely on time. The Superintendent, remembering something he had to do, told Jackson to remain seated until he returned. He meant to be gone only a few minutes, but he got into a Basketball is going to be more interesting this year than ever before and it needs your support more than ever. A good schedule has been arranged for our team, and three strong, good teams are playing here. These will give the best entertainment in the field of sports.

Everyone will have tickets for each of the three games to be played here, because the tickets are covered by the college fee paid to the business office at the beginning of the fall quarter.

Farmville has a splendid team this year with alert and fast players who will give every opponent a hard task in keeping up with them. But no team plays its best for a school which does not give its whole support. When the gym is packed with cheery faces shouting in loud, hoarse voices, each player puts everything she has in the game, because she feels that they're backing her and she must do her part. Come on, everyone, let's see you out at all three games, giving Farmville a big hand.

RED CROSS

Once again that humanitarian arm which alleviates distress in all forms is called upon to aid flood victims in this country. In 1913 the Red Cross was called upon to give comfort in the Ohio River floods. Today, twenty-four years later, the white flag with a red cross in the center waves again in this area.

Aside from the damages done by the raging river, fire has broken out. Thousands are homeless, are suffering from exposure and other circumstances due to the disaster.

But this agent cannot function unless people support it. Each can aid through contributions, which, with governmental aid, constitute the means of making the work of this organization possible.

University of Chicago fraternities are going gigolo to furnish material for the newly established Escort Bureau. To qualify as 'dowager-thrillers' men must: Be physically presentable; have personality and an easy manner; be a gentleman of the Lord Chesterfield type; possess knowledge in at least one social activity—opera, bridge, conversation or ordering from a menu; be a good dancer and be well known on the campus.

The coeds hire more tall brunettes than any of the other types. Upon being selected to conform with the women's specifications, the young man meets her at a designated spot and is free to use his own name or a fictitious one. Thereafter he is responsible for the success of the evening.

Students of organic chemistry at Colby College who study under Prof. Lesley F. Weeks have found that tea during an exam makes a test sweeter to take. During one of the past three-hour exams, some of the students complained that they were too tired to think and write at the close of the test. "I guess I'll serve tea next time," replied Prof. Weeks.

At the last exam, he and his two assistants passed out steaming cups of tea and dozens of filled cookies.

A letter addressed to "The Bedbug Professor, University of Minnesota" was finally turned over to the department of entymology by the partially puzzled University post-mistress.

On Hasting's campus a group of male students were reprimanded for leaving class room at ten minutes past the hour. They gave as their reason the fact that the prof. hadn't arrived. The next time the prof. met the class he said: "You could see I was here. My hat was on the desk." On the following day, on arriving, the prof. found the room empty except for a single hat on each desk.

There are two, and just two, reasons why freshmen flunk out of college—says Dr. L. L. Click of the University of Texas.

1. Either freshmen get too scared of their studies.

2. Or they don't get scared enough and go to sleep.

Rotunda Reverberations

What! Your feet are damp and you have a sore throat? Don't tell me it's from going out in the rain . . . All of us are doing the same thing . . . So wrap up and take your pills.

Poor girls . . . Some of you look so forlorn . . . but Miss Mary looks as if she had had a rest . . . Carter Belle looks awful lonesome . . . Why it's been three years since she's missed seeing that fair lad of H.-S. C. that haunts S. T. C. in all of his spare moments . . . What was that sitting in the Senior parlor Sunday night directly after dinner? . . . A V. P. I. man . . . no . . . you mean a tea-hound . . . quite the ladies man I'm told . . . Now there's one lassie who hasn't lost her head. She's Sue Owen . . . a girl who's just Sue one moment and the next she's a ghost with all eyes. That takes quick thinking—a Freshman at that . . .

The Freshmen put on quite a "Sing" the other night. We certainly have talent we didn't know about . . . Virginia Lee Pettis seemed to be quite the berries , a song bird for you . . . Jane Powell was looking good too . . . 'Course the cow-girl played Miss Non-Challance . . .

Last week-end was a nightmare for more people than Mrs. Warren and Mrs. Tabb . . . I'll bet some girls are still stiff from sleeping on palets and a little hoarse from trying to out-talk their roommates . . . Calm down, my children . . . Come back to earth . . .

It was on a dark and rainy night. (What else could it be doing?) . . . Three girls were seen sneaking down a street, with collars pulled way up . . . Watching closely, we saw them walk into the place of amusement that gives S. T. C. girls a notion of what's going on in the outside world . . . Also a heart thrill every once in a while . . . Stop running . . . We know who you are . . . They ducked . . . On another night . . . it was dark, too. Three more girls went walking . . . "The Outdoor Girls" . . . They didn't walk on streets though, but fire escapes . . . and then splash! . . . they were in a pool . . . Why not just stand outdoors any ole night and there'll be plenty of water . . . not so strenuous . . .

"Sleepy-time Gal" . . . Irma Carpenter in person . . . Listen, lady: Go to bed. Don't you know you can't consume knowledge with that blank stare you were carrying around with you Monday morning . . . Come, come . . . It isn't that bad . . .

Mardi Gras is two weeks from yesterday, and if you haven't gotten a date, and want one, get it now . . . don't wait until the last minute and send a telegram . . . they aren't worth it . . . write a card instead . . . I guess we'll have to pray for some to accidently break their legs, or something . . .We can't all have escorts . . . for who wants to dance with the same boy all night? . . . Good-day girls!

Literary Column

Ten outstanding magazine articles for January 1937:

Shenandoah, Pennsylvania by George R. Leighton in Harpers Magazine.

This is an epic of an anthracite town. This article is a superb example of how American history ought to be taught.

Social Security Begins by John Winant in Survey Graphic.

The chairman of the Social Security Board takes stock of social security; what will be held to; what will be changed; what will be built upon to make security a reality in America.

The Unique Millionaire by Oswald Garrison Vilalrd in Forum and Century.

A tribute to Senator James Couzens, who adopted for himself this platform: "I want to do what I can to see that life is not made a burden for the many and a holiday for the few."

Germany's Colonial Demands by Hjalmar Schacht in Foreign Affairs.

The German economic dictator states Germany's case for colonies, on the satisfaction of which "the future of European peace depends"—an article which Berlin labelled as official and which has been quoted round the world.

American Business Man: 1937 Model by Edward A. Filene in Survey Graphic.

Mr. Filene discovers that all over the country business men are willing to meet the times with ideas shaped by modern research and consumer demands.

Balance Sheet of Repeal by H. H. Kay in Survey Graphic.

A trial balance, after three years of repeal, answering the questions: Has repeal helped recovery? Has crime increased? Are more women and youth drinking? Has intoxication been a factor in the rising tide of automobile accidents?

British Experiments in State Intervention by Raymond G. Swing in Foreign Affairs.

An American newspaper man analyzes British attempts to centralize and direct economic life without sacrificing the essence of democracy.

Prospects for Foreign Trade by W. W. Elliott in Virginia Quarterly Review.

Mr. Elliott analyzes the recent approach to currency stabilization by Great Britain, France and the United States and the current progress in negotiation trade pacts, and discusses directions in which progress may be expected in reviving our foreign trade.

Back to Work: When and Where? by C. Hartley Gratton in Harpers Magazine.

Here is an exhaustive survey of the unemployment situation in the United States.

The Armies of Europe by Liddell Hart in Foreign Affairs.

A British expert takes up the great European armies one by one, studies thier preparations for war, and compares possible antagonists as regards both man power and mechanization.

Music:

A discussion of curricular trends in any field must necessarily concern itself first with the established objectives in that field. This is particularly difficult in the field of music education, because the objectives have never been clearly stated. Leaders in the field have consistently disagreed as to the objectives and aims with the single exception of the slogan adapted by the Music Educators Conference. "Music for Every Child — Every Child for Music". Even this slogan has sometimes been drawn into the radius of dissention and we are beginning to wonder, if, after all, we should not commence all over again and re-formulate the reasons for our existence. This in itself is a most healthy sign, because no objectives, no curriculum and no field of subject matter may long remain static . . .

This is the beginning of an exceedingly stimulating and suggestive article, "Curricular Trends in Music Education," by Archie N. Jones. It is to be found in the Music Educators Journal, December issue.

Last month brought forth the first really concerted effort to appraise and marshal the possibilities of radio as an educational medium. For the most part the public which goes in to its radio receiver in leisure hours, usually after a hard day, wants something either stimulating or relaxing, but hardly educational; that is to say, the majority of people will only take education via the air waves if it can be taken painlessly and preferably sugar-coated.

Recognizing it for the force it is, radio was the subject of the First National Conference on Education Broadcasting.

Mme. Olga Samaroff Stokowski presided over the session devoted to music discussion. Mme. Stowkowski said they hoped to establish two facts and use them as working basis to accomplish unlimited aims. Point number one: the musical taste of the country is sadly underated; point number two; what the adult public will accept in radio music has not yet been proved or even thoroughly tested.

To those persons who believed that music was beyond them, Mme. Stokowski has opened a new door. She has proved that "active listening" is quite as much an art as playing the piano or some other musical instrument.

The above article is taken from the article, "Education Via Radio", included in the special radio number of "Musical Digest."

LOOKIN' 'EM OVER

By VIRGINIA AGEE

" . . . And it came to pass after seven days that the waters of the flood were upon the earth."

'In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened.

"And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights . . . . "

And now in the year 1937, we find again the "windows of heaven" opened. For twenty-three days and twenty-three nights, the wrath of the leaden skies has caused torrents of rain to fall incessantly upon the states of the union.

This downpour has caused the mighty rivers to rise high and to roar and strain and laugh in fiendish delight at the weakness of man in many respects. Destruction, suffering, and deaths mount with the ever-rising rivers—mainly, the Ohio and the lower Mississippi.

More than 125,000 persons are homeless, death is mounting, damages are running into millions of dollars. Havoc is playing her role well in busy Pittsburg and in beautiful Cincinnatti—and countless other little towns and hamlets.

In scores of communities the heat, gas, and lights are cut off There is a shortage of drinking water, and lives are being threatened by pneumonia and influenza.

Hunger, snow, ice, rain, and disease—hunger and thirst—death and destruction—homelessness, worry, distress!!

Has frivolity and general carelessness had anything to do with this?—has loose living and careless morals played a large part?—is the world a problem to Him as it was in the days of Pharoah and Noah—yet—

" . . . I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake."

" . . . I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a convenant between me and the earth. . . . and I will remember my covenant which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh . . . "

Is it not a shame that marriage is no longer interpreted as being the "holy state of matrimony?" Definitely, it is the minority that understands it as it is meant to be understood; yet the great majority interprets it in the eyes of emotional satisfaction.

It is a rare sight to see two people married because of the sweetness of and the dearness of one to another. It has come to be the usual and expected thing to wonder—money?—family?—social position?—and many other factors!

The cause of this outburst on this vital subject is the disgusting affair between Elaine Barrie, alias "Ariel" and John Barrymore, alias "Caliban". It was two years ago that the illustrious Elaine, displaying a five-carat diamond, chased poor, defenseless "Caliban" all over the country—trying her best to get him to marry her. Then—in Act the Second of the farce—she succeeded in landing the poor fish.

The crowning blow comes in Act the Third—after being married approximately two and a half months, "Ariel" files suit for a divorce and is asking $2,525 alimony per month. It seems that her paltry $12,000 per month income is not quite sufficient to provide for her needs!

Is it no wonder that some of us actually pine for the "good ole days"—when a woman was married and stayed married!—and usually she was happy because, in those days, "the men were men, and women were glad of it"—whereas, today, the supposed stronger sex is as weak as water—and—the women know it!

Shakespeare would say, "Whyfore this foolish and questionable behavior?"

In our present day language we have, "What the heck?"

"O' Wind, If Winter Blows Can Spring Be Far Behind"

Thoughts of Easter Bring Forth New Styles

Although we're just about bored to tears by all this rain, and chilly cloudiness, let's turn our thoughts ahead a few months, to warm sunshine, spring flowers, and balmy breezes, and discover what milady will wear in the Easter parade, on creamy sands, and while tripping the light fantastic to the tune of a silver moon and willow trees.

This year's advanced spring styles are featuring swagger suits of dashing plaid, patch pockets, and gored flares, in the all-popular hand-finished men's wear worsted of flecked tweed, while the keynote of the season is color, although black is still classic for town, and navy's always in.

There is less casualness to spectator's clothes, for they boast fancy little gadgets such as braid trimmings, saddle stitching around the edges, straight from the Riviera, and jabot scarves, or perky little bows.

Shoes are creeping up higher over the instep (and we must admit that's flattering) while hats of alpaca fabric, bengaline, straw cloth and the color of spring flowers expand and flare, tilting upward to let in the rays of early, pale sunshine, with tricky little straps and bows which hold them in place by fitting over curls.

Shirtwaists and jacket dresses are still the thing, with a little variety this year, in the way of confetti-colored dots, and tiny, black buttons. Color combinations are striking, and pastels are eliminated as floral prints take the stage, and you'll love to add that certain something in the way of a bright tangerine suede belt and scarf, to a sea-blue, tailored rayon sports suit.

In beach wear, there is a delightful variety of floral prints, paisleys, printed cotton and linen, medallion patterns, black and white in floral style, sprawly tropical prints—suggestive of palm trees and the Rhumba—culottes, looking more and more like skirts, swim suits with lastex, adjustable straps, and little skirts, wrap-around, or pleated, with the accent on abbreviation.

For that Spring Formal, you'll want clouds of chiffon to swirl around your ankles, in perhaps, Shiaparelli's new Parlor Pink, or maybe a filmy redingote over a sheath of printed chiffon would give you bewitching glamour.

Merry is the month of May, so why shouldn't we too, be merry as we don our springtime finery to compete with Mother Nature?

Charm Chides

Introducing is often a disgraceful exhibition of lack of poise, and it can so easily be made a charming and graceful gesture. A man is always presented to a woman unless he happens to be a man who ranks very high in the world, such as a king or president. An older woman is introduced to a younger woman. The most generally accepted form of introduction is "Miss Smith, may I present Mr. Jones?" Never say, "Miss Smith, meet Mr. Jones."

A young woman may acknowledge an introduction to a man by a simple "How do you do?" without rising. It is permissible, however, to rise to meet a man if the woman desires to appear more cordial. If the man is older or renowned, the woman does rise. Never say, "pleased to meet you" when being introduced, but it is in good taste to say "I'm glad to meet you."

If a person's name is not made clear, one may say "I beg your pardon, but I did not hear your name." Always acknowledge an introduction with as much dignity and as much cordiality as possible. A smoothly managed introduction can do much toward raising all the persons involved in the eyes of each other and on-lookers. The ability to introduce effectively is one necessary characteristic of a refined person.

Ten O'clock Scholar Lingers In Hall To Consider Passers

Twenty-five minutes after eight! I'd better hurry to class. Where did I put that French paper? Under the soap! Now for the books and another hard day begins. Uh-m-m. The big clock here in the hall says I have just three more minutes. Mr. Mac won't fuss if I am late anyway. There goes Elsie Cabell hurrying along. I'll bet she opened her eyes only a few minutes ago. Whew! That was a huge yawn Eleanor let escape. She probably stayed up half the night writing to Johnny. There aren't any notes on the Home Office mantle this early. I know that is Elm who just turned the corner. She has certainly cultivated a distinctive giggle. This is a funny habit we have of speaking to everybody we pass. It must sound funny to the un-initiated to hear us walking down the hall saying "hi," "hello," or "good morning" with every breath. The other day my tongue got twisted and "hi-lo" slipped out as I greeted Miss London. I hope I haven't forgotten to speak to anybody this morning while I've been daydreaming along. I'd hate to get the reputation of being "snooty". Of course if everybody thought I was as absent-minded as Mary Harrison, I'd get by. Maybe it will be a good idea to start looking down at the floor all of the time so if anyone gets after me I can say I didn't see them. It gives the tongue a rest too. Gosh, it's cold and raining. Here goes an hour's work of curling my hair. Rain. I'll make a dash for the Science Building. Safe! Now to get up these steps two at a time. "Here."

Board of Regents Charges President

Frank of Wisconsin University Is Tried

Madison, Wisconsin — Another attack of severe investigation-itis struck the University of Wisconsin again early this month, and this time Dr. Board of Regents removed President Glenn Frank to cure another attack of the disease that twice last year forced other members of its staff to be displaced.

After a two-day operation that assumed the proportions of a great spectacle, the board that was accused of taking orders from Gov. Philip F. LaFollette voted, as the newspapers predicted last July, 8 to 7, to remove Dr. Frank. The eight members who voted to remove the president are all Progressives and LaFollette appointees.

Kinsd to the prominence of a national spectacle, the chief concern of the press and the nation's educators was that the action of the board and the procedure preceding that action were not such as to preserve freedom of thought from the power of government and to give President Frank a hearing by his peers.

Formal charges were made against Dr. Frank by the regent president, but the formers answers were as well documented as the latter's charges, better many observers declared. No matter what one's opinion of the charges and answers was, one's verdict on the regent's verdict against Dr. Frank was usually dictated by politics, prejudices, educational theory or just plain personalities.

The verdict of most Madisonians was that Dr. Frank was railroaded out of his job by a Progressive majority that would have voted as it did not matter what was said during the course of the "trial."

Following the Bascom Hall spectacle and the student strike that concluded it, a movement was started to have the manner of selecting university regents by gubernatorial appointment changed to some less political method. Observers close to the scene predict that this will be a "must measure on the docket of the state legislature this month.

Another legislative possibility is that Wisconsin solons will investigate the "trial" given to Dr. Frank by the regents, for many of them feel that there is something "fishy" in the whole affair.

Chief topic of Madisonians for many weeks now, the "Frank affair" has now boiled down to a lot of head shaking and a guessing game over the successor to the first of the nation's "boy presidents."

conversation and forgot all about Jackson until hours later. He supposed that he had gone home, but next morning when the Superintendent walked into his office there was Jackson sitting bolt upright in the chair just as he had left him the night before. He had told him to remain seated, and Jackson never disobeyed a command.

His military tactics and his brilliance on the field of battle will forever stand as a memorial to his genius. His secret moves and stratagems were ever a source of consternation to the Northern Army. His own courage and unselfish action won the hearts of his men. One old soldier in Gray recently spoke of him with a voice filled with emotion and tear-dimmed eyes. He said that "can't" was not in Jackson's vocabulary—he never planned anything that he didn't carry out. It was indeed a day of sorrow when the bullets of his own men claimed him. Lee said, "He has lost his left arm, but I have lost my right."

Today as his image looms before us, we can hear the echo of his resonant voice as he uttered his dying words:

"Let's cross over the river and rest in the shade of the trees."

SPORT SLANTS

(—By the Sport)

Basket Ball:

"Practice is the golden key, that opens the door to good basket ball." Practice, practice, practice, "that's all we ever hear," says Miss X to Miss Y. But after all, remember that "practice is the pass word to perfection."

Four practices a week may seem a lot, but we had rather be practicing basket ball than "wading through puddles of water, and tramping wet streets." In fact, for the last two weeks basket ball has really been a protection from all this wet weather we've been having.

Varsity practices have been doing nicely and we expect to carry away all the honors Friday afternoon.

Remember, we have our first game of the season Friday, January 29, and we want everyone to come out and support her school colors. This year we just must win every game for "ole S. T. C." We especially expect the seniors to come out Friday afternoon all ready to sing their varsity song.

Even with the excitement of the coming varsity games, we must remember that before very long the class games will be played off. And there are a required number of practices every person must have in order to play. Remember also, that under the new plan no varsity girls will be able to play in class games. So come on teams and do your stuff for those beloved class colors.

Ping Pong:

Even though basket ball seems to be in greatest demand, there is nothing like a game of ping pong for the well known recreation. Ping-pong balls may be gotten from the home office. Ping pong is a most delightful game to help keep the date from being bored, so try it. Saturday and Sunday nights are the most rushed so come early and avoid the rush.

Note: If there are any questions anyone would like to ask concerning any phase of athletics or our Athletic Association, please notify one of the council members, and these questions will be answered in this column.

Red Cross Asks Relief Fund of Two Million

Refugees In Ohio and Mississippi Valleys Total 270,000

Red Cross chairmen in this section have received urgent appeals from the National Red Cross, through the national chairman, Admiral T. Cary Grayson. Unprecedented floods in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys are making thousands of people homeless, and the fear of the scourge of diseases is uppermost in the minds of all.

Telegrams received from Admiral Grayson, January 22 state:

In order meet hourly increasing needs of flood victims in eight states Red Cross calling on people of United States for minimum relief fund of two million dollars. Reports received late last night indicate total of two hundred seventy thousand men, women, and children driven from their homes and now dependent on Red Cross for emergency relief including food, shelter, bedding, medical attention and warm clothing. Raving blizzards and freezing weather in many flooded sections add to suffering of refugees and greatly increase need for instant relief. Feel sure people your community will wish to aid promptly and generously. Urge you take immediate action raise your chapter quota of 60 dollars. Please report daily progress your campaign.

Peace Speaker On "Futility of War"

ish with it." All the powers lost in the World War whether judged politically, morally, economically, or from the point of view of the human lives lost. It is conceivable that some great cause might be worth so great a price, but the fact remains that war always defeats itself. To support this Dr. Franklin read a statement of Madam Schumann-Heink, the Mother of the American Legion—"War is the greatest curse on earth. From it nothing on earth is safe."

The Emergency Peace Campaign has set up three practical steps for each of us in the attainment of World Peace:

1. Make your Senators and Representatives know that you and your friends, as prospective voters, stand for the adoption of a strict neutrality policy for the United States.

2. Use your influence to get the countries to stop this race in armaments.

3. Do your part to take away from Congress the right to draft men to fight in foreign lands, when such a referendum is offered to the voters of the United States.

In conclusion Dr. Franklin stated that since we renounced war in the Peace of Paris, we should also renounce the instruments of war. The United States should practice the good neighbor policy and have immigration laws based upon individual worth rather than racial qualifications. After Dr. Franklin read a poem "God Praise" by Angela Morgan, Dr. Cooke dismissed the audience with the benediction.

J. M. Grainger Made Director Univ. Band

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Jan. 27—James M. Grainger, son of Professor J. M. Grainger of Farmville, has been named to the Board of Directors of the University of Virginia Band for 1937. The immediate function of this board is the framing of a constitution for the band.

Other members of the board are Herbert H. Britten, Cherrydale; James M. Brewbaker, Bedford, and Hadlye B. Williams, New Haven, Conn.

Some other duties which before have burdened Band Director Robert Lutz include the arrangement of band performances and practices, and the management of uniforms and instruments.

Federal Magazine Acclaims Chinese Theatre Research

Two - Volume Study Gives Background Of Drama

"Chinese Theatres in America," a recent study by the Bureau of Research and Publication of the WPA Federal Theatre's California Region, has won wide acclaim among scholars and theare workers as the first exhaustive and authoritative work of its kind, according to Pierre de Rohan, editor of Federal Theatre Magazine.

Alardyce Nicoll, chairman of Yale University's Department of Drama, and successor there to George Pierce Baker as director of the famous "47 Workshop," says of the two volume work: "The research done on this subject is excellent and certainly the material is presented in an interesting manner. If this is a fair specimen of the research which is being conducted under the auspices of the Federal Theatre, certainly a great deal of important work will be accomplished."

For the first time, in "Chinese Theatres in America," there is recorded in full detail the background, history, and character of this exotic dramatic culture which has flourished on the West Coast, and remained intact since it was first transplanted form Canton in 1852.

The book is the work of four collaborators, Lois M. Foster, Nadia Lavrova, Stephen C. Moy, and Peter Chu. The present manuscript of 382 pages with 44 photographs and 27 gouache drawings will be soon printed by a West Coast publisher.

Lynchburg College Is Debate Winner

Both School Teams Are Losers In Contest

On Wednesday the twenty-eigth, at eight o'clock in the evening, a debate was held in the small auditorium between S. T. C. and Lynchburg College. The topic was this year's Phi Beta Kappa question: Resolved that Congress be empowered to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry

S. T. C. was supported on the affirmative side by Lillian Anderson and Anthelia Robinette, while Anthony Pollard and John Inge from Lynchburg upheld the negative side. Dudley Allen acted as chairman.

Anthelia Robinette in her first speech showed the scandalous prices, and stated that labor is merely a commodity to be bought and sold to the highest bidder. She also gave three ways of controlling hours of labor as: laissez-faire, a virtual state of socialism, and the affirmative proposal changing it from a planless to a planned order, without unnecessary planning."

The first speaker for the negative admitted the growing demand that something be done to improve commodities, and although he agreed that labor has a right to fair wages, he gave as the three ways to raise money an increased sale of industrial products, raising the price of products, and cutting the profits of the employer. He stated that the outcome of these methods would be depression, and we would be no better off. In this even, we would have to rely on governmental relief.

Lillian Anderson claimed that the national government could best take care of the situation, and could regulate industry so that the decision would be unbias-

Students Respond To Aid Red Cross

100 Per Cent Give to Fund of Flood Area

The entire college, students, faculty, and administrators responded to the call of the Red Cross one hundred per cent.

The students have given to the Red Cross for the flood relief areas over one hundred dollars. The total amount including that given by the faculty and the administrators adds up to approximately $285. A number of organizations contributed liberally to this cause.

The Red Cross of Farmville raised approximately five hundred dollars over their quota which was one thousand dollars.

The council of the Athletic Association gathered clothes from the students to send to the flood stricken area.

The Association of Childhood Education will have an open meeting Thursday night in the Student Building lounge from 7 to 7:45 o'clock. Dr. George Jeffers will talk on the Science of Education for the Primary Children. All members are asked to be present.

Students Attend Each Performance Of Little Women

Clare Tree Major Talks Monday In Chapel

The Farmville Woman's Club presented the cast from the Children's Theatre of New York city in the play "Little Women" at S. T. C. auditorium on February 1. Two performances were given, a matinee in the afternoon for children from the surrounding schools and an evening performance at eight o'clock. A large crowd attended each performance.

Clare Tree Major headed the troupe and the play given was her own dramatization of "Little Women". In her arrangement, which was planned especially for children, Mrs. Major covered the story only in part and omitted the more tragic episodes.

The play was presented in four acts, opening as the book does with the March family interested in carrying out the wishes of their father who was away at war. It followed the story on through including such scenes as the dramatization of one of Joe's plays, the giving away of a delightful Christmas breakfast, Beth's illness, and Mr. March's return. In the end the little family was once more united and happy.

Mrs. Major spoke to the freshman song class and all others interested in dramatics during cha-

Miss Mary Finch Returns to Teach Classes on Bible

Farmville Community Makes Possible Her Talks

State Teachers College, Farmville, Virginia, has been greatly honored with the return of a former student to teach for us during the spring quarter.

Miss Mary Finch will teach Bible in the public schools of Farmville, and also at John Randolph, Cumberland, Prospect and Worsham. She will also offer a class in Religious Education here at the college. Her salary is being paid by the community since it is against the rules of the school board to promote the teaching of religion in the public schools. This former student has much interest in this subject, having been a missionary in Japan. Miss Finch showed outstanding ability in this field, helping to modernize the Japanese in regard to education and health conditions.

We are indeed fortunate in having such an outstanding student back in our midst. After leaving S. T. C., Miss Finch received her masters from Scaret Training School.

It may be noted also that Miss Finch was president of the student body her junior year and president of the Y. W. C. A. her senior year. She was an outstanding student in all things. We are indeed glad to have Mary Finch back with us once more.

Sophomores Carry Off Prize Award

Honorable Mention Goes to Junior Class

The prize offered for the best class "Sing" was carried off by the jubilant Sophomores. The means by which they won the prize was a spell-binding skit with the impressive and somewhat tragic title of "The Downfall of Handsome Harry Hoosegow." Harry's downfall was portrayed with such realism and pathos that the audience was moved to tears—of laughter, and the judges were moved to award the coveted prize to the producers of "Handsome Harry."

Honorable mention in the contest was awarded to the Juniors

Sophomore Class Presents Mother Goose Goes to Town

On February the fourth, the Sophomore Class will present their annual production in the form of an entirely new type of performance entitled "Mother Goose Goes to Town".

Judging from the title, the performance should provide an evening of rare entertainment. The prologue consists of excerpts from a Mother Goose book, showing the familiar characters as they were known to us in childhood. Kitty Roberts is directing the prologue. Trusting that this will measure up to her previous work, the student body should be prepared for an original and unique performance.

The prologue ends with Jack and Jill's disastrous trip up the hill. Somewhat shaken by their fall, they rest peacefully in the arms of Morpheus for hundreds of years. They awake in Ole King Cole's court to find themselves in a modern setting surrounded by their old friends, the Mother Goose characters in a very "jazzy frame of mind".

A Knave of Hearts, the inevitable villian, and Lucy Lockett, the court flirt, center their efforts on breaking up Jack and Jill's romance. Motherly Queen of Hearts turns Dorothy Dix! Using her magic tarts as a remedy, she patches up the love affair and the plot thickens.

Thus the four acts reveal an involved plot which gradually untangles itself in one uproarious situation after another. To put it mildly, everything's modern and everybody's truckin'!

With novelties such as a Swing Trio, Simple Simon's antics, and the Blackbird Chorus giving impetus to the rising action, the performance comes to an hilarious ending with breath taking surprise.

Lynchburg Loses Before the Student Body

FINAL SCORE 35 - 14

Cheer Leaders Aid S. T. C. Team To Win

Farmville met Lynchburg College in the first seasonal game Friday afternoon, Jan. 29. The game began promptly at 3 o'clock. An unusually large number of the student body attended the game.

At the end of the first half the score was Lynchburg 6, Farmville 15. Both teams displayed unusually good team work. The cheering section entered into the spirit of the game, and did much to make it an exciting one.

Farmville emerged victorious with a score of 35-14.

The line-up:

Farmville	Lynchburg
Hudgins—forward	Garing
Carroll—forward	Taylor
Pheips—Jumping center	Robinson
Eastham—side center	Fuller
Gilliam—guard	Wells
Smith—guard	Swanson

Substitutes for Lynchburg: Meredith for Taylor. For Farmville: Chambers for Carroll; Mann for Eastham; Jarman for Gilliam; Gibson for Smith; Butterworth for Gibson.

Referee—Mary Dabney, William and Mary.

Umpire—Katherine Chambers, Randolph-Macon.

S. M. Holton, Jr. Thanks Each Person For Relief Support

February 2, 1937

In behalf of the local chapter of the American Red Cross, it is my great pleasure to thank every member of the Administration, the Faculty, and the Student Body of State Teachers College for the remarkable response to the plea for funds to aid flood victims. As far as I can tell every member of the college community gave freely to the fund. The very fact that over $285 were raised in the college is sufficient evidence that our people are not unmindful of great need.

S. M. Holton, Jr., Chairman

CBS Broadcasts Talks of Officers At NEA Meeting

Annual Convention Held Last Week In February

Elaborate plans for covering the annual meeting of the National Education Association to be held in New Orleans from February 20 to 25 have been worked out by the WABC—Columbia network. Although speakers to be heard have not yet been decided upon, four broadcasts totaling an hour and a quarter of air time will be presented during the last three days of the convention.

On Tuesday, February 23, from 3:30 to 3:45 p. m., EST, an important talk by a leading educator is to be heard while from 4:30 to 4:45 p. m., EST, on the same day a group of representative educators from various parts of the country will be interviewed regarding the problems facing their profession.

"Education and Democracy" is the subject of a round-table discussion to be broadcast Wednesday, February 24, from 10:30 to 11:00 p. m., EST.

The final program, scheduled for Thursday, February 25, from 3:30 to 3:45 p. m., is to be a summary of the entire convention by one of its officers.

THE RIGHT TO VOTE

In this day of democracy we find that there are still many states that require the payment of all poll taxes before one can vote. Thus many persons who would like to vote cannot do so because they are not eligible.

One of the remaining states that still disfranchises its citizens with such a tax is Virginia. Virginia, the proud mother of eight presidents of the United States, saw on the day of the last presidential election a little over one-third of her voters go to the polls. Thus many who would have liked to have cast their ballots in favor of one man or the other had to remain away.

Virginia is surrounded by states that have dispensed with such a tax. In these other states over half of their voters go to the polls and vote. These people have a better chance to make their government a truly representative one.

Can it be that our state, the cradle of democracy in the early days of the Republic, has turned her back on that very thing she has earnestly worked for? If Virginia has not, then she should abandon the tax that so many have.

VICTORY

Once again our basketball team has triumphed over its sports rival. The victory that means so much to our team, to our school, is ours.

Unlike many times when the laurel wreath goes to the conqueror, this one comes with the feeling of friendly subjection on the part of the conquered. No bitter spirit results from such clean sportsmanship.

Good playing comes as result of hard practice. Our varsity team would bring us no victory if there was no squad to work with. Many thanks to those girls who thus aid our team.

Encouraged by the winning of our first game, our team will lead us to other victories. Our school stands back of it more than ever, for we are proud of our team, our representative in the sport world.

Whenever a young man swears undying devotion, says Dr. Calvin Stone of Stanford University, he should hold his head instead of clasping his hands over his heart. What counts, says the doctor, is the pituitary gland at the base of the skull. Most young men however stil clasp their hands because they are aware they will be holding their heads soon enough.

Beautiful Poetry!

You leaned down from great stars and struck a match.
My cigarette was tipped with sharp surprise.
My wakened heart pulsed forward,
strained to catch
The meaning of the blue lighting
in your eyes.
You leaned down from strange stars and I not wise
To read your smile that seemed half a caress,
Saw stars . . .. and burned a hole in my new dress.

Rotunda Reverberations

Stop fussing! We know that practically everybody went away last week-end and had huge fun. But just think, if you'd been home you couldn't have slept until 12 o'clock Sunday morning and sat around all Sunday afternoon griping about not getting any male—pardon, mail!—"Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all," isn't it Miss Bernice? They tell me that Mrs. Jones' daughters is a problem child; she inspires all her boy-friends to marry—somebody else—Hard luck!

Speaking of automobiles and things, could some one suggest where Mr. French could keep his car? Night air doesn't agree with Chevrolets—that is if stalling in front of Senior Building late at night has anything to do with it. Happy Motoring! . . . That PiKA who is now growing a moustache and his friend seem to have had their plans "disrupted" last Friday night. Why!!—to the winner goes the laurels—or $2.50 in cold hard cash. Congratulations Sophomores on winning the Sing Contest. And live and learn—we've just discovered that Liz Carroll's propellors are not only useful for motivating purposes but extremely shapely! No wonder that the Juniors got honorable mention for Sing.

What a difference the year makes . . . Last year this time a certain fellow in a red car was tooting his horn outside Cunningham Hall at . . . well anyhow, this year some one else has supplanted the object of his affection. Just wait until Founder's Day tho . . . May Queens come but once a year but Campus Queens come and go forever, eh Zell? And incidentally where can you buy Angora Sweaters?

Can a certain group of girls still think that it is Leap Year? It seems as if some still do because they left their trademark over on the hill.

S. O. S. Ruth Sears calling for some blue ribbon to tie up those letters from Williamsburg . . . For sentimental reasons! . . Hope your power doesn't lie in your mane like Sampson's, Lib, for it's a mighty becoming bob.

Start primping now, girls—it's not too early. You know we're tripping the light fantastic next Tuesday night . . . that is if we can leave off truckin' for a few hours.

A hint—nay a veritable boon to some enterprising student—Stock up on umbrellas and rent them out by the hour. "Bumbleshoots" are all the vogue these days, my dear—But then even the best of friends must part. Solong!

Serenader

I have nothing that is mine
To give you, I am born so poor.
Whatever I have was given me:
The earth, the air, the sun, the sea.
If I have anything to give
Made surely of the life I live
It is a song that I have made.
Now in your keeping it is laid.
—George Dillon

Laughter

I've built for myself a strong box
And fashioned each part with care.
I've fitted it with bands and padlocks
And I've put all my troubles there.
I've hid within my failures,
And the dregs of each bitter cup.
I shall tell no one its contents,
Never its secrets I'll share.
I've hid them all so completely
The world will never dream half;
I've fastened the top down securely,
And now—I sit on the lid and laugh. — E. W.

The Moon

I looked from out my window
When the moon was going down,
It hung high in the heavens
So big—so gold—so round—
It shed golden lights on the city
As far as I could see—
On field, and house, and tree, and wood
Caressing them all tenderly.
I wished that I could keep it forever hanging there—
Shedding its beautiful golden light
In the early morning air,
But I watched it as it faded
Then the sunlight took its place.
And I thought of God—His heaven—His Glory—and His grace. — M. D.

Song For Evening

This night, whatever day has brought of shadow,
Comes calm with healing dew and quiet, long,
Slow weaving of lavender dusk on hill and meadow,
And one late Robin's song.
The evening star will take its watch and stand
In pure, still loveliness. As sure as Heaven,
As wave to love, unto a weary land
That blessing will be given.
Today's distress, the burden of tomorrow,
Will dim like dreams. The thought of God will keep
Such old and faithful guard that even Sorrow
Must fold her hands and sleep.
—Nancy Byrd Turner

Advice to a Dreamer

Dreams are fragile, lovely things,
